Scholarly biography of Catharine of Aragon, the Spanish princess who became the first wife of Henry VIII. The book comprises also a critical evaluation of the various theories concerning the rights and merits of Catharine's life and Henry's treatment of her. Index.

"Garrett Mattingly handles his subject with the unusual grasp of a man who knows how to make historical personages come alive. While managing to avoid cold objectivity as well as hot hostility, he presents history in its makers. . . . The author gets into the mind of his characters to explain why they acted in the way they did. The book thus resulting from careful research and scholarly insight does not settle any problems, but it puts the problems in the right perspective." J. H. Fichter

+ America 65:329 Je 28 '41 600w

Booklist 37:545 J1 15 '41

"In the brief space which formal history affords to the first Queen of Henry VIII, she appears as a passive figure, almost shadowy, and with no chance whatever against the spirit of the times. It is a genuine accomplishment to re-create her in the round, as her present biographer has done, and to show the reasons which dictated her conduct, with alternatives which she understood quite well and which might have deflected the course of European history." Isabel Paterson

+ Books p2 Je 15 '41 1250w

"His volume provides pleasant and profitable reading, presenting as it does the results of intelligent study, honestly sifted, deftly arranged. The reader gets an acceptable general outline of persons and events—memorable persons, tragic events. Employing an imaginative rather than an academic style, the author introduces colorful details which serve to stimulate more than to instruct; thereby he does a certain amount of injustice toward some of the personages who figure prominently in sixteenth century history. . . . But these are really oversights rather than serious faults. The book is one for author and publisher to be proud of." Joseph McSorley

+ — Cath World 153:499 J1 '41 500w

MATTINGLY, GARRETT—Continued

"Without doubt, 'Catherine of Aragon' is the example par excellence of a dull book club selection. To the best of my knowledge, it breaks all records for excessive dullness. Even the 'scholarly bibliography' is dull, as well as uneven and very incomplete. One has only to examine the long description of the works on the life of Henry VIII to realize the excessive dullness, short-sightedness and verbosity, as well as the lack of scholarly acumen on the part of the author." L. W. Eshleman

—Commonweal 34:210 Je 20 '41 320w

"An interesting and scholarly biography... Mr. Mattingly has delved deep into the sources and the result is a convincing account of the life of Catherine... The book has permanent value and the appended notes provide the scholar with adequate sources for further study." H. P. Bolman

+ Library J 66:304 Ap 1 '41 80w

"This is a living biography. Nor is its vitality an illusion of colored surfaces or galvanic agitation. Mr. Mattingly does not depend on the baroque brushwork of Francis Hackett to create a glittering Renaissance décor... Every bit of the craftsmanship in this book is devoted to the theme. The life that pours through its pages derives from the strength and depth of its grasp upon character. What his people were really like, the expression of their characters in action and the effects of their action upon history are Mr. Mattingly's absorbing interests. His success is unequivocal." Edgar Johnson

+ New Repub 105:444 O 6 '41 850w

"Mr. Mattingly has told the story of Henry VIII's first Queen superbly and he has let the implications speak for themselves. In other words, he has not forced himself into the narrative with any particular theory, and what has been written above is solely what may be reasoned from the carefully collated facts in the biography. This is in no sense of the word a popular life; it is an achievement of distinguished and exhaustive scholarship, the result of pertinacious examination and consideration, of reason and a lifetime of study. And, to crown it all, the book is written in a fine supple varicolored prose that will carry the reader along on a constantly satisfying rhythmical wave." Herbert Gorman

+ N Y Times p5 Je 15 '41 1750w

"Superb biography of the Spanish princess who became Henry VIII's first wife... More sedate than Francis Hackett's studies of the period, which it resembles, but highly entertaining, urbane, and well documented."

+ New Yorker 17:79 Je 21 '41 70w

"Mr. Garrett Mattingly has written an admirable book in an admirable tradition... This life of Catherine is written without benefit—and without harm—of Freud and Marx... It tells her story skillfully and simply, with the aid of rhetoric in the good, subdued sense." Crane Brinton

+ Sat R of Lit 24:5 Je 21 '41 800w

Time 38:75 Jl 14 '41 230w

Wis Lib Bul 37:139 Jl '41

"The character which Mr. Mattingly has drawn is the result of voluminous research, expert scholarship, and brilliant interpretation. New material, unearthed principally in the archives of Vienna and Brussels, is largely responsible for the truth of the book; Mr. Mattingly's style accounts for its charm." B. D. Henning

+ Yale R n s 31:215 autumn '41 750w

MAUGHAM, WILLIAM SOMERSET. Strictly personal. 272p $2.50 Doubleday

940.548142 World war, 1939—Personal narratives, English. World war, 1939—France (W) 41-18080

"This," the author says, "is not an account of great events, but of the small things that happened to me during the first fifteen months of the war." At the outbreak of the war Maugham was in France. He stayed there until the fall of France, writing articles on French morale for the British information service, and then, in the summer of 1940 he returned to England and later came to America.

Reviewed by Edward Weeks

Atlantic O '41 550w

Booklist 38:50 O 15 '41

"The title might be called misleading. Never before in his many autobiographical attempts has Mr. Somerset Maugham been more strictly impersonal than in this latest book of his, reprinted in part from magazine articles. He has foregone his writer's privilege to dramatize or to arrange his material into a more conspicuous pattern than truth would offer; he has foregone brilliancy of metaphor and the more pleasant approach to history through anecdotic report. Yet with all that his book is as brilliantly his own as any." Felizia Seyd

+ Books p5 S 7 '41 900w

"The most important part of the book consists of an impersonal summing up of the causes of the French collapse and a pointing of the moral for the surviving democracies. Here the author becomes a keen reporter and analyst. True, there is nothing strikingly new in what he says; but it is a valuable confirmation by a brilliant writer of what we need to be told more than once." L. A. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p20 S 11 '41 750w

Cleveland Open Shelf p17 O '41

Reviewed by W. J. Grace

Commonweal 34:594 O 10 '41 600w

"The intimacy of the account and the never-failing humor will charm many readers." A. M. Colt

Library J 66:730 S 1 '41 100w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch

Nation 153:311 O 4 '41 650w

Reviewed by Malcolm Cowley

New Repub 105:345 S 15 '41 360w

"This is, of course, an intelligent book—Mr. Maugham never has written a book that was not. And he is a most 'believable' writer. The technic with which he has long convinced readers of the reality of his fictional characters is employed here. His estimate of conditions in his own country has a not-altogether-natural tone. But as Pegler, for example, seems odd and strange when he writes in praise, so does Maugham inevitably sound a bit unnatural when he talks happy optimism. But his analysis of the causes behind the fall of France certainly must not be missed. The more widely it is read in this country the better for this country." Robert Van Gelder

+ N Y Times p9 S 14 '41 650w

"There is some interesting information about the sad state of French morale, observed by Mr. Maugham at first hand, but the rest of the narrative is unimportant, a condition not redeemed by the fact that the author admits it."

— + New Yorker 17:79 S 6 '41 60w

"As his little sketch of Mrs. Neville Chamberlain shows, [Maugham] has not become any kinder. Nor has he acquired a new sense of human tragedy. In 'Strictly Personal,' he sees the world as he knew it crumble away, and exposes here and there a certain rottenness in the foundations. But he is able to describe this process in his own terms; he does not masquerade; he remains himself. That is why this extraordinary little book has a permanent value. Moreover, if I were a Nazi, I should find it a very alarming book: for if it is sad, it is also full of hope—not optimism, but hope, which is much stronger." George Dangerfield

+ Sat R of Lit 24:13 S 13 '41 800w

Springf'd Republican p8 S 10 '41 600w

MAUGHAM, WILLIAM SOMERSET. Up at the villa. 209p $1.75 Doubleday

41-5112

Mary Panton, a young English widow spending a spring vacation in a borrowed Italian villa, is the recipient of attentions from two suitors, a staid middle-aged friend of the family and an unconventional ne'er-do-well. In the course of an afternoon and evening she receives proposals from both of these men, but the events of the night that follows, when an unknown young refugee dies a suicide in her bedroom, finally decide her choice.

"The narrative is so dextrous that you won't mind the sleight of hand. The talk is crisp; the irony, especially when it is at the expense of the Empire builder, has a keen edge; and what chiefly fixes the story in your mind is Rowley, the unreliable scamp, who proves to be so irresistible to the ladies. He is an individual who stands out, as the others do not." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic My '41 290w

Booklist 37:409 My 1 '41

"Like Rowley Flint, Maugham has an instinctive understanding of the difference between the sexes. Coupled with a swift and lucid style it makes 'Up At The Villa' one of the most readable books on the spring lists." Dorothy Hillyer

+ Books p2 Ap 6 '41 600w

"A murder thriller which does not pretend to be great literature, but is superbly related. Maugham's artful simplicity of style, his masterful handling of character and of the most bizarre drama are qualities that make this an arresting little book. . . This is not a tale to while away a Boston councilman's Saturday evening, perhaps. But Hollywood will consider it 'colossal.'" Olga Owens

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 19 '41 200w

Reviewed by Charles Marriott

Manchester Guardian p3 My 16 '41 340w

"This novel, as unmitigated a specimen of fictional drivel as has appeared under respectable authorship within living memory, might be fitly dismissed as the latest triumph of servant-girl's literature were it not for the phenomenal value that still attaches to Maugham's name among modern authors. . . At the age of sixty-seven Maugham turns out 'Up at the Villa' for the delectation of drugstore readers, movie audiences, and the boudoirs." M. D. Zabel

— Nation 152:534 My 3 '41 1100w

"What makes 'Up at the Villa' Mr. Maugham's worst novel is the perversion of all the talents we have formerly admired in him. His ability to step straight into a story and tell it cleanly and directly becomes here the economy of a writer with a chore to get off his hands." Nigel Dennis

— New Repub 104:704 My 19 '41 550w

Reviewed by Anthony West

New Statesman & Nation 21:562 My 31 '41 110w

"This is a striking plot, full of psychological and dramatic potentialities. Yet it comes off thin and pale, leading nowhere into human depths but always ending in drawing-room talk. There is much of Maugham's famous cynicism in the portrayal of Mary's character, or in the description of Sir Edgar, upstanding 'empire-builder' who would like to marry her. It is, however, such a cautious, such an evasive kind of irony, so well-bred in its old-fashioned deliberation that one cannot help feeling shocked by it." Marianne Hauser

— N Y Times p7 Ap 6 '41 650w

"Almost any other writer, working with these venerable materials, would vulgarize them. Maugham's touch is so tactful—or perhaps his contempt for them so restrained—that 'Up at the Villa' is always diverting, never insulting. It's a positive pleasure to be sold so smooth and shiny a gold brick." Clifton Fadiman

— New Yorker 17:88 Ap 5 '41 370w

Pratt p11 autumn '41

"Mr. Maugham remains the consummate craftsman. Here is a novel—or rather a novella, it is so brief—so compact, so economical, so closely motivated, so skillfully written, that it rivets attention from first page to last. Despite the fact that it is an intrinsically incredible story, it completely convinces so long as its spell is exerted." Amy Loveman

+ Sat R of Lit 24:15 My 10 '41 270w

"The whole thing is as neat and inessential as the best kind of glove, but it is also cleverly exciting, and will keep many women murmuring happily and uneasily, as they race over the easy pages: 'There but for the grace of God. . .'" Kate O'Brien

+ Spec 166:536 My 16 '41 250w

"[This] is authentic Maugham. There is the characteristic limpid narrative, crisp dialog and vivid description unburdened with cumbersome verbiage; the sordid tragedy at the center of the story, the brooding and fascinating threat of danger to the central figure, before and after the tragedy, the searching analysis of human character and action and the frank—not to say Gallic—dealing with the sex motive without overstepping the bounds of propriety—of 20th-century propriety—that mark this author as an outstanding writer of fiction."

Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 6 '41 420w

"In one sense it is an easy and unexacting story for Mr. Maugham, though superbly calculated and for the most part scrupulous in the telling. The specially interesting thing, however, is Mr. Maugham's testimony in this story—his artist's testimony, if you like—to what is irresolute and unresolved in his philosophy. An apparent inability to make up his mind in the matter of a personal philosophy runs through all his later work, is indeed evident in almost every piece of fiction he has written from 'Of Human Bondage' down to the recent 'A Christmas Holiday,' and seems in fact to provide him with a constant and unfailing creative impulse. It provides, at any rate, the besetting impulse of this latest story of his."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p237 My 17 '41 750w

"An extremely readable well-planned and empty-hearted story." Robert Littell

— + Yale R n s 30:xiv summer '41 70w

MAURER, HERRYMON. The end is not yet; China at war. 321p $3 McBride

951 Chinese-Japanese war, 1931-. National characteristics, Chinese (W) 41-24852

An account of certain phases of Japan's war against China and a picture of how the Chinese live under wartime conditions. The author lived in China as a member of the faculty of Nanking University. Some of the material in this book has previously appeared as magazine articles in such American periodicals as Asia, Travel, New Republic and This Week. Index.

"The style is a little trying. In an effort to make his impressions dramatic, the author writes page after page in the present tense. . . There is much more readable material to come, however. There are two chapters telling how China has gotten her education in guerrilla warfare, with truly dramatic anecdotes showing how lightly armed soldiery learn to frustrate mechanized Japanese drives and how the Chinese rustics abide and survive the horrors of Japanese occupation and then organize to make occupation profitless." Rodney Gilbert

+ Books p28 D 7 '41 1050w

Christian Science Monitor p11 N '29 '41
Cleveland Open Shelf p21 D '41

Reviewed by J. A. Sohon

Library J 66:902 O 15 '41 100w

"The story of the China war has been told many times, but not often with the insight that Herrymon Maurer brings to the task. He paints what is largely an impressionistic picture, sketched with bold strokes and a flowing style, but always ribbed with fact. The wealth of detail on social and political issues in the back country, particularly Szechwan province, is obviously the result of painstaking first-hand observation." T. A. Bisson

+ Sat R of Lit 25:5 Ja 17 '42 290w

MAURER, HERRYMOM—Continued

"The author writes simply but interestingly on the various phases of this vital struggle. Unfortunately, little that he has to say is unknown to the student of the Orient, but for the layman his presentation of China's struggles and achievements is both informative and stimulating." Frederick Rein
+ Springf'd Republican p14 O 31 '41 600w

MAXON, P. B. The waltz of death. 252p $2
Arcadia 41-18899

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p13 My 25 '41 90w

"In spite of the abstruse scientific theories involved, this book makes easy reading, and the theories are no wilder than some have seemed which have later found virtually universal acceptance. The flaw lies in the manner in which those theories are applied." Isaac Anderson

+ — N Y Times p18 My 18 '41 120w

"Unique 'though not entirely convincing, murder method main point of interest. Otherwise pretty wild and definitely woolly."

Sat R of Lit 24:20 My 24 '41 40w

MAXTONE GRAHAM, MRS JOYCE (AN-STRUTHER) (JAN STRUTHER, pseud).
The glass-blower, and other poems. 67p $1.50
Harcourt [5s Chatto]

821

(W) 41-3085

Volume of poems by the creator of Mrs Miniver.

"Miss Struther deserves an eager reading. Her poems strike home with a freshness of image and phrase; they share experience without strain or distortion, and in their feeling they open up a direct line of communication between writer and reader." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic Mr '41 180w

Booklist 37:322 Mr 15 '41

Bookmark 2:8 My '41

"Volume of witty and moving poetry, the unaffected testament of a sensitive but rigorous mind. . . For the greater part, Jan Struther stands revealed in this small volume as a singing intelligence who communicates acutely, to use her own phrase, 'the interstellar spaces of the heart.' England lives in these pages and English poetry lives again at its deceptively simple best. Mrs. Miniver would love this book. So will very many of Mrs. Miniver's readers." Irwin Edman

+ Books p3 F 9 '41 800w

"They are not great poems, and they need not be. They are fresh and alive, and warm with a kind of urban civilized middle-aged woman's keen awareness, and that, at its best, is a rare thing and a beautiful thing." John Holmes

+ Boston Transcript p9 F 3 '41 100w

"Here is a clever and skillful writer. . . But I, for one, cannot help regarding her as a woman who is clever without being wise (though she is often shrewd), and sensitive without having a heart. That is no doubt putting it too strongly, but though it may be toned down as much as anybody pleases, it conveys what I think about her dexterous, witty, and accomplished verses." T. M.

+ Cath World 153:250 My '41 300w

Christian Century 58:291 F 26 '41 60w

"As a technician, Mrs. Struther pleases for her ability to control her poetic images with nicety and taste. With it she is able to reveal a well-bred, cultured, if at times not very penetrating way of life that must be becoming rarer in a country at war. For that reason, and because there are no poems related at all to present England, 'The Glass-Blower and Other Poems' has a nostalgic quality. It preserves the echo of a vanishing time and place." John Ritchey

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 5 '41 360w

"Occasional verses, always light and at times exquisite, of a writer whose prose has recently enjoyed popularity. For substance they depend on a personality of some charm."

+ Nation 152:221 F 22 '41 20w

"Easy to read and recognize, the verse is in a nice ballad—light Shakespeare-Housman tradition, not at all important, but realizing in a pretty and witty verse as much happiness as there is in the world today." P. M. Jack

+ N Y Times p18 F 9 '41 40w

"The author of 'Mrs. Miniver' writes verse not wholly light and not wholly serious, often of real sensitiveness and distinction."

+ New Yorker 17:84 F 22 '41 20w

Pratt p16 spring '41

"Verse as modest as Mrs. Struther's often becomes more than it attempts to be. In its quiet, seldom lifted tone of voice it has authority and, what is more surprising, it has surprise." Louis Untermeyer

+ Sat R of Lit 23:17 Mr 22 '41 270w

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 9 '41 500w

"Here in fact we have an expression of the whole, of which 'Mrs. Miniver' was only a part, of the person behind the fiction. . . The main defect of her verses [is that] their grace and intelligence leave an impression of not having been tested enough by harsh reality. They are the fruit of a refined rather than a strongly imaginative awareness. But as such they are unusually pleasant to read."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p328 Jl 6 '40 550w

Wis Lib Bul 37:73 Ap '41

MAXTONE GRAHAM, MRS JOYCE (AN-STRUTHER) (JAN STRUTHER, pseud), ed.
Women of Britain. 334p $2.50 Harcourt

940,548 European war, 1939—Personal narratives, British. Women in Great Britain

(W) 41-9745

Collection of letters from British women of all ages and in many walks of life, written to friends and relatives about their reactions to the war. The letters were written between August 1939, and January, 1941. There is a long introduction by the editor, and running commentary by Beatrice Curtis Brown.

"Written, not for publication, but with the spontaneity of words set down in snatched moments, these letters express in every line and between the lines unshakable courage." F. H. Bullock

+ Books p4 My 18 '41 600w

"There is plenty of humor in them, and a great deal of pride in the fighting forces, and some pathetic evidences of suffering and loss, but absolutely no sob-stuff."

+ Christian Century 58:692 My 21 '41 70w

Churchman 155:34 Ag '41 50w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:378 Ja '42 20w

"This appealing, illuminating collection of anonymous letters from English women was gathered by Jan Struther, who writes a thoughtful essay to open the volume, and a briefer background note for each section. . . This [is] an important book, realistic and vivid, yet without horror." J. M. Flexner

+ Library J 66:463 My 15 '41 80w

"The letters in . . . 'Women of Britain' have been written by people of more than average intelligence. They are good letters and give a better picture of English war-time mentality than any others yet published." Ralph Bates

+ Nation 152:673 Je 7 '41 70w

"The whole collection in its gallant naturalness is a contribution to knowledge and to hope."

+ N Y Times p5 My 18 '41 360w

"Repetitious in spots, but in general a revealing collection."
New Yorker 17:94 My 17 '41 60w

Reviewed by Phyllis Bentley
Sat R of Lit 24:16 My 24 '41 550w
Springf'd Republican p10 My 8 '41 550w

"Philosophical and witty, Jan Struthers's commentary throughout the book is worth reading in itself. And by her skill of editing she has used several letters by the same writer, thereby making what approximates short stories complete since the reader can find out what has happened to date to certain persons."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 Je 19 '41 390w

Wis Lib Bul 37:114 Je '41

Reviewed by Herbert Davis
Yale R n s 30:826 summer '41 140w

MAY, MARK ARTHUR. Education in a world of fear. 74p $1 Harvard univ. press

370.9 Education—U.S. World war, 1939—U.S. A 41-2571

"An analysis of the elements in our national anxiety for the preservation of the democratic way of life, and suggestions for the increased effectiveness of our educational system in sustaining the American ideal." Publisher's note

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '41

"With the brevity and clarity characteristic only of an author who possesses a deep and penetrating understanding of the subject he is treating, May explains the nature of fear and the 'random and feverish' activity that it arouses in the behavior of human beings." H. H. Shoen

+ School & Society 53:637 My 17 '41 1200w

"There may be those who differ somewhat from the author in his interpretation of the modern scene, but there will be few who will not be stimulated to think by the clear presentation and interpretation of the problems faced by educators in modern-day life." S. A. Hamrin

+ School R 49:548 S '41 500w

The MAYA and their neighbors. Ltd ed 606p 11 pl maps $6 Appleton-Century

913.72 Mayas. Central America—Antiquities. Archeology. Indians of Central America—Civilization 40-33305

"[This] is a collection of thirty-four essays by [various] authors dealing with anthropological problems of the Maya area and regions to the north and south. The volume is intended to offer a summary of current opinion on the field of Middle American anthropology. The essays are grouped into the following sections: 1) The Background of the Maya, 2) The Maya, 3) The Northern Neighbors of the Maya, and 4) The Southern Neighbors of the Maya. Geographically, the discussion ranges from the Andes to north and east of the Rio Grande, with attention focused on Middle America. Problems of physical anthropology, linguistics and ethnology are covered, but the emphasis is on archaeology." Am Soc R

"The Maya and Their Neighbors, dedicated to Professor Alfred M. Tozzer, contains one of the best coordinated and therefore most useful collections of anthropological essays yet published in honor of a scholar. If its five editors and 34 contributors have not quite produced the equivalent of a textbook of Middle American civilizations, they have given us a work of such ample dimensions and with such excellent summaries of recent research results and problems that it will constitute an essential reference work for all anthropologists and a volume of considerable interest for the layman." J. H. Steward

+ Am Anthropol 43:656 O '41 2050w

"A particularly valuable feature of this excellent volume, in addition to the plates and figures, is the bibliography of more than one thousand items." Fred Egan

+ Am Hist R 47:172 O '41 800w

"The work is of great importance to Middle American specialists and to all Americanists, and is also of interest to students of culture in general." Donald Collier

+ Am Soc R 6:413 Je '41 250w

"Written by specialized scholars for scholars, this collection of papers is suitable for the reader with preparation in the field; it is not an introduction for the beginner. Certain of the papers constitute what may be the best, and what is certainly the most up-to-date, review of knowledge and expert judgment in the field. . . About one-third of the contributions are not summaries of large areas of knowledge, but are reports on local excavations or on other very local facts. A few papers are trivial or perfunctory." Robert Redfield

+ Ann Am Acad 214:271 Mr '41 600w

Christian Century 58:564 Ap 23 '41 110w

MAYER, ALBERT I., Jr. Falconer's son; 11. by Sheilah Beckett. 256p $2.50 Presbyterian bd.

41-24970

"A fast-moving historical novel built about the unification of Central Europe under the Emperor Otto in 964 A.D. A chase-and-escape type of plot presents, with strikingly authentic detail, the story of the sixteen-year-old Duke of Steinbach's falconer, who takes a central part in defeating Duke Herbert, the villain." Sat R of Lit

Christian Century 59:22 Ja 7 '42 30w

Reviewed by E. A. Groves

Library J 67:43 Ja 1 '42 100w

"An exciting story with good detail. Crisply written. Recommended."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:15 N 8 '41 60w

MAYER, JOSEPH EDWARD, and MAYER, MRS MARIA (GOEPFER). Statistical mechanics. 495p $5.50 Wiley [33s Chapman]

541.39 Mechanics, Statistical 40-13529

"The rapid increase, in the past few decades, of knowledge concerning the structure of molecules has made the science of statistical mechanics a practical tool for interpreting and correlating experimental data. It is therefore desirable to present this subject in a simple manner in order to make it easily available to scientists whose familiarity with theoretical physics is limited. This book, which grew out of lectures and seminars given to graduate students in chemistry and physics, aims to fulfill this purpose." (Pref) The authors are respectively associate professor and lecturer in chemistry at Columbia university. Glossary of symbols. Author and subject indexes.

"Evident care has been bestowed to make the book useful for reference without requiring the whole to be read. Chapters contain introductions summarizing their material, and brief explanations of important results and equations are given. Cross reference among equations is facilitated by the excellent device of printing at the top margin of each page the number of the last equation thereon, as in a dictionary the last word on each page is repeated at the top." A. S. Coolidge

+ Am Chem Soc J 63:317 Ja '41 600w

N Y New Tech Bks 25:40 Jl '40

MAYERS, COLIN. Submarines, admirals and navies. 280p il $3 Harper & Davies, 159 S. Western av, Los Angeles

359 Submarine warfare. World war, 1939 —Naval operations—Submarine. Great Britain—History, Naval 40-29538

"The rôle of the submarine in modern naval tactics and strategy explained by a retired British naval officer." Foreign Affairs

MAYERS, COLIN—Continued

Boston Transcript p1 Ja 4 '41 50w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:194 O '41 20w

MAYNARD, THEODORE. Story of American Catholicism. 694p $3.50 Macmillan 282.73 Roman Catholic church in the U.S.

(W) 41-23098

A history of the Catholic church in the United States, written by a Catholic. It traces the main movements of American Catholicism from the days of discovery until the present. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 38:172 Ja 15 '42

"By emphasizing the colorful rather than routine episodes, Mr. Maynard has made the story adventurous and dramatic. But it would be a serious error to suppose that his plety or his drama have impaired his style or his judgment. He talks to us urbanely, with more than one amusing anecdote about, or even at expense of churchmen. The tribute he pays to the achievements of American Catholics is the stronger for his pointing out that sometimes they have been more notable for exercising the ecclesiastical rather than the human virtues; that they have made mistakes." W. A. S. Dollard

+ Books p13 Ja 4 '42 750w

"This book is literary, discursive, argumentative and very readable. Not following a pattern of measured proportions, nor providing as much information as the reader may reasonably desire, not always precisely accurate, the author sketches backgrounds too lightly at times, too often takes up or throws down a gauntlet. Nevertheless, he has given us a popular account of a vastly important chapter in Church history and at least partially he fills a real need; and he is to be congratulated on his deft handling of many interesting and important subjects, not treated elsewhere in any single volume." Joseph McSorley

+ Cath World 154:502 Ja '42 420w

"In its text, and especially in its footnotes, The Story of American Catholicism is aggravatingly irritating and excitingly provocative from chapter one to chapter twenty-nine. For it is mythology, anti-Protestant polemic, propaganda, history and criticism blended into a literary masterpiece. Protected by nihil obstat and imprimatur, without table of contents, without ample documentation, it does not desire to be scientific but aims to be popular, broadcasting many statements which the united efforts of scientific Catholic historians in the last few decades have sought to correct. Like Protestant fundamentalism's popularization of the theory of evolution to the common people of the United States, this 'story' revives criticisms of American Catholicism long since forgotten and may become an arsenal for a new 'know nothing' crusade." C. H. Moehlman

+ Christian Century 59:17 Ja 7 '42 700w

"Theodore Maynard in his 'The Story of American Catholicism' has not only brought the story of the Church in this country up to date, but he has fitted it into America's political history and social background in a book that is without a dull page. The story not only moves forward with dramatic swiftness, it lives." Bonaventure Schwinn

+ Commonweal 35:316 Ja 16 '42 2400w

"Mr. Maynard is firm in his belief that within his faith are reposed the principles which erect one of the strongest bulwarks of American liberty. He is equally certain that it would be absurd to maintain 'that all that is good in American life derives from Catholic culture.' It is a balanced position which gives him the solid foundation on which this exceptional historical work is constructed."

+ Springf'd Republican p14 N 20 '41 550w

MAYR-OFEN, FERDINAND, pseud. See Zarek, O.

MEAD, EDWARD SHERWOOD; JEREMIAH, DAVID BOWEN, and WARRINGTON, WILLIAM EDWARD. The business corporation; its financial organization and operation. 680p il $4 Appleton-Century

658.14 Corporations—Finance (W) 41-7992

"This text on corporation finance traces the corporate life cycle from birth, through growth to maturity, to decay and death. Special emphasis is placed on changes in corporate structure, practice and regulation which the last ten years have introduced. The book is based in part on an earlier volume by one of the authors (Corporation Finance, by E. S. Mead) [Book Review Digest, 1910]. (Management R) Index.

"As a whole, the revision is well done and the book merits a rating with the four or five leading textbooks of the subject. In any case, it is certain that the student who reads this book will know corporation finance if he remembers what he has read. The same cannot be said of all the finance texts now on the market." W. J. Eiteman

+ Am Econ R 31:648 S '41 500w

Management R 30:235 Je '41 50w

MEADER, STEPHEN WARREN. Blueberry mountain; il. by Edward Shenton. 309p $2 Harcourt

(W) 41-51869

Buck Evans, a high school boy, spends his summer vacation picking and selling blueberries, which grow profusely in the pine barrens of the Pocono mountain region where he lives. The sight of cultivated blueberries gives him another idea, and he decides to get into the business seriously. In the midst of his business affairs he helps the state police capture a thief and wins the acclaim of his neighbors. For older boys.

Booklist 38:38 O 1 '41

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p18 N 2 '41 270w

Reviewed by E. V. Wyatt

Cath World 154:378 D '41 140w

"With his usual good characterization Mr. Meader draws a sturdy self-respecting person who has his troubles with unscrupulous neighbors and wins out to prove that even an unskilled workman can sometimes find a way to improve his job by using his brains, his industry and perseverance. The action moves swiftly and holds interest throughout." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:369 S '41 90w

"An interesting story for older boys." E. T. Dobbins

+ Library J 66:737 S 1 '41 90w

"A dramatic story of farm life today. Interest holds and the reader is amazed that a struggle for success in selling blueberries could be so absorbing." Jessie Stanton & E. W. Steele

+ New Repub 105:838 D 15 '41 30w

"Very good indeed." Phil Stong

+ Sat R of Lit 24:10 N 8 '41 20w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 2 '41 110w

MEADOWCROFT, MRS. ENID LAMONTE. Benjamin Franklin; il by Donald McKay. 191p $2 Crowell

B or 92 Franklin, Benjamin—Juvenile literature (W) 41-51837

Biography of Benjamin Franklin, for ten-year-old readers, which stresses that part of his life after he went to Philadelphia, and the part he played in America's fight for freedom.

Booklist 37:551 Jl 15 '41

"[This] seems to me Mrs. Meadowcroft's most valuable work since she put younger children in touch with the home life of the Pilgrim Fathers in 'The First Year.' Without undue hero-worship but with no trace of the opposite quality, it presents to boys and girls a man they can honestly like as well as admire, and along with a view of their own country in process of becoming. Every time I read a new life of Franklin—and I cannot resist one—I run into something I did not know he invented or discovered." M. L. Becker
+ Books p5 Je 22 '41 290w

"Young Americans could scarcely have a more pleasing introduction to this great American, and it is sound history too."
+ Christian Century 58:723 My 28 '41 30w

"The book is written in simple English easily understood by any ten-year-old. The pictures by Donald McKay lack the clarity and decision associated with the subject of the book and are not pleasing to me, though others do like them. This book will be a great addition to any library." J. F. Carter
+ Library J 66:620 J1 '41 150w

"'Benjamin Franklin' is a biography boys and girls from 9 to 12 will read without urging, and one that teachers of social studies in junior high school will heartily welcome." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p9 Ag 31 '41 500w

"A delightful account for young readers, combining drama with authenticity."
+ Social Studies 32:335 N '41 10w

Wis Lib Bul 37:161 O '41

MEANS, ANNE, ed. Let's decorate our home. 128p il $3.75 McBride

747 House decoration (W) 41-13576

Suggestions for decorating the home according to the personal taste of the owner. Some of the subjects discussed are: Bedrooms, linen closets, bathrooms, kitchens, built-in furniture, furniture with a double purpose, wall papers, ancient art, rugs, upholstery, venetian blinds, unusual tables, plastics, antiques, mirror walls, chandeliers, lamps, venetian glass. Copiously illustrated. The author is decorations editor of Arts and Decoration, from which much of the material is drawn.

"This is, quite definitely, not a book intended for the woman who is starting from scratch, and without an idea of her own, to furnish a house or create a home. It is planned, rather, for the home decorator who has already laid the groundwork for her pattern of living and is designed to stimulate her imagination and suggest ways of introducing originality and distinction into her decorative schemes."
Books p19 S 14 '41 120w

Pratt p15 D '41

Wis Lib Bul 37:136 J1 '41

MEANS, MRS FLORENCE (CRANNELL). Children of the promise; il. by Janet Smalley. 119p $1; pa 60c Missionary educ. movement 41-7697

"Judith and David, brought up in the Orthodox Jewish faith, attend Elmwood Public School in a crowded section of Denver. Presiding over Grade Six is a wise and understanding teacher who creates a fine feeling of tolerance and loyalty among the children of various faiths and nationalities coming under her influence. The children form a Young America League, inaugurate a series of 'gift days,' help with the opening and maintenance of a nursery school, and welcome two refugee Jewish families into the neighborhood." Library J

Booklist 37:496 Je 15 '41

"The story is frankly educational, though the author knows how to tell a story; there is a paper-covered edition for use with leaders of children. It presupposes willingness to be reasonable, not always found in young or old just now, but the ideas it puts forth are such as should be presented to teachers of small children in cities or towns where the 'refugee problem' is pressing." M. L. Becker

+ Books p5 Je 8 '41 230w

Christian Century 58:723 My 28 '41 40w

"The book is quite obviously intended to promote better understanding among Jewish and Christian children. Religious observances are therefore stressed, which makes the story a bit overly serious and moralistic. It does accomplish its purpose, however." Claire Nolte
Library J 66:466 My 15 '41 150w

MEANS, MRS FLORENCE (CRANNELL). Whispering girl; a Hopi Indian story of today; il. by Oscar Howard. 227p $2 Houghton

(W) 41-14054

Vensi, a sixteen-year-old Hopi Indian girl, was so shy that she would not speak above a whisper, except to her own family. And yet when a mystery threatened her beloved home, it was timid Vensi who conquered her fears, and found the solution. Grades six to eight. Glossary.

Booklist 38:18 S '41

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p6 Ja 11 '42 450w

"Mrs. Means has written another thoughtful and interesting story of American girlhood." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:461 N '41 80w

Reviewed by E. J. Gray

Horn Bk M 17:480 N '41 90w

"A fine, well-built story. . . Recommended for girls of twelve to sixteen." Emily Hutson
+ Library J 66:799 S 15 '41 80w

"The narrative moves with an interest and suspense which will hold the attention of readers even younger than the 'teen-age' for which it is primarily meant, but it is the latter readers who will reap the most in an understanding of one corner of the American scene. This is a richly detailed delineation of present-day Hopi life as well as a warm portrayal of a family whose instinctive kindness and deep integrity might well give their white countrymen reason to consider their own values of living." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p12 O 5 '41 440w

Reviewed by E. G. Eastman

Springf'd Republican p10 O 9 '41 550w

MECKLIN, JOHN MOFFATT. The passing of the saint; a study of a cultural type. 206p $2 Univ. of Chicago press

235 Saints. Sociology, Christian 41-3755

Study of the saints as "the characteristic moral and spiritual product of the Middle Ages." In his preface the author says he has "sought to understand why they sprang from the crude soil of the feudal age like fair flowers in a dank forest." He includes biographical essays on St Augustine, Bernard of Clairvaux, and St Francis. The author is professor of sociology at Dartmouth, Index.

Reviewed by P. S. Moore

Am Hist R 47:317 Ja '42 550w

Books p14 J 6 '41 200w

"This book is a fascinating study of the saint. . . The pattern of saintly piety discussed in this book is illustrated by biographical sketches of three of the greatest of the saints—Augustine, Bernard and Francis. They embody the prevailing ideas of the saints, depict those of their peculiarities which called out the uncritical adoration of the masses, and bring out their human traits. Like the rest of the book, these sketches are handled with insight and skill, making this a delightful volume to read." J. D. Martin
+ Christian Century 58:623 My 7 '41 900w

MECKLIN, J. M.—Continued

"The concluding chapter on the saint and democracy is challenging both to democracy and to Christian leaders. Dr. Mecklin's books, The Survival Value of Christianity, and Democracy and Race Friction, established the reputation this work enhances, of his right to appraise saints as saints and as citizens; two aspects that must be coordinated if sainthood is to survive as a culture, for certainly the age of individualism has passed." A. L. Murray

+ Churchman 155:17 Ap 15 '41 240w

Reviewed by Bonaventure Schwinn
Commonweal 35:97 N 14 '41 700w

Reviewed by R. H. Bainton
J Religion 21:313 Jl '41 700w
Nation 153:289 S 27 '41 120w

MEEK, STERNER ST PAUL. Gustav, a son of Franz; il. by Jacob Bates Abbott. 296p map $2 Penn

40-34740

Gustav is a Dobermann-Pinscher police dog, brought to the Panama Canal zone at the request of the F.B.I. Three times Gustav and his master, Lieutenant Fielding, prevented sabotage and saved the Canal, before the general was sure Gustav was useful.

"Exciting reading for boys and girls from twelve to sixteen." D. L. Wood

+ Library J 66:85 Ja 15 '41 120w

Wis Lib Bul 37:21 Ja '41

MEEKER, ARTHUR. Ivory mischief. 845p $3 Houghton

La Ferté, Magdelaine (d'Angennes) duchesse de—Fiction, Olonne, Catherine Henriette (d'Angennes) comtesse d—Fiction
(W) 41-23967

The heroines of this novel of seventeenth century France, are the two famous—and infamous—sisters, Cateau and Magdelon de la Louppe, the Comtesse d'Olonne and the Maréchale de la Ferté.

"For all the escapades, amours and adventures recounted here, one has somehow the total impression of hearing about the passions and ambitions of a population of dolls or painted figures. . . The scene as a whole has been so organized, so disinfected, that the effect is curiously miniature and heartless. The violence and, above all, the filth, as well as the opulence and formality, are oddly missing. . . Much as one might quarrel, however, with Mr. Meeker's interpretation of the times and the people about whom he clearly so much enjoys writing, it would be difficult not to follow with amusement . . . the gallant careers of his two lovely and foolish heroines." Iris Barry

+ — Books p5 Ja 4 '42 800w

Reviewed by Lena Puppert

Library J 66:841 O 1 '41 80w

Reviewed by Kay Boyle

New Repub 106:125 Ja 26 '42 300w

"In his characterization of the two sisters against their magnificent and ever-famous background Mr. Meeker has achieved an unfailingly vital work of fiction, as in his personal and domestic emphases he has brought an unforced originality to his novel's historical aspects." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p7 Ja 4 '42 1200w

"Advertisements of the book describe the era portrayed as 'the richest, fastest, most outrageous, most fashionable, most brilliant, most elaborate, most ornate, most arrogant, most amorous' in the history of our civilization. In the face of such an encomium, a minority report that finds the period merely tedious is probably immaterial and irrelevant."

— New Yorker 17:56 Ja 3 '42 90w

"This is an historical novel not aimed at Hollywood, not succumbing to the merely theatrical. Urbane and accomplished, amazingly comprehensive, it also has its decidedly moving and dramatic moments; but it quietly takes its place among works of literature, a station to which few books of the day attain. . . Of course, to lift such a period novel as this to greatness, it would have been necessary for Mr. Meeker to have raised his viewpoint above the comparatively narrow horizons to which he has chosen to confine it; but within those horizons his eye has been extortionate, his curiosity insatiable, and he has given us, as well as a richly decorated human story, a memorable picture of the haut monde of an incredible era." W. R. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 25:7 Ja 10 '42 1000w

"The pace of this story is, one must admit, slightly jerky, and the chronology sometimes difficult to grasp. Shifting as it does from one sister to the other, the story is mildly confusing to the rapid reader. But these are minor faults. This is in no sense a 'significant' book. It will make a thrilling moving picture and now makes a fascinating and absorbing yarn, recommended for sheer escape value to all and sundry."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 4 '42 750w
Time 39:75 Ja 12 '42 450w

MEFFERD, GERRY. The cruising manual. (Whittiesey house publication) 302p il $3 McGraw

797.124 Yachts and yachting. Navigation. Sailing (W) 41-12486

Guide to cruising which assumes some knowledge of sailing vessels on the part of the user. The author says in the preface "a simple handbook that attempts to provide the reader with information sufficient to help him in solving many of the problems that arise in the course of ordinary cruising. . . An attempt has been made throughout the book to emphasize the deep-sea aspect of the subject." Glossary and index.

Booklist 38:76 N 1 '41

"Will be especially interesting and valuable to the man who is planning, or dreaming of, a deepwater cruise, as who among us doesn't in our more optimistic moments." W. H. Taylor

+ Books p19 S 21 '41 130w

MEIGS, CORNELIA LYNDE. Vanished island; il. by Dorothy Bayley. 258p $2 Macmillan

(W) 41-18715

The Mississippi river in the 1890's provides the background for this story for upper grade readers. A government engineer takes his two children and their friend, Don, when he goes to the rescue of a big river boat which is aground. A disastrous fire adds to their difficulties, but to Don it is the beginning of a really exciting and worthwhile life.

Booklist 38:135 D 15 '41

"It is good for geography, for a sense of the river, and for development of character through responsibility, necessity of quick decisions, and courage to risk one's own life upon them. Cornelia Meigs may always be trusted for historical setting, local color and fidelity to the spirit of the time she presents. But beyond these, an understanding of the problems of troubled youth makes this more than a historical story." M. L. Becker

+ Books p10 N 2 '41 400w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p14 N 6 '41 90w

"As in all the books by Miss Meigs the young people, of whom there are several, are convincingly and sincerely pictured." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:461 N '41 110w

"The characterization is excellent. Will be enjoyed by boys and girls from sixth grade up. Recommended." M. R. Lucas

+ Library J 66:952 N 1 '41 150w

"The narrative progresses with rather less assurance than Miss Meigs usually exhibits, and lacks somewhat in suspense and vitality. Yet the characterizations emerge naturally, stemming straight from the well-proportioned background." I. S.

+ — N Y Times p30 N 2 '41 180w

"No boy, if he can help it, is likely to close this book until he has finished it. . . First-rate."

+ New Yorker 17:145 D 6 '41 40w

"Offered as a juvenile, but with interest for older people who know the Mississippi river only as a line on a map."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 16 '41 110w

Wis Lib Bul 37:206 D '41

MELCHER, MRS MARGUERITE (FELLOWS).
The Shaker adventure. 319p $3 Princeton univ. press

289.8 Shakers (W) 41-51750

An attempt "to tell the story of the Shakers and to explain the meaning of their strange adventure: a voyage into the New World of the American colonies, an experiment in human brotherhood, an attempt to chart that hardest of all realms to enter, the realm of the spirit." (Page 3) Index.

"This book is a worthy tribute to a sincere people. It is not a critical history and the reader must be on his guard against a few important errors, such as the errancy of Holy Scripture." J. E. Kennedy

+ — America 65:443 J1 26 '41 350w

Reviewed by E. C. Hughes
Am J Soc 47:518 N '41 40w

Reviewed by A. W. Elster
Am Soc R 6:585 Ag '41 490w
Booklist 37:431 My 15 '41
Bookmark 2:5 N '41

"On Mrs. Melcher's story of the Shaker adventure, future historians must draw. The book is here to stay. There are Shakers in Mrs. Melcher's family background; their tradition has persisted. Her history of the 'United Society of Believers' is documented for the student, who is further aided by a bibliography that goes from the so-called 'Shaker Bible' in 1808 to the latest of Dr. Andrews's sympathetic evaluations of Shaker economy, esthetics and craftsmanship, in 1940." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 Ap 13 '41 650w

"Mrs. Melcher's admirable and moving account is wholly sympathetic. Shakerism is part of her own family tradition, and she is for it as against all its critics in the days of controversy. This leads her into some not wholly defensible statements about the acts and motives of those who opposed the Shakers." W. E. Garrison

+ — Christian Century 58:530 Ap 16 '41 1300w

Reviewed by D. F. Lucas
Library J 66:264 Mr 15 '41 150w
Living Age 360:396 Je '41 240w

"Mrs. Melcher's treatment of her subject shows a good combination of interpretive sympathy and objectiveness. Besides her acquaintance with Shaker traditions at Enfield, New Hampshire, with which community some of her early relatives had been associated, she has made good use of the Shaker writings. . . Mrs. Melcher's style is excellent, and interest in her narrative never flags, unless when material included in early chapters reappears in later summations, presented from a different angle. The author succeeds in making the reader share the spirit of adventure in which the work, and the Shaker movement, were conceived." Milton Ellis

+ New Eng Q 14:593 S '41 650w

Reviewed by S. E. Hyman
New Repub 105:28 J1 7 '41 130w

"The author is to be warmly congratulated that she has not tried to tie her story up with either Marxian or anti-Marxian ideology as so many modern American writers seem to do when they embark on the history of the religious and communal experiments that took root in this country during pioneer days. She has told her story from the inside out, so to speak, and not from the outside in." Herbert Gorman

+ N Y Times p20 My 11 '41 1250w

Pratt p21 D '41

"While the treatment of the theme is in the main praiseworthy, it falls short of being the definitive history for which there is an ultimate need. . . An extensive manuscript literature, scores of fugitive printed items, and much illustrative material, are at the service of the scholar. A liberal use of such sources would have contributed color and documentary compactness to the record, and added to our understanding of one of the most interesting social experiments in American history." E. D. Andrews

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:10 Je 21 '41 650w

"[The] book is the fruit of a thorough and painstaking study of much elusive documentary data, of talks with survivors and of memories of honored Shaker relatives in the town of Enfield, N. H., where [the author] spent her childhood. It is a scholarly and valuable contribution to the social history of the United States."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Ap 19 '41 1050w

"Mrs. Melcher—perhaps thanks to her family connexion with Shakerism—does not put first things last. She does not neglect the economic interest of the Shaker communes, but she sees them, and rightly sees them, as religious communities. . . The English background is, frankly, inadequate, and Mrs. Melcher's belief that Manchester was a Bishop's seat in the eighteenth century is not conducive to implicit faith in her story. When the Shakers get to America—and, still more, after the great American accessions to the little band of exiles had naturalized the sect—Mrs. Melcher's book vastly improves in quality and interest. Even then it leaves something to be desired."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p4 Ja 3 '42 950w

MELLAN, IBERT. Organic reagents in inorganic analysis. 682p $9 Blakiston

543.7 Chemical tests and reagents. Chemistry, Inorganic. Chemistry, Analytic 41-13065

"This new book is the result of an effort to collect in a form readily usable for analysts, the large amount of information which has accumulated in recent decades on the application of organic compounds in determining inorganic substances. The first section [is] devoted to theories and principles. . . In the second section some 225 organic reagents are described in alphabetical order. . . Methods of procedure constitute the third section. . . The appendix (10 pages), listing the reagents according to reactive groups, is followed by comprehensive author and subject indexes." Chem & Chem Eng N

"Since the reader may be presumed to know what book he is examining, the use of the book title as the running head of every page is redundant and could with advantage have been replaced by the particular page topic. The book will be of definite service to science in providing quick access to the latest methods for the detection and determination of metallic constituents." E. H. Huntress

+ — Am Chem Soc J 63:2857 O '41 250w

"In general, the author seems to have achieved his purpose quite satisfactorily. The book is a valuable compilation which will be especially serviceable to analysts, as both a work of reference and a source of ideas for research. Although this monograph as a whole is essentially reliable, a word of warning to the unwary is necessary. In using it one must be on guard for occasional errors." M. G. Mellon

+ — Chem & Chem Eng N 19:1119 O 10 '41 400w

MELLER, SIDNEY. Home is here. 405p $2.50
Macmillan

41-9783

A story of a family of Italian immigrants in San Francisco during the early 1900s.

Booklist 38:12 S '41

"The subject of Italo-Americans has led to the publication of a good many novels in recent years. Excepting Mr. Meller's, all of these novels have been written by Italian-Americans. Mr. Meller, a non-Italian, has written the best of them all." John Fante

+ Books p4 J1 6 '41 500w

Reviewed by Earle Birney

Canadian Forum 21:219 O '41 430w

Christian Century 58:985 Ag 6 '41 20w

Reviewed by E. S. Brown

Library J 66:567 Je 15 '41 50w

"Meller tells his story out of a deep knowledge of the people he writes about. The little colony of many-tongued characters comes to life under his hand; one sees and smells the ferment of the foreign background merging into the American. There is nothing particularly new or striking in either the subject-matter or plot, but it is the kind of American story that is always good to read." Rose Feld

+ N Y Times p4 J1 6 '41 850w

"A warmhearted and neighborly story. . . The people are more than ordinarily credible and attractive."

+ New Yorker 17:55 J1 5 '41 50w

"Sometimes the Dorellis contemplate returning to Italy but, realizing they are becoming Americans and America is becoming better, they stay to fight on their own plot of land for liberty, justice, and equality. It is this fight that lifts this pleasant idyll of Italian immigrants into a meaningful novel for all Americans." J. D. H.

+ Sat R of Lit 24:16 J1 5 '41 200w

Springf'd Republican p7e J1 6 '41 300w

Wis Lib Bul 37:178 N '41

"Mr. Meller's book is a more serious and lifelike job [than] Mr. Steinbeck's Tortilla Flat; indeed, it is one of the best books about immigrants in America that I know, with a warmth and richness and veracity that place it far above the average, which is usually written from the outside. Mr. Meller has penetrated the hearts of his people." Robert Littell

+ Yale R n s 31:xvi autumn '41 130w

MELLISH, MRS MARY (FLANNERY). Sometimes I reminisce. 336p $3 Putnam

B or 92 Musicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 41-5749

Reminiscences of an Irish-American singer. "One of a large family in a village near Albany, Mary Mellish went to convent schools and began music lessons when she was eight. . . There wasn't enough money for a musical education, so Miss Mellish took a teachers' training course and landed a New York City appointment. Her memories of her experiences with the Manhattan younger generation—of Italian, Irish and Jewish parentage—are spirited and vivid. A vacation at Asbury Park produced a husband, and Miss Mellish settled down to housework and serious voice study." (Books) She never reached great heights, but sang minor parts for seven seasons at the Metropolitan opera house, and has sung in operetta and concert.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p9 J1 6 '41 320w

"In her personal life she seems to have remained naively romantic, and certainly there is no distinction in the way she tells her story. But she has a sincerity and freshness which touch her book now and then with a rather childlike charm."

+ N Y Times p12 F '9 '41 430w

MELONEY, FRANKEN, pseud. See Franken, R. D. and Meloney, W. B.

MELVIN, ARTHUR GORDON. Method for new schools. 301p il $2.95 Day

371.3 Teaching. Education—Experimental methods. Education of children 41-6388

"Not only a text for students in classes on method of teaching but a handbook on practice for teachers, as well as a useful volume for parents who wish to guide their own children." (School & Society) Bibliography. Index.

"The reviewer recommends this book in spite of its serious inadequacy in treating 'Social Experiences.' The author has maintained his leadership in the methodology of progressive education by this latest addition to his books in the field. Its greatest value may prove to be the clear recognition that incidental learning of the three R's is not enough. The reviewer believes that incidental learning is just as inadequate in the other three fields as in the 'Technical Experiences' of reading, 'riting, and 'rithmetic." A. K. Loomis

+ — El School J 42:68 S '41 1300w

School & Society 58:488 Ap 12 '41 30w

MELZER, ARNOLD E. High school forensics; an integrated program. 156p 90c Wilson, H. W.

808.5 Debates and debating (W) 41-1164

"An outline for the organization of an integrated program of forensics in the high school; taking in such topics as the debate coach, the debate class, the intra-mural program, the inter-school program, the school and community service program, and the use of radio as a teaching device. Author is director of forensics in a Sheboygan high school." (Wis Lib Bul) Index.

Booklist 37:289 Mr 1 '41

Wis Lib Bul 37:71 Ap '41

MENCKEN, HENRY LOUIS. Newspaper days, 1899-1906. 313p $3 Knopf

B or 92 Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (W) 41-16367

These further reminiscences by the author of Happy Days (Book Review Digest, 1940) cover the early years of his work as a reporter, dramatic critic, and editor on a Baltimore newspaper.

Reviewed by Wilson Follett

Atlantic D '41 400w

Booklist 38:79 N 1 '41

"All this, this pleasant record of H. L. Mencken's early newspaper days, deals with a remote period in the city of Baltimore, and the things set down here are not of great importance except, perhaps, to Mr. Mencken himself. And yet it is one of the most charming of all newspaper recollections. The hurried, trivial adventures of those seven years, beginning when the young Mencken went to work as a reporter on the old 'Baltimore Herald' and closing when the paper ceased publication, are recounted here with all the old Mencken dash, his affection for salty and low characters, and his characteristic efforts to improve the conduct of his fellows." Stanley Walker

+ Books p1 O 19 '41 1500w

"Mr. Mencken writes his story with relish. . . In his preface he explains that this book of his experiences is true 'but with occasional stretchers.' Even granted these, there is still enough left of life and living to provide a whole city staff with literary style." Nell Mac Neil

+ Commonweal 35:53 O 31 '41 600w

"The book should interest all young journalists and writers, as well as the many readers who enjoy Mr. Mencken." A. R. Eaton

Library J 66:840 O 1 '41 70w

"H. L. Mencken is not a sternly exact reporter, but his memory and relish are vast and he is a good reporter. He is very probably a humane man, but he is not talking about that either, and so the picture you get finally is one of nonsense and much delight. I would call Mencken a peculiarly American article. . . His book is a treasury of fact and fable without dull stretches, a genial book and full of life." Otis Ferguson

+ New Repub 105:546 O 27 '41 1050w

"This reviewer finds in the book little of the authentic sunshine and the authentic gusto of 'Happy Days.' In the present volume the high spirits tend to become high jinks, the famous Mencken vocabulary strikes fire only now and then, and the pace quite often falls into the pedestrian. There are places in 'Newspaper Days' where the author gives you the impression of being very greatly interested in his own story." Simeon Strunsky

N Y Times p3 O 19 '41 700w

"Warm and witty memories of the great politics of the place and period, its wisecracks, its buffoons, its city-room characters, its preposterous stories, which, of course, the young cub never could forget."

+ New Yorker 17:92 N 1 '41 60w

Pratt p5 D '41

"Here is Henry Mencken at his delightful best, gay, extremely amusing, ever exposing hypocrisy and shams with his brilliant lance of complete honesty and good-natured, but often devastating, frankness and humor. I have laughed out loud over this story . . . as I have not over any other book for years in this grim time." O. G. Villard

+ Sat R of Lit 24:8 O 25 '41 1300w

Springf'd Republican p6 O 25 '41 950w

"Henry Mencken has lived excitingly, if not dangerously, and he has loved the adventure of living. 'Newspaper Days' adds an interesting confirmation to the Mencken record." Burns Mantle

+ Survey G 30:711 D '41 600w

Time 38:106 O 20 '41 500w

MENZIES-WILSON, JACOBINE. See Wilson, J. Menzies-

MERCER, CECIL WILLIAM (DORNFORD YATES, pseud.). Shoal water. (Minton, Balch bk) 282p $2 Putnam '7s 6d Ward, Lock

41-529

Jeremy Solon, a young Englishman on holiday in France, rescues a lovely girl from the clutches of a dangerous gang of jewel thieves.

"There's lots in this book to be taken with considerable quantities of grains of salt, but you won't mind. [The author] has the knack of making everything seem quite credible. His characters, too, are exceptionally real and human. And he has a racy style that keeps the pages turning rapidly and eagerly. It's first-rate crime stuff." E. J. Bartnett

+ Boston Transcript p2 F 1 '41 310w

"Shoal Water is a novel (I suppose) which I find very difficult indeed. It is like reading a study of the habits of some newly discovered tribe of aborigines, with a hitherto unknown behaviour-pattern. The language is not unlike English, yet strangely archaic and distorted, and apart from one aborigine's mating instinct, it is absolutely impossible to decide why anyone in the book acts as he does, unless it is pure ritual." Brian Howard

— New Statesman & Nation 20:546 N 30 '40 250w

"If you like a fantastic story told so circumstantially that you really believe it as it runs along, you will enjoy this. Readers who have followed the high-powered investigations of [the author's] Jonah Mansel will be glad to hear that the detective is on the job again." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p20 Ja 19 '41 240w

"First-class romance-adventure-crime story built along familiar lines, but handled with speed, finesse, and nice eye for grim details. Exhilarating."

+ Sat R of Lit 23:19 Ja 25 '41 40w

"Mr. Dorndorf Yates and Mr. Jeffrey Farnol are both of them authors who can be relied upon for good yarns. . . [This is] exciting as well as romantic reading."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p569 N 9 '40 100w

MERRITT, BENJAMIN DEAN. Epigraphica antica. 157p il $2 Harvard univ. press

481.7 Inscriptions, Greek 41-5647

"The materials in [this book] were first delivered in the form of lectures at Oberlin college. They were designed to afford a non-technical account of present-day technics in dealing with the ancient stones and monuments whose inscriptions are a primary source of classical scholarship. While the author confines himself to the subject of research among the monuments of Athens, where his own studies have been concentrated, his words are applicable in many ways to all historical remains of the sort." Springf'd Republican

"This is an excellent little volume. . . Professor Meritt believes in restoration, as many of us do, but the historian should be careful to distinguish between an absolutely certain restoration and one which is doubtful. Too many historical arguments have been based on a wrong restoration and often, even in the Athenian agora, later finds of actual fragments have proved earlier restorations wrong." D. M. Robinson

+ — Am Hist R 47:404 Ja '42 280w

Reviewed by B. M. Peebles

Commonweal 33:378 Ja 31 '41 80w

Springf'd Republican p7e F 9 '41 310w

MERRIAM, CHARLES EDWARD. What is democracy? 115p $1 Univ. of Chicago press

321.8 Democracy (W) 41-15266

"Another series of Walgreen lectures on American institutions. As student and teacher of political science and as an active participant in public affairs, Professor Merriam has been accumulating both knowledge and wisdom for many years. Here democracy is discussed, not historically as by Professor Craven, but in the present world situation and particularly the American situation. Merriam knows the worst that can be said about democracy by its enemies and by its fainthearted friends, and he believes that, however just their accusations may be, their verdict is wrong." Christian Century

"Professor Merriam sets forth in lucid and, at points inspired, prose the meaning of democracy, equality, and liberty." P. H. Odegard

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:1161 D '41 450w

Booklist 38:2 S '41

"This great little book is part of the wisdom literature of democracy."

+ Christian Century 58:1007 Ag 13 '41 90w

Reviewed by Francis Downing

Commonweal 34:573 O 3 '41 150w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:373 Ja '42 10w

Reviewed by A. G. Higgins

Library J 66:668 Ag '41 110w

"This is a refreshingly encouraging book, free of fatalism." John Cournos

+ N Y Times p5 Ag 17 '41 270w

"Dr. Merriam's discussion of democracy remains a masterly tract for the times. So long as there are such men in the inner councils of our government, we need not fear that American democracy will be lacking in either strength or courage." A. M. Bingham

+ Sat R of Lit 24:30 D 6 '41 500w

MERSEREAU, JOHN. The corpse comes ashore. 301p $2 Lippincott

41-12275

Detective story.

"This has action on practically every page, whether by land, sea or air. The puzzle is all right, too." Will Cuppy

+ Books p9 Ag 17 '41 110w

Reviewed by Kay Irvin

N Y Times p13 Ag 3 '41 120w

"Two of the major passions, love and money, are the motifs in this tense, exciting mystery. For frustrated readers who pine for adventure."

New Yorker 17:60 Ag 9 '41 30w

MEYERS, ALFRED. Murder ends the song. 304p $2 Reynal

41-2090

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p15 Ja 26 '41 120w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 F 1 '41 50w

"The persons who might reasonably be suspected of killing Marina include her accompanist, her personal physician, her secretary-companion, her chauffeur, her niece, Tony Graine and his accompanist. All these have the opportunity, and even if there were no other motives, there are always the jewels. If you can deduce which of these is the killer you are entitled to pin a medal on yourself." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p24 Ja 26 '41 200w

"Knowledgeable musical background and shivery atmosphere add considerable punch to plot that jells a trifle too swiftly for comfort."

+ Sat R of Lit 23:18 F 15 '41 40w

"The idea of murdering with a steel knitting-needle is sufficiently ridiculous, as anyone who has felt the point of such a weapon will realise: but the dash of the narrator sweeps the reader past such absurdities and the general effect is exciting and entertaining." John Fairfield

+ Spec 167:540 D 5 '41 90w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 26 '41 180w

Times [London] Lit Sup p545 N 1 '41 120w

MEYERSBURG, MRS DOROTHY. Seventh avenue. 288p $2.50 Dutton

(W) 40-35994

Story of the New York garment trade told from the side of the employer in conflict with chiselers and union racketeers.

"Here, in a first novel, is the proletarian pattern of much of our recent fiction turned inside out. As the 'other side of the story,' Mrs. Meyersburg's book is an accumulation of the complaints of the hard-pressed employer, battling as an individual against the tide of an organized society, and losing. . . If Mrs. Meyersburg, in her attempt to tell the story of the employer, arouses more astonishment than sympathy it is because her protest is general and undefined, her generalizations wistful and naive." Milton Lehman

— Books p9 Ja 5 '41 650w

"Most seriously marred by faulty image and flat dialogue."

— Boston Transcript p1 Ja 11 '41 40w

"Her story runs along at a readable pace. The plot seems a little thin in spots, but on the whole this is a fair first novel." R. D. Minnich

+ Library J 65:1087 D 15 '40 300w

"Angry and inept."

— New Repub 104:126 Ja 27 '41 50w

"Dorothy Meyersburg seems to know her dress manufacturers. She has worked out a story that is swift, tough, exciting and convincing. . . It is the personal and human side of 'Seventh Avenue' that places it definitely a cut above the usual proletarian novel." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p7 Ja 5 '41 650w

"The author tries too hard to prove that all the trouble in the union is the work of Communists. The evidence she presents to back up this point is weak. She may show that there are grafters in the unions but the fact that self-seeking men have obtained relatively high positions doesn't prove that they are Communists. Her exposition of the ills existing is convincingly presented but the conclusion she seems to draw—that the unions should be abolished—seems extreme."

Springf'd Republican p7e F 16 '41 420w

MEYNELL, MRS ALICE CHRISTIANA (THOMPSON). Poems. complete ed 222p $1.75 (4s) Oxford

821

[41-51812]

"Alice Meynell, an English poet born in 1850 and dying in 1923, was the author of 10 volumes of exquisite verse, now gathered together in one volume." (Springf'd Republican) Indexes.

Booklist 37:494 Je 15 '41

Cath World 153:369 Je '41 800w

"The gentle nobility of thought, characterized by a form of expression too free to be confined to any particular epoch, flows comfortably into the present agitated current. There is a combination of truth and tenderness and vision in all the poems, and it gathers force from the workmanlike manner in which they are put together."

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 My 24 '41 160w

Reviewed by J. G. E. Hopkins

Commonweal 34:258 Jl 4 '41 1000w

Reviewed by Richard Church

New Statesman & Nation 20:662 D 21 '40 900w

"Reading Alice Meynell's poems today we are impressed by their gentleness, restraint and unostentation. They refresh and charm with their calm flashes of beauty and soft music. They are wholly removed from the material world and have nothing of anguish or disquiet. Her repose and dignity sometimes recall Jean Ingelow." E. L. Tinker

+ N Y Times p22 My 4 '41 410w

New Yorker 17:88 Ap 26 '41 20w

"A welcome addition to the Oxford Editions of Standard Authors."

+ Spec 165:400 O 18 '40 80w

"Always the tireless and meticulous worker at her craft, the restraint of Miss Meynell's medium never wholly dims the flame of her spirit. Here is emotion, but emotion controlled and almost intellectualized. Although the reader is ever aware of the disciplined nature that is the poet's, he cannot overlook the richness of feeling, the clarity and fastidiousness of communication which are her peculiar distinction. Here is no careless fluency, no youthful lyrical outburst of song. It is the mature, thoughtful, passionate heart, speaking as it were with firm lips the hard, strong words man recognizes as truth."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 13 '41 230w

"Possibly those of her poems which once brought her most renown, those which Ruskin praised, or 'The Shepherdess' or the sonnet 'Renouncement,' will touch this age less than some among her maturest verses which possess a less obvious appeal. But in the best of what she wrote the spiritual voice which Francis Thompson recognized is as audible today as it ever was."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p594 N 23 '40 700w

MICHELL, HUMFREY. The economics of ancient Greece. 415p $4 Macmillan [18s Cambridge]

330.938 Greece—Economic conditions [41-16022]

A study of the economic life of ancient Greece, its agriculture, mining and industry, commerce, trade, finance, money and banking. Select bibliography. Index.

"In spite of the stimulating chapters on economics in Sir Alfred Zimmern's Greek Commonwealth, there has been up to the present no comprehensive treatment written originally in English of the economic life of the Greek city states before the Macedonian conquest. This lack is now well filled by Professor Michell's scholarly work which is based solidly upon ancient sources while giving due consideration to the best modern research." A. E. R. Boak

+ Am Econ R 31:132 Mr '41 750w

"Despite all differences of opinion—and many of these will arise—this is decidedly a good book. By position and research interests Professor Michell is an economist, working in the modern field. It is this element in a happy combination of equipments which, for the reviewer, has given his book upon Greek economic life its greatest value and solidity. The charm of the work—for it has been distinctly attractive to read—stems from the author's warm acceptance of the Greeks of antiquity as a distinguished and gifted people." W. L. Westermann

+ — Am Hist R 46:869 Jl '41 850w

Am Soc R 6:927 D '41 60w

Geog R 31:701 O '41 480w

"I think Mr. Michell was, honestly, not very much interested in the Greeks except as a case study presenting special difficulties for the investigator. So, where his material gives out, he has no imaginative picture of Greek civilization as a whole, no vivid sense of the lives of the people. Michell has done a good scholarly job without ingenuity or wit and is consequently useless for those who are interested, but not professionally." David Grene

+ — New Repub 104:190 F 10 '41 130w

Times [London] Lit Sup p386 Ag 10 '40 1800w

MICHIE, ALLAN ANDREW, and GRAEBNER, WALTER, eds. Their finest hour; first-hand narratives of the war in England. 226p il $2.50 Harcourt [7s 6d Allen, G]

940.5342 World war, 1939—Personal narratives, English. World war, 1939—Great Britain (W) 41-7360

A collection of narratives, each told in the first person, of England's war on land and sea, and in the air. Airmen, firefighters, men on a convoy, a Coventry doctor, a girl warden, and a woman from Bethnal Green whose house was bombed, all tell their own stories. The editors are American newspaper men, and the articles and illustrations were first published in Life.

Booklist 37:462 Je 1 '41

"A collection of pure narratives that ought to be fresh and memorable long after we have all grown tired of conducting post-mortems on the next peace conference." Frank Kelley

+ Books p16 Ap 27 '41 400w

Christian Century 58:531 Ap 16 '41 110w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 19:374 Jl '41 20w

"The material is interesting and the volume has an attractive format and splendid photographs." R. H. McDonough

+ Library J 66:304 Ap 1 '41 50w

Manchester Guardian p7 F 7 '41 140w

Reviewed by Ralph Bates

Nation 152:674 Je 7 '41 70w

"By far the best piece of narrative in the book, a woman from Bethnal Green describes the bombing of her home. Hers is a tragic story and so is the one about the sinking of the Rawalpindi; the human note is therefore deeper. This is a relief after the prosaic or excited success stories of the others who are protected or inhibited from human feeling, and above all from the expression of fear, by their absorption in their complicated technical tasks." V. S. Pritchett

+ New Statesman & Nation 21:88 Ja 25 '41 900w

"For those who like their material untouched, and not heightened through the eyes of a conscious word artist, this is a straight, wholly reliable, and extremely moving collection of stories of people living, in Churchill's phrase, 'their finest hour.' It is an adventure book that transcends all fiction." Cecil Roberts

+ Sat R of Lit 24:12 My 10 '41 110w

Reviewed by L. A. G. Strong

Spec 166:40 Ja 10 '41 140w

Reviewed by Francis Williamson

Survey G 30:482 S '41 40w

Time 37:98 Ap 7 '41 400w

"There is stirring action in every page of this unusual book. . . The editors themselves make their contribution to these graphic narratives, and the profusion of excellent photographs is in the same challenging mood."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p639 D 21 '40 210w

Wis Lib Bul 37:75 Ap '41

Reviewed by Herbert Davis

Yale R n s 30:826 summer '41 130w

MIELCHE, HAKON. Journey to the world's end; marginal drawings by the author; tr. from the Danish by M. A. Michael. 297p map $2.50 Doubleday [12s 6d Hodge]

918.2 Tierra del Fuego 41-1847

A gayly written, humorously illustrated account of the author's travels from his native Denmark to Tierra del Fuego. "Except for the epics that center round Cape Horn, not much has been written of this awe-inspiring end of the world, where the last swoop of the Andes results in magnificent firds fringed with virgin snow peaks; where you can find both the humming-bird and the penguin, and discover beaches on which gold is washed up as flotsam. . . The author came in contact with every aspect of life there, in the wilds, in the townships, and on the great sheep farms of the pampas; and he supplements his own experiences with scraps of history, and yarns of the modern conquistadores who have drifted this way in search of gold or adventure." (Christian Science Monitor)

Booklist 37:385 Ap 15 '41

Bookmark 2:10 My '41

"All told, this is a wise and satisfying book. There are a few errors, accountable probably to loose editing. . . The author's charming pen drawings on the margin of each page are genuine illustrations, carrying out the genial spirit of the book. It should be added that 'Journey to the World's End' is a noteworthy piece of translation. Danish is apt to come over into wooden English; the two languages do not jibe very well. But in the present case the humor and colloquial flavor have somehow been retained, an achievement of which the translator may well be proud." Lincoln Colcord

+ Books p6 F 16 '41 1300w

Reviewed by Eric Forbes-Boyd

Christian Science Monitor p20 D 2 '39 320w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:387 Ja '42 10w

"An exceptionally interesting travel book." M. C.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 O 24 '39 300w

MIELCHE, HAKON—Continued

"Apparently the author of this volume is a professional traveler who goes to strange places for the purpose of writing about them. Here, however, his resemblance to the late Richard Halliburton stops short. He is realistic, genially tough-minded, and as entertaining a companion as one could wish. All in all a very superior book of its kind."

+ Nation 152:247 Mr 1 '41 220w

New Repub 104:350 Mr 10 '41 40w

Reviewed by R. L. Duffus

N Y Times p12 Je 22 '41 900w

"Just about as witty and original a travel book as you are likely to find."

+ New Yorker 16:56 F 1 '41 50w

"This young Danish author could write with charm of anything, and is fortunate in having a translator who apparently has not marred the freshness of the original. Even the preparations for the journey from Denmark to Tierra del Fuego, the 'World's End,' make delightful reading because of the humor and selective skill with which they are described. . . His own numerous marginal drawings are as delightful as his text." H. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 23:20 F 15 '41 220w

"Mr. Mielche is a little overmuch given to clichés of the 'That, as Rudyard Kipling says, is another story' order, and his indomitable facetiousness is sometimes a little forced; but his book gives a vivid picture of a little-known part of the earth's surface and of its odd inhabitants."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p597 O 14 '39 550w

MILES, ARNOLD, and MARTIN, LOWELL.

Public administration and the library. (Studies in lib. science) 313p $3 Univ. of Chicago press

020 Libraries and state. Library administration 41-22754

"One of a trilogy, following Joeckel, The Government of the American Public Library [Book Review Digest, 1935] and Waples, People and Print [Book Review Digest, 1938]. The present study relates the theory of public administration to the American public library in chapters on library extension, school and public library relationships, library finance and measurement, state library agencies, and state and federal library support." (Booklist) Selected bibliography. Index.

Booklist 38:107 D 1 '41

"Of a book so well done and so important, it may be picking at notes to offer minor criticisms. One could wish, however, that the authors in certain parts of their work were not so fond of so many six-bit words all in a row. . . On the other hand, they sometimes pick on a little word and ride it in many a quarter-mile race, for example, 'stem' and 'meaningful.' In a formal treatise it is a personal whim not to fancy sentences ending with 'however.' And the index is almost devoid of the names of authorities, except that of Carleton B. Joeckel. But, I apologize; Miles and Martin have written a book librarians will ignore at their peril; and the University of Chicago Press has done its usual neat job in putting it into print." M. J. Ferguson

+ — Library J 66:1084 D 15 '41 850w

School & Society 54:424 N 8 '41 30w

MILES, JOSEPHINE. Poems on several occasions. unp $1 New directions

811

41-19082

The occasions "celebrated" in these short poems are gleaned from newspaper items, commonplace or unusual, which serve as the basis for the poet's argument.

Reviewed by E. R. Whittemore, Jr.

Books p13 Ag 17 '41 210w

Reviewed by P. M. Jack

N Y Times p5 D 14 '41 40w

"Miss Miles is a gifted poet of a younger generation. She lives in California and is a satirist. But her humor is continually sweetening her wit, and there doesn't seem to be a malicious ingredient in her makeup. The intelligent edge to her lines reminds us of the dissenting 'dryness' of the country store or the town meeting." Louise Bogan

+ New Yorker 17:76 S 6 '41 150w

Reviewed by Harvey Breit

Poetry 59:49 O '41 600w

MILLAR, MARGARET. The invisible worm. 273p $2 Doubleday

41-11800

Detective story.

"Margaret Millar, a Canadian author, strikes us as a mystery find of considerable voltage. Her weird, impressive and most amusing tale of multiple murder in Mertonville should create a demand for more of the same, especially for more highbrow logic by Dr. Paul Prye, a psycho-analytical detective whose only fault is quoting William Blake a little too often." Will Cuppy

+ Books p9 Jl 20 '41 160w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p19 Jl 13 '41 190w

"This first book is written with a light touch, and the plot is sound."

+ New Yorker 17:56 Jl 19 '41 60w

"Wacky humor is strongest point of story but Dr. Prye and Insp. Bailey are sleuths that will bear watching. Commendable."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:17 Jl 19 '41 40w

MILLAY, EDNA ST VINCENT (MRS E. J. BOISSEVAIN). Collected sonnets. 161p $3; lea $5 Harper

811

(W) 41-52020

One hundred and sixty-one sonnets, all but two of them from the author's earlier volumes.

"When Edna St. Vincent Millay published her early poetry she was the voice of the new 'post-war' generation of young women, asserting rebelliously the values of healthy twentieth-century youth against those of the dying Victorian tradition. The voice was fresh and insurgent and passionate—a very frank and fearless young voice. . . Her later poetry . . . instead of developing with the age, has remained the poetry of the youth of the 'twenties,' while the romance becomes somewhat diluted with empty rhetoric, the ecstasy a little stiff in the joints. Yet this collection of sonnets is the work of a minor poet who impresses a personality on everything she writes, who is often a most accomplished technician in the sonnet form, and whose best examples will always find a place in any anthology of romantic verse." Elizabeth Drew

+ — Atlantic Ja '42 250w

Booklist 38:128 D 15 '41

"Constructed in the Elizabethan tradition, for sheer beauty of language and form they impress the reader anew with their author's genius." Pearl Strachan

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 D 13 '41 400w

"With all these sonnets between the two blue boards one turns the pages not only in reminiscence, but to see what can be discovered about Miss Millay's progress in the use and command of the sonnet form. There is nothing startling one way or the other: no remarkable growth, no perceptible decline. She was very good to begin with; if the emotion has cooled and passion at times is mimicked rather than felt, nevertheless, the manner remains original, the contrivance adroit, the epithet nice, the music clear." Rolfe Humphries

+ Nation 153:644 D 20 '41 900w

Reviewed by Maurice Swan

N Y Times p5 D 7 '41 750w

New Yorker 17:136 D 6 '41 20w

"One does not voluntarily read a book of poetry through from first to last unless he be performing a dogged exercise of duty. This collection is one which will answer and satisfy many moods, which will speak for the mute and uneloquent, and will delight the heart of those stubborn few who care profoundly for the sonnet at its best." care profoundly for the sonnet at its best.

Springf'd Republican p7e N 23 '41
360w

MILLER, MRS ALICE (DUER). I have loved England. . . 90p! $2.75 Putnam

914.2 England—Pictorial works, Photographic books (W) 41-11641

Collection of full-page photographs of England as it was: churches, monuments, villages, colleges, cities, and towns are all represented. Each photograph has an accompanying brief prose sketch.

Books p6 Ag 3 '41 240w

Cath World 154:255 N '41 130w

"If we cannot turn a page without present heartache we lay the book aside at the end, nevertheless, with a grateful richness of reminder. This is part of our heritage, not necessarily of blood but of civilization: the ages of the experience of man."

+ N Y Times p8 Je 22 '41 500w

"The selection is Baedekerish, long on historical monuments and the picturesque but rather short on the common people and common scenes."

New Yorker 17:56 Jl 5 '41 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 13 '41 160w

MILLER, MRS ALICE (DUER). Summer holiday. 780p $2.50 Dodd

41-16490

An omnibus volume containing four complete novels and two short stories. The novels are: Manslaughter; The Reluctant Duchess; Instruments of Darkness; Gowns by Roberta (Book Review Digest, 1921, 1925, 1926, 1933).

"As a sort of unhappy after-thought, two short stories are tacked on at the end, one of the trick variety, the other solved by a 'noble' suicide. But the three polite comedy period pieces are delightful."

+ Commonweal 34:429 Ag 22 '41 80w

"Lively and readable."

+ New Yorker 17:78 S 6 '41 50w

"These stories, varied in theme and treatment all have in common the fine plots and characterizations of a skillful story teller."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 24 '41
100w

MILLER, CHRISTOPHER BLACKBURN. Hudson Valley squire; with il. by Ferdinand Warren. 340p $2.75 Stokes

818 New York (state)—Social life and customs (W) 41-4327

Reminiscences of the author's boyhood at Woodburn Hall, the family estate on the Hudson river, in the eighteen nineties. His father, whose activities form the central theme of the book, prided himself on being a "sport," with his cockfighting, ice boating, horse-racing, prizefighting, and other athletic outlets. Some of the anecdotes recall Clarence Day's Life With Father (Book Review Digest, 1935).

"Because . . . his sporting father and the whole variegated household exist almost solely to have grotesque misadventures and be a collective scream, the book does not get far as a total picture, though the manner of life of which it betrays involuntary glimpses had some historical importance and large social implications. Its episodes are just funny, rather in the way of Peck's Bad Boy." Wilson Follett

+ Atlantic My '41 190w

Booklist 37:358 Ap 1 '41

"Mr. Miller has told a number of good stories about a virile, irascible, and enterprising man and he has given them an amusing background. He writes straightforward, pleasant prose. His narratives move swiftly and are, for the most part, well chosen. Each chapter tells at least one anecdote of the kind that congenial raconteurs usually begin with a chuckle and a 'remember the time when.' His humor is not subtle and occasionally descends to slapstick—and worse." Carl Carmer

+ Books p22 Mr 2 '41 450w

"Strong in its horse and whiskey flavor, Mr. Miller's flowery reminiscences recapture through rosy spectacles the wonderful atmosphere of the Gay Nineties. This is amusing, sinewy, refreshing stuff, a high-ball compared to Mr. Day's fruity punch." Olga Owens

+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 1 '41 330w

New Repub 105:166 Ag 4 '41 40w

"In all this there are stories—the gayest and most diverting stories, which in sum bring us the portrait of a quite untameable country gentleman who lived according to his code and who held his family's affection as he captures ours. There is a real, if also lively, nostalgia, too, in this spirited and delightful memoir." K. W.

+ N Y Times p4 Mr 9 '41 700w

"Downright hilarious in spots."

+ New Yorker 17:84 F 22 '41 50w

"One of the things we remember about Clarence Day's father (or Father) is an impression of magnificent isolation, a lion raging among light-headed females and frivolous boys. Such was apparently an unnecessary impression, for we hear now of another Father. . . Perhaps one of the book's greatest charms is its nostalgic recall of that vanished atmosphere of careless confidence and security. It is only fifty years past, yet how thoroughly past and gone." N. L. R.

+ Sat R of Lit 23:20 Mr 1 '41 230w

"Entertaining and often very funny reading. As they are stories of just one family, and that having some social position, Mr. Miller's book is presumably not offered as a full account of life in the Hudson valley, but throughout the yarns about his family can be caught glimpses of a way of living which has passed from the American scene."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 F 21 '41 600w

Wis Lib Bul 37:76 Ap '41

MILLER, DOUGLAS. You can't do business with Hitler. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 229p $1.50 Little

943.085 Germany—Nazi movement. Germany —Commercial policy (W) 41-51849

"From 1933 until shortly before the war, Douglas Miller, a Rhodes Scholar from Denver and a much travelled man, sat in our Embassy in Berlin as commercial attaché, and on behalf of American trade tried to do business with Hitler. He was an intelligent, resourceful, and shrewd man and he tried hard. In the days of the Weimar Republic, the United States had done a great deal of business with Germany. . . Mr. Miller, egged on by our businessmen, tried to continue this state of things with the Nazis. But it wasn't possible. Why? Mr. Miller gives the answer in this most timely book: 'You Can't Do Business With Hitler.' Sat R of Lit

Booklist 37:540 Jl 15 '41

Bookmark 2:11 N '41

"The best praise that can be given this book is that almost nothing in it is original. It is the record. It is the sorry tale of what has happened to others with good intentions who believed in peaceful co-operation with the Nazis. . . It is one of the merits of this book that it does not pull its punches in explaining how it has been that non-German businessmen have so often contributed to Nazi success by driving their governments into the barter deals

MILLER, DOUGLAS—Continued
which have nearly always preceded invasion."
Joseph Barnes

+ Books p3 Je 29 '41 600w

Christian Science Monitor p12 S 27 '41
400w

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '41

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:194 O '41 70w

"A timely book on an important subject.
Recommended." J. A. Sohon

+ Library J 66:614 Jl '41 80w

Management R 30:393 O '41 500w

"This book has already climbed high into the best-seller list. That is bad news for Herr Hitler, for the more Americans who read this revealing account of what Nazism really means, the more likely this country is to pursue the kind of realistic policy which eventually will spell his doom." Keith Hutchison

+ Nation 153:120 Ag 9 '41 800w

Reviewed by Guenter Reimann

New Repub 105:164 Ag 4 '41 400w

"In this volume an analytical mind has given us a simple yet profound understanding of what Hitler and Hitlerism mean and, more important, what the Nazis intend to do about the United States." Shepard Stone

+ N Y Times p1 Jl 20 '41 1100w

"Informative and clearly written."

+ New Yorker 17:55 Jl 26 '41 60w

Reviewed by M. T. Florinsky

Pol Sci Q 56:639 D '41 400w

Pratt p24 D '41

"It's a book that ought to be on the desk of every businessman in this country. . . Mr.
Lindbergh and his America First friends also do not appear to have been brought face to face with the facts. They too could learn from this book of the folly of trying to do business with Hitler. So could all the rest of our appeasers. Mr. Miller is quite content in his book to let the facts speak for themselves. He gives the facts about what happened to American investments in Germany, to American firms and factories which strove to carry on in the Third Reich. They make an absorbing tale." W. L. Shirer

+ Sat R of Lit 24:7 Jl 5 '41 950w

Reviewed by Leon Whipple

Survey G 30:480 S '41 120w

"After this eyewitness account from an American of the highest intellectual standing, there is no more excuse for uncertainty and hesitation on the one vital issue of our time."
Gustav Stolper

+ Yale R n s 31:182 autumn '41 1150w

MILLER, EMANUEL, ed. The neuroses in war; by several authors; with a concluding chapter by H. Crichton-Miller. 250p $2.50
(10s 6d) Macmillan

616.85 Neuroses. War 40-35023

"Most of the physicians who contribute to this well-balanced book had experience of neurosis among the troops in the last War and are thus able to review their clinical material in the light of present-day psychological theory. The first chapter contains a valuable summary of the literature of war neurosis, then follow accounts of the mode of onset of war neuroses, clinical case studies, problems of differential diagnosis, psychopathological theories and various methods of treatment.
This last section is eminently practical and is of general importance to all medical practitioners. A section is devoted to psychiatric organization in the Services and a short chapter of a prophetic character on the problem of war neurosis among the civilian population."
Times [London] Lit Sup

Reviewed by George Orwell

New Statesman & Nation 20:269 S 14
'40 420w

"Dr. Emanuel Miller and his colleagues offer a volume particularly helpful to medical groups, but the chapter on 'War of Nerves' should interest all citizens." I. S. Wile, M.D.

+ Survey 77:101 Mr '41 240w

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p499 S 28 '40
160w

MILLER, MRS HELEN (TOPPING). When a girl's in love. 273p $2 Appleton-Century 41-12276

Rosemary Mallard had seen marriages that failed often enough not to want to marry—her own father and mother were divorced and Rosemary didn't care for a life divided between two loved ones. But then she fell in love and tho that made another divorce necessary in the end she found happiness.

"The pangs of love at twenty are, as her readers know, Helen Topping Miller's metier, and 'When a Girl's in Love' probes them as skillfully and as entertainingly as any of her novels. It meets all the romantic requirements." Lisle Bell

Books p8 Ag 17 '41 170w

Reviewed by Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p16 Ag 3 '41 150w

MILLER, MRS HELEN (TOPPING). Who is this girl? 244p $2 Appleton-Century 41-5498

A combination of romance and mystery, with a western ranch as the main locale.

"'Who Is This Girl,' is mildly baffling, but we wouldn't class it among Mrs. Miller's best offerings." Lisle Bell

Books p15 Mr 30 '41 120w

"If Helen Miller keeps on improving her plots and tightening up her suspense, she will surprise nobody by turning out a good mystery story one of these days. This novel is at least half a good mystery, the other half being the usual obstacle race of romance." Charlotte Dean

+ — N Y Times p26 Mr 30 '41 150w

MILLER, HENRY. Colossus of Maroussi; or,
The spirit of Greece. 350p $3.50 Colt 914.95 Greece, Modern—Description and travel 42-560

"[This] is a travel-book on Greece of a very special type. Though containing some plain information about the country and its people, it intrinsicly belongs to the modern tradition of the fugitives from 'progress'—from the lands ravaged by the machine, the salesman and the abstract thinker—the tradition of Melville and Gauguin in Tahiti and D. H. Lawrence in Mexico and Taos. Miller went to Greece to purge himself of his long contact with the French and to make good his hope for spiritual renewal—and the cure seems to have worked like a charm." New Repub

Reviewed by Babette Deutsch

Books p16 Ja 11 '42 270w

Reviewed by George Barker

Nation 154:17 Ja 3 '42 700w

"At his best Miller writes on a level of true expressiveness, generating a kind of all-out poetry, at once genial and savage. Now the intellectuals who have so far steered clear of Miller ought to look into 'The Colossus of Maroussi,' where his great talent is shown to best advantage." Philip Rahv

+ — New Repub 106:59 Ja 12 '42 850w

MILLER, HENRY. Wisdom of the heart. 256p
$2.50 New directions

818

41-28118

"A new collection of diatribes, sketches, and stories by a coterie writer whose originality and energy are often obscured by a rush of words and a forcing of the mystic-Dionysiac note. The best things are two essays on the Swedenborgian aspect of Balzac and a discussion of the French motion-picture actor Raimu, which says almost everything there is to be said about what is wrong with the art of American films." New Yorker

Reviewed by Babette Deutsch
Books p16 Ja 11 '42 270w

"Some of the pieces make excellent reading, specifically the essay on the screen-actor Raimu and the stories, 'Mademoiselle Claude' and 'The Alcoholic Veteran with the Washboard Cranium.'" Philip Rahv

New Repub 106:60 Ja 12 '42 130w

New Yorker 17:60 D 27 '41 80w

MILLER, HUGH. Christian truth in history. 236p $2.50 Harper

201 Christianity—Philosophy. Civilization, Christian 41-19605

"Dr. Hugh Miller, professor of philosophy in the University of California at Los Angeles, is another young American intellectual who has decided to take Christianity seriously. Believing that 'religion is the only human impulse that goes out to all men irrespective of persons, of class barriers, of national boundaries, of racial differences'—outranking science, philosophy, and art—he holds that history, 'properly and empirically written,' will establish the truth and importance of religion.' The purpose of Christian Truth in History is to show the place of religion in social development—specifically, the place of Christianity." (Crozer Q) Index.

"This book is charming reading. Its easy flowing diction, its plausible affirmations and its show of logic produce a pleasant sensation. At the same time one has an uneasy feeling that the conclusions arrived at are untenable, that unwarranted deductions have been drawn from questionable premises and that factual data have not always been fairly presented. Just how to be properly appreciative of the book's merits, while at the same time aware of its defects, leaves one in a quandary." S. J. Case

Books p29 N 23 '41 550w

"The treatment of the theological problem seems to be based either on inadequate information or on immature judgment. Despite the emphasis on evolution, the author finds no real place for 'the Kingdom of God.' . . . But I would particularly commend the illuminating discussion of truth where it is defined as 'giving adequate expression to experience.' But to my mind the greatest value of the book lies in the thesis that genuine Christianity is not unifiable with a theoretical rationalism. But that thesis needs more adequate historical and theological grounding than is here presented." C. T. Craig

+ — Christian Century 58:1377 N 5 '41 850w

Reviewed by T. L. Leishman

Christian Science Monitor p10 D 13 '41 650w

"This book is not of a character to win popular demand, but it is a helpful outline of its subject with many refreshing, clarifying statements." Clifton Macon

+ Churchman 155:22 O 1 '41 200w

Reviewed by E. S. Brightman

Crozer Q 18:341 O '41 550w

MILLER, JOHN ANDERSON. Fares, please! from horse-cars to streamliners. 204p il $3.50 Appleton-Century

388.0973 Rapid transit, Transportation—U.S. (W) 41-5284

History of local transit problems and conveyances from the most primitive horse-drawn cars to the present streamlined buses. Partial contents: Transportation for all—the story of the horse-drawn omnibus; Horses get a rest—the story of the cable-car; Cars run by lightning—the story of the early electric car; Railways on stilts—the story of the elevated railway;

Millions move underground—the story of subways; Rolling on rubber—the story of the motor-bus; Transit in the modern age—the story of urban transportation to-day and tomorrow. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:432 My 15 '41

Bookmark 2:5 My '41

"A great compendium of fascinating facts, amusing, appalling and instructive. Mr. Miller, the even-tempered author, is the editor of a trade journal devoted to transit matters, and apparently has made a thorough study of his subject. . . . It is good reading, solidly buttressed with straight historical evidence, but, fortunately, not too burdened with figures and analyses, which are the curse of the general run of transit authorities." Stanley Walker

+ Books p4 Mr 30 '41 1050w

"Written primarily for the layman, the book will be found none the less interesting to engineers. Especially good are the many illustrations."

+ Eng N 127:72 J1 31 '41 80w

"This is a book about local transportation, and its interesting facts are brought into especially vivid life by its rich diversity of illustration. Its story, the author points out, has never been told in its entirety before. . . . Here are facts and figures and anecdotes. And the book is worth having for its photograph gallery alone. There are 118 of these photographs, as well as 29 drawings, and the majority of them show quaintness on the road of progress."

+ N Y Times p9 Mr 30 '41 360w

"The reader who has taken city transit for granted as a dreary and commonplace business will find unexpected curiosities in this history. . . . Mr. Anderson has used primary sources throughout. The book is packed with illustrations made from contemporary prints, drawings, diagrams, and photographs; they show transit development from Lausanne to Buenos Aires, from Paris to Honolulu and from 1827 to 1940." Roger Burlingame

+ Sat R of Lit 24:12 Je 28 '41 380w

Wis Lib Bul 37:89 My '41

MILLER, JOHN PERRY. Unfair competition; a study in criteria for the control of trade practices. 438p $4 Harvard univ. press

380.18 Competition, Unfair A41-1332

"In the first six chapters, the author reviews public policy toward trade practices as established by the Federal Trade Commission and as molded by the courts in their interpretation of cases arising under the Sherman Act, the Clayton Act, and the Federal Trade Commission Act. . . . A substantial section of three chapters is devoted to discrimination before and after the Robinson-Patman amendments. . . . Several chapters are devoted to such topics as: tying and exclusive arrangements, conspiracy and coercion, sales below cost, free goods, resale price maintenance, trade practice conference rules, industrial self-government, and the N.R.A." Ann Am Acad

"In general, the study constitutes an interesting and valuable addition to the literature of trade practice regulation. Its few minor flaws do not mar the substantial contribution which is made." Victor Abramson

+ Am Econ R 31:896 D '41 1900w

"By doing a good job of deductive reasoning, the author has indicated the nature of the problem and he has pointed the way to the accumulation of needed facts before final policies can be established. He has warned us, moreover, that to isolate and define a practice and to develop a rule of policy with respect to it without any regard to the industries and market structures in which it may be used is to simplify the problem beyond recognition. It is unfortunate that much of the meat of this book is beyond the reach of the layman." E. P. Learned

+ Ann Am Acad 217:189 S '41 750w

J Home Econ 33:668 N '41 150w

MILLER, LEONA (JAY) (MRS CHARLES MILLER). Cannibals and orchids. 308p il map $2.75 Sheridan
919.5 Netherlands New Guinea 41-4399

"A New Yorker who accompanied her husband on a motion-picture expedition into the cannibal country of Dutch New Guinea tells us about pygmies, flying foxes, snake-birds, and the home life of the head-hunters. She is also refreshingly explicit about the troubles of an amateur explorer." New Yorker

"[The author] takes pains to go beyond the mere story of her experiences to some serious commentary, as when she writes of the lives of children among the savages. She is always quick to observe the physical features of the strange world through which she is moving; and, although she says at the end that her observation had been greatly sharpened, her first sight of an orchid is one of the keen-eyed records of the early part of the trip."

+ Books p19 F 23 '41 400w

"Leona Miller's observations may be lacking in anthropological accuracy, and in documentary material for Margaret Mead's studies of primitive culture. Aside from an alligator hunt there are not many pages devoted to stalking game. Her book, however, is readable, lively, amusing, startling and fantastic. She is not a smooth writer, but she is a superb reporter of things that interested her. . . Here is an impudent, bizarre story of rare adventure, more fascinating to us than any record of big-game hunters or scientific explorers. The photographs are unique." Olga Owens

+ Boston Transcript p1 F 8 '41 480w

"It is a story of adventure, in mounting excitement and with a quite unusual dénouement. But it is Mrs. Miller's attitude of mind and crisp charm of expression which give real distinction to her book."

+ N Y Times p22 Mr 23 '41 440w

New Yorker 16:67 F 8 '41 50w

MILLER, MAX. It must be the climate. 262p $2.75 McBride

917.94 California—Description and travel.
California—Social life and customs 41-24445

Informal, anecdotal description of California by the author of I Cover the Waterfront. Here are pages on beachcombers, on missions, on life-guards, boom towns, Yosemite, Hollywood, and many other topics.

"Mr. Miller writes with an unhampered pen and a clear conscience, knowing that almost any statement, whether a lampoon or a ballyhoo, will have truth—somewhere. And the wilder the book the more willingly will it be believed—outside of California."

+ Books p16 N 30 '41 210w

Reviewed by A. M. Colt

Library J 66:840 O 1 '41 120w

"The author of I Cover the Waterfront has written several good books of journalistic observation and comment: It Must Be the Climate is not one of the best. Its labor was inconsequential and its taste is not impeccable. But as Mr. Miller says at the end, Southern California is a place where it is perfectly all right to be a beachcomber—that is, to loaf all day and no apologies required. Why ask more?"

N Y Times p11 D 14 '41 480w

"Constantly interrupting himself, Miller meanders through the book which is crowded with all manner of incidental chit-chat. Some of it is good, a great deal of it is irritatingly ineffectual and unfortunately much of It Must Be the Climate is far too much of a rewrite of some of the author's earlier books. The same stories told and retold in different keys, cease to be surprising, the continued insistence on a personal lethargy which is belied by the amount of material encompassed in the book becomes wearisome." L. S. M.

— + Spring'd Republican p7e N 30 '41 380w

MILLER, MAX. Reno. 267p $3 Dodd

917.93 Reno, Nevada

41-3922

The author of I Cover the Waterfront (Book Review Digest, 1932) describes the history and customs of the "biggest little city in the world." "Max Miller is a good reporter. His pages contain a gallery of prose photographs, character sketches of strange personalities. Here is the divorce lawyer, necessarily a master-psychologist and father-confessor to people with the most intimate problems; here, too, is the divorce lawyer's wife, with peculiar problems of her own to meet. Bitter women and broken women and complete phonies walk the pages of the book, with predatory males, gamblers and men from the cattle ranges." (Boston Transcript)

"Mr. Miller spent a lot of time talking with prospectors, divorcees, oldtimers, bartenders, gamblers, editors and business men. His report is filled with interesting material, but it is diffuse, and his attitude is romantic and some times overeager." M. R. Werner

+ — Books p7 Mr 30 '41 650w

"Max Miller writes the story of Reno and of the forces that made it with a warm sympathy and understanding. . . 'Reno' is a grand portrait painted by a man who calls spades by their right names. If Max Miller, a great reporter, succumbs to temptation at times and becomes an editorial writer, he is not the first reporter with that fault. He can be forgiven the occasional editorial because he is, at no time, dull." W. E. Barrett

+ Boston Transcript p1 Mr 15 '41 440w

"Max Miller's sprawling and inchoate book, written in a style that has grown progressively cuter since I Cover the Waterfront, tries to get Reno's fantastic frontier-survival life down between covers by a series of picturesque anecdotes about local characters and legends. His treatment of mining history has the vitality and color that The Gold Rushes lacks, but without Morrell's sound scholarship or authenticity. A cross between them might have struck pay dirt." S. E. Hyman

+ — New Repub 105:230 Ag 18 '41 200w

"Most of Mr. Miller's delvings into domesticity as seen from Reno produce reading that is anything but pretty. But the picturesqueness of his book, like Reno itself, has a broader reason for being. . . With suitable frankness, Reno sits for its verbal portrait, in Max Miller's racy prose."

+ N Y Times p3 Mr 2 '41 500w

"'Reno' is a representative Miller job of comprehensive—and racy—reporting." E. L. S.
Sat R of Lit 24:22 Je 21 '41 190w

MILLER, NEAL ELGAR, and DOLLARD, JOHN. Social learning and imitation. 341p $3.50 Yale univ. press

301.15 Learning, Psychology of. Social psychology. Imitation 41-23888

"A discussion of how learning takes place. The learning theory utilized for explanatory purposes is one which has been in the process of development at the Institute of Human Relations for a period of years under the general leadership of Clark L. Hull. The authors have attempted to apply this theory to human data and in the course of such application to take a step toward the development of a theory of social learning. Although intended as a scientific report this study may be found useful as a co-text in psychology, social psychology, sociology and anthropology." (School & Society) Index.

"Although much of the material is distinctly technical, the clarity of statement, the employment of much factual data, and the treatment of many phenomena of crowd behavior (e.g., lynching, and the following of leaders) bring it within range of the intelligent but non-technical reader's interest and understanding."

+ Christian Century 58:1307 O 22 '41
130w

School & Society 54:396 N 1 '41 100w

MILLER, MRS OLIVE KENNON (BEAUPRE).
Heroes of the Bible; il. by Mariel Wilhoite.
542p maps $2.49 Garden City pub. co.

220.95 Bible. Whole—Biography [40-31658]

Recreates Bible history in the form of life stories of the men and women who were its leading characters: Abraham the faithful; Jacob; Joseph; Moses; Joshua the warrior; Deborah; Gideon; Samson; Ruth; Samuel; Saul; David; King Solomon; Elijah the fiery prophet; Amos the herdsman; Hosea; Isaiah the statesman of Judah; Jeremiah and the fall of Jerusalem; Ezekiel; Daniel; Esther; Heroes of the return to Judah; Judas the hammerer. After the Old Testament heroes comes a story bridging the gap between the Old Testament and the New Testament; The wondrous story of Mary; Jesus; and Paul.

"The style is clear and modern with only a touch of King James flavor, and not too much imaginative detail is introduced in the characterizations."

+ Christian Century 57:1179 S 25 '40 70w

"The stories present these heroes in a reverent and vital way, while emphasizing their human qualities, and depict the part each played in the history of Israel, designating the contribution each brought to the part he played in the great drama." F. B. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 O 31 '40
240w

"Paraphrase, exact quotation and original description are the means employed to produce a style that on the whole is simple and appropriate. Occasionally, however, the transition from quotation to exposition is disconcerting, as in the conclusion of the section 'The wondrous story of Mary,' p.446. Tone and spirit are always reverent and sincere. . . Heroes of the Bible is recommended for home use."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 12:43 J1 '41 360w

MILLER, WALTER. Greece and the Greeks; a survey of Greek civilization. 508p il maps
$3 Macmillan

913.38 Civilization, Greek 41-4255

"This volume is one of a series intended to provide pupils in secondary schools with pertinent enrichment material in the classical field. It makes no pretension to being a history of Greek civilization, but it attempts to present 'a sort of composite picture of the best that Greece achieved for herself and has contributed and may still contribute to the life of modern men and of modern nations.' The book is made up of four distinct parts. Part I consists of three chapters devoted to an introductory survey of geographic, historic, and economic phases of Greek civilization. Part II is devoted to the home life of the ancient Greeks. Part III contains fifteen chapters on the public life of ancient Greece. Part IV consists of five chapters dealing with Greek literature and art. The volume is concluded with twenty-four pages of pertinent annotations, two pages of events arranged chronologically, and a particularly complete index." School R

Booklist 37:407 My 1 '41

School & Society 53:224 F 15 '41 50w

"Pupils will certainly be interested in this volume because it places special emphasis on those factors in ancient Greek civilization which are most significant for an understanding of contemporary society." P. W. Lange

+ School R 49:394 My '41 750w

"Professor Miller's Greece and the Greeks fills a need long felt by both the college student and the layman for an interesting one-volume account, written on the adult level, about Greek life." M. A. Egelston

+ Social Educ 5:545 N '41 370w

Social Studies 32:192 Ap '41 10w

MILLIN, SARAH GERTRUDE (LIEBSON)
(MRS. PHILIP MILLIN). The dark gods.
296p $2.50 Harper

(W) 41-51609

The chief character in this novel of South Africa in modern times, is a descendant of the Reverend Andrew Flood who figured in Mrs Millin's early novel God's Stepchildren (Book Review Digest, 1925). The plot of the novel deals first with Barry Lindsell's consciousness of his kinship with the African natives, and secondly with the plottings of Nazi agents.

Booklist 37:325 Mr 15 '41

Bookmark 2:15 My '41

"Mrs. Millin's descriptions of the Nazi agents and the both black and white Fifth Columnists they make, and her accounts of their activities are probably not in the least exaggerated; but with respect to them I missed the sure touch which, whether always the right one or not, is generally so convincing in her studies of South African people of all kinds. These passages seemed forced with a touch of caricature as to the German agents. But they play a finely conceived part in a novel which, moving very swiftly to cover a great deal of ground, is both rewarding and exciting." F. T. Marsh

+ Books p12 F 23 '41 800w

"This may be no more than a candle burning in a wilderness of superstition and savagery, but how we welcome its tiny beam." Ruth Blodgett

+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 8 '41 450w

"The author is well qualified to write on this subject, but the plot is heavy with incidents, and the characters well drawn but weak. Not necessarily a first purchase." Katharine Shorey

+ Library J 66:178 F 15 '41 60w

"'The Dark Gods' is a novel of infiltration that rings true. It has pace, action and color; you turn the pages fast. But in reading you find, too, that Africa is near, very near, and that we have 'Africans' among us, who are also being deluded." Stuart Cloete

+ New Repub 104:542 Ap 21 '41 550w

"In this poignant story of frustration with a final victory of the spirit Mrs. Millin displays her accustomed literary artistry. Reflecting political and social issues of major importance, one cannot doubt that it will interest a wide circle of readers." Drake de Kay

+ N Y Times p6 Mr 2 '41 650w

New Yorker 17:84 F 22 '41 40w

"Mrs. Millin has never written more heroically, more cogently, than in this new novel which presents the Africa of today, with its old griefs unassuaged, with a new and insidious menace fanning the flames of ancient strife to a more destructive heat." C. D. Abbott

+ Sat R of Lit 23:11 Mr 1 '41 500w

MILLING, CHAPMAN JAMES. Red Carolinians; phot. by Bruce Mayne and others. 438p map $4 Univ. of N.C. press

970.4 Indians of North America—South
Carolina. South Carolina—History 40-32279

"This volume gives the complete history so far as it can be traced, of all the Indian tribes that inhabited the Carolinas at any time since the coming of the white man. It begins with a description of the economic and social institutions common to the natives of that culture area; then it takes up one by one the separate history of each tribe, even of those obscure groups known only through the stray references of the earliest explorers." (Am Hist R) Bibliography. Index.

MILLING, C. J.—Continued

"No library attempting anything like a complete coverage of the southeastern Indians, either from the ethnological or the historical point of view, can afford to be without a copy of this work. In brief, South Carolinians now have an authentic and readable account of the Indians of their state and ethnologists and historians interested in the region a text they will want to have always at hand." J. R. Swanton + Am Anthropol 43:282 Ap '41 800w

"The book is based upon a prodigious amount of research. Colonial records, accounts by explorers, government documents, ethnological studies, interviews with living Indians—every possible source has been examined. Unfortunately it is not easy to read; it might have been made more interesting if the author had not assumed too much knowledge of local colonial history on the part of his reader and had presented a more complete picture by building up a general background. But as a specialized study the book is a marvel of comprehensiveness and accuracy; it will remain the final, definitive history of the Indians of the Carolina region." Angie Debo
+ Am Hist R 46:919 J1 '41 490w

"This is a book which is invaluable to the student of Indian relations in the colonial period of our history and which can hardly fail to interest even the casual reader." E. E. Dale
+ Am Soc R 6:417 Je '41 220w

MILLS, CLARK. The migrants; a poem, with an introd. by Jules Romains. ltd ed 48p $2
Press of James A. Decker

811

41-12546

"[This] is the work of a young American (born in St. Louis, now teaching at Cornell) whose poems have attracted recent favorable attention. It is not so much a single long poem as a group of some twelve loosely connected lyrics commenting (as its symbols and allusions indirectly inform us) on our spiritual frustration and doom in this 'day of the tiger.' The unmistakable influence of the French Symbolists—especially of Mallarmé—is marked throughout." Books

"If one may use a phrase from Mills himself, 'never the clear word given freely.' Mr. Mills's handling of form, of structure, is almost flawless. But a form, however excellent, that does not extend or clarify communication between poet and reader has no validity and has failed in its function. A self-conscious aesthetic is, moreover, alien to the honest exposition of a contemporary social theme."

+ Books p13 Je 1 '41 300w

"Although the subject of the poem is the human situation, people in it are symbols, seen only as abstractions, lying far away, like houses noted from an airplane. Too, Mr. Mills's lines, as mellifluous as one is likely to come upon in modern verse, are insufficiently relieved by the sharpness of which he is sometimes capable." Weldon Kees

New Repub 105:514 O 20 '41 490w

MILTON, GEORGE FORT. Conflict: the American Civil war. 433p maps $3.50 Coward-McCann

973.7 U.S.—History—Civil war

Concise history of the Civil war; its military, economic and social consequences, covering the period from the firing on Fort Sumter, to the surrender at Appomattox. The author is a professor of American history at the University of Chicago. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Avery Craven

Books p4 D 21 '41 1600w

Reviewed by Paul Hutchinson

Christian Century 59:48 Ja 14 '42 90w

"Mr. Milton's exploration of all the military might-have-beens makes an absorbing story, and his one-volume account of four years of war will keep the reader interested all the way, even if it does not add much to our perspective of the Civil War." C. C. Munz

+ Nation 154:18 Ja 3 '42 440w

"A not unrespectable job, despite some stretches of rather weird writing."

+ New Yorker 17:60 D 27 '41 40w

"Although Mr Milton has explored the more obvious sources, he makes no pretense of original scholarship. His tale is conventional, marred neither by unorthodox theory nor startling interpretation. Rather he has sought to write an up-to-date, readable history of the Civil war which would embody the latest findings of research students. This end he has accomplished to perfection. . . . If the book has a fault, it is that the author's preoccupation with military matters obscured the sweeping forces underlying the northern victory."

R. A. Billington

+ Springf'd Republican p8 N 25 '41 800w

MIMS, EDWIN. Chancellor Kirkland of Vanderbilt. 362p il $3 Vanderbilt univ. press, 24th av. S, Nashville, Tenn.

B or 92 Kirkland, James Hampton 41-3966

"Professor Mims, pupil, friend and colleague of Vanderbilt's great chancellor, has given us a vivid and vigorous account of the South's greatest educational statesman since the Civil War. . . . Born in 1859, Kirkland entered Wofford College at 14. . . . He became a college tutor, helped his mother, and also saved money enough to go to Leipzig, where he won his Ph. D. in classics. Three weeks after his return home, he was in 1886 elected Professor of Latin at Vanderbilt University and soon thereafter chancellor. Thenceforth, until his recent death, he fought for higher standards in liberal and professional education without compromise." N Y Times

Booklist 37:490 Je 15 '41

"Here is a book of real importance for an understanding of our country today. . . . Professor Mims has conveyed the sense of a rich personality. The chancellor was an orator and a wit, a lover of the fine arts, a first-rate horticulturist and botanist, famous for his collection of iris, a hater of injustice and sham, a kind and helpful neighbor, a great democrat. To know him was an inspiration; even to read about him is a tonic." John Erskine

+ Books p20 Ag 24 '41 700w

"Professor Mims has written a book that every academic head can read and ponder with profit." Abraham Flexner

+ N Y Times p3 Ja 12 '41 400w

School & Society 52:672 D 21 '40 10w

"This is no mere memorial volume. It is in the truest sense a life-like portrayal of the man and his age. It is vibrant with challenge to educational standards toward which the best leaders of today still strive. In a very real sense the life of Dr. Kirkland is a history of education in his region, on the secondary as well as on the higher education level. Dr. Mims has ably portrayed the Man and in so doing has given educators a sustaining and inspiring book." H. F. Comer

+ Social Forces 20:119 O '41 170w

MIMS, EDWIN. The majority of the people. 314p $2.75 Modern age

321.8 Democracy. Political science—History. U.S.—Constitutional history (W) 41-5141

"Does democracy mean majority rule or minority rights or does it mean both majority rule and minority rights? This book endeavors to answer the above question in favor of the straight majority rule interpretation. However, in finding his answer the author presents a fair and closely documented analysis of American constitutional law showing how the theory that democracy is a combination of majority rule and minority rights came to be accepted, how at variance it is from the original theory of the makers of the constitution, and how dangerous it is to the continuance of real democracy." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

"From one standpoint at least this book deserves the highest commendation. Professor Mims writes with a command of good English form that is rarely encountered nowadays in political treatises. His style is indeed, more persuasive than his argument. The latter depends too much upon theory and not enough upon practice." E. M. Sait

+ Am Hist R 47:301 Ja '42 420w

Reviewed by F. G. Wilson

Am Pol Sci R 35:553 Je '41 650w

Booklist 37:382 Ap 15 '41

"Certainly we ought to clear up our ideas on an issue so fundamental, ideas that lie at the very center of our morale. And how can we proceed more effectively than to go back to the foundation of the American republic and study the conflict of ideas and the circumstances in which our Constitution took shape? This is what Mr. Mims has done. He has done it consummately well. One who follows his skillfully wrought exposition will gain a clearer insight into American democracy, if this is what we are to call our present system." Alvin Johnson

+ Books p20 Ap 6 '41 1100w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:379 Ja '42 10w

Reviewed by G. W. Hill

Library J 66:177 F 15 '41 80w

"Oddly enough, it is as a practical manual that The Majority of the People is weakest. For one thing, Mr. Mims evidently overrates the importance of political philosophy for political action. . . . A second defect of Mr. Mims's book as a practical handbook is his insistence on logical coherence as an essential for a political philosophy. One of the charms of democracy, as well as one of its great sources of strength, is that it is not codified. . . . The book will convert only the converted. On the other hand, if saying so does not cast Mr. Mims down too much, his book has great value from the academic point of view." A. M. Schlesinger, Jr.

+ New Eng Q 14:575 S '41 1100w

Reviewed by Willmoore Kendall

New Repub 104:895 Je 30 '41 900w

"A brilliant, if provocative essay. . . . The author wholly ignores the problem of minority rights as related to non-economic questions and follows a semi-Marxian reasoning to the implications that the social cleavage induced by property relationships makes all other societal divisions relatively unimportant. Although he avoids the dilemma of dictatorship by insisting that no present majority can bind future majorities, he does not undertake to present any sound democratic philosophy apart from the fictitious assumptions of Rousseau's social contract ideas." Harvey Wish

Survey G 30:482 S '41 240w

Wis Lib Bul 37:134 Jl '41

MISHIMA, SUMIE (SEO). My narrow isle; the story of a modern woman in Japan. 280p ill $2.75 Day

B or 92 Japan—Social life and customs. Women in Japan (W) 41-3014

Autobiography of a modern Japanese woman of the Samurai class. She describes her childhood in Japan, the death of her father and the change in the family's surroundings, her education at the famous Tsuda college in Japan, and at Wellesley college in America, her return to find her country in the midst of the great depression, her efforts to earn her living, and her marriage.

Atlantic Ap '41 170w

Booklist 37:323 Mr 15 '41

Bookmark 2:12 My '41

Reviewed by Katharine Sansom

Books p5 F 16 '41 1200w

Reviewed by Frederick Reinstein

Boston Transcript p1 Mr 1 '41 320w

"One does not read this book for its literary excellence or for shallow pleasure, but in the sincere desire to understand what is today the pitiful situation of the more enlightened women in Japan. How immeasurably more hope there would be for world betterment if people would just take a little trouble to understand." Margaret Williamson

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 My 10 '41 650w

"While we do not expect this book to attain popularity, we are purchasing two copies, one for the regular collection, and one for the duplicate non-fiction. Our reason is that the book, with all its charming simplicity, is very broadening in its effect." A. M. Colt

Library J 66:177 F 15 '41 80w

"It is a keen-minded and intensely interesting story of one woman's life through the past three decades. And it gathers additional suggestion and picturesqueness, too, in the other stories—parents' and grandparents' and cousins—with which it is interspersed. But the total picture which emerges is that of a nation of too rapid, too superficial, essentially too little completed, change. . . . It is a nobly sincere and illuminating book." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p9 F 16 '41 1450w

Sat R of Lit 23:21 Ap 12 '41 360w

Springf'd Republican p7e F 16 '41 50w

MISSELWITZ, HENRY FRANCIS. The dragon stirs. 293p $3 Harbinger house

915.1 China—Social life and customs. China —Politics and government 41-11787

"The author was a correspondent for the New York Times and the United Press during the confused and bloody years in China of the Kuomintang revolution. His book is an account of his personal adventures and his conclusions about the immediate future of China." Sat R of Lit

"It comes rather belatedly to the library of books on the same subject. In contrast with earth-shaking changes occurring now, even in Asia, the events described seem oddly minor and unimportant—particularly when recalled, as they are, with little attempt to relate them to earlier or to subsequent history. Yet the book is interesting for several reasons." Edgar Snow

+ Books p12 Jl 6 '41 480w

"Mr. Misselwitz's conclusions will be resisted strenuously by many informed observers. Whether his prophecy is accurate or not, this book makes fascinating reading."

Sat R of Lit 24:16 Je 28 '41 100w

Springf'd Republican p8 Jl 23 '41 650w

MISSOURI FOLK-LORE SOCIETY. Ballads and songs; ed. by H. M. Belden. 530p pa $1.25 Univ. of Mo.

784.3 Folk songs, American. Ballads, American 40-28235

"Collection of the material printed in this volume began in 1903 and covers all sections, though not all counties, of the state. The work joins the growing body of state collections—Maine, Virginia, South Carolina, Mississippi, Kentucky, Vermont, Ohio, Michigan, Indiana." Am Hist R

"The most serious blemish in the work is the disregard, admitted but not justified by the editor, of the musical elements now generally recognized to be quite as important as the speech element in the field. For upward of a thousand items only about seventy tunes are given, and these are amateur notations of doubtful value. No phonographic recordings seem to have been used in spite of the fact that equipment and techniques were available throughout the whole period of collection and editing. Another serious blemish is omis-

MISSOURI FOLK-LORE SOCIETY—Continued sion (also admitted but not justified) of material from Negro and other minority groups and neglect of the vast body of material below the rather high level of respectability set for the work." Charles Seeger
Am Hist R 46:730 Ap '41 270w

"For a 500-page collection from a State that is bordered by the Mississippi and contains the lower 400 miles of the Missouri, there is surprisingly little balladry of the river here. I would willingly have exchanged some of the conventional Civil War ballads here collected for a few songs celebrating the turbulent life of the rivers. . . Mr. Belden's headnotes are full and clear. He trips over the word 'dornick.'" Horace Reynolds
+ — Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 29 '41 600w

MITCHELL, MRS ELIZABETH (REND). Music with a feather duster; drawings by Rea Irvin. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 280p $2.75 Little

B or 92 Musicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 41-23160

Autobiography of an American woman of wealth, who desired to be more than an amateur in music. Early in her career a candid teacher informed her that nobody who played the piano with a feather duster could hope to succeed. That remark helped to steady her ambition, and she kept at her lessons, with such teachers as Rudolph Ganz, Rubin Goldmark, and Yolanda Merö. Her reminiscences include descriptions of musical trips abroad, and musical evenings in New York, with delightful tales of many famous musicians. Index.

"This woman has brains and a sense of humor, qualities conspicuously lacking in the typical wealthy patroness. But if you have millions behind you, you are a very special sort of musical amateur and your experience is not likely to 'come home to men's business and bosoms' simply because there is no chance that they may follow your path. . . However, what it takes to remain for years either the pupil or the friend of really first-rate musicians includes more than currency. . . She is also a wit and no tyro as a satirist. Her chapter on the music teacher of her childhood is both hilarious and corrosive; and her comments on the snobbism that hangs like a miasma around much American musical activity, especially in connection with symphony orchestras, are memorable and magnificent." G. W. Johnson

+ Books p6 N 16 '41 650w

"Mrs. Mitchell writes pleasantly and vigorously, permitting herself to be betrayed into cuteness and anticlimax only at rare intervals." Howard Taubman

+ — N Y Times p8 D 14 '41 750w

"One hesitates to attach the somber phrase 'required reading' to so delightful a book as 'Music With a Feather Duster' so we'll compromise by observing that amateur musicians and concert-goers who read it are going to get a lot more fun out of their musical activities in the future. We suspect, too, that professional musicians, particularly harried conductors of our leading orchestras, will derive considerable comfort from this intelligently entertaining autobiography of a woman who shook off a violent attack of 'musical snobbism' to find herself in a bright, new musical world." Milton Berliner

+ Springf'd Republican p6e N 9 '41 480w

MITCHELL, LUCY (SPRAGUE) (MRS W. C. MITCHELL); BOWMAN, MRS ELEANOR (PEDERSEN), and PHELPS, MARY. My country 'tis of thee; the use and abuse of natural resources. 335p il maps $3.50 Macmillan

333 U.S.—Natural resources. Soils. Coal. Petroleum (W) 40-36224

For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

"The book reflects not only the ability and competence of the writers, their training, knowledge and skill of presentation but also the patient effort devoted to its preparation." E. W. Zimmermann

+ Am Econ R 31:381 Je '41 280w

"By skillful selection of vivid detail, by relating the problem to the intimate lives of people who are made very real, and by the injection of bits of poetry and blank verse, the whole treatment is designed to secure an emotional reaction. Here is perhaps the chief reservation of the reviewer—the selection and treatment are so skillful that the reader may possibly be led to conclusions not in accord with all the available facts." J. R. Whitaker

+ — Ann Am Acad 216:189 Jl '41 450w

"A thoughtful, readable survey." R. G. Woolbert

+ Foreign Affairs 19:877 Jl '41 10w

"It is hard to see how these three women could have done a better job. In telling the story of the use and abuse of our natural resources they combine broad knowledge and clear thinking with vivid presentation. They aren't afraid to take any bull by the horns, even though he is very much alive and an honorable member of the board of the Metropolitan Opera. Some readers might find this book rather on the primer side. But most people can learn a great deal from it and will have fun doing so."

+ Nation 152:508 Ap 26 '41 90w

"Here is a well reasoned and well balanced plea for national planning. The subject matter and treatment remind one of Stuart Chase's 'Rich Land, Poor Land' and 'Men and Machines.' But although the writing does not have the dramatic quality which Chase sometimes achieves, one has the feeling that this study may be more authentic." C. C. Furnas

+ New Repub 104:475 Ap 7 '41 850w

"In summing up this book, it would not be amiss to say that it contains explanations of many important facts more or less taken for granted by teachers of the social sciences. It is a work that is necessary for a complete understanding of an important, often neglected, phase of our history. The illustrations are well-chosen. Although the combined work of the authors is not a text, it is a compact, readily accessible handbook on our natural resources." J. J. Flynn

+ Social Studies 32:238 My '41 340w

Wis Lib Bul 37:30 F '41

MITCHELL, RUTH COMFORT (MRS W. S. YOUNG). Dust of Mexico. 262p $2 Appleton-Century

41-3909

A demure New England librarian is taken on a trip to Mexico by a frivolous aunt. Priscilla's mother had been promised that no men would impede their progress, but once in Mexico three men, two Americans and a Mexican patriot, became suitors for Priscilla's hand.

"'Dust of Mexico' is a lively triple romance which sheds much incidental light on affairs in the turbulent country next door." Lisle Bell

+ Books p15 F 16 '41 140w

"Riots and kidnapping were some of the excitements that overtook the little librarian. The author thinks highly of the natives and their mountain background, and some of her more descriptive passages read like a popular guidebook. The whole thing is just as romantic as possible." Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p17 F 16 '41 190w

MIXTER, GEORGE WEBBER. Primer of navigation; with complete tables and work forms and special information for yachtsmen and other mariners. 337p il $4 Van Nostrand

656 Navigation 41-1170

"This book is a Primer of modern navigation both coastwise and at sea. Designed to teach surface navigation to the novice, it also includes material of value to experienced skippers, to aviators undertaking celestial navigation, and to Merchant Marine officers interested in recent developments of the art." (Foreword) Index.

Booklist 37:404 My 1 '41

"Here is an extremely useful and practical book on a subject which, with thousands of young men boning up for possible sea duty with the Navy and its auxiliaries, is of more popular interest today than at any time in the last twenty years. Its title is at once a good description and a rank understatement, since, while the book is so written as to be understandable to the beginner, it is so complete as to make him, for all practical purposes, a finished practitioner of the art of finding his way about the coasts and oceans of the world." W. H. Taylor

+ Books p12 D 22 '40 500w

"The Primer has many excellent features, in addition to the clarity with which it explains the details of navigating. Its chapter on radio aboard ship is particularly useful now that radio direction finders are becoming inexpensive and practical. The star charts, worked out on a unique plan, should enable any sailor in middle latitudes to identify the navigational stars. The work forms are clear, sufficiently detailed so that no essential step is likely to be forgotten, a vital necessity in the modern navigation by table where the various factors are applied by rule of thumb rather than by mathematical formula."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 25 '41 400w

MOBERG, VILHELM. The earth is ours; tr. from the Swedish by Edwin Björkman. 687p $2.75 Simon & Schuster

41-3612

The three parts of this trilogy of modern Sweden bear the titles: Memory of youth; Sleepless nights; The earth is ours. Of these the first has been previously published in this country (Book Review Digest, 1938). "The theme is the conflict between city life and the ancient, traditional life of the peasant. When the hero's job as editor of a cheap magazine becomes unendurable, he returns to the farm he left as a boy. But going back presents unexpected complications, which the author indicates very movingly and solves with the aid of the Munich pact." (New Yorker)

"Such a book renews richly the novel's claim to a place as the broadest and deepest medium for the interpretation of life today." Milton Rugoff

+ Books p7 Mr 23 '41 1000w

"The novel has importance not only because it is well written. Much more important is the change it mirrors which has taken place and is taking place among the peasants. Knut himself comes nearest to happiness in the final scenes when he is working as a member of the community in a common effort for the common good. Even with the shadow of war approaching there is a feeling of hope in the close of the story." D. L. Mann

+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 22 '41 460w

Reviewed by A. C. Hansen

Library J 66:178 F 15 '41 50w

"A fine, calm, warm-hearted novel, placid as a country landscape and written by an author who has a piece to speak and clearly believes in taking his time about it."

+ New Repub 104:510 Ap 14 '41 50w

"The Earth is Ours" is a book so full of life, so profound and subtle in the presentation of its central character that it seems well worth struggling through the author's slow or overconscientious moods. It has all the leisure, polemic verve and earthy beauty of the modern Swedish novel, combining Brandes's demand that literature should take up problems for debate with the lyric intuition of ancient Scandinavian poets." Marianne Hauser

+ N Y Times p8 Mr 23 '41 800w

"An impressive novel."

+ New Yorker 17:84 Mr 22 '41 70w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 6 '41 1200w

Time 37:75 Mr 31 '41 500w

MOCK, JAMES ROBERT. Censorship 1917. 262p $2.50 Princeton univ. press

323.44 Censorship. European war, 1914-1918
—Censorship

"An historical and critical study of censorship in this country from the Revolution to the present decade. Censorship was almost negligible until 1915. The study describes in detail, with numerous examples, the work of the Censorship Board as it dealt with the mails, cables, telegrams, newspapers, books, public utterances, the films, and radio. How the liberties guaranteed by the Bill of Rights of the Constitution have been curtailed in time of war, and the danger that the limitations may be held over into peace times, are stressed. Facts are well documented and coldly presented." Library J

Reviewed by F. L. D. Goodrich

Library J 66:902 O 15 '41 140w

Reviewed by C. C. Munz

Nation 153:672 D 27 '41 180w

"Whether engaged in planning for war or planning for peace, every intelligent citizen interested in the future of democracy should place this study on his 'must' list of reading. It is an indispensable guide to the problem of civil liberty in our time. The book is well written, carefully documented, based upon firsthand data, and permits the facts to speak for themselves." C. L. Hoag

+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 23 '41 650w

MODEL plane annual, 1941-1942; ed. by Frederick P. Graham and Reginald M. Cleveland; foreword by Robert H. Hinckley. 248p il $2 McBride

629.13334 Airplane models (W) 41-12474

"A companion volume to Young America's Aviation Annual: 1940-1941, comparable in scope, arrangement, and format. There are chapters on the first powered flights, the history and design of model planes, the materials used, indoor flying, seaplane models, and scale models. The text of each chapter is brief, but clear, excellent photographs adequately amplify and illustrate the written material. The chapter on engines contains over thirty pages of diagrams and designs of engines. There is a chapter on rules governing the principal contests as approved by the academy of model aeronautics of the National Aeronautic Association, and a section on 'Design Characteristics, Flying Procedure and Requirements for Models Flown under Official Rules.'" Library J

Booklist 38:5 S '41

"Might well be used with Model Airplane Contests, published by Air Youth of America. For any model plane enthusiast." E. A. Groves

+ Library J 66:620 J1 '41 150w

"Model airplane builders everywhere will welcome as a valuable addition to their aeronautical library one of the newest and best of the many books on the subject. . . For the youth actively engaged in this great American hobby or for the boy or man who is contemplating joining the millions who are model-airplane builders this model annual is warmly recommended." R. C. Lawless

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Je 15 '41 360w

MOEHLMAN, ARTHUR BERNARD. School administration; its development, principles, and future in the United States. 929p maps $3.50 Houghton

371.2 School administration and organization 40-10792

"A comprehensive study of development, principles, and future in the United States. The result of two decades of experience by a University of Michigan professor. The central thesis is that instruction is the supreme purpose of the schools and that all activities should be considered as contributory to this." (Social Studies) Indexes.

MOEHLMAN, A. B.—Continued

Reviewed by Alexander Brody
 School & Society 53:374 Mr 22 '41 650w
 Social Studies 31:335 N '40 50w

MOEN, LARS. Under the iron heel. 350p il $2.75 Lippincott

940.534 World war, 1939—Belgium, Belgium—History—German occupation, 1940—(W) 41-3888

The author is an American, a journalist and chemist, interested in a new color film process. He was stranded in Antwerp by the German invasion, and did not leave Belgium until October, 1940. His is an eye-witness account of conditions in occupied territory: a study of the food situation; the Belgian state of mind; German "friendly" tactics; and the state of the German soldiers, fliers, and workmen in Belgium.

Atlantic Ap '41 280w

Booklist 37:356 Ap 1 '41

"He relates his experiences and observations in a calm, objective manner. He is scrupulously fair, giving the Germans credit where credit is due—which is not often—and criticizing the British, Belgians and French for their mistakes. And above all, after a period when little authentic news has come out of the occupied territory, he tells as facts only of those events he has personally witnessed, only those conversations or reports he actually heard. In all other instances he gives the sources of his information, adding widely circulated, but unconfirmed reports which he identifies as such." Beach Conger
 + Books p6 F 23 '41 1350w

Reviewed by Hans Kohn
 Boston Transcript p1 Mr 8 '41 210w
 Christian Science Monitor p18 Mr 7 '41 450w

Reviewed by B. R. Copithorn
 Churchman 155:20 Je 15 '41 170w
 Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '41

"[Mr Moen's] story is important, not only because it is one of the very few to come out of the conquered countries, but because of its unemotional and factual nature." E. G. Woolbert

+ Foreign Affairs 19:875 Jl '41 70w

"[The author] claims to give an impartial, scientific account of what he saw and heard, and this claim seems thoroughly justified. Possibly it is the best, most judicious, and informing book that has come out of 'occupied' Europe." A. W. J.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 N 11 '41 250w

"All in all, Mr. Moen's very distasteful five months in Antwerp add little to our knowledge on the subject of the Nazi occupation of Belgium. Robotlike as Mr. Moen's reactions are to daily life under the Iron Heel of the Nazis, there still unfolds, despite his measured tone of objectivity, a sordid picture of destruction, chaos, and bewilderment in a land that, until the Nazi occupation, was happy and good to live in." Pierre Van Paassen

Nation 152:299 Mr 15 '41 850w

Reviewed by Nigel Dennis
 New Repub 104:445 Mr 31 '41 1200w

"Ignore the title: this is one of the best accounts of life in an occupied country that have been published. . . Nearly all of Mr. Moen's statements of fact carry conviction, and his generalisations, however much they may go against the grain, are worth attending to." G. W. Stonier

+ New Statesman & Nation 22:396 N 1 '41 900w

"This book is simple, direct, unpretentious. Occasionally Mr. Moen tends to accept as fact what may have been merely rumor and propaganda. The figures and details he gives on the Nazi bombing of Rotterdam do not agree with the account recently published by the Dutch Foreign Minister. His views of Soviet Russia are not penetrating. More important, however, is the fact that hidden within these pages are important leads for those who may be working to break German morale from within." Shepard Stone

+ N Y Times p5 Mr 9 '41 1700w

"Probably the first thoroughgoing eyewitness report from any of the occupied countries in Europe. . . Much new material, and some of it may surprise you. An intelligent job."

+ New Yorker 17:84 F 22 '41 60w

"As an observer Lars Moen is magnificent. He tells me exactly what I want to know. You see the German army and the Belgian people day by day—you watch German morale begin—just a little—to disintegrate—you watch the Belgian nation catch its breath. All Lars Moen has to offer you are the facts—tiny little human facts—except that when you add them up you get the year's most vivid picture of what a German-dominated Europe is like, and what is on the mind of the German army." W. L. White

+ Sat R of Lit 23:7 Mr 8 '41 490w

"However we may feel towards Mr. Moen's political conclusions, his searching study of the psychology and behaviour of the German soldier is one of the most important contributions towards the literature of this war. The book contains 13 excellent illustrations, including one showing the scene chosen for rehearsing the invasion of England." Bernard Foley

+ — Spec 167:452 N 7 '41 700w

Time 37:86 Mr 3 '41 450w

Wis Lib Bul 37:91 My '41

MOFFATT, JAMES. Jesus Christ the same. 223p $2 Abingdon-Cokesbury

232.8 Jesus Christ—Divinity 40-29729

"This [book contains] Dr. Moffatt's Shaffer Lectures for 1940, delivered in Yale University. There are four in all; and the thesis developed is that in the New Testament there is one divinely-human Jesus in a varied but continuous interpretation, and that this same Jesus is the living Lord of Christian experience in the fellowship of the church. Laying down the principle that the quest for the real Jesus must be carried on in proper historical perspective, Dr. Moffatt moves steadily through the documents beginning with the Gospels, and shows that not only is there no evidence whatever for the claim that the Christ of the church was the creation of any syncretistic movement in the first century; but, on the contrary, that the only explanation of the New Testament itself is that it was the work of those who worshipped as Lord the divinely-human Jesus of the Christian tradition." (Churchman) Index.

Reviewed by S. J. Case
 Books p12 Ja 19 '41 650w

Reviewed by P. S. Minear
 Christian Century 85:753 Je 4 '41 800w

"Though scholarly in its approach, 'Jesus Christ the Same' is a book singularly free from theological dogma, and the reader is left at liberty to give his own connotation to the phrase 'divine humanity' so constantly used by Dr. Moffatt with reference to the nature of Jesus the Christ. The author has provided us with a lucid outline of views concerning the Master's identity, stressing the fact that 'what he said depended upon what he was.'"
 T. L. Leishman

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 F 15 '41 550w

"Dr. Moffatt is always rewarding; but in this case the reading would have been made easier if there had been chapter headings, or, better, occasional summaries." F. J. Moore
 + — Churchman 155:17 Mr '41 320w

"Opinions will differ as to how far Dr. Moffatt succeeds or fails in his attempt to establish this thesis, but few will deny that he is cognizant of all the relevant questions or that he writes with fullest scholarly competence in this field. He follows along the line of the central convictions which the church has held concerning Jesus and holds a high view of his person. This reviewer finds little with which to disagree and a very great deal to commend in this book." Gordon Poteat

+ — Crozer Q 18:269 J1 '41 700w

Reviewed by A. E. Barnett

J Religion 21:335 J1 '41 350w

MOIR, PHYLLIS. I was Winston Churchill's private secretary. 221p $2 Funk, W.

B or 92 Churchill, Winston Leonard Spencer (W) 41-51783

"Here is a captivating picture of Winston Churchill, the man. Written by a young English woman who was his private secretary during his visit to the United States in 1931, the book is a collection of intimate reminiscences of Great Britain's war leader at work and at play. It takes the reader right into the heart of the Churchill ménage as it was then—a ménage consisting of Mr. Churchill, his wife, his daughter Diana and Sgt. Thompson, of Scotland Yard." Books

Booklist 37:463 Je 1 '41

"Miss Moir is at her best when she sticks to the straight narrative of her association with Mr. Churchill. Her writing is sometimes naive, but she has an interesting and amusing story to tell and she manages to fill in many of the personal intimate details which are lacking from more important studies of the dynamic war leader of Great Britain." Tania Long

+ — Books p3 Ap 20 '41 700w

"[Miss Moir's] candid accounts of his voluminous and prolonged letter writing, his eccentricities and the intimate details of life in the Churchill household make highly interesting reading. . . A very human treatment by one who has known and worked with other notables, this book is a fast moving series of sketches of the man behind the speeches." J. C. Skinner

+ Boston Transcript p7 Ap 12 '41 150w

"The book is written with ease and with an exquisite sense of humor. Reading through it, I had the feeling of getting to know the 'round, middle aged gentleman.' Countess of Listowel

+ Current Hist & Forum 53:3 Je '41 440w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:203 O '41 10w

"Miss Moir has written a very human, a very amusing and readable book. If a man can be made to stand before us plain via his foibles and minor gestures, Winston Churchill stands full-statured and visible before us in Miss Moir's entertaining revelations." Pierre Loving

+ Living Age 360:296 My '41 500w

"This picture of Winston Churchill through the eyes of one of his secretaries is surprisingly interesting; surprising because it is simple and dignified, neither given over to trivialities nor bemused with hero worship, as such a popular portrait might too easily have been; interesting because it is a sound and lively picture of Mr. Churchill."

+ N Y Times p9 Ap 13 '41 500w

"Miss Moir's portrait has candor without offence, it gives us the man, driven by a sense of Destiny, dowered with great creative gifts, of unquenchable courage, as near to tears as anger, matching irascibility with disarming generosity. Miss Moir's engaging study is a footnote to History." Cecil Roberts

+ Sat R of Lit 23:5 Ap 19 '41 800w

"A short, thin, intimate sketch infused with adolescent adoration."

— Time 37:97 Ap 14 '41 130w

MOLLER, CHRISTIAN, and RASMUSSEN, EBBE. The world and the atom; foreword by Niels Bohr; tr. from the Danish by G. C. Wheeler and B. Miall. 193p il $2.75 Van Nostrand [10s 6d Allen, G]

541.2 Atoms

[A41-672]

Description of radio-activity, the atom's electron system, and the atomic nucleus. "Readers who follow Moller and Rasmussen will find the crucial experiments and theories of atomic physics explained in the simplest language and clear accounts of some of the most wonderful achievements of the human mind. Highest, perhaps, among these is Dirac's almost supernatural forecast of the existence of the positive electron." (Manchester Guardian) The authors are two Danish physicists, colleagues of Niels Bohr. Index.

"The Danish authors are excellent guides to these wonders, but their book suffers from the disadvantage of translation. Some of the English exponents of physics have trenchant and brilliant styles and it is impossible not to notice a certain lameness in comparison. There appear also to be some slips. For instance, Frisch performed his important measurements on the energy released in the fissures of uranium at Copenhagen and is now in Liverpool. He has not been in Austria for years." J. G. C.

+ — Manchester Guardian p7 N 8 '40 350w

"From the layman's point of view the book is a remarkably intelligible description. . . Of course even the most quick-witted of lay readers will probably, if he is quite honest, have to admit that he sometimes sees only through a glass darkly. Modern physical theory cannot be thoroughly grasped, even in its general import, without more mathematics and more information than can be packed into a popular volume. And even in this exceptionally lucid book there are one or two points mainly in Part II, where the lay reader may reasonably feel that he might have been given just a little more help—for instance at the first mention of Planck's constant, and over Dirac's theory. But the book is free from difficult mathematics. Even the reader who feels himself in danger of passing into a trance whenever he sees an equation ought to find much of interest in it." Olaf Stapledon

+ New Statesman & Nation 20:500 N 16 '40 300w

N Y New Tech Bks 26:11 Ja '41

"A very well-balanced account of the new science that has been built up during the present century on the foundations laid by Lord Rutherford."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p607 N 30 '40 330w

MONAHAN, FLORENCE. Women in crime; intro. by Lewis E. Lawes. 306p $2.75 Washburn

364 Woman—Crime. Crime and criminals—U.S. 41-24168

During the last twenty years the author has served as head of three penal institutions: The State Reformatory for Women Criminals at Shakopee, Minnesota; the State Training School for Delinquent Girls at Geneva, Illinois; and the State Prison for Women at Tehachapi, California. This book, with a few preliminary autobiographical pages, is an account of her experiences and observations.

Booklist 38:173 Ja 15 '42

"Florence Monahan is an unusual woman with an unusual occupation and she has written an unusual book. . . It is an honest and courageous book, full of understanding and compassion for those hapless women who took to crime and were placed in her care." S. G. Kling

+ Books p38 D 7 '41 400w

"Florence Monahan went from the Minneapolis Children's Bureau to the State Reformatory at Shakopee with the qualities that have made her one of the country's leading penologists and that make her book one of the most keenly rewarding of its kind. And her matter-of-fact reference to her own growth in knowledge is not least among her story's merits: this is no hidebound mind!"

MONAHAN, FLORENCE—Continued
+ N Y Times p42 N 9 '41 650w

"Miss Monahan's book is an extremely readable, valuable, and timely volume." Sanford Bates

+ Sat R of Lit 24:13 D 13 '41 400w

Reviewed by Miriam Van Waters
Springf'd Republican p7e D 21 '41 600w

"The successful management of penal and correctional institutions is a highly individual and unteachable art. The talent for it must be discovered rather than trained, and there is no manual or technique available to an aspirant for the task who lacks courage, resourcefulness, the ability to make quick decisions, and a large humanity. This is amply illustrated in Miss Monahan's book which is the record of her own personal experiences rather than, as the title suggests, a documentary thesis on criminology. However, throughout the colorful and turbulent record she has managed to interpolate the best current opinion on most of the important phases of the problem so that the book as a whole should be enlightening as well as entertaining to the general reading public." Elizabeth Munger

+ Survey 78:30 Ja '42 320w

MONKS, NOEL. Squadrons up! a firsthand story of the R.A.F. (Whittlesey house publication) 260p il $2.50 McGraw [12s 6d Gollancz]

940.544 Great Britain. Royal air force. World war, 1939—Aerial operations
(W) 41-2855

Noel Monks, a war correspondent of the London Daily Mail attached to the Advanced Air Striking Force during the campaign in France tells the story of the exploits of the two Hurricane squadrons of the R.A.F. which bore the brunt of the enemy's attack in the air. It is above all a description of the personality of the fighter pilots, among them "Cobber" Kain, the famous New Zealand ace who was killed at the age of twenty-two in a flying accident on the day before he was to have come to England to become an instructor.

Booklist 37:322 Mr 15 '41

"Here is a readable and exciting account of the individuals, the human beings, their greatness and weakness, who were represented by such laconic communiques during the first nine months of the war as: 'Two enemy reconnaissance planes were shot down over France today.' The author, Mr. Monks, passed most of this period with the British Advanced Air Striking Force, as a war correspondent and because of his intimate friendship with officers and men of the force, is able to add to his personal observation extracts from the official logs of the squadrons, as well as vivid quotations from radio conversation between pilots in the air during battle." Beach Conger

+ Books p5 F 9 '41 750w

"The story of badly outnumbered British flyers striving desperately to turn back the Germans over invaded France is a thrilling one, but Mr. Monks is not qualified to tell it. His maudlin style is unworthy of the simple dignity with which the R.A.F. sets forth its own deeds—and he is too much pre-occupied with himself." William Barrett

— Boston Transcript p1 Mr 8 '41 500w

"The book has remarkably little propaganda content, but the effect of patriotism upon objectivity is clearly seen. Monks cannot resist the use of the word hun, and tells unbelievable stories of German planes fleeing at the sight of inferior numbers of British. The nearness of the author to the men he writes about and his nearness in time to the incidents causes the book to lose some of its greatness. I think he wrote too hurriedly." W. M. Callahan

— + Commonweal 34:69 My 9 '41 550w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 19:874 Jl '41 20w

New Repub 104:414 Mr 24 '41 70w

"Mr. Monks' book is uneven in its interest. While there are many bright spots, some of it reads like a military report. Furthermore, like many British war writers, the author does not seem to realize that most readers are confused by the use of initials for military organizations." E. F. Allen

+ — N Y Times p8 F 9 '41 650w

New Yorker 17:84 F 15 '41 40w

Reviewed by Derek Verschoyle
Spec 166:232 F 28 '41 80w

"This is the first history of the air battle of France. Many of the incidents and the great victories of the R.A.F. have not been published before. They make thrilling reading, even though many of them are described in the modest words of the pilots' combat reports."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p598 N 30 '40 900w

MONROE, NELLIE ELIZABETH. Novel and society; a critical study of the modern novel. 282p $3 Univ. of N.C. press

809.3 Fiction—History and criticism
(W) 41-25207

"An attempt to define philosophical criteria for the novel, to explain its decay as an art form in our time and to suggest means of reconciling the novel to a decadent environment. Includes 'Form and Substance in the Novel To-day,' 'Art and Ideas in Sigrid Undset,' 'Provincial Art in Selma Lagerlof,' 'Moral Situation in Edith Wharton,' 'Contemplation of Manners in Ellen Glasgow,' 'Experimental Humanism in Virginia Woolf,' 'Trends of the Future in Willa Cather,' 'The Novel of the Future.' (School & Society) Index.

"As a whole Miss Monroe's book is grotesquely unconvincing. . . Miss Monroe raises important questions in Art and Society, and the application of her special point of view might, as with such Catholic critics as Jacques Maritain, have resulted in a fruitful discussion of these questions. Unfortunately, the level on which she conducts her argument precludes discussion of any kind." H. N. Doughty, Jr.

— + Books p20 D 14 '41 750w

"This is an important contribution to the literature of criticism, first, because it is critical, as all too little of what professes to be criticism is; second, because it is written from the standpoint of Scholastic philosophy, which means with a grasp of critical principles such as too few, even Catholic, critics, possess, although they above all others should be thus equipped; and finally, because it is a contribution to American criticism, which consists for the most part of a welter of impressionistic opinions." B. M. Kelly

+ Cath World 154:498 Ja '42 900w

"Recommended." Isabel Douglas

+ Library J 66:792 S 15 '41 150w

School & Society 54:452 N 15 '41 80w

MONROE, WALTER SCOTT, ed. Encyclopedia of educational research. 1344p $10 c1941 Macmillan

370.3 Education—Dictionaries. Education—Bibliography. Educational research
(W) 41-4888

"It should be made clear at the beginning that this is not a revision of the Cyclopaedia of Education which was edited by Paul Monroe and published 1911-13. The purpose of this encyclopedia as stated in the preface is to present 'a critical evaluation, synthesis and interpretation of reported studies in the field of education.' This interpretation of research, this statement of implications for educational theory and practice, is the unique and important feature of this work. The list of topics for inclusion was compiled from Monroe and Shores Bibliographies and Summaries in Education, and Education Index, and the index volumes of the Review of Educational Research. Closely related topics were grouped and many were rearranged after consultation with experts in various fields. . . . With a few exceptions, all articles are signed." Subscription Bks Bul

"We could easily quarrel with the editor and the contributors on some points. But whatever the faults may be in the execution, the Encyclopedia of Educational Research is a volume of enduring value, which stands alone in its able synthesis of its field in America, as an extensive canvass of its area of knowledge, whose virtues transcend its weaknesses to a remarkable degree." J. S. Roucek
+ Ann Am Acad 215:235 My '41 800w

"The scope and the organization of the volume are in keeping with the purposes for which it has been prepared. The topics were selected as a result of the deliberations of the contributors and the suggestions of many other leaders in the field. There are few observable limitations to the content value of the volume. Its serious deficiency is the lack of the usual outline of topics and index. There are numerous cross references at the ends of articles on special topics which are also treated under other general headings, and these are helpful; but the only guide to the location of special articles is the series of running heads, which are alphabetized with respect to major topical divisions. A general outline of topics and an adequate index would have contributed much to the convenience of those who consult this valuable reference work." N. B. Henry
+ — El School J 42:151 O '41 900w

Pratt p10 autumn '41

"Necessarily the treatment of subjects is varied, but in general each article contains a brief 'orientation' in which references are given to sources for a more complete treatment. . . . The articles which were read seem objective in tone, for the most part, though the conclusion of the one on transfer of training seems to be stated in unnecessarily strong terms. . . . The book is bound strongly in dark red buckram. The margins are wide and the paper, though thin is opaque enough to make the print easy to read. The Encyclopedia of educational research is recommended for any library which needs information about educational theory and practice."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 12:21 Ap '41 800w

MONTAGUE, JOSEPH FRANKLIN. Broadway stomach. 356p il $2 Simon & Schuster

616.3 Digestive organs—Diseases. Mental hygiene 40-33993

Study and analysis of the human digestive tract, its functions and diseases. Partial contents: What is the matter with mind over matter? Ulcers for executives; How to recognize stomach ulcer; What can be done about stomach ulcer; Take it easy—you'll last longer; When to alkalinize—and other lies; Acid stomach—acid condition—alkalosis; Indigestion—gastritis—dyspepsia; Bilious attacks and gallstones; Colitis—the badge of civilization; Diet in colitis; Roughage—and maybe too rough! Constipation—colitis—cancer; Appendicitis for everybody; Unnecessary operations; Slow up before you slow down! Blood pressure vs. food pressure; Dreams—sleeplessness; Nervous breakdown—insanity—impotence; How to keep from growing old. The author is a New York city physician. Index.

Bookmark 2:6 My '41

Books p13 F 16 '41 140w

"There is much good, sound sense in the sets of rules outlined by the author of 'Broadway Stomach' in his chapters on sleeplessness, appendicitis, cancer of the stomach, nerve balance, and eating for both executives and working girls."

+ Spring'd Republican p12 Ja 10 '41 900w

MONTGOMERY, IONE. Death won the prize. 272p $2 Doubleday

41-20729

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p10 D 28 '41 150w

"Exceptionally good character study of fated but valiant c'd lady, airtight plot that baffles to end, and plentiful action. Good."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:36 D 6 '41 40w

"It is rather a complicated mess, but since something exciting is happening most of the time, the reader will probably enjoy seeing it all straightened out." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p14 N 2 '41 220w

MONTGOMERY, RICHARD GILL. Young Northwest; il. by Harold L. Price. 309p maps $2 Random house

979.5 Northwest, Pacific—History—Juvenile literature 41-19790

A popular history written for young people covering the story of the Oregon country from prehistoric times to the end of the nineteenth century, with a supplementary chapter: Today and tomorrow.

Booklist 38:162 Ja 1 '42

"Mr. Montgomery's book is a grand job for younger readers, and there are many adults, including school teachers native to the Northwest, who could read the volume with enjoyment, I am sure, and with no little profit. The woodcut illustrations by Harold L. Price are excellent." S. H. Holbrook

+ Books p24 N 2 '41 360w

Reviewed by E. A. Groves

Library J 66:1001 N 15 '41 150w

"Delightful and accurate." Allan Nevins

+ Sat R of Lit 24:8 N 8 '41 30w

MONTGOMERY, RUTHERFORD GEORGE. Iceblink; il. by Rudolf Freund. 288p $2 Holt

41-15012

Story of an Eskimo boy in Alaska, during the Russian occupation, around 1750. Describes how he lived, how he made his house and his tools, and traveled, For boys of ten to sixteen.

Booklist 38:162 Ja 1 '42

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse

Commonweal 35:112 N 21 '41 10w

"Very good." Raymond Holden

+ Sat R of Lit 24:9 N 8 '41 20w

MONTGOMERY, RUTHERFORD GEORGE. Midnight; il. by Jacob Bates Abbott. 275p $2 Holt

40-14505

Story for older boys and girls, of a wild black stallion of the Western plateau. Wolf packs, cougars, bobcats, bears and owls are among the characters, but Midnight, the wild stallion who never is caught, is the hero.

"Although the plot is slight the story abounds with dramatic episodes, filled as it is with the struggle of the wild animals for existence. Violent death is not unusual. However, the reader learns a good deal about the life and habits of the wild life of this particular region." Dorothy Lawson

+ Library J 65:927 N 1 '40 150w

"The canvas is so large and the tale moves so swiftly that the reader feels, perhaps, less well acquainted with Midnight than with the animal heroes of some of this author's other books. But the writing, like Mr. Montgomery's knowledge of the country, is genuine, and the author has the gift of indicating the characters and the relationships of the human beings in his books in a few words." A. T. Eaton

MONTGOMERY, R. G.—Continued
+ N Y Times p12 Mr 9 '41 440w

MOODIE, WILLIAM. The doctor and the difficult child. 214p $1.50 Commonwealth fund 136.7 Child study. Children—Management. Psychoanalysis. Children, Abnormal and backward 41-1194

An English psychiatrist, with many years of experience of dealing with problem children and their parents, discusses common problems, their causes and treatment. Among the various difficulties are stealing, lying, nervousness, enuresis, sleep disturbance, types of psychoses, etc. No index.

"[In] the second part of the book ... straightforward common sense is the outstanding characteristic, although there are some statements with which most American psychiatrists would be in disagreement. . . . These are, however, minor criticisms of a book which is basically very sound. It should be of interest to all who are acquainted with child-guidance developments in this country and of real help in orienting psychologists who are interested in the rôle which psychology plays in the child guidance clinic." Temple Burling
+ — Am J Psychol 54:622 O '41 450w

"This excellent book should be welcomed, not only by the harried parent but particularly by the pediatrician whose practice during many years has included a steadily growing proportion of 'difficult children.' . . . The book is well arranged, and the case histories are in general instructive. The chapter on treatment, which is particularly well executed, is full of helpful suggestions." Benjamin Tappan
+ Am J Pub Health 31:399 Ap '41 300w

"It is a very practical book." E. R. G.
+ Social Forces 19:588 My '41 90w

"The text makes no new contribution to our knowledge, but it is a useful book to induct laymen and students into the nature, meaning, and possibilities of psychiatric service or treatment at a child guidance clinic." I. S. Wile, M.D.

Survey 77:277 S '41 220w

MOODY, BLAIR. Boom or bust. 336p $2.50
Duell

330.973 U.S.—Economic policy. World war, 1939—Economic aspects 41-24064

A Washington newspaper man discusses the development of a constructive program to prevent inflation and a post-war economic collapse. He suggests that in order to prevent collapse we will have to be assured of full post-war employment, and a definite assurance will have to be given to business of normal economic expansion. No index.

Booklist 38:184 F 1 '42

"Recent activities of the Mikado and others have seriously damaged Mr. Moody's book. The boom at Pearl Harbor has meant bust for his market, for he wrote on the assumption that we should still be engaged in something resembling peace-time work when the book appeared. Yet, as a matter of fact, very little of what he says is really affected by the outbreak of war; and that which is not affected is merely emphasized by the shooting." G. W. Johnson

Books p4 Ja 4 '42 700w

"Recommended for limited purchase." M. A. Gray

Library J 66:999 N 15 '41 90w

"Readable but not very profound book. . . . Wherever the book confines itself to straight reporting, it does a very good job explaining to the layman what has been going on, who the people are who are working on the post-war problems in Washington and what they think individually and collectively. . . . But although Mr. Moody's program is only a few months old, it is already dated, and it appears strangely faded and almost unreal against the background of the daily news from the Pacific." P. F. Drucker

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:10 D 27 '41 250w

MOODY, MRS MINNIE (HITE). Long Meadows. 657p $3 Macmillan 41-5222

Long chronicle of the generations of the Heydt or Hite family, from 1705 when Baron Joist Heydt fled his native Strassburg, during the religious uprisings of that time, to the 1860s when two Hite cousins died side by side, one fighting for the Union, the other for the Confederacy.

Reviewed by Frances Woodward
Atlantic My '41 150w

Booklist 37:439 My 15 '41

"Perhaps no novel, as a work of art, can profitably extend beyond one natural lifetime. Over a hundred and fifty years, the generations become a pageant or a tapestry, figures in a pattern rather than individuals. But the pattern emerges, bright and terrible, darkening to night over a field of battle where wounded men lay waiting for the dawn some of them would never see. At least, it is a brave effort; and the full circle of events is completed by any day's headlines of the current news." Isabel Paterson
+ — Books p8 Mr 16 '41 750w

Reviewed by Kathleen Satterthwaite

Boston Transcript p2 Mr 22 '41 200w

"There is considerable detail, interesting but repetitious." Lena Ruppert

Library J 66:140 F 1 '41 130w

New Repub 104:510 Ap 14 '41 50w

"'Long Meadows' is one of the very few novels in which a genealogical table might have been of real service to the reader. Nevertheless, there are portraits here which will remain long in the memory. There are delightful stories and incidents with that oddly polished and faintly apocryphal flavor peculiar to family legends." Margaret Wallace
+ N Y Times p6 Mr 16 '41 800w

"Mrs. Moody, a daughter of the family, has done a careful and earnest job of digesting family records and historical documents, but the result, sad to say, is just another American chronicle, loosely organized, bursting with the familiar period details, and not sufficiently individualized."

New Yorker 17:85 Mr 15 '41 60w

"On the whole, the book is an accurate but not absorbingly vivid account of 150 years of American history and the part that one family played in the growth of a new nation. The difficulty is probably due in large part to Mrs. Moody's style of writing, for she has an unhappy predilection for such passages as, 'Harrison's low exclamation, as startled and soft as a wild cherry leaf, but bearing the bright implication of blood and pointed acute as a sword.'"

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 27 '41 650w

Wis Lib Bul 37:117 Je '41

MOORE, AMOS. Ruckus at Roaring Gap. 292p $2 Washburn 41-19647

Western story.

Reviewed by G. W. Harris

N Y Times p40 N 9 '41 200w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 30 '41 180w

MOORE, ELEANOR MCCULLOUGH. Youth in museums. 115p il $2 Univ. of Pa. press 069.016 Children's museums. Museums—
Work with children

41-51610

Describes work being done for children in children's museums, and the children's departments of adult museums. The work is based on visits to over 100 museums of the United States and Canada. Partial contents: Children's museums; The staff; Collections; Exhibits; Independent activities; Publications; Finances; The future. Index.

Booklist 37:317 Mr 15 '41

"This [is a] very interesting outline of museum doings for youth."

+ Nature 148:420 O 11 '41 1200w

Reviewed by J. N. Mart

School & Society 53:701 My 31 '41 700w

MOORE, ELWOOD S. Coal; its properties, analysis, classification, geology, extraction, uses and distribution. 2d ed 473p il maps $6 Wiley [36s Chapman]

553.2 Coal

40-11500

"Since this comprehensive treatise on the technology of coal was first published in 1922 the author says that 'much progress has been made in the study of the petrology and chemistry of coal, new classifications have been developed, and there have been many improvements in the methods of extraction, preparation for market, and utilization of this fuel.' No attempt has been made to revise completely the section dealing with the world's resources, though the data of some countries has been brought up to date." (Booklist) Index. For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1922.

Booklist 37:120 N 15 '40

"The first edition of this volume was prepared 'in an attempt to satisfy the demand for a handy volume on coal.' . . . This is well served for those who require a small reference book bringing together a considerable amount of unrelated information. The selection is good and the scope of the book very wide. The chemical engineer will, however, be much disappointed in the volume if he expects from it very much on either the scientific or engineering aspects of coal properties and coal processing." R. S. McBride

+ Chem & Met Eng 47:579 Ag '40 140w

"Moore's book is a very valuable one and should be in the library of anyone really interested in coal." D. J. F.

+ J Geol 49:864 N '41 220w

N Y New Tech Bks 25:33 Jl '40

MOORE, HORTENSE, ed. Bread Loaf book of plays; introd. by John Mason Brown. 199p il $3 Middlebury college

812.08 American drama—Collections. Amateur theatricals

41-11574

"These six plays were produced at the Bread Loaf Little theatre of Middlebury college. Both untried scripts and old plays are treated experimentally. Included are a dramatization of Poe's short story, The Fall of the House of Usher, a medieval dramatization of the Bible story of Noah, a modern one-act comedy, a poetic play on the elopement of Macbeth and Lady Macbeth, and a nineteenth-century English farce with incidental music." Booklist

Booklist 38:32 O 1 '41

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton

Books p27 N 16 '41 90w

"Recommended for all libraries that have play collections for amateur production."

George Freedley

+ Library J 66:519 Je 1 '41 110w

MOORE, IDA L. Like a river flowing. 388p $2.50 Doubleday

41-2436

Pioneer story of life in the North Carolina mountain country from ante bellum days to the turn of the century. The central figure is Caroline Grist who, as a young mother, comes to Barlow Cove and lives out her life there, a source of strength and comfort to the community.

"Miss Moore's book is a sincerely and honestly written story of three generations of frontier life in the North Carolina mountains. As such, its speech is in Great Smoky dialect, and the book is filled with those character types which are usually to be found in sectional novels. If the whole thing doesn't come off it is in no way due to a lack of acceptable material or a dearth of period appeal." Lawrence Olson

+ Books p12 F 23 '41 500w

"The characters of these people are well drawn and the tragedies and the drama of their lives handled with skill. A better novel than many of the present day pioneer stories and will be popular with all readers interested in the development of our early America. Can be recommended for purchase by small libraries especially." I. M. Turner

+ Library J 66:80 Ja 15 '41 130w

New Repub 104:446 Mr 31 '41 40w

"Simple, quiet, sturdy, not in any way sensational. . . . The whole defect of Miss Moore's novel is that she has spread the interest too thin, and that she has perhaps made a mistake in trying to cover too long a period of time. In the latter part of her book the action is definitely telescoped. The years and the decades fly by so fast that one never has a chance to savor them. John and Caroline's early struggles seem far more real and important than anything which comes after." E. H. Walton

+ N Y Times p7 F 9 '41 800w

New Yorker 17:81 F 15 '41 20w

"It is spread out too thin, and there are too many tributaries to the river. All the same it is an excellent piece of writing. It is Miss Moore's first novel. With more experience she will of course become more selective." R. L.

+ Sat R of Lit 23:20 Mr 1 '41 270w

MOORE, MARIANNE. What are years. 54p $1.50 Macmillan

811

41-18472

Collection of poems, selected from the recent work of a well-known American author. "Marianne Moore is the most impersonal of modern poets. Reserved, astringent, fastidious, she will never be popular; but her aristocratic quietism, her supersensitive mental and physical observation, and the intricate skill with which she patterns words, make her a writer of rare distinction. In this volume she illustrates particularly her exquisite perceptions of animals, birds, insects, and flowers." (Atlantic)

Reviewed by Elizabeth Drew

+ Atlantic N '41 100w

Reviewed by Ruth Lechlitter

Books p6 N 23 '41 500w

"Miss Moore's poetry has received ample recognition from the critics and the awardees of poetry prizes. She is a poets' poet. One would guess, even before being told by the publisher, that Mr. T. S. Eliot greatly admires her poetry. He would; it is enough like his. But the likeness is rather superficial. Hers has a subtlety and delicacy of its own, and its unintelligibility (where that exists) derives chiefly from its wide range of obscure allusions. The breaking of a word at the end of the line to get rhyming syllable, or with even less excuse, is a mannerism she probably mistakes for a merit."

Christian Century 58:1243 O 8 '41 90w

MOORE, MARIANNE—Continued

"Severely criticized by some of my acquaintances as narrow-minded, unprogressive, and noticeably unintellectual, I hereby run the risk of further squelching by openly questioning the value of a newly arrived volume of 'modern' verse. It is 'What Are Years.' . . . As one of the arts, definitely intended for the 'people,' there seems to me to be no place for the occult, the cabalistic, the esoteric, in poetry. If it is to be a sort of concealed message like a war dispatch, intelligible to those only who possess the key to the code, or some mysterious sixth sense of divination, its doom is certain. I do not believe that it is." Pearl Strachan
—Christian Science Monitor p10 O 25 '41 350w

"There is a certain thinness, a certain frailty, which Miss Moore's poetry has in common with that of W. C. Williams, E. E. Cummings, H. D., and even Ezra Pound and Wallace Stevens. It is small-scale poetry, lacking resonance, lacking really culture. . . . For those who already have a notion of Miss Moore's work there is little in this latest collection of her poems to change it markedly. But on the whole I think it an advance. Some of these poems I like better than anything she has written before: Nautilus, Rigorists, Half Deity, and He 'Digesteth Harde Yron.'" Clement Greenberg

+ — Nation 153:616 D 13 '41 950w

"'What Are Years' contains fifteen poems, two of which deal with new subjects. There is a comment on the fall of France, not wholly effective; and there is a celebration of human freedom in bondage that rightly comes first in the book; it is among the noblest lyrics of our time." Malcolm Cowley

+ New Repub 105:625 N 10 '41 300w

"Any literate person reading the work of Miss Moore would see at once that this is a writer with her own style and one who is able to impress her personality on language. The reader could not possibly confuse her writing with that of anybody else's. This is the first quality that makes her distinct from the other women poets. She has impressed her personality on her material and on her language, and that gives her writing the quality of genuineness which T. S. Eliot praised her for in his introduction to her 'Selected Poems.'" M. M. Colum

+ N Y Times p20 N 30 '41 440w

"'What Are Years,' is an almost incredible phenomenon to appear in the amorphous culture of our country and day. For it is a book which could be produced, it would seem, only at an advanced point of civilization. It bears the indisputable marks of high style and seems an ultimate point beyond which further development is impossible. Like the art of any great period, Miss Moore's poems are at once extraordinarily formal and infinitely full of surprise, design, and even arabesque. They remind one more of painting than of music, although they have their own rather mathematical melody, and, like the illumination of a Book of Hours, a print by Dürer, or a Chinese painting, they are full of exquisite detail." Louise Bogan

+ New Yorker 17:87 N 1 '41 650w

"For obvious reasons, modern poetry is largely a cry of confusion and anguish. The face of Miss Moore's poetry is serene. Shall we look into her mind for signs of travail? The mind of Miss Moore is astonishingly clean. Cluttered, to be sure, like your grandmother's attic; but with everything dusted and in place, labeled, catalogued, usable. The tensions are in the things themselves. The poetry is not in the self-pity." S. J. Kunitz

+ Poetry 59:96 N '41 600w

"There is no rime or rhythm, and no apparent reason for the line lengths or stanzaic divisions. Unfamiliar words becloud what, in some cases, might be poetic passages. On the whole, then, the selections are quite unconventional and crowded with obscurity. . . . Still, there are occasional lucid spots that almost make up for the far more prevalent hazy areas. Even here, however, the poet admits, in the necessary explanatory notes at the end, that many of these ideas are borrowed." A. M. Jakeman

Spring'd Republican p10 N 13 '41 250w

"I once spoke of Miss Moore's work as a sort of witty geometry. I should like to change the mathematical image, for her poems owe more to Lyly and even Spenser than they do to Euclid. This poet is at her best in reflections of her reading, twisting the phrases about in a kind of analyzed memory, a microscopic musing." Louis Untermeyer

Yale R n s 31:377 winter '42 290w

MORGAN, ALFRED POWELL. The boy electrician; il. with new drawings by the author. rev ed 403p $2.50 Lothrop

621.3 Electric engineering—Juvenile literature (W) 40-27846

"This revised edition of a boys' classic tells how to make all kinds of electrical apparatus, such as telephones, telegraph, batteries, and radio, and how to experiment with them after they are made. For the hobby enthusiast twelve or older." (Library J) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1914.

Booklist 37:222 Ja 15 '41

Reviewed by Dorothea Dawson

Library J 66:85 Ja 15 '41 40w

"In some quarters the die-hard tradition still lives fully up to its name and in that austere domain this volume would, no doubt, be classed and discussed as just 'another of those popular books for the scientifically immature and curious'. Such a label, however, would betray nothing but a complete lack of understanding of the times and of sympathy with the aspirations of adolescence. The present book is, in its way, as important to those to whom it is addressed as is many an advanced work to the established scientific or technological worker—maybe even more so in its possible influence in the formative years of youth; because of this we are glad to see the new edition." S. A. S.

+ Nature 148:423 O 11 '41 300w

MORGAN, ALFRED POWELL. Boys' book of science and construction. rev ed 448p il $2.50 Lothrop

500 Science—Juvenile literature (W) 41-14222

"A new edition, revised and reset, including some recent developments such as streamlining and the Diesel engine. [For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1921]." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 38:84 N 1 '41

"Aiming both to amuse and instruct, the author succeeds in opening the boy's eyes to scientific adventures in his own home with simple resources. Easy experiments are outlined clearly. Kitchen or cellar can be the laboratory, the back porch the weather bureau. Chemistry, mechanics, liquids, sound, heat, light, electricity and meteorology are discussed. There are many excellent line drawings, photographs and a helpful index."

+ Spring'd Republican p7e N 16 '41 80w

Wis Lib Bul 37:206 D '41

MORGAN, ALFRED POWELL. Simple chemical experiments; il. by the author. 269p $2 Appleton-Century

540.72 Chemistry—Experiments (W) 41-8332

"The amateur scientist with the most limited kind of equipment can perform the majority of experiments suggested in this book. The tests are grouped under such headings as Experiments with Oxygen and Oxygen Compounds, Experiments with Gases and Some of Their Compounds, Chemical Tricks and Magic, and Your Laboratory." (Library J) Indexes.

Booklist 37:542 J1 15 '41

Reviewed by Dorothea Dawson
Library J 66:620 J1 '41 50wMORGAN, MRS BARBARA. Martha Graham.
160p $6 Duell

793.32 Graham, Martha. Dancing 41-22277

A record of the focal points of sixteen of Martha Graham's most important dances, presented in a series of about 140 photographs, with very few words. Miss Graham herself chose the dances to be included.

"Although the book has obviously been prepared in a spirit of loving dedication, it unwittingly reveals the faults as well as the virtues of that small, tense figure which has, for a good ten years, dominated the waste land of the modern dance. But the revelation of inadequacies will hardly affect Miss Graham's admirers, who will find in the book precisely what they seek—substantiation of their belief in her greatness." Virginia Mishnun
+ — Nation 153:489 N 15 '41 600w

Reviewed by Sherman Conrad
New Repub 105:900 D 29 '41 900w

"The beauty of these photographs and of the work the publishers have made of them may almost be taken for granted in the face of the more important and peculiar quality the book has as an evidence of what photography can say about movements when the hand behind the camera is skilful and knows what a lens and light can do when they have an artist's compulsion directing them. . . . Barbara Morgan's Martha Graham is not only a book about a dancer but a book of her dances translated into another art, so that the dances themselves may live when they are no longer danced." E. J. R. Isaacs + Theatre Arts 25:923 D '41 800w

MORGAN, CHARLES. The empty room. 164p
$2 Macmillan

41-21283

The present war, 1940, is the background of this short novel. The narrator is a doctor, billeted in a charming English home, which evidently contains a mystery. Henry Rydal, a middle-aged jurist, and his lovely daughter compose the family; the wife and mother is present only in a very fine portrait. In his probing of the mystery surrounding the empty room the doctor learns to love the daughter. Eventually twenty years of love and loyalty overcome the power of evil; the mystery is solved. The novel has an allegorical undercurrent.

Booklist 38:113 D 1 '41

"Like Mr. Morgan's earlier novels, 'The Empty Room' is charged with closely reasoned emotion, even more so than the longer novels because he has here expressed in a small compass a great deal that moves him deeply. This concentration of the book and its philosophic bent combine to make it somewhat esoteric, though the telling is simple and direct and the people are such as one might have known. I am not sure to what extent it is intended that one take the story as a parable; perhaps it makes little difference to the intent of the author. The questions which Mr. Morgan raises, individual and other, can be alien to none of us. The faith he affirms is attuned to a pitch for which too few of us now have ears to listen." Mary Ross
+ Books p6 N 9 '41 800w

"The author tells his tale exceedingly well as he slowly leads the interested reader to the finale in which, through love and the continuity of life, evil and fear are dispelled and rebirth is effected." P. T. Hartung
+ Commonweal 35:146 N 28 '41 370w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross
Library J 66:960 N 1 '41 80w

"The trouble is lifelessness. Mr. Morgan may have first thought of it as a play and the stage might have given to these people an appearance of life which is not achieved in print." Harold Brighouse

Manchester Guardian p3 N 14 '41 150w

"Even at the best of times this would be a most unobtrusive book; the characters all behave with the reserve of people suffering from a contagious disease; the events deliberately dissuade themselves from becoming dramatic, let alone melodramatic; and over it all the solar benignity of the author descends on the just, the unjust and the scarcely present." George Barker

New Repub 105:770 D 8 '41 550w

"One cannot help feeling that this is a theme too complex—and perhaps, in its general implications, too important—to be crowded into so brief a form. That Mr. Morgan has managed it with ability and distinction goes almost without saying. If he had taken more time and white paper for the job—well, that is not the sort of complaint one feels altogether justified in bringing against a writer whose country is at war." Margaret Wallace
N Y Times p6 N 9 '41 650w

"Charles Morgan has done himself a long short story somewhat in the Henry James manner. His admirers will love it and his non-admirers, if honest, will be forced to applaud its ingenuity." Clifton Fadiman
New Yorker 17:93 N 8 '41 250w

Reviewed by Millen Brand
Sat R of Lit 24:10 N 15 '41 800w

"It is serious, melancholy, well written and over-written. It is not exactly alive, since it does not prove in human terms its many imaginative guesses and is often arrogant where it should be hesitant. But it exacts imaginative effort of the reader, which is a rare enough event, and it insists audaciously upon a certain kind of rigid, solemn beauty." Kate O'Brien
+ — Spec 167:472 N 14 '41 500w

"Mr. Morgan, writing in this book less preciously and with a purer art than usual, can lure us into a loyal will to believe. Further than that not all his charm nor his conviction can prevail."

Times [London] Lit Sup p565 N 15 '41 650w

"I for one, unlike some reviewers, could not believe that the long-lost, erring, and eventually redeemed woman represented France in her recent collapse. Whatever the book's sunken purpose, its fastidious language left a light coat of rime upon all its visible emotions." Robert Littell

— Yale R n s 31:xii winter '42 130w

MORGAN, GEORGE ALLEN. What Nietzsche means. 408p $4 Harvard univ. press

193.9 Nietzsche, Friedrich Wilhelm

A 41-2572

"For Professor Morgan Nietzsche has been 'an oasis of life in the desert of the post-war period.' He has found a challenge in the courage, freshness, and depth of Nietzsche's thought. What Nietzsche Means is an invitation to share that experience, the product of a decade's painstaking sifting of the whole mass of the Nietzschean writings. He finds those writings particularly 'relevant to the modern world,' the evils against which they were directed still and perhaps eternally threatening to choke civilization." J Philos

"The book is very well written, and though it is thoroughly documented and painstakingly scholarly, it will be enjoyed also by the general reader. The English-reading public will be grateful to Professor Morgan for this excellent guide to Nietzsche's thought." Hans Kohn
+ Ann Am Acad 217:179 S '41 550w

Reviewed by R. F. Creggan
Christian Century 58:1079 S 3 '41 800wReviewed by G. C. Seward
J Philos 38:473 Ag 14 '41 430w

MORGAN, G. A.—Continued

"Any study of Nietzsche, even one as deliberately and consistently objective as Professor Morgan's, may, of course, furnish matter for differences of judgment, but it can safely be said that so far nothing has appeared in English comparable to it as an introduction to the true Nietzsche." Cornelius Krusé

+ J Religion 21:484 O '41 600w

Reviewed by Jacques Barzun

Pol Sci Q 56:614 D '41 900w

"Certainly this is the only book in English to read about Nietzsche, and Dr. Morgan's painstaking analysis, coupled with imaginative sympathy, is the only way to write about the heralds of twentieth century strife." Jacques Barzun

+ Sat R of Lit 24:6 S 27 '41 1000w

MORGAN, JOSEPH MCDOWELL. Military medals and insignia of the United States. 141p il $3 Griffin-Patterson pub. co, Glendale, Calif.

355.13 U.S.—Army—Insignia. U.S.—Navy—Insignia. Medals (W) 41-51703

Pictures and some history of special decorations and medals awarded by the United States, with a section of plates of military and naval insignia, corps devices and merit badges, with brief descriptions.

Booklist 37:402 My 1 '41

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 O '41

Pratt p18 D '41

MORGAN, LEN. Klondike adventure; il. by William E. Hamaker. 199p map $1.50 Nelson 40-32441

"In 1910, before the era of airplanes and radios, Ted Baker left Pennsylvania and spent the winter in the Klondike gold fields at his Uncle Bert's mine. Ted is a likeable lad with a boy's natural instinct of curiosity. His many adventures give the reader an exciting picture of life in the Arctic as well as much information on geology and gold mining." Wis Lib Bul

"It's a written-to-order book but full of interesting information." E. V. W.

Cath World 152:377 D '40 70w

Wis Lib Bul 37:22 Ja '41

MORGAN, THOMAS BRYNMORE. Spurs on the boot; Italy under her masters. 355p $2.50 Longmans

945.09 Italy—Fascist movement, Mussolini, Benito (W) 41-11643

The author, an American journalist, spent more than twenty years in Italy where he became well acquainted with Mussolini and his disciples, talked with the king and the pope, learned to like and admire the common people. His book is a chatty, informal record of what he observed of Italy's politics during the period between wars, combined with more or less detailed character sketches of Mussolini, Gayda, the king, Prince Humbert, the pope and many others. Index.

Booklist 38:8 S '41

"A lively if not too profound book... The book is timely and reads easily. The style is brisk and dynamic as Fascism itself has tried to be. But the reader should seek neither distinction nor great depth in 'Spurs on the Boot.'" Sonia Tomara

+ — Books p8 Je 15 '41 600w

Cath World 154:254 N '41 280w

"The subtitle of this vivacious and episodic recital of two decades of fascism might well have been the phrase with which the book ends: 'Italy was betrayed.'"

+ Christian Century 58:782 Je 11 '41 80w

Christian Science Monitor p18 Je 20 '41 340w

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 J1 '41

"The picture Morgan draws of Mussolini is not pleasant. And certainly his association with Il Duce was intimate enough to enable him to form a fairly just view. He collaborated with Mussolini on a series of articles for the American press; he was a friend of most of Mussolini's friends. He came in contact with every important personality in the history of the fascist régime. And the net result is not pretty. There are no sensational charges, there are very few things reported which have not been reported elsewhere. But the sequence of events is made living by such a host of personal touches that after he has read Mr. Morgan's book the reader feels that he knows in a far more intimate and personal way what he already knew abstractly." H. L. Binns

+ Commonweal 34:282 J1 11 '41 360w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:383 Ja '42 40w

Reviewed by A. B. Lindsay

Library J 66:519 Je 1 '41 140w

"The publishers hail this book as the answer to Winston Churchill's remark that the story of the decline and fall of the Italian Empire... 'will not take a future Gibbon so long to write as the original work.' Morgan has undertaken that job and done it well, although little can be said for the literary style. No one, perhaps, is better equipped to do a job on the 'inside story' of Italy."

+ — Living Age 360:497 J1 '41 300w

"This book is neither history nor diary. It is more like talk—the talk of a clever journalist and story-teller who sees the funny side of his assignment and, therefore, throws a fresh and rather withering illumination on the figures and events of the 'Fascist Era.' Sketchy, marred in spots by hurried and careless writing, at times too much like a gossip column, it is nevertheless a valuable and highly entertaining contribution to the history of a fantastic epoch." A. O. McCormick

+ — N Y Times p1 Je 29 '41 1550w

Reviewed by H. S. Miller

Pol Sci Q 56:638 D '41 450w

Pratt p14 D '41

"Despite many personal glimpses of Fascists at work and play, Mr. Morgan too often merely scratches the surface in a most disappointing fashion. While he describes effectively many of the leaders of Italy's armed forces, he offers little explanation for their poor showing in the past years. He hardly touches the larger economic and social issues involved in Fascism. In a Chapter on the Vatican and its attempt at a rapprochement with Fascism, which is good as far as it goes, he whets the appetite but offers little substantial fare. His book gives a first-rate account of the 'spurs,' but little about the 'boot.'" J. F. Green

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:5 J1 6 '41 410w

Wis Lib Bul 37:176 N '41

MORISON, SAMUEL ELIOT. Maritime history of Massachusetts, 1783-1860. [new ed] 421p il maps $4 Houghton

974.4 Massachusetts—History. Massachusetts—Commerce, Shipping—Massachusetts 41-27782

This revision of a book first printed twenty years ago, Book Review Digest, 1921, contains a Supplement made up of letters of "correction and supplement" received by the author, since the publication of the first edition. The book is an account of the rise and development of Massachusetts as a sea power from 1783 to 1860. Bibliography. Index.

"Morison's work is one of those rare books that perform the functions both of the special monograph and of the general history. It takes a somewhat limited field and handles it minutely, thoroughly, and trustworthily. But it is written with so full a sense of the larger bearings of its theme that it has to be consulted by many rival specialists as well as by all general historians of whatever touches its field at any point. Incidentally, the 'Maritime History' can be read with delight by anybody interested in adventure or the behavior of men and communities."

+ Books p14 D 21 '41 170w

Spring'd Republican p7e D 28 '41 1200w

MORISON, SAMUEL ELIOT. Portuguese voyages to America in the fifteenth century. 151p il maps $2 Harvard univ. press

973.16 America—Discovery and exploration. Portugal—History 40-32280

"In recent years claims have been made that the Portuguese discovered North America and Brazil before Columbus. In this little book these claims are examined. Dr. Morison is a practiced sailor, and he relies on his own experiences to refute the library navigators. Dr. Morison rejects all of this evidence as insufficient to prove any Portuguese voyage to Brazil before 1500." Am Hist R

Reviewed by G. E. Nunn

Am Hist R 47:106 O '41 550w

"Those familiar with Professor Morison's scholarship need not be told that he has left no stone unturned; he has also brought to bear personal experience of these sailing routes. His book, however, is for highly specialized readers only."

Nation 153:409 O 25 '41 50w

MORLAND, NIGEL. The careless hangman [Eng title: Clue of the careless hangman]. 294p $2 Farrar [7s 6d Cassell]

41-1587

Detective story.

"Astounding is a weak word for Mrs. Pym's gyrations on the home stretch and the revelations that follow. Palmyra is always inspired to great thoughts and deeds by freakish cases, and this is one of her best." Will Cuppy

+ Books p22 F 9 '41 160w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggan

Boston Transcript p2 F 15 '41 30w

"Mr. Morland's stories about Mrs. Pym grow better as that lady's eccentricities become less pronounced." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p24 Mr 23 '41 160w

"Mrs. P., whose manners and temper can be foul, does excellent sleuthing job in London sub-world and other picturesque places. High grade."

+ Sat R of Lit 23:18 F 15 '41 40w

Times [London] Lit Sup p349 J1 20 '40

250w

MORLAND, NIGEL. The corpse on the flying trapeze. 302p $2 Farrar [8s Cassell]

41-11500

Detective story.

"More quick work by that priceless old card, Mrs. Palmyra Evangeline Pym, Deputy Assistant Commissioner, New Scotland Yard. . . She makes good, unmasking a villain the like of whom you would hardly believe if you didn't see it in black and white. This is Mr. Morland's eighth book about Mrs. Pym." Will Cuppy

Books p10 Ag 31 '41 130w

"Mrs. Pym is a unique figure and not a particularly pleasing one, although she is less repulsive than she was at her first appearance. One might gather from this that we do not like Mrs. Pym, and the conclusion would be quite correct." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p16 Ag 31 '41 150w

"Female terror of Scotland Yard shown at her best—although some of the 'inspirational' passages are pretty tiresome. Spotty."

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:16 S 6 '41 40w

MORLEY, CHRISTOPHER DARLINGTON. The Trojan horse; a contemporary drama laid in 1185 B.C. 199p il $2 Random house

812

(W) 41-19084

A retelling of the story of ancient Troy in modern idiom. "The Trojan Horse was first suggested to [the author] as far back as 1930 by a rereading of Chaucer's great Troilus and Criseyde; it got itself on paper, in narrative form, in the summer of 1937—the last summer in which men's minds were still somewhat free of tragic anxiety. It was published as a novel in the autumn of 1937, by the J. B. Lippincott Company." (Foreword)

"There is a radio announcer on the walls of Troy, and a night club down by the seashore, where both sides congregate after the day's fighting is over; and truth to tell it gets rather silly and wearisome when spun out for a full evening. Or at any rate for 199 pages." W. P. Eaton

Books p24 O 19 '41 120w

Reviewed by George Freedley

Library J 66:792 S 15 '41 80w

MORREL, MRS MARTHA MCBRIDE. When the world was young; il. by R. E. Falconer. 252p maps $3 Houghton

550 Geology. Paleontology. Evolution. Man, Prehistoric (W) 41-6529

Study in broad outline of the main features of evolution. "The author, after weighing her evidence, has generally adopted some one of the theories that is in good standing today with a respectable number of those entitled to an opinion. She has not felt it desirable to include also a critical evaluation of alternative theories, since such a course would lead far afield from the purpose of the book. Such alternatives are mentioned or omitted as seems best in each particular case." (Foreword) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:433 My 15 '41

"This book can be recommended for its dignified yet entertaining style, its intelligent treatment of a large subject, and its good illustrations."

+ Books p25 S 28 '41 140w

"The literary style is exceptional. The child as well as the adult will be won to it, and will find the work as a whole to constitute a true 'Book of Knowledge', one to be kept for rereading and occasional needful reference." C. M.

+ Churchman 155:35 My 15 '41 120w

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 O '41

"Young people fascinated by stories of prehistoric animals and primitive man will find here a book that goes further in exploration of the past. . . The imaginative reader will find the book as exciting and challenging as any mystery, and steady in the contemplation of the time involved." Eleanor Kidder

+ Library J 66:404 My 1 '41 150w

N Y New Tech Bks 26:23 Ap '41

"It is all very entertaining reading. But it becomes much more entertaining when the animals appear."

+ N Y Times p21 Mr 23 '41 480w

Social Studies 32:238 My '41 10w

"Here is an excellent book for collateral reading in both the natural and social sciences. . . This book should prove exceedingly valuable to those teachers who wish to introduce their classes to subject matter heretofore little known to non-specialists but now adequately summarized for popular consumption." D. S. Davidson

+ Social Studies 32:287 O '41 240w

"Mrs Morrel tells the story in 250 pages of sparkling prose, and the artist and the publishers have cooperated handsomely."

+ Spring'd Republican p7e Ap 20 '41 110w

Wis Lib Bul 37:112 Je '41

MORRELL, WILLIAM PARKER. The gold rushes. (Pioneer histories) 427p maps $3 Macmillan [18s Black, A. & C]

622.34 Gold mines and mining 41-10712

"A panorama of gold rushes on all continents and regions where they have been of important social and economic significance. Included are not only those of California and the American West but those of Brazil, Siberia, Australia, and Alaska. Scholarly but readable. Maps. Bibliographies of authorities at the end of each chapter. The author is a Reader in History at the University of London." (Library J) Index.

"This is an important volume on an important subject. . . Much inaccessible material is drawn upon and made available to the general and the special student. Maps illuminate the accounts, and a select bibliography on each region increases the value of the work. . . In spite of the importance of the volume in providing a history of the gold rushes and in suggesting broad and significant generalizations, it is difficult to resist the temptation to ask for more or to indulge in metaphors peculiar to reviews of books on mining. Mr. Morrell has written a volume which has yielded the first rich returns of a gold rush, but a more persistent and systematic working of the deeper diggings would have brought even larger yields." H. A. Innis
+ Am Hist R 47:89 O '41 600w

"Morrell has ransacked the literature (memoirs, letters, records) of each of the rushes he describes; his comment is pertinent and illuminating; no complaint can be made of his accuracy. His eight maps are satisfactory. For all its excellence, however, the book leaves one with a series of separate pictures. There are no detailed comparisons and contrasts of the important rushes, no summary generalizations, and there are few estimates of the extent to which the discoveries stimulated trade, expanded credits, and diffused prosperity." J. G. Leyburn
+ — Am Soc R 6:584 Ag '41 400w

"It is unquestionably a sound and highly informative book for any one wishing to read the straight record of the gold rushes." F. T. Marsh

+ Books p6 Ap 20 '41 1250w
Reviewed by F. W. Howay
Canadian Hist R 22:205 Je '41 700w

"Dr. Morrell does not go out of his way to make his narrative colorful. His approach is that of the careful scholar who marshals the authorities for his statements. But color and movement are of the essence of the material. The gold rushes are viewed as social phenomena affecting movements of population and the development of civilizations and cultures, no less than as events in economic history."
+ Christian Century 58:563 Ap 23 '41 240w

"Well documented and uncommonly interesting book."

+ Economist 140:76 Ja 18 '41 450w

Reviewed by J. B. Fogg
Library J 66:218 Mr 1 '41 60w

"One cannot be sufficiently grateful to Dr. Morrell for bringing the gold rushes within the compass of a single volume. And without doubt he has chosen the right method, writing in the same grave and prosaic tone which a mediæval chronicler uses to record the madness and romance of the Crusades." A. J. P. T.

+ Manchester Guardian p7 D 20 '40 360w

"A sober and scholarly record of the world's gold rushes. . . His interest is in the social and economic consequences of the gold rush; the impetus to colonization; the forms of political democracy coming out of the mining camps; the subsequent financial exploitation. Here he is soundest, and despite a few faults of perspective and emphasis, particularly his failure to discuss the relationship of the quest for gold with the problem of wage labor in the industrial centers of any given country, his book is a valuable job of pioneering in an almost ignored historical field." S. E. Hyman

+ New Repub 105:229 Ag 18 '41 430w

N Y New Tech Bks 26:8 Ja '41

Springf'd Republican p10 Ap 10 '41 500w

Times [London] Lit Sup p539 O 26 '40 700w

MORRIS, HILDA. Landmarks. 294p $2.50 Putnam

41-17326

"The story of a young painter, born and reared in Europe, who learns about his American forebears and America by painting murals for a library in a small town in Michigan, the town where his mother's family had lived for generations." New Yorker

"Reading Hilda Morris's 'Landmarks' is rather like rummaging in an attic trunk filled with souvenirs and symbols of the past or thumbing through an album of faded photographs with its dim fragrance of plush and pressed flowers. Miss Morris's trunk is a small town in Michigan which has suddenly become mural-minded about its pioneer beginnings." Lisle Bell

Books p12 O 5 '41 400w

"Especially useful in work with new Americans. Recommended." S. E. Sherman
+ Library J 66:793 S 15 '41 110w

"It is a deeply probing look into the past which uncovers the wealth and the strength of endeavor that are hidden beneath a front which to the uninitiated seems barren of beauty." Rose Feld

+ N Y Times p6 S 28 '41 650w

"A friendly bit of Americana."

+ New Yorker 17:77 S 27 '41 50w

MORRISH, REGINALD. Police and crime-detection to-day. (Pageant of progress ser) 159p il $2 (4s 6d) Oxford

352.2 Criminal investigation

"Mr. Morrish attained sufficiently high rank while serving with the Criminal Investigation Department at Scotland Yard to gain experience of every branch of crime prevention and detection. . . His book abounds in interesting detail and though much of it will be of primary interest to those either serving in or contemplating entering the police service, there is much that will appeal to the general reader. A large section of the book deals with the practical application of scientific methods to the investigation of crime." Times [London] Lit Sup

"A useful book."

+ Books p28 Ap 6 '41 90w

School & Society 53:320 Mr 8 '41 20w

"One understands that it is anxiety to avoid any charge of sensation-mongering which has led the author to treat his subject so drily that some passages read almost like a précis, and the whole might well have been sub-titled 'An Elementary Handbook for the Police Constable.' Of the two alternatives this is certainly the better, but one cannot help feeling that a touch of colour here and there would not have been amiss." Anthony Berkeley
+ — Spec 165:480 N 8 '40 1300w

Times [London] Lit Sup p650 D 28 '40 250w

MORRISON, HERBERT STANLEY, and others. This war we wage, by Herbert Morrison, Howard Spring [and] E. M. Delafield. 102p il $1 Emerson

940.53112 World war, 1939—Causes, Germany—Nazi movement, Great Britain—Social conditions 41-10386

Contents: Mr Smith and Mr Schmidt, by Herbert Morrison; All they like sheep, by Howard Spring; People you love, by E. M. Delafield [pseud.]. "What Great Britain is fighting for is stripped to its stark, fundamental reality in these brief, forceful, plain-spoken papers. The two novelists and the cabinet member reach a single, inescapable conclusion—the war has narrowed down to one desperate objective, and that is national self-preservation." (Books)

Books p10 J1 13 '41 140w

Christian Century 58:865 J1 2 '41 40w

Reviewed by Francis Williamson
Survey G 30:482 S '41 110w

MORROW, ELIZABETH REEVE (CUTTER) (MRS DWIGHT WHITNEY MORROW). Shannon; il. by Helen Torrey. 69p 50c Macmillan

41-21554

Story of a small boy and his beloved dog, Shannon, and how his whole family played up when Shannon was killed.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p9 D 14 '41 50w

"A dog story which dog-lovers will appreciate."

+ Christian Century 58:1411 N 12 '41 30w

"Ingratiating." K. U. Wise
+ Sat R of Lit 24:5 N 8 '41 20w

MORSE, WILLIAM GIBBONS. Pardon my Harvard accent; il. by J. O'H. Cosgrave II. 364p $3 Farrar

B or 92 Harvard university 41-21412

This is the autobiography of the man who organized and developed Harvard's Purchasing Department. The earlier chapters tell of his preparation for his work—education at Harvard, work in an early automobile factory and a steel mill, service in the United States Navy during the World war, and some experience in the feed, grain and hay business in Philadelphia. The story is written informally with personal anecdotes of family and friends intermingled with the account of business affairs.

Reviewed by Wilson Follett
Atlantic N 41 280w

"Absorbing chapters deal with those early experiences of the author which trained and toughened him for his major assignment in life. . . Alma Mater rescued him just as he was about to forget that there were heavens of the sort where the rule of tooth and claw is honored in the breach. One can easily understand the devotion to Harvard thus inspired. One can excuse, if that seems necessary, the note of satisfaction with which the author of such a career reviews it. But there is a question which the book fails to answer; who or what, or both, taught Mr. Morse how to write?" W. M. Houghton

+ Books p16 O 19 '41 700w

"Mr. Morse found that 1,600 professors, doctors, and instructors had authority to do their own buying if they could get money appropriated by the Harvard Treasury. It was his job to coordinate this buying, avoiding much waste. It could not be done by fiat; it had to be done by tact and reason. Gradually it was accomplished, and thousands of dollars were saved. The account of just how it was done is as thrilling as a detective story."

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 N 29 '41 260w

Reviewed by Brooks Atkinson
N Y Times p11 N 9 '41 600w

"In form and substance the book is an artless after-dinner conversation about his life by a college man who is seeing an old friend for the first time since graduation. Compare it with 'Personal History'—it looks superficial but serene, a different standard of values; compare it with 'Country Lawyer'—it is not as well-written, three times as good-humored, the chronicle of a man who is satisfied with his world and has reason to be." Fletcher Pratt

+ Sat R of Lit 24:16 O 11 '41 550w

MORSTEIN MARX, FRITZ; HOBBS, ENNO REIMAR, and RADWAY, LAURENCE INGRAM, eds. Public management in the new democracy. 266p $3 Harper

351 U.S.—Officials and employees. Civil service—U.S. Civil service reform. U.S.—Politics and government 41-454

Symposium of recent thought on the functional problems of expanding government. Contents: The burden of government business, by Max Lerner; The citizen and the service, by M. P. Davidson; Administration comes of age: the local phase, by Phillips Bradley; Information, by S. H. Ordway, jr; Youth and the Stockberger; Teamwork, by John Pearson; Administrative coordination, by H. A. Hopf; The relevance of foreign experience, by Arnold Brecht; Conditions of reform in the United States, by C. P. Messick; Problems of selection, by D. C. Coyle; Leadership, by W. W. public service, by Enno Hobbs; The rank and file, by Jacob Baker; Civil service unionism: a case in point, by L. C. Steward; Political neutrality, by W. C. Sayre; Administrative responsibility, by Fritz Morstein Marx. Bibliographies. Index.

"Taken as a whole, this work is worthy of careful reading by those who concern themselves with public administration as an evolving science and art." W. E. Mosher

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:558 Je '41 1100w

"All in all, most of the essays in this volume deserve attention from students and practitioners in the field." Harvey Pinney

+ Ann Am Acad 214:235 Mr '41 500w

"The book contains much that is solid and sensible; but nothing that is new or striking. It serves as a good report of a well-planned conference. When officials speak in terms of their experience they usually have something interesting to say. When they attempt more generalized analyses the results are often disappointing. The approach to public administration typified in this volume suggests the limited usefulness of discussing in purely abstract terms topics such as leadership, teamwork, coordination, etc. The lawyers' method of building his principles on specific cases exemplifies an attitude that those desirous of advancing our systematic knowledge of public administration might well heed." P. H.

+ Harvard Law R 54:729 F '41 380w

Management R 30:156 Ap '41 70w

"The 15 papers necessarily vary in effectiveness and interest. Among the most interesting is Max Lerner's treatise. . . For the most part the contributors are well chosen to complement one another, and the conference was well worth recording in a book."

+ Spring'd Republican p6 Ja 6 '41 240w

Wis Lib Bul 37:51 Mr '41

MORTON, DAVID. Angle of earth and sky.

88p $1.75 Macmillan

811

41-6472

Collection of short poems on nature and on man—the uncertainty of love, the return of daffodils in the spring, the wind, the trees, flowers, and the seasons. The author is a professor of English at Amherst.

Cath World 153:374 Je '41 320w

"That Morton's poems of nature, and even those of persons, have the delicate precision of Japanese prints, is so obvious that it must have been said many times. Some are pure landscapes. More are landscapes with figures. But the landscapes are never dead or silent, for always there are sound effects and the impression of a sensitive observer."

+ Christian Century 58:428 Mr 26 '41 50w

MORTON, DAVID—Continued

Reviewed by P. M. Jack

N Y Times p5 Ja 4 '42 120w

"Anybody who loves poetry of Nature will probably have made the acquaintance of David Morton eight or nine volumes ago. He is a confirmed Nature lyricist of the first order, his interpretations rooted in knowledge of phenomena not seen, only half heard, by ordinary observers. Society and the contemporary world are not his affair. His characterizations are of the wind, Saint Francis, Lady Quiet wandering in the wood, and, in Portrait of His Mother, the earth herself; and one notes (not in protest) that the only anger he mentions is the wind's; the only crash, snow's; the only starvation, winter silence; the only wounds, the maple's; the only exile, man in winter." Kathleen Campbell

+ Poetry 59:167 D '41 360w

"A good example, an anthology of the best intentions and the not-quite-achieved. All the best properties are here. Unfortunately, the reader has heard it all before—heard it in the very same accents." Louis Untermyer

Sat R of Lit 23:17 Mr 22 '41 330w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 6 '41 320w

MORTON, HENRY CANOVA VOLLAM. London. Am ed 3v in 1 435p il $3 Dodd [7s 6d Methuen]

914.21 London—Description. London—Social life and customs (W) 41-6341

Omnibus volume containing the author's three books on London: The Heart of London; The Spell of London; and The Nights of London; with a long new introductory chapter, entitled The Battle of London.

Booklist 37:443 My 15 '41

Books p12 Je 29 '41 180w

"Mr. Morton is a writer of phenomenal popularity, without much humor, or style, or aesthetic quickness; but he is friendly and kindly, he observes closely, and writes entirely without malice of any kind. Many successes have been less deserved than his." Harold Hobson

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 11 '41 120w

"Photographs illustrate this delightful, nostalgic book; soft sepia pictures of Billingsgate, the oldest wharf on the Thames, Cleopatra's Needle that was looked upon, in olden days, by Moses; Westminster Abbey where prayers and benedictions have a tryst with eternity, the clock tower at night and many others, tighten one's throat and fill one's eyes with tears." E. L. Tinker

+ N Y Times p22 My 11 '41 750w

MORTON, HENRY CANOVA VOLLAM. Middle East. 374p maps $3 Dodd [8s 6d Methuen]

915.6 East (Near East)—Description and travel (W) 41-20109

Essays and sketches selected from three of the author's previous books: In the Steps of the Master; In the Steps of St Paul; and Thru Lands of the Bible (Book Review Digest, 1934, 1936, and 1938). Passages dealing in the most general way with Egypt, Palestine, Iraq, Turkey, and Greece have been chosen. There has been some revision of the contents, Index.

Christian Century 58:1381 N 5 '41 40w

"It is written throughout in Mr. Morton's pleasantly informative style, in which descriptive skill is balanced by unpretentious but useful historical learning. Mr. Morton has an eye for convincing realistic detail, an interest in everything that concerns men and women, an agreeable outlook on life, and a pleasing personality. There could be no better book than this to give vivid background to the events of the Middle East campaigns." Harold Hobson

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 23 '41 70w

"All of the book is vivid but no one could ever forget the joyful beauty of the chapter, 'The Tomb of Christ', nor the sustained sparkle of the chapter on Athens. Civilians as well as soldiers will want this book at hand this winter." G. F. Taylor

+ Churchman 155:19 N 1 '41 100w

Reviewed by D. H. Moseley

+ Commonweal 35:53 O 31 '41 460w

"No one who is acquainted with any of Mr. Morton's books needs to be told how his 'record of travel' becomes a glass through which the fortunate reader is able to look with amazing richness and clarity at place and people and realities of existence, the arresting present and the pregnant past. And in the light of war events and conditions one may give an absorbed and instructed attention to these extremely well-chosen chapters, as if none of them had ever been seen before."

+ N Y Times p38 N 9 '41 700w

"Mr. Morton's book is a timely and thoroughly informative guide to the 'Lands of the Sun.' Seasoned with imagination and a light touch, it will interest students of archaeology, theology, psychology, and gastronomy." F. G. Wells

+ Sat R of Lit 24:29 O 18 '41 600w

"Mr. Morton is primarily a writer of travel books rather than a student of social and political forces in modern nations. If one does not expect the hand of a Gunther, the reader will find 'Middle East' interesting."

Springf'd Republican p10 Ja 23 '42 450w

Times [London] Lit Sup p291 Je 14 '41 40w

MORTON, HENRY CANOVA VOLLAM. Women of the Bible. 204p $2 Dodd [5s Methuen]

220.92 Women in the Bible. Bible. Whole—Biography (W) 41-5256

Short sketches of twenty-four of the women of the Bible. Contents: Eve; Sarah; Lot's wife; Rebekah, Rachel; Potiphar's wife; Pharaoh's daughter; Rahab; Ruth; Deborah; Delilah; The witch of Endor; Michal; Abigail; The queen of Sheba; Jezebel; Esther; The woman of Samaria; Martha and Mary; Herodias; Bethlehem; Pilate's wife; Mary Magdalene. Index.

"All [the sketches] are very well done, and are as fascinating as fiction and, in this, live up to the standards of the author's earlier books." J. B. Fox

+ America 65:275 Je 14 '41 210w

Booklist 37:401 My 1 '41

"Each portrait is vivid, if sketchy; and within its limitations, we believe, accurate. Few run to any length—the longest, that of Sarah, is twelve pages. All are dramatic, and most of them touched with beauty. One of the less important of Mr. Morton's writings, this book is still worthy of his handiwork." J. H. Holmes

+ Books p22 Ap 6 '41 420w

Reviewed by B. M. Kelly

Cath World 153:498 Jl '41 440w

"Success in painting these women true to life must be allowed a just meed of praise. Not the least merit is in limning each against the land and its customs while at the same time showing her at-homeness in all times and places. But after all, we have only sketches, biological studies, rather than any extended analyses or any impressive moral and spiritual lessons. The preaching values are not there. Yet it might be good if on the same shelf with their cherished volumes, we would put this more realistic book. Nor can anyone deny that it is delightful reading." J. M. Dawson

+ Christian Century 58:626 My 7 '41 430w

"An excellent use for this book would be to put it in the hands of some one who is unacquainted with the story-values of the Bible. The sketches of women seem designed to intrigue; they are suggestive, enticing, in their clever economy. And if you are familiar with the tragic or comic dramas in which the women figure, you will be delighted with the justice and perspective of the portraiture, the deftness with which background and landscape are painted in. . . A nice book, free from false piety. These daughters of Eve carry on her crisp humanity with all its self-will, sin and grace." M. L. Eglinton

+ Churchman 155:17 Ap 1 '41 100w

"The book is devoted primarily to projecting as they were, timeless, the rich human characters of these women, to making them live vibrantly in a living society. The environment of the Bible lives here, and engages and interests us deeply."

+ Commonweal 33:629 Ap 11 '41 110w

"A book of vivid reality, in pungent narrative. And if it will give some readers a new, or freshened, acquaintance with memorable characters from history, it will also, for many, clear up some persistent misunderstandings."

+ N Y Times p9 Mr 23 '41 800w

"Mr. Morton has travelled in the Holy Land and studied a certain amount of biblical history but in this book one misses the intimate personal touches which make his travel books so fascinating."

Times [London] Lit Sup p47 Ja 25 '41 110w

Wis Lib Bul 37:111 Je '41

MORTON, LOUIS. Robert Carter of Nomini hall. (Williamsburg restoration hist. studies) 332p il $3.50 Colonial Williamsburg; Princeton univ. press

B or 92 Carter, Robert. Plantation life. Virginia—Social life and customs—Colonial period 41-19439

This study of the life and pursuits of a Virginia planter of the eighteenth century is "not written as a biography; it is rather a description of the various economic and social aspects of the plantation system as reflected in the career of one planter. Biographical material has been used with this end in view. Throughout, the career of Robert Carter serves as a framework upon which to construct the story of the Virginia aristocracy." (Foreword) Select bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by H. S. Commager
Books p13 S 21 '41 650w

Reviewed by Grace Adams
Nation 153:379 O 18 '41 550w

New Repub 105:446 O 6 '41 80w

"Mr Morton's scholarly study (which is thoroughly documented and well illustrated) is a relief both from the old-style book on the South and from the newer volumes which stress the plight of the less-privileged groups there. While definitely a one-sided picture—in that it deals with a member of the highest 'aristocracy'—this is no mere panegyric. It deserves to be ranked with the best works on economic-social phases of colonial southern history." Donald Derby

+ Springf'd Republican p14 D 5 '41 500w

MORTON, STELLA (MRS E. L. DOVER). Shadow of wings. 351p $2.50 Harper [8s 3d Hodder]

(W) 41-14055

Recounts the attitudes of the various members of a charming middle-class English family, living in an old house on the Sussex Downs, to the crisis of September, 1939. John and Caro Manners, and their five grown up children, muddle along engrossed in their own affairs, until the beginning of the war resolves their several difficulties.

Booklist 38:12 S '41

Bookmark 2:18 N '41

"'Shadow of Wings' offers no fresh, blinding insight into the life of England or of an individual family during the last days of the crisis. There is nothing here that you do not know already, nor is the narrative itself especially compelling. But the author has set down something in the nature of a record, 'tender, amusing, romantic.' It has its small and honest place in the literature of England at war." F. H. Bullock

+ — Books p3 Ag 10 '41 650w

"A commonplace and not very competent account of family life during the September, 1939, crisis." Wilfrid Gibson

— Manchester Guardian p7 F 14 '41 50w

Reviewed by Myfanwy Piper

New Statesman & Nation 21:252 Mr 8 '41 60w

"'Shadow of Wings' is as likable and heart-warming a tale as has been shipped to us across the Atlantic in some time." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p7 Ag 10 '41 650w

"There is a good deal of quiet charm and humor in this story of an English family in the year before the war." Rebecca Lowrie

+ Sat R of Lit 24:5 S 6 '41 230w

"The author writes with a homely sincerity, and, except in one or two passages which even at this time of day persist in a gasping admiration for Hitler's genius in dragging Germany 'out of the mire' and for Hitler's peace-time construction of 'lovely roads and buildings,' expresses many of the thoughts in the minds of other families as immortal as the Manners."

Times [London] Lit Sup p77 F 15 '41 280w

Wis Lib Bul 37:156 O '41

MOSELEY, JOHN REED. Manifest victory; a quest and a testimony [foreword by William Heard Kilpatrick]. 238p $1.50 Harper

248 Spiritual life. Experience (religion) 41-5086

Partly autobiographical in form, this book tells the story of the author's work "ministering to those at the bottom, bearing witness to those at the top of human privilege." Mr Moseley, educated at Chicago, Harvard and Heidelberg, holds no professional post except as an occasional contributor to the Macon (Ga.) Telegraph, earns a modest living on a pecan plantation, and devotes most of his time to helping others.

"What is important in this book is not Mr. Moseley's thought, which after all, explains little. This thought is simple and sincere, and suffused with a radiance of conviction, but is, none the less, commonplace as a rather inferior repetition of what may be found in all mystical literature. . . What we have in Mr. Moseley is a saint of the purest water and of the most extraordinary spiritual potency. His life, divorced from all considerations of money, possessions, position, is given utterly to the self-forgetting service of the sick, the unfortunate, the distraught and sinful, the criminal, the outcast and the lost." J. H. Holmes

+ Books p29 My 11 '41 360w

"A transparently sincere record."

Christian Century 58:464 Ap 2 '41 100w

"The book centres attention upon the things which the author feels are necessary for abundant life and manifest victory. So earnestly and ably does he emphasize these things that the reader cannot escape being impressed by their significance. Anyone who is wise and fair enough not to confuse wheat with chaff will find in these pages inspiration for more triumphant living." Rittenhouse Neisser

+ Crozer Q 18:272 Jl '41 320w

MOSES, HORACE S. Here comes the circus; il. by Susanne Suba. 48p $1.75 Houghton

791.3 Circus—Juvenile literature (W) 41-8775

Description of what goes on behind the scenes to make the circus run so smoothly. Preparations for putting up the big top, the cook house, care of the menagerie, home life of the circus people, are some of the topics discussed. For children seven to ten.

Booklist 37:496 Je 15 '41

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '41

MOSES, H. S.—Continued

"Since the artist, no less than the author, has first-hand experience in following the circus, her illustrations are authentic as well as delightful." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:101 Mr '41 110w

"Mr. Moses, director of Regional Library Service in Huntsville, Ala., gathered his material first-hand, 'clowning with troupers,' and many circus fans will give him a vote of thanks. The illustrations by Susanne Suba, some in black and white, some with a touch of color, are full of excitement. So is the cover, which has something going on all over it! For anyone who is a circus enthusiast, but especially for boys and girls from nine to twelve." Josephine Smith

+ Library J 66:523 Je 1 '41 150w

"Together artist and author have recaptured some of the joy of circus going. The book is distinguished in design and the yellow cover with its circus drawings has a note of spring-time gaiety." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p18 My 18 '41 240w

Wis Lib Bul 37:159 O '41

MOSHER, WILLIAM EUGENE, ed. Introduction to responsible citizenship [by] Herman C. Beyle [and others]. 887p $3.25 Holt 300 Citizenship. Social sciences 41-18825

"Contributed by . . . staff members of the Maxwell Graduate School of Citizenship and Public Affairs, Syracuse University. The major objectives are (1) the development of a personal appreciation on the part of the student of what it means to live with others in our complex society; (2) the development of critical insight into social situations. 'Social Behavior,' 'Our Ways of Governance,' 'Economics for the Citizen,' 'Democracy—A Historical Appreciation,' 'Rival Social Philosophies' entitle the main divisions. The appendix includes a section on references and supplementary readings designed primarily for use of instructors." (School & Society) Index.

School & Society 54:256 S 27 '41 80w

"This volume is well organized and contains valuable chapter bibliographies and questions to stimulate critical thinking. Whether used as a text or not, this book is a 'must' for every teacher of the social sciences." Leo Litzky

+ Social Studies 33:44 Ja '42 420w

"The book was prepared primarily for college students and is a fine example of how political science is being given a general sociological or integrated social science slant. The ordinary citizen who has been out of college for five years, or who never went, will find in this book a wealth of material to help him become a more responsible citizen." Read Bain

+ Survey 78:29 Ja '42 800w

MOSHER, WILLIAM EUGENE, and KINGSLEY, JOHN DONALD. Public personnel administration. rev ed 671p $5 Harper

351.1 U.S.—Officials and employees. Civil service—U.S. 41-7829

"The text is revised to record the progress in efficient personnel administration in local, state, and federal bodies since the first appearance of the book [Book Review Digest, 1936]." (Booklist) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by E. O. Stene

Am Pol Sci R 35:808 Ag '41 130w

"This volume, as did its predecessor, developed out of an exhaustive study of the methods employed by public jurisdictions on all levels of government in their dealings with public employees. Despite its sometimes unnecessary verbosity, it is a contemporary record of present personnel policies and methods which should prove of great value to anyone working in the public personnel field. Its service record promises to be more imposing than the earlier edition, and that will be praise indeed." E. E. Olson

+ Ann Am Acad 217:218 S '41 750w

Booklist 37:494 Je 15 '41

MOTT, FRANK LUTHER. American journalism. 772p il $5.50; text ed $4.25 Macmillan

071 Newspapers—U.S. Press—U.S. (W) 41-14025

"A history of newspapers in the United States through 250 years, 1690 to 1940." (Sub-title) Indexes.

Booklist 38:29 O 1 '41

"This tremendous book doubtless will remain for a long time the standard work in its field. . . It is not too much to say that the author has performed his backbreaking chore admirably. It is an able job, though it is impossible to agree with the commentators who have described it as something approaching a miracle. Most of the pertinent facts about American journalism are here. The writing is restrained, clear, and in good taste. . . Granting all its excellences, however, it must be put on the record that it has certain imperfections." Stanley Walker

+ Books p4 Jl 20 '41 1200w

Christian Century 58:1054 Ag 27 '41 280w

"Despite its sketchy faults, '[American] Journalism' is a valuable and needed contribution. Though there is little that is new or can be in a history, there is much of real importance in the social and human side in the development of the American press. Dr. Mott has presented a clear and concise—rather too concise—picture of the various overlapping stages of journalistic progress which newspapermen will read and study with interest and appreciation." C. A. L.

+ Christian Science Monitor p20 Ag 23 '41 450w

"While it was not Dr. Mott's purpose in writing this record to turn out a work for entertainment, since he aimed at setting down solid information, his book is nonetheless a fascinating presentation. . . The book is a stirring adventure story of what many Americans believe—and we think rightly—is our most effective educational medium." James van Zant

+ Churchman 155:21 O 15 '41 350w

"Professor Mott, who in 1939 won the Pulitzer Prize for his monumental history of American magazines, has mastered the even more enormous task of telling in one volume the story of American journalism from 1690 to 1940. He fills a serious gap, for the few good books on the subject that we have are not up to date. Mott's work shows a wide and thorough knowledge of the scattered source material. His judgment is sound, and the literary presentation admirable." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 66:519 Je 1 '41 90w

Reviewed by Margaret Marshall

Nation 153:95 Ag 2 '41 360w

"It should not be suggested that American Journalism intends to be more than a general one-volume history of an enormous subject. But the broad picture is well drawn and, for such a work, remarkably rich in first-hand illustration and detail." W. M. Gibson

+ New Eng Q 14:765 D '41 550w

"In attempting this 'history of newspapers in the United States through 250 years, 1690-1940,' Dr. Mott obviously set for himself a task of almost staggering proportions. The field is vast, the sources not always reliable, and the interpretations necessarily varied and complex. In general, it would appear that he has carried out his assignment successfully. This big, careful book is the only volume in existence which even attempts to cover the ground, and no doubt it will remain a standard work for many a day." Stanley Walker

+ New Repub 105:317 S 8 '41 550w

"No previous history of American journalism has covered so broad a canvas as Dr. Mott's comprehensive historical review. This work follows his 'History of American Magazines,' which won the Pulitzer Prize in 1939 and displays the same qualities of scholarship and industry. It is evidently the fruit of a prodigious amount of labor in assembling the annals of our newspapers for the past two centuries and a half, and is sure to remain as one of the most valuable and informative sources on the story of our daily press." C. McD. Puckette

+ N Y Times p5 J1 27 '41 1300w

"An admirable and substantial history of American newspapers from 1690 to 1940. . . . Necessarily rather synoptic, though there's lots of entertaining detail."

+ New Yorker 17:55 J1 26 '41 40w

Reviewed by A. M. Lee

Sat R of Lit 24:19 S 20 '41 500w

MOULD, ELMER WALLACE KING. World-view of Jesus. 238p $2 Harper

232.9 Jesus Christ—Teaching 41-8319

"This is very different from the ordinary treatment of 'the teaching of Jesus.' Granting that he was not a philosopher, in the usual sense of the term, he certainly was a thinker and he had views on most of the subjects to which the classical philosophers have given attention. The author, who is professor of biblical history and literature in Elmira College, sets forth the views of the cosmos, God, man and the ongoing process of life that were held by the contemporaries of Jesus and that may have influenced his mind, and indicates what is old and what is new in his world view." (Christian Century) Bibliography, Index.

"This is a meaty volume which will repay thoughtful attention."

+ Christian Century 58:659 My 14 '41 150w

"The volume is well documented and should have a wide audience." A. F. Gilmore

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 J1 5 '41 300w

Reviewed by G. E. Daniels

Churchman 155:19 Je 15 '41 250w

Reviewed by M. S. Enslin

Crozer Q 18:350 O '41 110w

"The World View of Jesus is a valuable book. It represents careful scholarship, is balanced in judgment, and is simply written. It will be a helpful resource in school and college teaching, and ministers cannot but welcome the help it brings." M. E. Lyman

+ J Religion 22:111 Ja '42 700w

MOULT, THOMAS, ed. The best poems of 1940; decorated by Elizabeth Montgomery. 128p $2 Harcourt [6s Cape, J]

821.08 English poetry—Collections. American poetry—Collections (A 27-176)

Forty of the eighty-two poems included are by Americans, and have been printed in American magazines. The remaining forty-two poems are by British or Canadian authors.

"As usual, The Best Poems is an odd collection. About fifty per cent of it is the blending of high-minded sentiment and low-rating technical capacity which adds up to complete mediocrity in poetry. But the other half has some good things." Elizabeth Drew

Atlantic J1 '41 210w

"In his nineteenth annual effort to cull durability from poetic ephemera, Mr. Moulton has assembled an anthology of significance. . . . All but one of these poems belong to the world where poetry is thought of as embellishment upon feeling. They are timeless, not through renewed perception of some immutable reality, but by refusing the challenge of real self-knowledge and finding refuge in torpid lyricism, lovely, easy—not necessarily simple—banalities. It is possible to speak of their feats only by willing a temporary abbreviation of awareness." Mario Collaci

+ — Books p27 My 11 '41 440w

Reviewed by John Holmes

Boston Transcript p9 F 3 '41 100w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '41

"This 1940 garnering has much to offer for the enjoyment of poetry lovers everywhere."

+ Wis Lib Bul 37:73 Ap '41

MOWRER, LILIAN (THOMSON) (MRS EDGAR ANSEL MOWRER). Arrest and exile; the true story of an American woman in Poland and Siberia, 1940-41; with a foreword by Olga Kochanska. 274p $2.50 Morrow

940.547257 Kochanska, Mme Olga (Butkiewicz). World war, 1939—Prisoners and prisons, Russian. World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American 41-21692

Olga Kochanska, the subject of this study, is the daughter of a Chicago doctor, and the widow of a Polish violinist. On June 29, 1940, while she was waiting in the Polish city of Lemberg for her American passport, she was seized by the Soviet police and transported to Siberia with other prisoners. There she remained until the arrival of her passport, six months later. This description of her harrowing experiences is told by the wife of the noted foreign correspondent, Edgar Mowrer.

"In 'Arrest and Exile' Mrs. Mowrer adds a strong, true voice to the chorus of civilians torn from their birthright of home and work and security, herded as no cattle have ever been herded for slaughter, and carried off in helpless ignominy to enslavement." Virgilia Sapieha

+ Books p3 O 26 '41 900w

Reviewed by Helen Iswolsky

Commonweal 35:100 N 14 '41 650w

"A narrative which has been written with candor, humanity and plentiful suggestion of Polish esprit." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p10 N 2 '41 850w

"[The author] has made the third-person narrative vividly dramatic and alive. In its well-written pages you feel the atmosphere of the Siberian work camp almost as intimately as if you were one of the unfortunate prisoners. . . . This story is of special interest from two angles. It is first of all a unique study of the reactions of an American middle-class woman to this type of imprisonment, for few American women have as yet had experiences in either Soviet, Fascist, or any other kind of concentration camp; and secondly, it is a sensitive psychological study of professional Polish and Jewish exiles under duress, obliged to stain their hands with hard manual labor for the first time." Nym Wales

Sat R of Lit 24:15 N 1 '41 650w

"The world on this side of the water has become a little hardened to the sufferings on the other side, a little brutalized in its indifference. But this true story fills one afresh with horror, pity, indignation, admiration, and even faith in humanity. It is an experience to read it, and Mrs Mowrer has told it simply, letting the facts themselves provide the drama." M. D.

+ Spring'd Republican p7e O 26 '41 1050w

MOWRER, PAUL SCOTT. Poems between wars: Hail Illinois! France farewell; with an appreciation by Carl Sandburg; and a pref. by Donald Culross Peattie; il by Frank Sohn. 79p $2 L. Mariano, 400 W. Madison st, Chicago

811

41-51784

"The title of the volume suggests—more accurately than most titles do—the scope and spirit of its contents. Illinois is the loved home—place to which the poet's thoughts returned when he was wandering abroad, and to which he himself returns gladly. France is the loved land that was a second home for years, and to it his heart goes back wistfully. This merely suggests the framework of experience in which the poems are set and, in a very general way, their emotional pattern. Viewed in detail, they do not follow this pattern too closely." Christian Century

MOWRER, P. S.—Continued

Booklist 37:461 Je 1 '41

"Certainly 'musings in verse' have their place in the world, and if the enthusiastic prefaces of Carl Sandburg and Donald Culross Peattie are any criterion, these musings are capable of arousing genuine response." Kerker Quinn Books p38 N 2 '41 550w

Christian Century 58:499 Ap 9 '41 90w

Reviewed by Pearl Strachan

Christian Science Monitor p13 N 15 '41 110w

MUELDER, WALTER G., and SEARS, LAURENCE, eds. The development of American philosophy. 533p $4 Houghton

191 Philosophy, American 40-33273

A book of readings designed to show "the development of American philosophy from Jonathan Edwards to John Dewey and his younger contemporaries." Contents: Early philosophical theology and idealism; The period of the American enlightenment; Transcendentalism; Evolution; Idealism from William T. Harris to James E. Creighton; Pragmatism and critical empiricism; Realism and naturalism; Recent perspectives in American idealism. Index.

Reviewed by G. W. Cunningham

Am J Psychol 54:628 O '41 300w

"There are brief, very brief but helpful, historical introductions to each part. Probably most teachers will find the selections adequate both in range and in substance. There is material and to spare. The book constitutes a pedagogical advance." T. V. S.

+ Ethics 51:493 Jl '41 260w

"Placed beside the earlier source book compiled by Professors Anderson and Fisch, for example, this handsome double-columned volume by Professors Muelder and Sears is seen at once to be more conventionally philosophical, more inclusive of recent developments, more inclined to emphasize idealism, less adequate in the colonial period, and less prone to make available selections that would otherwise be difficult of access. The present book also deserves praise for its inclusion of a number of critical discussions of the various schools of thought by representatives of opposing points of view." H. A. L.

+ J Philos 37:639 N 7 '40 480w

MUIR, EDWIN. The present age from 1914. (Introductions to English lit) 309p $2.75; text ed $2.10 McBride [7s 6d Cresset]

820.9 English literature—History and criticism. English literature—Bibliography 41-18565

An interpretation of literature in the light of social origins, emphasizing the period following the World war as a period of disintegration. Contains a lengthy bibliography of the works of poetry, fiction, drama, general prose, and war books. Index.

"The appraisal of individual writers is sound and witty . . . but his generalizations are often strange . . . and his extreme wariness of approach makes his criticism lack adventure and animation."

+ Atlantic Jl '40 240w

"A stimulating volume for the lay reader. . . While suffering from the amount of ground to be covered in dealing with the poetry, fiction, drama, criticism and other prose of the period, and necessarily cursory and dogmatic in the treatment of minor writers, Mr. Muir is admirable in his discussion of the main figures of the period. . . Throughout the book Mr. Muir's opening characterizations and closing summaries are excellent." A. F. Perkins

+ Boston Transcript p2 F 1 '41 320w

MUIR, RAMSAY. British Commonwealth; how it grew and how it works; with a foreword by Sir Samuel Turner and an American introd. by Raymond Clapper [Eng title: British empire]. 81p $1 Dorrance [pa 6d Cape, J]

942 Imperial federation. Great Britain—Colonies 41-6339

History and description of the growth of the British empire since the eighteenth century, written from the point of view of a defender of British imperial policies and acts.

Christian Century 58:397 Mr 19 '41 30w

"It is a useful, quick description of an amazing organism."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Je 15 '41 120w

Times [London] Lit Sup p286 Je 15 '40 190w

MULAC, MARGARET E. Playleaders' manual; il. by Maree Kenny and the author. 267p $2.75 Harper

796 Playgrounds. Games (W) 41-18924

"A book for playground workers, covering games, contests, folk dancing, story telling, handicrafts and all the various activities of a modern playground. Bibliography and Index." Wis Lib Bul

Booklist 38:77 N 1 '41

Wis Lib Bul 37:174 N '41

MULDAVIN, MELVIN. Revolt of the guns; a fantasy in play form. 95p $1.50 Christopher 812 41-12990

"A pacifist play, subtitled 'America wants to End War.' The main point is that war is horrible." Christian Century

Christian Century 58:985 Ag 6 '41 40w

Social Studies 32:336 N '41 10w

MULFORD, CLARENCE EDWARD. Hopalong Cassidy serves a writ. 277p $2 Doubleday

Western story. (W) 41-19195

Booklist 38:81 N 1 '41

"In a word, Hopalong rides again with all his old pep. A heart-warming item." Will Cuppy

+ Books p10 D 28 '41 70w

MUMFORD, LEWIS. The South in architecture. 147p $2 Harcourt

720.975 Architecture—South. Jefferson, Thomas. Richardson, Henry Hobson 41-15808

"Four penetrating lectures on the contribution of the south to American architecture, with emphasis upon Thomas Jefferson, who was a gifted amateur rather than a professional architect, and H. H. Richardson, who, though born and raised in the south, did most of his work in the north." Christian Century

Booklist 38:31 O 1 '41

Reviewed by W. R. Agard

Books p28 O 5 '41 700w

+ Christian Century 58:1055 Ag 27 '41 50w

"The book reveals insight and understanding. It is not an enrapteled eulogium but a thoughtful appraisal of the art and the motives and practical considerations which engendered it." E. L. Pennington

+ Churchman 155:21 O 1 '41 230w

"A lucid and distinguished consideration."

+ New Yorker 17:79 S 6 '41 40w

"I don't know what has happened to Mr. Mumford unless it is the war. How can he manage to be so right in the details and so wrong in the sum or so right in the sum and so wrong in the details of such erudition as he seems pleased to waste in the process of expanding Jefferson into a great architect, shrinking Richardson into a characteristic Southerner, and blowing him up many times life-size?" F. L. Wright

— + Sat R of Lit 24:15 Ag 23 '41 900w

MUNOZ, JOAQUIN, and WARD, ANNA BELL.

Guatemala, ancient and modern. 318p il map $2.50 Pyramid press (N Y)

917.281 Guatemala

40-31868

Guidebook to Guatemala, which begins with an outline of a Guatemalan trip, and proceeds with the story of village fairs, religious ceremonies, the Maya calendar, costumes, weaving designs, as well as historical, archeological, and folklorist material. Vocabulary. Index.

"Personal enthusiasm and a real interest in solid facts mark this travel book from Guatemala and give it the informative quality of a guide along with the zest of invitation."

+ Books p26 Mr 23 '41 100w

Foreign Affairs 19:476 Ja '41 10w

"This book contains a great deal of detailed practical information not to be found elsewhere and travelers could well use it as a handy guide to a country which is increasingly a tourist goal. . . . The seventy pictures are very uneven in quality. The statistical tables, not always in agreement with local tradition, should give their bona fides to win credence. On the whole, in spite of obvious faults, this is a needed book and if used with discrimination, can be very helpful as a guide to a fascinating and justly popular country."

G. H. Danton

+ — N Y Times p37 D 8 '40 440w

MURE, GEOFFREY REGINALD GILCHRIST.

An introduction to Hegel. 180p $3 (10s 6d) Oxford

193.5 Hegel, Georg Wilhelm Friedrich. Aristotle. Kant, Immanuel [40-33478]

"This book does not aim to explicate Hegel's philosophy as a whole, but to exhibit the essentials of Hegel's thought, his logic in particular, as the culmination of a developing idealistic doctrine of thought stemming from the Greeks, with special reference to the philosophy of Aristotle. It is a mistake, the author contends, to consider Hegel merely against the background of his predecessors and contemporaries. Hegel, more than any other thinker, sought consciously to appropriate the full philosophical heritage of the past. But since the author could not set down the whole history of philosophy as an introduction to Hegel, he proposes 'to contrast Hegel's general philosophical position with Aristotle's as if Hegel had reached his own view simply through the effort to solve the problem as Aristotle left it.' . . . In the last chapters of the book he pushes aside this sometimes strained mechanism of interpretation in order to explore Hegel's criticism of Kant and Bradley's deviations from Hegelianism." J Philos

Reviewed by G. D. Hicks

Hibbert J 39:105 O '40 450w

"No careful reader of this book will fail to derive from it a clearer understanding of Hegel's place in the history of thought. It is too compact and closely reasoned for the elementary student; and it will not fill the need for a simple, straightforward commentary on Hegel's philosophy. But it will prove a provocative guide for the rethinking of the essentials of the idealistic tradition." O. F. Kraushaar

+ J Philos 38:216 Ap 10 '41 1700w

"It is not to be denied that the task which Mr. Mure has set himself remains a formidable one, and it is the more noteworthy therefore that he should have acquitted himself with such distinction. To seek to dim the brilliance of his achievement by complaining of what is left out would be merely ungenerous, both because the book as it stands is a short one and because it is avowedly an introduction to a more elaborate piece of exposition."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p408 Ag 24 '40 500w

MURPHY, EDMUND ROBERT. Henry de

Tonty, fur trader of the Mississippi. 129p il maps $2 Johns Hopkins press [9s Oxford]

B or 92 Tonty, Henri de, Fur trade 41-8234

"In the present work Mr. Murphy presents a scholarly study of Tonty's career and achievements. Although it makes no startling addition to our pre-existing body of information in the premises, it assembles most of it within the covers of a single book, and without depreciating the achievements of LaSalle, seeks to establish for Tonty a standing of his own. Its motivation is succinctly suggested in the author's final sentence: 'How long is he (Tonty) destined to remain only the faithful lieutenant of LaSalle, only the shadow of the explorer's greatness in the pages of history?' " Books

"The author suggests that there is need for a reliable and definitive biography of Tonty. When Mr. Murphy has completed his historical apprenticeship and has acquainted himself more thoroughly with Tonty's period, he will be in an excellent position to write such a volume. As usual, the Institut français de Washington has produced a volume that is good to look at, pleasant to hold, and easy to read." G. L. Nute

+ Am Hist R 47:433 Ja '42 230w

Reviewed by M. M. Quaife

+ Books p29 N 16 '41 480w

Reviewed by L. J. Burpee

Canadian Hist R 22:321 S '41 500w

MURROW, EDWARD R. This is London; edited, with an introd, commentary, and footnotes by Elmer Davis. 237p $2 Simon & Schuster

940.5342 World war, 1939—Great Britain (W) 41-51704

Selections from the author's radio broadcasts from London over the period August 28, 1939, to December 31, 1940, with an epilog dated March 9, 1941. The author has headed the European bureau of the Columbia Broadcasting System since May, 1937, maintaining headquarters in London.

Booklist 37:406 My '41

"Mr. Murrow's broadcasts read well, because the language of good spoken speech is good language, and so good prose. They are not artful, but like the prose of the modernistic writers, they are meant not to be, so that nothing impedes communication. When one remembers the difficulties under which many of the talks were prepared they take on a kind of classic merit. Here are some of the first war broadcasts, and certainly some of the best." R. G. Swing

+ Books p3 Ap 13 '41 750w

"If his style is somewhat different from that of most of the books out of London, it is because Mr. Murrow is not a 'writing reporter' but a 'speaking reporter.' . . . Those who write for a living need sneer no sneers at Mr. Murrow's style, nor at his unorthodox manner of news-getting. To quote Elmer Davis, who has written an introduction to the book, 'the only objection that can be offered to Murrow's technique of reporting is that when an air raid is on he has the habit of going up on the roof to see what is happening, or of driving around town in an open car to see what has been hit. That is a good way to get the news, but perhaps not the best way to make sure that you will go on getting it." M. W. B.

MURROW, E. R.—Continued

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 Ap 25 '41 550w

Reviewed by E. S. Hertell
Churchman 155:19 My 1 '41 180w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:197 O '41 20w

Reviewed by Ralph Bates
Nation 152:674 Je 7 '41 20w

"The fact that the book is made up of Mr. Murrow's radio broadcasts, in careful selection, in no way detracts from the value, here, of the printed page. . . This book is in the full sense the stuff of history—not only to be read now but to be kept for rereading later."

+ N Y Times p5 Ap 13 '41 440w

Pratt p24 autumn '41

"It is good, honest, direct work, and despite a determination to remain detached he finds himself carried into the role, at moments, of a glowing advocate of the English character." Cecil Roberts

+ Sat R of Lit 24:12 My 10 '41 260w

Springf'd Republican p14 Ap 25 '41 600w

"Mr. Murrow clearly is a reporter of very considerable merit. He takes for his conscious aim the attempt to echo the voice of the 'little people,' and without a doubt he succeeds in this very difficult task. It goes without saying that he has a clear eye for important detail, but he has equally the rarer gifts of sympathy and a sense of communion, coupled with a restraint which permits him to convey the deep emotions aroused by the events about which he writes without dropping into mere sentimentalism. His anecdotes are always apt and charged with meaning."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p563 N 15 '41 850w

Reviewed by Herbert Davis
Yale R n s 30:825 summer '41 230w

MUTHARD, WILLIAM M.; HASTINGS, STANLEY MILLER, and GOSNELL, CULLEN BRYANT. Democracy in America. 623p il $1.68 Nelson

342.73 U.S.—Politics and government. Democracy 40-32728

Textbook for junior high school students, dealing with American government, social problems and the ideals and aims of democracy. Bibliography. Index.

"Teaching and learning activities, references, pictographs, and illustrations are all well-chosen and painstakingly prepared. Designed for a 'functional' approach to the problems of democratic living, the book furnishes the teacher with almost every possible aid. Especially good are the pupil activities suggested to accompany each unit of work." B. W. Phillips

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:183 F '41 200w

"To make this book live, to bring essential meanings out of the verbiage of details, will require a real social studies teacher; but because of the dearth of ninth-grade textbooks that can claim to be something more than an encyclopedic collection of factual knowledge, one would do well seriously to consider this text, in spite of its imperfections, as a possible choice for the classroom." Carlos de Zafra, Jr. & D. M. de Zafra

+ Social Educ 5:75 Ja '41 800w

"Democracy in America has much to recommend it to classes in civics or problems of democracy. In its approach, presentation, material, and format, it is an excellent piece of work." Helen Cornfield

+ Social Studies 32:142 Mr '41 500w

MYERS, GEORGE EDMUND. Principles and techniques of vocational guidance. 377p $3 McGraw

371.425 Profession, Choice of 41-5281

The purposes of this book are (1) to "focus the attention of educators upon vocational guidance as something different from other activities of school systems to which the term guidance has come to be applied; and (2) [to] restate the methods and techniques of vocational guidance in the light of social, economic, and educational changes that have taken place in recent years." (Publisher's note) Indexes.

Booklist 37:432 My 15 '41

School & Society 53:320 Mr 8 '41 30w

"For the principal of a secondary school the book is valuable. For guidance workers who have had training and experience, it is an excellent first book, but it is not complete enough in the technical phases of vocational guidance to be used alone. It is an excellent book to be supplemented with further detailed information on the specialized services. The chapters devoted to these services are well written and provide a good beginning background. The book supplies a need in clarifying our concepts of guidance; in emphasizing the integration of guidance with the whole school program; furnishing information about the services necessary for an adequate guidance program; and differentiating between vocational guidance, personnel work, and other kinds of guidance activities." H. P. Cooper

+ School R 49:711 N '41 700w

MYERS, JOHN MYERS. The harp and the blade. 345p $2.50 Dutton

(W) 41-10681

Adventures of the Irish minstrel, Finnian, in tenth century France. In an encounter with a Fictish priest Finnian found himself the recipient of a curse—he was to feel a compulsion to help everybody he met. From thence on he became a fighting minstrel, joined forces with his compatriot, Conan, and aided by the friendly monks of the Abbey of St Charles, succeeded in ridding the land of Count Chibbert and his gang. Told in modern language.

"If you wish to convince yourself that the world is a better place today than it was a thousand years ago, you may get comfort as well as amusement from this book." R. E. Danielson

Atlantic S '41 60w

Booklist 38:36 O 1 '41

Bookmark 2:18 N '41

"More ambitious and impressive novels possibly have appeared in the past few weeks but certainly nothing more genuinely readable than this jolly swashbuckling story. . . The fact that it happens to be [about] France of the 10th century detracts in no sense from the gaiety and excitement of the tale. The author is one of those scholars with a genuine gift for story-telling, whose scholarship adds color but no tedium, so that young Finnian with his sword and his harp seems as closely familiar a figure as Jack the Giant Killer or Mickey Rooney." Iris Barry

+ Books p3 Jl 6 '41 650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '41

"Well, here it is; and you have not had to go out of America to get it. The perfect escape book. Escape, because it not only impels you into paths leading far from present turmoil and beguiles you, ever and more, into wanderings, physical, mental and, though it lays no stress on this aspect of the 'making,' spiritual. It is, in fact, as essentially of the spirit as a boy's hill and stream-side way on a happy holiday. . . John Myers's first novel will, very certainly, God willing, not be his last. He has the stuff in him." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p5 Jl 6 '41 750w

"Not to be taken too seriously, but, within its limits, entertaining."

+ New Yorker 17:55 J1 5 '41 80w

"The Harp and the Blade" is a whole-hearted romance, light and vigorous, full of swords and music." N. L. R.

+ Sat R of Lit 24:17 Ag 9 '41 180w

"This story has in its makeup something of practically every medieval romance that has ever been written. In pattern it is very similar to 'The Cloister and the Hearth'; there is a touch of Conan Doyle's 'White Company' in the style and treatment of character. Told in the modern idiom, it is more successful than Erskine and less engaging than Graves."

+ Springfield Republican p7e J1 6 '41 400w
Wis Lib Bul 37:202 D '41

N

NABOKOV, VLADIMIR VLADIMIROVICH. Real life of Sebastian Knight. 205p $2.50 New directions

42-2424

The narrator of this story, a young Russian living in Paris, sets out to write a biography of his half-brother, who had been a fairly successful English novelist. He hunts up Cambridge friends; has an interview with Knight's former secretary; tries to make contacts with an English woman who had been his brother's sweetheart; and finally, pursuing elusive clues in Berlin and Paris, he discovers something of the truth of the strange Russian woman who had ruined his brother's life.

"To say that 'The Real Life of Sebastian Knight' is brilliantly, cunningly written and composed gets nowhere near the effect that the book makes. It is diabolically clever, not merely exotic in mood but as excitingly outside the main tradition of English story-telling as are Hans Andersen or Gogol. Written in the crispest and most lucid English, it somehow gives the effect of hearing the idiot's song from Boris Godunov rendered by bellringers in an English village church." Iris Barry

Books p12 Ja 25 '42 600w

"'The Real Life of Sebastian Knight' is the life story of a fictitious English novelist of note; a story told by his half-brother, and told with a brilliancy, a delicacy and a grave and exquisitely venomous humor which make it a delight to read." Kay Boyle

+ New Repub 106:124 Ja 26 '42 360w

"Mr. Nabokov makes his novel out of his investigation into the life of this unhealthy bore. If the narrator had been clever the story could have been interesting. But the fictional investigator is inept, and his final report does nothing to suggest that the investigation was worth while." P. M. J.

- N Y Times p7 Ja 11 '42 500w

"Highly individual stuff, with a surrealist tinge, but a trifle tenuous."

New Yorker 17:60 D 27 '41 30w

"In the course of the narrator's attempt to retrace the hazy pattern of Sebastian Knight's life, he gives us some wonderfully exciting literary analysis, penetrating if precious observations on writing and popular taste, digs at literary cults, and occasionally a nice little human touch. And finally, lest you miss the point of what he has done, he offers the key to the enjoyment of 'The Real Life of Sebastian Knight'." Bess Jones

+ Sat R of Lit 25:6 Ja 17 '42 410w

NASON, LEONARD HASTINGS. Approach to battle. 113p pa $1.50 Doubleday

355.45 U.S.—Defenses. U.S.—Army (W) 41-3055

The author, a soldier in the Great war, warns America in no uncertain tones of imminent danger from attack from abroad and from incompetence and unpreparedness at home. His book is in five parts: The peril—we can be invaded, The problem, The plan—if any, The return of armor, and Approach to battle.

Booklist 37:319 Mr 15 '41

"Nason takes a crack at just about everything in the Army from mules to radio. At the same time he is constructive. As an officer in a brother service I would not venture an opinion upon the correctness of Nason's charges, but I do recommend the book as one approach to what the Army is like and what can be done to make it more effective." P. J. Searles

+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 1 '41 320w

"It is a critical volume which strikes straight from the shoulder. . . And it was written by a two-fisted fighting man, who knows what he's talking about and pulls no punches when he goes after some of the Sacred Cows of the High Command. . . This is a book that needed to be written. It is to be hoped that the right people will read it." Capt. L. M. Limpus

+ Current Hist & Forum 52:59 Ap '41 470w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 19:876 J1 '41 10w

"A startling book."

New Yorker 17:83 F 15 '41 100w

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 30 '41 850w

NATHAN, ANNE. See Cohen, A.

NATHAN, GEORGE JEAN. The bachelor life; ill. by Irma Selz. 263p $2.50 Reynal

814

(W) 41-3558

The author's "reveries of a bachelor begin with the mythology of the species and end with an Emily Postscript. In between he has set down facts, articles of faith, confutations, choice bits of memory and also choice bits of malice. . . It also emphasizes the dismal divertissements of the social whirl, the arctic rigors of New York in Summer and the supreme advantages offered by New York as a hive of industry, and—the emphasis here just a graceful touch, and—the most part, with poisoned arrows—the ladies. And in the Emily Postscript Mr. Nathan, denying once and for all the assumption 'that most persons are fundamentally engaging' offers some suggestions on overcoming what he believes to be the fundamental obnoxiousness of mankind." (N Y Times)

"In this volume, so frivolous on the surface, may be found much penetrating diagnosis, some reliable information and some foolproof advice." Stanley Walker

+ Books p6 F 16 '41 850w

"On the subject of charm in women he lets his hair down and—as is often the case with such smart fellows suddenly earnest—shows it to be a wig. On cocktail parties, summer in New York, cruise cut-ups and a dozen other things I am with him. On food and its service he is such an insufferable snob, with so raffish a display of accents grave, acute and circumflex, that he forgets to say anything about cooking if he ever knew it, and you mark him as a subconscious fugitive from a spot on his tie, the brand probably Campbell's tomato. And that is the way the book goes, with good points made and bad ones belabored, and since it finds its readers naturally, I suppose any suggestion as to working it over for concision and just balance is either too late or too vulgar." Otis Ferguson

- + New Repub 104:380 Mr 17 '41 700w

"'The Bachelor Life' is witty and entertaining. . . and it is delightfully savage and mercilessly urbane."

+ N Y Times p5 F 23 '41 600w

"Mr. Nathan's prejudices are a great deal of fun and substitute most acceptably for ideas." New Yorker 17:84 F 15 '41 30w

NATHAN, G. J.—Continued

"Here is a sapient, often sparkling, and always wholly engaging dissertation." C. J. R.

+ Sat R of Lit 24:16 J1 5 '41 250w

"The Bachelor Life" repays time spent with it by the revelation it offers of Mr. Nathan's own bachelor heart and mind, and by the occasional sprightly paragraph that really has something to say and does it brilliantly."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 Mr 11 '41 650w

NATHAN, GEORGE JEAN, Entertainment of a nation, or, Three-sheets in the wind. 290p $2.50 Knopf 792 Theater—U.S.

(W) 42-1453

Collection of criticisms covering stage, screen, radio, circus, magic, and Coney Island in recent years.

"This latest collection of the reflections gloomy and jocose, of George Jean Nathan is neither profound nor comprehensive, but it contains a great deal of excellent stuff, and all of it is readable. . . . Whatever facet of American entertainment Mr. Nathan touches he does so with a saucy spirit, not unmixed with sympathy and understanding. He is no doubt, a brittle writer, with considerable surface glitter, but he is always facile, always well-informed, always honest, and brimming over with gusto. Even when he may be suspected of a touch of sophistry he is worth reading. Long may his gray plume ornament the more amusing aspects of life hereabouts." Stanley Walker

+ Books p2 Ja 4 '42 1150w

"Mr. Nathan is one of the most distinguished living dramatic critics. . . . This volume is perhaps his best book. His admirers will relish it. The title is more accurate than usual. Recommended for limited purchase where earlier volumes have been acquired." George Freedley

+ — Library J 66:1046 D 1 '41 100w

"Good fun, and often sound opinion too."

+ New Yorker 17:60 Ja 10 '42 70w

"Bright and witty, and altogether delightful book." Richard Lockridge

+ Sat R of Lit 25:12 Ja 24 '42 1600w

"All in all, it's an accurate and often amusing little book, with many chapters of rather ex-cathedra but sound advice to the young and aspiring in the entertainment world, which advice would do no harm to most of the older hands as well. We hope they will take it from him, for he obviously should know." Ralph Loewy

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 11 '42 550w

NATHAN, ROBERT. Tapiola's brave regiment; il. by Kurt Wiese. 137p $1.75 Knopf

(W) 41-16062

Charming fantasy continuing the adventures begun in Journey of Tapiola (Book Review Digest, 1938). Distressed by the present state of the world, Tapiola, the tiny Yorkshire terrier, gathered together his little army of heroes—Richard the canary, Henry the pigeon, Jeremiah the aged rat and his young grandson Micah—and sallied forth to free the world from the unknown enemy, which he called the aurochs. After several days the battle was enjoined in Central Park and the enemy routed, but young Micah was lost in battle. As they turned homeward Tapiola said, "We have lost the flower of our youth."

Booklist 38:131 D 15 '41

"The quality of Robert Nathan's stories is essentially that of poetry; everything is seen in the imaginative aspect, the magic mirror by which the part implies the whole, and the commonplace event or material object is transformed to the universal. Let it be slightly absurd for preference, because then it is certainly ourselves; since man is the animal who laughs, man alone is capable also of being profoundly and endearingly ridiculous. Put any other creature in his place, give it the same aspirations, excuses and pretensions, and there is a fable complete with its own moral. . . . Here charm, truth and compassion are blended into their final expression, humor." Isabel Paterson

+ Books p5 N 9 '41 650w

"Mr. Nathan's innocent-seeming fable needs more than one reading. At first it appears a bit thin. A second and a third reading bring out the undertones, the delicate intricacies of satire. Yet it is not Mr. Nathan's best."

+ — Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 10 '42 600w

"Highly recommended." B. E. Weston

+ Library J 66:841 O 1 '41 70w

"It all tots up to a charming fantasy, veiling transparently a mildly caustic comment on the world today. But in these parlous times, the mellow and melodious bark of Tapiola and Mr. Nathan sounds a little thin." Beatrice Sherman

+ — N Y Times p22 N 9 '41 460w

"Mr. Nathan's many admirers will find this up to standard."

+ New Yorker 17:95 N 8 '41 30w

"Tapiola's Brave Regiment" may be condemned by some as being 'whimsy.' If this be whimsy let us make the most of it. For each of us may find in Richard and Jeremiah something of his own faint-hearted espousal of a great cause. . . . Robert Nathan is unique in his ability to write obliquely when he will of the problems each must face today. With 'Tapiola's Brave Regiment' the author will add to his already considerable audience of admiring readers."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 2 '41 310w

NATHAN, ROBERT. They went on together. 191p $2 Knopf

(W) 41-2317

"The scene is somewhere in Europe where oncoming armies force women and children to leave their homes on an hour's notice, pack up the few necessities that they are able to carry with them and join the passing throngs on the road that seems to have no end nor destination. We see the whole picture through the eyes of two bewildered children who 'went on together, because there was nothing else for them to do.'" Library J

"To read this is to hold in your heart the tender, finite pity of the helpless and the innocent." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic My '41 550w

Booklist 37:388 Ap 15 '41

Bookmark 2:15 My '41

"No writer, past or present, comes to mind to match Robert Nathan in the direct depiction of childhood. He has an extraordinarily acute ear for the spontaneous note of children talking, and the meaning behind their unpracticed utterance. . . . To speak of charm in connection with Mr. Nathan's prose is tautology nor is it a separate or striven-for effect, but a quality of the whole, like the clearness of pure water or daylight air." Isabel Paterson

+ Books p4 Ap 13 '41 800w

"Paul and the three feminine creatures who were dependent upon him represent all the homeless innocents of Europe. Mr. Nathan has not shied from this incredible reality; he does not underestimate a war where personal courage counts for so very little. . . . Robert Nathan is one of the greatest writers of this century, in the field of the pure creative imagination. However, this single detour into grim and immediate reality will never be forgotten." Olga Owens

+ Boston Transcript p1 Ap 19 '41 400w

"If this is not one of Mr. Nathan's most successful stories by reason perhaps of its very inconclusiveness, it is written with his usual delicate artistry, and in it he has caught and held the tragic sense of desolation that engulfs the homeless beyond all others."

+ — Cath World 153:634 Ag '41 200w

"Mr. Nathan has explained that he wanted to write a book that wasn't simply an escape from what was going on—and at the same time didn't just give in to it; not a wishing well, and not a pit of desolation. He has put into his book pity for refugees wherever they may be and condemnation for those by whom the offense came; but also faith for the future as typified by young Paul and Sylvie."

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ap 26 '41 600w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '41

"Mr. Nathan has steered an extraordinarily straight course between sentiment and horror. Mom and Paul and Marie Rose are beyond the boundaries of race or geography. They are one of the disjointed units of the world and their language is our own. War may have burned their house and wrecked their way of living but it cannot destroy certain human values while humanity exists. . . Mr. Nathan has written his best story." E. V. R. Wyatt

+ Commonweal 34:40 My 2 '41 420w

"We all know well the whimsicality, simplicity, and beauty of Robert Nathan's novels. This one seems even more unforgettable than the others." Lena Ruppert

+ Library J 66:265 Mr 15 '41 70w

Reviewed by Charles Marriott

Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 8 '41 50w

New Repub 104:738 My 26 '41 50w

"This novel is not written as philosophy; it is written as life. It is real not only because war is real but because childhood, too, is real; and fear and perplexity and courage and love. But life and philosophy are not parallel lines: they meet, far this side of infinity. They meet, as here, in literature." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p7 Ap 13 '41 800w

"In spite of the affecting subject and the author's skill, the story is vague and a little flat."

+ New Yorker 17:90 Ap 19 '41 50w

"Mr. Nathan may truly say with the French author that, though his glass may be small, he drinks out of his glass. A novel from his hand is as unmistakably by him as a Chopin composition is unmistakably by Chopin. . . Mr. Nathan moves us to pity, but he does not move us to pity and terror, and pity and terror, according to ancient doctrine, are supposed to be the chief means of cleansing the soul of man." H. M. Jones

+ Sat R of Lit 23:6 Ap 19 '41 950w

"As in many of his other books, [Nathan] shows here his tenderness for children, and his understanding of what is most precious to them. His is no writing down to them from the pinnacle of an adult, but gently getting down to their level and being one of them. . . It is told with Nathan's delicacy of feeling, his sensitiveness to the paler colors of life, his love for humanity, and his belief in it." M. D.

+ Springfield Republican p7e Ap 6 '41 800w
Time 37:102 My 19 '41 50w

"Mr. Nathan's simplicity is not entirely artless, and the four people in his story who matter—the family and the little orphan, Sylvie, who joins them, are all keenly imagined with a tenderness just sufficiently this side of sentimentality. It is Mom, however, who bears the real weight of the epic on her broad shoulders, Mom, impatient of men and men's strife, who emerges as a mother of all the world."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p393 Ag 16 '41 180w

Wis Lib Bul 37:117 Je '41

Reviewed by Robert Littell

Yale R n s 30:xii summer '41 270w

NATHANSON, JEROME. Forerunners of freedom; the re-creation of the American spirit; introd. by Horace M. Kallen. 177p $2.50; pa $2 Am. council on public affairs

323.44 Democracy. Emerson, Ralph Waldo. Whitman, Walt. James, William. Dewey, John 41:20795

"This volume attempts to explore the thought of four American prophets of democracy in order to discover the essentials of an American democratic tradition which has vitality enough to re-create itself, and it attempts particularly to present different aspects of the problem of freedom. The chief theme of this democratic thought is the realization of individuals, and Mr. Nathanson develops admirably the thesis that Emerson, Whitman, James, and Dewey are not so much preachers of individualism as seekers of individuality, and that each has contributed an enduring analysis of the problems faced by any thoughtful person who desires to become a free man. He adds to his portraits of these four democrats a picture of American culture which they express and re-create." J Philos

"This beautiful and masterful work is indeed an inspiring philosophical analysis, rich in depth and fertility of thought, of the American spirit, the essential dynamic life line of which is that in a world of increasing authoritarianisms freedom and democracy simply cannot survive unless they are recreated socially and individually." Herman Hausheer

+ Ann Am Acad 217:180 S '41 600w

J Philos 38:474 Ag 14 '41 500w

NATIONAL defense and government contract service. loose-leaf $50 per year 1940 Prentice-Hall

355 U.S.—Defenses. World war, 1939—U.S. WAR law service. 3v loose-leaf $70; v 1 alone $45; v 2 alone $45; v 1-2 combination $60 1939 Commerce clearing house

355 U.S.—Defenses. World war, 1939—U.S. "These are both loose-leaf services covering the laws, regulations, proclamations and developments of the present European war and the defense program as they affect business and other operations. The Commerce clearing house War Law Service appeared the same month that the European war was declared, the early releases bearing the date September 29, 1939, whereas the initial report of the Prentice-Hall service came out August 10, 1940, almost one year later. . . The Prentice-Hall National Defense Service, to date, is in one volume with seven major sections under the following designations: Report Bulletins; Introduction—Scope of Service—Industrial Mobilization Plan; Obtaining Government Contracts; Contracts Imposed by Government; Operation under Government Contracts; Foreign Trade under Defense Laws; Defense Laws Affecting Individuals—Miscellaneous. . . The Commerce clearing house War Law Service, to date, is in three volumes. The first volume [is] Statutes, Proclamations, Interpretations. . . The second volume [is] Government Contracts. . . The third volume [is] Foreign Supplement." Subscription Bks Bul

"Although the two services cover the same general field and in a large sense duplicate each other, the War Law Service is wider in scope and in many respects much more inclusive. It includes detailed information on foreign financial and trade controls which is entirely omitted from the National Defense Service and also many more congressional statutes and executive regulations applying to the present war and the defense program. . . Both these services have all the physical advantages and disadvantages of other loose-leaf services. If a library can afford them, it should buy both. If the need is mainly for information on procurement of government contracts the Prentice-Hall service is more economical. However, in this event, it might be well to consider a service devoted exclusively to government contracts, as Government Contracts Guide, issued by Advisory business services, inc. If it is possible to buy only one of these the Commerce Clearing house service is more comprehensive. The National Defense and Government Contract Service and the War Law Service are recommended for business libraries and public libraries giving any business service."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 12:24 Ap '41 1100w

NATIONAL EDUCATION ASSOCIATION OF THE UNITED STATES. Educational policies commission. Learning the ways of democracy; a case book of civic education. 486p il $1 Nat. educ.

371.3 Education—U.S. Democracy 40-33686

"In the fall of 1939, Survey Graphic brought out a special number, 'Schools: the Challenge of Democracy to Education,' which raised many questions as to the educational experience of young Americans, and particularly as to their preparation for the responsibilities and the privileges of citizenship in a democracy. In effect, this 'case book' is the answer of the secondary schools to that special number. The report is based on a field study of ninety high-schools (public and private) in twenty-seven states, conducted between September 1939 and January 1940." (Survey) Index.

Booklist 37:212 Ja 15 '41

Reviewed by Beulah Amidon
Survey 77:165 My '41 470w

NATIONAL FIRE PROTECTION ASSOCIATION. Fire defense. 221p il maps pa $1.50 The association

614.84 Fire extinction. Air defenses (W) 41-51785

"This is the first American publication covering all aspects of defense against war incendiaryism and fire sabotage. It explains the problem of fire in wartime, dealing with such matters as air-set fires, bombs, sabotage, fire fighting, and the safeguarding of industrial production. The text includes a comprehensive report on British fire defense measures and among the contributors are an expert of the FBI, the director of fire services of the Civilian Defense Committee in the Canadian province of Ontario, and other technical experts in the fire field." Eng N

Booklist 37:459 Je 1 '41

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 JI '41

Eng N 126:86 My 22 '41 100w

N Y New Tech Bks 26:36 JI '41

Pratt p8 D '41

NATIONAL INDUSTRIAL CONFERENCE BOARD. Economic almanac for 1940; a handbook of useful facts about business, labor and government in the United States and other areas. 400p $5 cl940 The board

330.58 Economic conditions, U.S.—Economic conditions. Yearbooks (statistical, historical, etc) (40-30704)

"According to the foreword written by Virgil Jordan, president of the National industrial conference board, 'this is the first issue of an annual publication designed to meet the need for a compact, convenient handbook containing the most significant and trustworthy statistical and other data useful to business executives, labor leaders, educators, students, journalists, and other citizens concerned . . . with current economic problems.' Selection of the data included has been based upon importance, up-to-dateness and reliability as measured by the standards of the National industrial conference board which has been engaged in compiling statistical and other studies since 1916. The materials are arranged under four general headings: I, Chronologies and calendars; II, Legislation affecting national economic life; III, General business conditions; IV, Recent economic developments." Subscription Bks Bul

"This handbook should prove a useful and ready reference aid because it brings together in a convenient form useful facts on business and economics and has the advantage of being up to date. It is recommended."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 12:6 Ja '41 700w

NATIONAL INSTITUTIONAL TEACHER PLACEMENT ASSOCIATION. Current practices in institutional teacher placement; written by 35 members of the Association; ed. com: Earl W. Anderson [and others]; pub. by the Association, with the assistance of the Division on child development and teacher personnel, Comm. on teacher educ. Am. council on education. 186p $1.50 The association, box 934, Athens, Ga.

371.142 Teachers

41-9066

"A source book of theory and current practice largely related to secondary school positions." Social Studies

"Although teacher placement is the principal concern of this publication, it nevertheless contains much that is of value to the general institutional placement office. Moreover, the scope of the book is not limited to so-called 'teacher-training institutions' but includes a discussion of the problems confronting liberal-arts colleges and universities as well. Current Practices in Institutional Teacher Placement, both for the practitioner and for the educational administrator, is interesting and profitable reading." L. G. Wolfe

+ School R 49:549 S '41 750w

Social Studies 32:334 N '41 10w

NEEDHAM, JAMES GEORGE. About ourselves; a survey of human nature from the zoological viewpoint; with il. by William D. Sargent. 276p $3 Jaques Cattell press. N. Queen st. & McGovern av, Lancaster, Pa.

575 Man. Psychology, Comparative. Social psychology 42-717

"The well-known emeritus professor of entomology of Cornell University here provides the lay reader with a comprehensive view of human nature from the zoological standpoint. . . . The first part of the book is concerned with the biological aspects of man—his remote ancestry, the development of his nervous system, brain and behavior, instinct versus learning, the infancy of animals and human beings, the nature and nurture of the human species. Passing from the individual, Professor Needham considers society in its biological aspects." Scientific Bk Club R

School & Society 54:396 N 1 '41 10w

Scientific Bk Club R 12:3 D '41 420w

NEF, JOHN ULRIC. Industry and government in France and England, 1540-1640. (Memoirs of the Am. philosophical soc) 162p pa $2 Am. philosophical soc.

380.160942 Industry and state. France—Industries and resources. England—Industries and resources 40-35892

"To Professor Nef more than to any other economic historian we owe the realization that there have been two industrial revolutions in England, that to the classical Industrial Revolution of the late eighteenth century we must add another great period of industrial expansion in manufacturing and mining under Elizabeth and the earlier Stuarts. In his latest book he adopts the comparative method and contrasts France and England during this period." Manchester Guardian

"The basic factual material has long been accessible to any who were interested in a careful study of economic policy, but Professor Nef has developed the antithesis with skill and with new detail from manuscript sources. He has happily emancipated himself from all the catchwords of mercantilism, and given new vitality to these episodes by approaching the whole problem as a basic phase of social development." A. P. Usher

+ Am Econ R 31:621 S '41 380w

Reviewed by C. W. Cole

Am Hist R 47:110 O '41 800w

"Whether these chapters will help 'in guiding men into the ways of truth, justice, reason, and virtue' by persuading historians to look beyond their fields of special competence into the larger world of yesterday; whether the explanation they give of how the responsibility of rulers to God or to a representative assembly' was built up will help us understand why these responsibilities are now breaking down—these questions, dear to Professor Neff's heart, I dare not answer. But I do assert that these chapters illuminate incandescently not merely the multiple nexuses that existed between business and post-Reformation governments, but also help explain why the forms of government in France and England differed." E. A. J. Johnson

+ Ann Am Acad 213:219 Ja '41 1100w

"It is a stimulating essay worth the attention of the general no less than the economic historian. It is also not without its bearing on current controversies." A. P. W.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Je 3 '41 340w

NEFF, EMERY EDWARD. A revolution in European poetry, 1660-1900. 279p $3 Columbia univ. press [15s Oxford]

809.1 Poetry

41-6573

For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

"Professor Neff's book should interest the intelligent reader as well as the student. He deals easily with material drawn from the important English, French, German and Italian poets—the absence of any reference to the Scandinavians is a little curious—and quotes liberally, with convenient translations. . . . He also endeavors to suggest the relationship between literary movements and political and sociological developments. . . . These are admirable purposes; but the execution, though sometimes illuminating, is unsatisfactory in two respects. Though he blocks his material into chapters he prefers to treat it biographically, poet by poet. One tends to become involved in the peculiarities of the individual, to lose one's sense of breadth and unity, and to emerge with no grasp of the whole. This makes the book a history of poets rather than of poetry. . . . Here is a second cause for disappointment. Professor Neff is painfully conscious of the anarchy which has been the aftermath of the revolution from 1660 to 1900; but as he does not allow himself to generalize broadly about its course, so he leaves us to draw our own gloomy conclusions about the present from the phrase 'fin de siècle.' Without detracting from the value of his history, he might have clarified its significance by giving us his views on what is in progress or to come." A. E. Barker

+ Canadian Forum 21:29 Ap '41 470w

"Dr. Neff has written a valuable book which should serve as a rational point of reference for students and the general reader alike." Louise Bogan

+ Nation 152:441 Ap 12 '41 1600w

"A book that manages to be both a contribution to scholarship and to criticism at one and the same time [is] something to celebrate. . . . When one comes, therefore, upon a work that brings to bear a knowledge of three or four literatures, and of the cultures of which they are the expression, and this is combined with a patent concern for poetic qualities, and discriminations, it is time to make that work the occasion of extended comment. For the book here under discussion is a happy portent for American criticism. For in it that happens which is very rare: the fruitful meeting of art and the academy. Criticism and scholarship are both gainers, and since informed and sensitive criticism creates a climate of discernment, current literature may be said to be the gainer thereby as well." Irwin Edman

+ Sat R of Lit 23:5 My 3 '41 2500w

Spring'd Republican p8 Mr 6 '41 480w

"From start to finish Mr. Neff remembers that poetry is his subject. He drives his four-in-hand with entire control, chooses his illustrations so as to exhibit their poetic quality as well as their significance in his schemes, and translates them faithfully."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup viii Ap 5 '41 300w

Reviewed by Maynard Mack

— Yale R n s 30:608 spring '41 310w

NEHRU, JAWAHARLAL. Toward freedom; autobiography [Eng title: Autobiography; with musings on recent events in India]. 445p il $4 Day [15s; 7s 6d Lane]

B or 92 India—Politics and government (W) 41-1650

Autobiography of the most prominent leader, after Ghandi, of the Indian national movement. Nehru was educated at Oxford. He is the son of wealthy parents, and was a lawyer by profession, but gave up his practice to give himself more time to devote to the liberation of the masses of India. He has been connected with the movement for thirty years, and has been president of the Indian National Congress three times. Much of his time has been spent in jail, where this volume was largely written. It has been published in India, and first appeared in England in 1936. The American edition has been somewhat revised and brought up to date. Glossary. Index.

Reviewed by J. F. Poleman

Ann Am Acad 216:187 Jl '41 450w

"The style of the autobiography, which was written in English is remarkably fine, lucid, sensitive, eloquent. The author is as much at home with Swinburne as with India's classical philosophers and poets. The book fulfills the most essential requirement of an autobiography: it conveys a vivid picture of Nehru's personality as nationalist political leader, and as a many-sided personality who can turn aside from the heat and dust of political struggle to comment on the beauty of a glacier or to discuss a general philosophical idea." W. H. C.

+ Atlantic Mr '41 240w

Booklist 37:291 Mr 1 '41

Bookmark 2:12 My '41

"A book which possesses the high, clear unity of a work of art. The category into which it goes is one of the smallest in all literature—books which tell the tale of great historical developments from the point of view of men greatly and intimately concerned. . . . The fascination of his book arises not only from the story he has to tell, but from the beauty of the telling. This, again, is no mere matter of style—there are a hundred other contemporaries with style enough, and to spare—but comes from the mind itself, so noble, temperate and serene, in its apparently effortless expression of truth and purpose." Vincent Sheehan

+ Books p1 F 16 '41 2000w

"Nehru's book, written with an unusual grace and nobility, should be read, above all, in England today. And it may be read not only with a bitter sense of regret for many opportunities missed, but also with a justified feeling of pride. For the Indian longing toward freedom, and free men like Jawaharlal Nehru who represents a synthesis of all the liberal traditions of the past and the best hopes of mankind for the future, are the result of the new vitalizing forces which were embodied in Milton and Locke, in Mill and Gladstone, and which the example of English history and of English ways of life brought to Asia." Hans Kohn

+ Boston Transcript p1 F 15 '41 900w

"Here is an important book—by far the ablest and most searching narrative of its kind produced in modern India. It is brilliantly composed by a master of English." S. K. R.

+ Cath World 153:116 Ap '41 500w

"Because of the liquid lucidity of its prose, the unequalled skill of its author in interpreting the struggle of a sensitive spirit whose integrity completely identifies him with the oppressed, and the world-shaking significance of the events which form its background, the publication of this book ranks among the important literary events of the year." H. E. Fey

NEHRU, JAWAHARLAL—Continued

+ Christian Century 58:426 Mr 26 '41 850w

"He has written a book that probably presents more effectively than any other the Indian point of view in the long, strained relations with the Government of London." H. J. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 My 31 '41 700w

Reviewed by Joseph Calderon

Commonweal 33:546 Mr 21 '41 1500w

"When Jawaharlal Nehru's autobiography was published in England, it was pronounced one of the twelve best books of the day in the English language. Written with lucid fervour, this heavy volume can be read readily and with pleasure. It is more than a memoir; it is a testament." Madame Kamaladevi

+ Current Hist & Forum 52:58 Ap '41 550w

Foreign Affairs 19:686 Ap '41 10w

"Written largely in prison, where he has served many terms because of his advocacy of political and social reform, the book is important to anyone who wishes to understand present-day India, nationalist movements, and the effect of an imperialist government on subject peoples." F. L. D. Goodrich

+ Library J 66:177 F 15 '41 80w

"Jawaharlal Nehru is the inalienable son of Mother India. But he was educated in England and conditioned by the culture and history of the nation that holds Mother India in thrall. It is the impact of this double play of forces upon an intelligent, sensitive, and genuinely noble human being which makes his remarkable autobiography one of the most absorbing personal histories of modern times." Margaret Marshall

+ Nation 152:244 Mr 1 '41 1000w

Reviewed by R. M. Lovett

New Repub 104:538 Ap 21 '41 1800w

"Since the style is the man, let it be promptly recorded that Nehru's autobiography is written in lucid, purest English, his deepest thoughts expressed in simplest speech. In a word, his style is so obviously sincere that the man's integrity is absolutely unquestionable." Charles Fleischer

+ N Y Times p5 F 23 '41 1900w

"John Gunther believes that hardly a dozen men alive write English as well as Nehru. I can't agree. Nehru uses English with purity and care, but without much power or originality. His is not an autobiography of universal appeal. Perhaps he is not enough of an egotist for that. Most of the great autobiographies, from St. Augustine's to Henry Adams', have been the work of inordinately self-centred men. On the other hand, Nehru's book is one of the few available to English readers that really make clear the history and meaning of the Indian Nationalist movement during the last thirty years." Clifton Fadiman

+ — New Yorker 17:82 F 22 '41 350w

Pratt p4 spring '41

"Not since Kropotkin's 'Memoirs of a Revolutionist' has there been such an appealing and revealing life story of a rebel. . . The interest and appeal of his autobiography go far beyond the movement to which he has devoted his life and for which he has spent many years in prison, where he now is. It is the self-expression of a fascinating, many-sided personality, of an Easterner who has assimilated the best of Western culture and civilization." W. H. Chamberlin

+ Sat R of Lit 23:5 F 15 '41 1650w

Reviewed by H. I. Poleman

Social Studies 32:332 N '41 500w

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 2 '41 360w

Reviewed by E. O. Hauser

Survey G 30:255 Ap '41 360w

Time 37:102 F 24 '41 750w

Wis Lib Bul 37:54 Mr '41

Reviewed by W. N. Brown

Yale R n s 30:623 spring '41 1700w

NEIHARDT, JOHN GNEISENAU. The song of Jed Smith. 113p $1.90 Macmillan

811 Smith, Jedediah Strong—Poetry 41:17992

"The concluding volume of the author's epic cycle of the West. The preceding volumes were: The song of three friends, The song of Hugh Glass, The song of the Indian wars, The song of the Messiah." (Library of Congress card) Jedediah Smith was an explorer and trapper, who was born in 1798 and died in 1831.

Booklist 38:77 N 1 '41

"The power of imagination and of utterance which Mr. Neihardt has put into it makes it perhaps the strongest portrayal that has been given of this aspect of the American adventure."

Christian Century 58:1274 O 15 '41 170w

Reviewed by E. H. Crowell

Library J 66:731 S 1 '41 40w

"The test of good art is in proportion to the artist's power of detachment. Neihardt's frontiersmen speak like poets and professors between their primitive adventures. This is the reason why an otherwise good plot is too much aerated with reflections which disturb a theme that belongs to a primitive folk tale." Maurice Swan

+ — N Y Times p5 D 28 '41 800w

Reviewed by Coleman Rosenberger

Poetry 59:164 D '41 490w

"This book should be placed on the shelf beside its four predecessors and others in the slowly increasing number of American books of this sterling caliber." Adelbert Jakeman

+ Springf'd Republican p7e O 12 '41 360w

NEILSON, ELISABETH (MUSER) (MRS WILLIAM ALLAN NEILSON). The house I knew; memories of youth. 338p $3 Houghton B or 92 (W) 41-10379

Memoirs of the author's childhood and youth, spent in a Bavarian town in the 1890s. The book closes as she leaves Germany to go to America as the wife of William Allan Neilson, later president of Smith college.

"This book of memories is like a bouquet of flowers, apparently gathered carelessly from the garden but put together with exquisite taste, a lovely cluster of color and fragrance." Elizabeth Morrow

+ Books p1 Je 8 '41 1100w

Christian Science Monitor p10 S 6 '41 400w

"This is a candid, full and searching personal memoir, not merely the picture of a vanished world. . . [It] is a book whose interest is both deeper and warmer than that of a mere comparative sketch, and whose general aspect approaches the universal precisely in its sincere and unstrained individuality." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p3 Je 15 '41 1500w

"Well written, charming, and substantial."

+ New Yorker 17:78 Je 7 '41 40w

"There is no action in this book, nothing of what one might call a plot; almost no dialogue, and its only events are those of a slow-moving life lived in the peace of a time of which we know but the shadows. And yet it has a charm of its own that fascinates the reader and lingers in his mind long after he has finished reading." Klaus Lambrecht

+ Sat R of Lit 24:10 Je 14 '41 450w

"It is the feeling for words, for people, for life itself which illumines every page of Mrs Neilson's book, and it is this intelligent sensitivity which will urge one to read and reread it with increasing joy."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Je 1 '41 850w

Wis Lib Bul 37:139 J1 '41

NEILSON, WILLIAM ALLAN. Intellectual honesty, and other addresses. 134p $2 Prospect press, inc, Litchfield, Conn.

378.04 Sermons 41-1487

"A volume consisting mainly of Dr Neilson's chapel talks at Smith college. The addresses were never written, but when a request was unexpectedly made that some of the president's chapel talks should be collected for publication, it was found that stenographic notes had been preserved. As the talks deal mainly with moral, intellectual, social and religious questions, the demand for re-publication is proof of the influence which Dr Neilson's words achieved at the time of their delivery." Springf'd Republican

Reviewed by M. E. Chase

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 19 '41 1000w

Christian Century 58:154 Ja 29 '41 60w

Churchman 155:35 Mr 15 '41 120w

"Many persons besides Dr Neilson's former pupils should find enjoyment and profit in reading these chapel talks. They treat vital themes with illumination, yet in the manner of friendly discussion with young people." E. N. Jenckes

+ Springf'd Republican p6 F 15 '41 1350w

NEILSON, WILLIAM ALLAN, ed. We escaped: twelve personal narratives of the flight to America; ed. with an introduction. 258p $2 Macmillan

940.53159 World war, 1939—Refugees. World war, 1939—Personal narratives 41-5829

The personal narratives of twelve men and women who fled from European countries to take refuge in the United States. "These accounts have in a few cases been written by the subjects themselves, but in most have been taken down from their lips and translated into English by Miss Caroline Neilson. No effort has been made to make them 'literary,' to heighten their effect, to render them sensational." (Introd)

"These twelve narratives of individuals who escaped the long arm of the Nazi movement and, in one instance, of Spanish fascism, are in some ways heroic tales, told in a simple and restrained manner. This fact makes them stand out in the literature of escape and exposé which has frequently sought to exploit the macabre and horrible." J. H. Barnett

+ Ann Am Acad 217:171 S '41 500w

Booklist 37:436 My 15 '41

Bookmark 2:11 N '41

"'We Escaped' is not a work of literary importance; it should be kept on file as a collection of documents for the better understanding of our children and grandchildren." Ursula Wasserman

+ Books p14 Ap 20 '41 370w

Christian Century 58:531 Ap 16 '41 50w

"Some of the stories are intrinsically more interesting and better written than others, but all possess the ring of sincerity."

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 My 24 '41 440w

Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '41

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:375 Ja '42 10w

"Those who have not seen the faces of nationless men may obtain some idea of what Nazism has done from 'We Escaped,' a collection of narratives of quite exceptional merit. The simplicity and vigor of these accounts and the entire absence of abnormality in the persons who tell them set the book apart. . . It is testimony to the reality of the people in 'We Escaped' to say that one or two of them have quirks and traits that I don't like. In general they are fine people, none the less, worth any nation's saving." Ralph Bates

+ Nation 152:562 My 10 '41 500w

Reviewed by Marianne Hauser

New Repub 105:347 S 15 '41 390w

"This picture is not called 'amazing' because it is new, but rather—paradoxical as that may seem—on the contrary. It has the dreadful cumulative enlightenment of something which, in one detail after another, the world has come to accept. The shock comes with the realization both of the sum of that dreadfulness and of the world's acceptance of it. One must go back to the Dark Ages to find a parallel."

+ N Y Times p9 Ap 6 '41 700w

"The editorial idea and the principle of selection behind this collection of personal accounts are both excellent. The result is a true picture of the passion of Europe, a simple, unpretentious, factual picture, avoiding all dramatization or sentimentalization and refraining from all comments which could only diminish the impact of the facts." Erich Kahler

+ Sat R of Lit 24:15 My 31 '41 500w

"The stories are told with restraint. No attempt is made to point out the horrors of Nazism, but they are apparent. 'We Escaped' is a worthwhile book."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 My 1 '41 420w

NEISH, ROSALIE (GALSWORTHY) lady. My Scottish husband [Eng title: A Scottish husband]. 254p $2.50 Dutton [10s 6d Hale, R]

B or 92

41-13254

Reminiscences of an English author, a cousin of John Galsworthy. Her Scottish husband, whom she designates by the whimsical name Authority, and her gardens in various parts of England, are the main themes but her own personality lights up the whole book. Verbal pictures of England during the first World war are included; the book closes with the death of Authority.

"In all of 'My Scottish Husband' there is not a single distinguished line, if you except those quoted from Lady Neish's cousin, John Galsworthy, Katherine Tynan, et al. Yet the whole is greater than the sum of all its parts, and Lady Neish's memoirs manage to convey, if not a subtle and shaded, at any rate a fairly obvious and satisfactory picture of a way of life that is past and an attitude of mind that, because of the continued extension of wars upon wars, probably cannot take root anywhere in the world again in our time." F. H. Bullock

+ Books p9 Jl 6 '41 700w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '41

"Those who have enjoyed the books by Elizabeth and stories told by the Provincial Lady will want to read this book." Jacqueline Overton

+ Library J 66:614 Jl '41 50w

"With gardening, with the firm yet likable idiosyncracies of the Scottish husband, with delightful—and sometimes touching—glimpses of humbler Scottish folk in their homes, and with a few anecdotes of well-known men and women, this leisurely memoir runs a happy human course. Its event is not unmixed with sadness; its record goes through the last war and into this one; but its serenity is warm with sympathy and bright with kindly laughter, and its humor is both imaginative and delicate."

+ N Y Times p15 Jl 13 '41 700w

"Rather coy. The gardening is amateur, but the book is mildly amusing."

New Yorker 17:71 Jl 12 '41 40w

"This is a series of unimportant anecdotes related in a manner which is both 'literary' and self-conscious. Lady Neish feels, one fears, that she is a good deal of a minx and that her Scottish husband is a fortunate lad to have snapped her up. Her sense of humor is pretty heavy-footed, however, and one wishes her publishers had taken their editorial functions more seriously. Cliches, ancient jokes and a certain coy smugness do not move the reader to wild enthusiasm."

— Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 6 '41 200w

"Quiet tenderness is discovered, and it is no doubt by intention that Lady Neish does not dwell long on shadows and sorrows. These reminiscences are held together as lightly as thistledown and are not important; yet, like someone's inconsequent and rather charming chatter, they may pass an hour or two very agreeably."

NEISH, ROSALIE—Continued

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p403 Ag 17 '40
150w

Wis Lib Bul 37:155 O '41

NELMS, HENNING. A primer of stagecraft. 158p il $1.50 Dramatists

792 Theaters—Stage-setting and scenery. Amateur theatricals 41-6603

A compact textbook on stage scenery construction intended chiefly for the use of small theater groups. Partial contents: The stage; The nature of scenery; Practical scene design; Tools; Materials; Building methods; Scene painting; Assembling scenery; Scene shifting. Index.

Booklist 37:488 Je 15 '41

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 D '41

"Mr. Nelms' book is small and compact but full of useful and accurate information and with scores of well-made and enlightening charts and drawings."

+ Theatre Arts 25:471 Je '41 240w

NELSON, MARY JARMAN. Fun with music; il. by Grace T. and Olive E. Barnett. 48p $1.50 Whitman, A.

784 Children's songs 41-14697

Combination of song and picture book, containing a collection of simple songs, with music, for many occasions. There is even one page of songs to be played on glasses of differing sizes.

"Practical, inexpensive ways of getting fun out of music are made so clear in this gayly colored picture book that it will be welcomed by mothers." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 Ag 31 '41 120w

"The book offers many little songs of the everyday world and storybook world, and many more are suggested. Parent and child will find it a pleasant meeting ground." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 66:678 Ag '41 100w

Spring'd Republican p7e Ag 3 '41 100w
Wis Lib Bul 37:159 O '41

NELSON new loose-leaf encyclopedia; editor-in-chief, John H. Finley; Sir Robert A. Falconer, Canadian editor; Sir Henry J. Newbolt, European editor. 12v il maps $99.50 including one year's renewal pages, with annual subscription fee of $6 for renewal pages issued in spring and fall with guaranteed minimum of 500 pages per annum c1905-1932 Nelson

031 Encyclopedias and dictionaries

"(This is not to be confused with the Nelson's Encyclopedia published by the Consolidated book publishers, 537 South Dearborn st, Chicago, formerly known as the Nelson Complete Encyclopedia and published by Thomas Nelson and sons, London and N.Y.) The set was last reviewed in the April, 1930 issue of Subscription Books Bulletin [Book Review Digest, 1934]. The present edition is composed of the set copyrighted 1932 and supplemented by minor textual corrections and the substitution of some new pages of information. Taking the text as a whole, the articles vary widely in recency and degree of revision. Population figures, for instance, are highly irregular differing from no date at all, or an old date like 1910, to 1930 figures. None could be located, however, which were based on the 1940 census. A sheet of 1940 necrology is included with the suggestion that the text be corrected as indicated. As in the earlier editions, the pages are divided into three narrow columns which are broken up by many small cuts. Each volume has a table of pronunciation at the end." Subscription Bks Bul

"Considering the information in the set as a whole, it is too uneven in point of date to be fully reliable. The general appearance is undistinguished because of the fine print, the narrow columns, and the old, poorly reproduced cuts and plates. The subject headings are often inconsistent, and the cross references are not plentiful. The set does not compare favorably either in inclusiveness nor in quantity or recency of subject matter with the corresponding volumes of other popular sets. It is not recommended."

— Subscription Bks Bul 12:26 Ap '41 950w

NEUMANN, DOROTHY. Come meet the clowns! pictures by Lydia Furbush. [35p] $1.50 Macmillan

41-7316

"The clowns come one by one, in gorgeous colors, each specializing, as they do, in some form of laugh-appeal. Gago, smallest clown in the world, does the introduction. He shows you Bumpo with his drum and the little dog that barks if any one gets out of step, Spotty and his little pig, Gogo, who balances that board on his head. . . Rich, circusy colors, broad gestures and grins, and opportunity to get each clown by himself instead of having to pick him out from a crowd, combine to make this a handsome, welcome picture-book." Books

Booklist 37:496 Je 15 '41

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

+ Books p14 My 11 '41 240w

"The book as a whole has a feeling of carnival, but children who pick it up expecting a story will be disappointed. Recommended for children of six to eight to enrich and supplement such circus stories as we already have." M. F. Potter

Library J 66:466 My 15 '41 80w

Spring'd Republican p7e My 25 '41
70w

NEVILLE, VERA. Safety for Sandy; pictures by [the author]. [47p] 75c Nelson

40-31805

"Story of how Sue and Bobby were kept busy trying to make things safe for Sandy, their mischievous little monkey, and at the same time learning to be neat and orderly themselves." Wis Lib Bul

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p6 My 25 '41 160w

"A delightfully refreshing story. . . Cleverly illustrated with life-like sketches."

+ Wis Lib Bul 37:80 Ap '41

NEVINS, ALLAN. This is England today. 164p $1.25 Scribner

940.5342 World war, 1939—Great Britain. (W)

"An American historian, back from six months' observation in Britain, reports that that country is 'undergoing a profound internal reorganization' and shows us what this means in terms of food, production, labor, books, music, government, the English spirit, and so on." New Yorker

Booklist 38:50 O 15 '41

"There is more information that sticks to the mind in this brief book than as if it were thrice its size and ten times as lurid. Its few pages compel condensation; this has been brought about, not by squeezing the juice out of many topics but by concentration on what we in America most want to know about the present state of things in the embattled island. Its quiet carries conviction."

+ Books p14 Ja 4 '42 200w

Christian Science Monitor p11 D 27 '41
270w

"Mr. Nevins is a master of description. He knows the questions Americans want answered, and he appears to know the answers. He gives the impression of telling honestly what he saw. His story awakens a deep admiration for the British." F. T. Jones
+ Current Hist 1:467 Ja '42 140w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:378 Ja '42 40w

"A slim, hastily written volume compared to the solid historical jobs Nevins usually turns out."

New Repub 105:630 N 10 '41 60w
Reviewed by George Dangerfield
N Y Times p4 O 12 '41 800w

"Intelligent, sober, and factual."
+ New Yorker 17:103 O 11 '41 60w

"One of the most searching and valuable analyses we have of the changes made by war, of the spiritual and social aspects of Britain's war effort, and of the profound national sentiment which has alone made possible Mr. Churchill's leadership. Once more this book proves—at least to a Briton—that the real American, the American who is free altogether from the anxious adulation of the Europeanized Americans, sees most clearly the virtues and faults of England." R. E. Roberts
+ Sat R of Lit 24:19 D 27 '41 550w

Springf'd Republican p14 D 12 '41 110w

"Nevins uses the method of high-journalism: he tells what he has seen in England and how it affects him. His touch is never heavy but seems rather to be a kind of background for a novel or a play. Alas, however, the drama beneath his observations belongs, not to fiction, but to the terrible reality of our time." E. C. Lindeman
+ Survey G 31:37 Ja '42 60w

NEW illustrated book of favorite hymns; il. by Gustaf Tenggren; with simplified piano arrangements by Inez Bertall, 44p $1 Garden City pub. co.

783.9 Hymns 41-12675

Selection of twenty-seven famous hymns, including simple piano arrangements. Contents: Jesus Christ is risen today; Silent night! holy night! O Sion, haste, thy mission high fulfilling; O God our help in ages past; Hark! hark, my soul! Saviour again to Thy dear name we raise; The King of love my Shepherd is; It came upon the midnight clear; The Church's one foundation; Our blest Redeemer; O little town of Bethlehem; Hark! the herald angels sing; Jerusalem the golden; O come, all ye faithful; Onward, Christian soldiers; Love divine, all love excelling; Jesus, lover of my soul; Nearer, my God, to Thee; My faith looks up to Thee; Rock of Ages; In the Cross of Christ I glory; Holy, Holy, Holy! Lead, kindly Light; Sun of my soul, Thou Saviour dear; Come, ye faithful, raise the strain; Abide with me; Now the day is over.

"So many inquiries have come this year for such a book as this proves to be that I am sure many parents have become aware, with perhaps a pang of misgiving, that they have failed to pass on to their children a precious heritage—the possession, words and music, of a store of great and beautiful hymns... There is no subtlety in these pictures; they do not invite the mind to brood over their meaning; but they make a direct appeal to a young child's eye." M. L. Becker
+ Books p8 Ap 13 '41 230w

"Music (very simple) and appealing illustrations in full color for 27 popular hymns. A few are traditionally Protestant; most are also used by Catholics. Certainly nothing in the volume would be likely to arouse controversy." H. L. Binsse
+ Commonweal 35:112 N 21 '41 30w

"Illustrations by Gustaf Tenggren are beautiful both in symbolism and rich coloring, although two or three of them are very adult in interpretation. May prove somewhat disconcerting to a highly strung or over-sensitive child. I should suggest examination of the book by librarian before purchasing, especially for small collections." A. L. Shea

+ Library J 66:404 My 1 '41 60w

"The selection of the hymns is good and the pictures are brilliantly decorative and frankly religious in feeling."

+ New Yorker 17:87 My 24 '41 40w
Springf'd Republican p10 O 9 '41 170w

NEW YORK (city). Fire department. Fire college. Manual of instruction; ed. by Lowell M. Lippus [foreword by John J. McElligott]. 255p $1.85 Dutton

614.843 Firemen's manuals 40-9453

"A textbook on fire fighting, dealing with efficient tactics and procedure. It is intended for the professional fire fighter and is based on a postgraduate course given to officers of the New York fire department. It explains how that department is organized and operates." Booklist

Booklist 36:403 J1 1 '40

Reviewed by W. A. Reilly
Boston Transcript p2 F 1 '40 150w
N Y New Tech Bks 26:45 J1 '41

NEW YORK. MUSEUM OF MODERN ART. Britain at war; ed. by Monroe Wheeler; text by T. S. Eliot [and others]. 97p il $1.25 Museum of modern art 940.5497 World war, 1939—Pictorial works.

World war, 1939—Great Britain 41-10069

A collection of over one hundred paintings, drawings, photographs, cartoons and posters, with a poem by T. S. Eliot, brief text, and biographical notes on the artists represented.

"The most extraordinary feature of the collection is its coherence, considering how diverse are the individual items. These items range from straight photographs of 'bomb-made portals' in the West End and marvelous examples of camouflage, to Henry Moore's impressionistic studies of shelter life."

+ Books p6 Ag 3 '41 160w
Sat R of Lit 24:21 Je 21 '41 180w

NEW YORK ACADEMY OF MEDICINE. The march of medicine. (Lectures to the laity) 168p $2 Columbia univ. press [10s Oxford]

610.4 Medicine. Medicine—History 40-13017

This book contains lectures delivered at the New York Academy of medicine in the winter of 1938-1939. Contents: From folkways to modern medicine, by W. C. Alvarez; Health in Elizabethan England, by S. V. Larkey; Not so long ago, by C. K. Drinker; The romance of modern surgery, by C. G. Heyd; The story of insanity, by R. G. Hoskins; The Cinderella of medicine, by K. A. Menninger. Index.

Reviewed by Owsei Temkin
Am J Pub Health 31:389 Ap '41 350w
Christian Century 59:22 Ja 7 '42 60w

"These lectures bring out the highlights of medical progress. The lecturers have told a scientific story in a way that makes most interesting reading for the layman. Medicine and religion are blood-brothers and the later developments of the healing art are especially good material for the modern minister's pastoral background." R. E. Keighton
+ Crozer Q 18:82 Ja '41 90w

Social Forces 19:600 My '41 190w

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE. Home institute. America's housekeeping book. 607p il $2.50 Scribner

640 Home economics (W) 41-19993

Partial contents: When you hunt a home; Budgeting your time; Convenient kitchens;

N.Y. HERALD TRIBUNE—Continued

Money management; Home safety; Household employees; Care of the house; Housecleaning; Laundering; Decorator's touch; Control of household pests; Small electrical equipment; Moving day; Heating and air conditioning; Plumbing; Lighting; Repairs the amateur can make; Paint. Index.

Booklist 38:108 D 1 '41

Bookmark 2:8 N '41

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p12 S 28 '41 850w

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 D '41

"The Herald Tribune Home Institute, in furnishing this wealth of material to homemakers at a very reasonable cost, has performed an undoubted service to the American home in a time when the family needs stressing as never before." Lila Templin

+ Commonweal 35:224 D 19 '41 850w

"This book is a compendium of household information, and its presentation is admirably clear, whether in text, illustrations or classified tables and lists. Its very inclusiveness may perhaps be ground for some criticism."

+ N Y Times p16 O 5 '41 550w

"Some of this book is primer material, discussing matters so fundamental that it would seem no housekeeper, even the new bride, would require the information given. On the basic information, however, is developed a program of efficient management likely to reveal unwitting waste of effort and resources in ordinarily well-kept homes. Of permanent value, ready for quick reference, are numerous tables, including one relating to removal of stains, carefully cataloged as to the nature of the stain, the kind of fabric to be treated and the reagents available."

+ Springfield Republican p7e S 21 '41 300w

Wis Lib Bul 37:174 N '41

NEW YORK TIMES. Days of decision; wartime editorials from the New York times; ed. and with an introd. by Charles Merz. 278p $2 Doubleday

940.53 World war, 1939—. World war, 1939—
U.S. 41-51994

Collection of editorials reprinted from the New York times, showing the changes of opinions about events in Europe over a period from the outbreak of the second World war in September, 1939, to the second anniversary of the invasion of Poland.

Booklist 38:111 D 1 '41

"Tracing the tortuous course we inched along through these incredible years when it was later than we thought, 'Days of Decision'—at once a review and a preview—is provocative reading as we move swiftly into still other days of decision, and action, that may reshape the story of man on the earth." Ralph Hayes

+ Books p17 Ja 11 '42 1000w

"To turn the pages of this book is to feel anew and with a keener awareness, the responsibility which rests upon all of us who believe that life can be worth living for self-respecting men only if they fight to the end and crush the monster that would devour them." J. D. A.

+ N Y Times p2 N 2 '41 550w

NEWBERRY, MRS CLARE (TURLAY). Lambert's bargain; with drawings by the author. 31p $1 Harper

41-8961

Lambert went to a pet shop to buy his sister a birthday present. He never quite knew how it happened, but he found he had a bargain hyena. Nobody at home wanted the hyena, and it was always getting the family into trouble with its laughing. Then along came a cross old uncle, and since a hyena was what he had always wanted, the difficulty was straightened out.

"I don't see any moral, but it says what it has to say with admirable brevity, and the pictures would make a hyena laugh. The last time Clare Newberry introduced us to the larger fauna, it was in 'Herbert the Lion.' The general appearance of this book, and the fun is like that neat fantasy, not too deep for a small person but quite gay enough for any one." M. L. Becker

+ Books p12 My 11 '41 320w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse

Commonweal 35:110 N 21 '41 30w

"This picture book, if it doesn't create a demand for hyenas as pets, will certainly cause much merriment. The pictures are amusing line drawings, in keeping with the spirit of the story. Mrs. Newberry apparently had a good time drawing the various expressions of the hyena. For children of picture book age, and older." Josephine Smith

+ Library J 66:268 Mr 15 '41 140w

New Yorker 17:86 My 24 '41 20w

Wis Lib Bul 37:80 Ap '41

NEWCOMB, COVELLE. Red hat; il. by Addison Burbank. 278p $2 Longmans

B or 92 Newman, John Henry, cardinal—
Juvenile literature (W) 41-24953

The first biography of Cardinal Newman for younger readers. "No writer has so interestingly covered his school life at Ealing and Oxford, his travels in Italy and Sicily, his early friendships. Nevertheless these things are not dealt with to the exclusion of the events of his later life; the book gives a rounded picture of the career of the great English Cardinal." (Publisher's note) Bibliography.

Booklist 38:179 Ja 15 '42

"Miss Newcomb . . . properly approaches John Henry Newman with sweet reasonableness. For the difficulty that has hitherto kept him out of biography for children is that controversial subjects are so largely barred from this field, and Newman's life, going from one controversy to another, turns on his emergence from the Church of England into the Church of Rome. . . . Dealing so quietly with these clashes removes much of their original violence and some of their original vivacity, but the book can do without polemics. The current of Newman's strong conviction carries it along." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 Ja 4 '42 400w

"It is written in an easy, chatty style with the intimate details of everyday life that vitalize." E. V. Wyatt

+ Cath World 154:380 D '41 50w

"A well written, admiring and edifying biography."

+ Christian Century 58:1514 D 3 '41 20w

"Miss Newcomb has done an amazing job. The result is readable, truthful, and could be offensive only to bigots—no mean achievement. One of the best juvenile biographies I ever read." H. L. Binsse

+ Commonweal 35:110 N 21 '41 60w

"Easily readable for teens and adults. Written with the feeling that marked the author's Black Fire. Catholic in sympathy. Large type, handsome format. A 'must' book for Catholic libraries." Maude Adams

+ Library J 66:1096 D 15 '41 60w

NEWCOMB, REXFORD. Old Kentucky architecture; colonial, federal, Greek revival, Gothic, and other types erected prior to the war between the states. 11p 130 pl map $10 Helburn

728 Architecture, Domestic. Architecture—Kentucky. Kentucky—Historic houses, etc.
40-9033

"Kentucky has a limited number of structures of pretentious character dating from the earliest times—the period before the war was comparatively brief—but Mr. Newcomb and his associates have compiled an interesting and excellent record of the beginnings of the architectural history of the State. The details of the interiors and the proportions of the buildings show that Gideon Shryock, the most noted architect of Kentucky, and his associates had been trained in a sound school, and that skilled artisans had been found to carry out their plans." N Y Times

Reviewed by C. McD. Puckette
N Y Times p28 Mr 9 '41 240w

"This authoritative study is of value not only for architects but for all students of American antiquities."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Je 23 '40 130w

NEWELL, ADNAH CLIFTON. Coloring, finishing and painting wood; enl. by the addition of six new chapters, including the finishing of metal. 480p il $4.50 Manual arts

698.1 Wood finishing. Painting, Industrial. Stains and staining. Varnish and varnishing. Lacquer and lacquering (W) 40-14824

"An enlarged edition of a book published in 1930 [Book Review Digest, 1931]. The new chapters discuss synthetic resins, all types of varnishes in widest use today, metal cleaning, application of lacquer enamels, laying gold leaf, bronzing and gold painting, chemical coloring, painting steel and iron, synthetic enamels for automobiles and aluminum, color plating, and copper finishes." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Booklist 37:219 Ja 15 '41
N Y New Tech Bks 25:54 O '40

NEWHOUSE, EDWARD. Anything can happen. 286p $2.50 Harcourt

41-21721

A group of short stories dealing with the members of a New York high school class which had entered school in 1925. Each story is preceded by an episode or character sketch from the high school years, but the stories themselves deal for the most part with events of later years.

"The impact of the book is solid and crushing. From so many examples, from such varied materials, one gets a single, indelible impression of depression life in the United States for the young and hopeful. Many of these sketches appeared in the New Yorker and elsewhere. Each one stood on its own merits; some were better than others, but, combined as they are in this volume, the whole is greater than the sum of its parts." R. E. Danielson

+ Atlantic D '41 170w

"They are first-rate little pieces, and though none of them runs more than seven or eight pages in length, they seem to have an importance all out of proportion to their size. . . The book seems to have been written in an almost haphazard manner. Sometimes the school-boy incident Newhouse relates has a direct connection with the story of the grown man; sometimes there seems to be no connection at all. Sometimes the stories are told by the author, sometimes by one of the other boys. There is no hint of affectation in this rather unusual form, but rather, a complete naturalness, as though Newhouse wrote his recollections just as they occurred to him. There is bitterness, a great deal of humor and a certain underlying tenderness, difficult to define." Barbara Woollcott

+ Books p6 N 2 '41 750w

Christian Century 58:1380 N 5 '41 30w

"Mr. Newhouse, born thirty years ago in Budapest, came to America when he was twelve and went to school in New York City. He tells us, in these stories, what he sees when he looks about him and considers the problem of human personality developing in the confusion and conflict of modern city life. He is sensitive and objective and his stories are simple and realistic. The dialogue is perfect." Ruth Byrns

+ Commonweal 35:273 Ja 2 '42 420w

Reviewed by Kay Boyle

New Repub 105:596 N 3 '41 300w

"Newhouse has developed to a remarkable degree his gift for characterization. . . Here is dialogue at its best, the easy interplay or conflict of ideas that helps at once to delineate character and advance the narrative. These witty, realistic sketches, replete with irony, pathos and humor that never missteps into burlesque, promise to enhance the reputation of a writer of rare distinction." Drake De Kay

+ N Y Times p7 N 9 '41 400w

"What has become of your high-school class, do you suppose, in the years since you were graduated? Mr. Newhouse asks this question and answers it by a series of brilliant sketches."

+ New Yorker 17:90 N 1 '41 60w

"Mr. Newhouse knows his world, and has made it his own. It has its own harsh flavor, sometimes pungent, sometimes bitter, but never flat on the tongue. It is a world where nobody is both agreeable and successful, and few are either one." Basil Davenport

+ Sat R of Lit 24:32 O 18 '41 450w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 16 '41 350w

NEWKIRK, LOUIS VEST. Integrated handwork for elementary schools; teachers' guide in use and techniques; drawings by Fred O. Anderson and La Vada Zutter. 342p $3.20 Silver

372.213 Education, Elementary—Occupations and busy work. Handicraft 40-11113

"The author looks upon handwork not as a special subject, but as an integral part of teaching procedures in all elementary school subjects. So conceived handwork becomes a means toward an end and not an end in itself. To the social studies teacher that end is a more vital understanding of the topic at hand. The volume under consideration is divided into two main parts. Part One defines handwork; shows its relation to industrial arts, fine arts, social studies, English, science, arithmetic, and reading; and suggests equipment and proper school facilities for handwork techniques. Part Two explains and illustrates methods of doing the more common types of handwork. These methods have been tried in many classrooms and many ordinary difficulties are foreseen and directions are given for surmounting them." (Social Educ) Copiously illustrated. Chapter bibliographies. Index.

"After reading the book, one feels that handwork should be the means of providing an approach to learning in many subjects. This book should make a valuable addition to the professional library of any elementary-school teacher. It should be a definite aid to sponsors of craft clubs, to parents looking for helps in home workshops, and to Scout leaders of school troops." W. E. Swarthout

+ El School J 41:396 Ja '41 700w

"Although this handbook is labeled for the elementary school there are many ideas in it which are applicable to the high school, and it is more than likely that the teacher himself may find hobby material in its pages. This is especially true if said teacher is a camera fan who delights in table top photography." W. H. Hartley

+ Social Educ 5:476 O '41 650w

NEWMAN, BARCLAY MOON. Must we grow old? 269p $2.50 Putnam

615.54 Longevity. Old age (W) 41-5550

Study of the recent scientific discoveries of geriatrics—the pathology of old age. He discusses foods and their chemical compounds, vitamins and hormones as catalysts, cholesterol and arteriosclerosis, cancer, and sex glands, all as they affect or compare with the aging of the human body.

NEWMAN, B. M.—Continued

"The book contains much of interest; but it is written in a gaudy, sensational style that will probably alienate as many readers as it attracts." H. M. Parsley

Books p15 My 18 '41 600w

"The author is neither presumptuous nor arrogant. As a scientifically trained man, he is well aware of the hazard of too great a deductive leap; he recognizes the distrust and condescension which the mere raising of the question will evoke from the tough-minded empiricists, some of whom he quotes. . . Mr. Newman writes in a clear, sprightly, readable style. He cites sound authorities, and, except for the implications of the title, nothing he says would be objected to by the most orthodox medical scientists. Perhaps his optimism will be as good for us as for our patients." Karl Menninger

+ Nation 152:480 Ap 19 '41 650w

"A hopeful book for everyone over fifty, but to be read with caution. The lack of an index and of a short bibliography is unfortunate."

+ New Repub 104:642 My 5 '41 60w

"His reports and contentions are, of course, interesting in themselves, but his effort toward a popular style cannot be said to be successful. The book as a whole is close to falling between two stools as presenting a popular argument without sufficient compulsion or clarity for a wide popular appeal."

N Y Times p37 O 26 '41 240w

"Barclay Newman, the author of this book, is strongly anti-fatalist as regards the problem of degeneration, aging, and death. . . He has included many interesting new findings in the field. Although certain quirks of journalistic reporting and style have crept in, he has really tried to be up-to-date in his digest of the pioneer work in this field." Louis Berman, M.D.

+ Sat R of Lit 23:18 Ap 12 '41 750w

"Mr. Newman bases his information only on reliable sources. He has done personal research work, has been a teacher of science, and is the author of textbooks on biology, chemistry, and physics, as well as of 'Science Rediscovered God.' His book is vouched for as an excellent summary of present-day knowledge on geriatrics."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 12:2 Mr '41 550w

NEWMAN, CLARE, and STRAUSS, FRANCES (BELL WILEY, pseud). Cook book of leftovers. 421p $2 Little

641.5 Cookery (W) 41-51537

Gives many recipes utilizing leftovers of all sorts of foods, from vegetable waters to meats, egg yolks, stale breads, etc. The greater part of the book is devoted to recipes arranged in the usual cook book order, but there are also special chapters listing special kinds of leftovers, e.g. sour cream, bread crumbs, and referring to recipes employing these. Full index.

Booklist 37:265 F 15 '41

Bookmark 2:5 My '41

J Home Econ 33:187 Mr '41 200w

Pratt p14 spring '41

NEWMAN, ERNEST. The life of Richard Wagner. 4v v 3 605p il $5 Knopf

B or 92 Wagner, Richard (33-4967)

The third volume in this biography of Wagner covers the years 1859 to 1866. During this time the Taunh  user fiasco occurred in Paris; Wagner and Minna were coming to their separation; King Ludwig of Bavaria became interested in the composer; Tristan was first produced in Munich; and the idyl with Cosima von B  low was beginning. Index. For earlier volumes see Book Review Digest, 1933, 1937.

Booklist 37:358 Ap 1 '41

"Mr. Newman's narrative is ordered with the technical skill and the feeling for drama that always combine to make his writing so engrossing. And to handle lucidly and logically this particular narrative, which must comprehend such a diversity of personages and events and interrelations is little less than a labor of Hercules." Peter Bowdoin

+ Books p6 Mr 9 '41 1600w

"The conditions under which [this] volume was finished and the proofs read were dramatic. These final labors were carried on in London and in Surrey, to the sound of falling bombs. Yet these conditions are not reflected in the text; Mr. Newman's style is as urbane, his detail as exhaustive, as ever." L. A. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 F 21 '41 500w

"As important as anything that has happened this year is Ernest Newman's publication of the third volume of his 'Life of Richard Wagner.' . . Where other biographers, he claims, have repeated what he calls fable convenue, he is piecing together the story of Wagner's life and period from source material; and he offers his work not only as biography but as an example of correct biographical procedure. The staggering quantity and complexity of the material would make his way of destroying legend and establishing truth difficult enough; but in addition there is the fact that the letters and other documents have been made available only gradually; and he has been delayed by the constant inflow of new material." B. H. Haggin

+ Nation 152:448 Ap 12 '41 1250w

"The measure of Ernest Newman as a scholar and writer of scrupulous fairness has never been so eloquently underscored as it is in the third volume of his splendid and definitive biography of Richard Wagner. . . For the musician and the layman there are rich nuggets of information and comment throughout this book." Howard Taubman

+ N Y Times p5 F 9 '41 1500w

"Research in the field of music in the English language has, on the whole, fallen behind that of France and Germany. This notable work may, when completed, take its place, not only as the most brilliant and definitive life of Wagner in English but in any other language." F. G. Bratton

+ Spring'd Republican p7e Mr 23 '41 1300w

NEWMAN, JOSEPH S. Poems for penguins, and other lyrical lapses; il. by Trofimov. 153p $1.75 Greenberg

811

41-12435

A volume of humorous verse by a poet praised by Harry Elmer Barnes and Max Eastman. "Contract bridge to trilobites are inspiration for the Newman muse. Somewhere in between, there is a group of 'versified versions of the Greek myths' that wear a naughty Conning Tower air. A burlesque of the Rubaiyat turns to Scott for style, a curious mixture." (N Y Times)

"The titles in a group called 'Outlines of Outlines' sound like a very advanced curriculum, but the verses themselves, in high-handed, humorous style, reduce their lofty subjects to very simple measures. The author's comic treatment of the cosmic is more successful than his ventures into Ogdennashish rhyme." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p4 J1 27 '41 160w

"Mr Newman misses the right of comparison with Nash and McGinley, but he has helped to keep one's ears tuned to laughter."

+ Spring'd Republican p7e J1 13 '41 100w

NEWMAN, ROBERT H. Far from home. 277p $2.50 Lippincott

41-3423

Tho called a novel by its author and publishers, it seems probable that this book is largely autobiographical. Written for the most part in stream-of-consciousness style it recounts the experiences of a young American ambulance driver in Finland and in France.

"Mr. Newman gives his experiences a thin varnish of fiction by introducing into this tale of death a casual, Hemingwayesque romance compounded of self-conscious meetings and partings between the ambulance driver and his girl, both of whom are too young to be simple with each other, too young to accept impermanence. The drinks and the kisses, however, seem childishly defiant in the harsh face of war. Wherever the author tells about other men and what they did, he achieves a certain power. He has known both hatred for the traitors and love for the many brave men, and he still believes in the future." Virgilia Sapieha

+ — Books p20 Mr 2 '41 360w

Reviewed by J. C. Moynihan
Boston Transcript p1 Mr 1 '41 440w

Reviewed by R. D. Minnich
Library J 66:140 F 1 '41 90w

"Pretty good Hemingway. . . In personal passages anti-sentimental sentiment is overdone, but of this book it can be said that it wears but does not flaunt the red badge of courage." Harold Brighthouse

+ — Manchester Guardian p3 Je 27 '41 150w

"This book written at white heat, 'makes no pretense toward impersonality or detachment.' Notwithstanding this frank confession, this book must express the feelings of all sensitive men caught in the grip of modern war, must stand as an honest record of the reactions of all humanity in the shock of its impact with inhumanity." John Cournos

+ N Y Times p7 Mr 2 '41 800w

"Since Mr. Newman was an ambulance-driver himself, there is doubtless a good deal of fact mixed up with his fiction. His love scenes, however, are straight out of Mr. Hemingway, who does that sort of thing better. Many of Mr. Newman's episodes, though, are affecting and shattering real."

+ — New Yorker 17:58 Mr 1 '41 60w

Reviewed by John Hampson
Spec 167:20 J1 4 '41 170w

"The point is that war is here too much mixed up with the ambulance driver's personal ambitions or agonies as a writer and his sentimental disillusion, with hard drinking in Helsinki and Sortavala, at the Crillon and Harry's Bar in Paris, and with hangovers everywhere. Despite all the vehement sincerity, in fact, the cry from the heart is too much an attitude—and a literary attitude at that. In the end you perceive the fatal justice of the remark of the misty Hemingway young woman the driver is, or was, or should have been in love with: 'Darling, you love words so much. You love making a show of yourself.'"

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p309 Je 28 '41 850w

NEWMAN, ROBERT H. Fling out the banner.
256p $2 Lippincott

41-18900

Story of two friends in the senior class of a preparatory school for boys. The problems which trouble these boys include the common ones of football games, dates and classes; but there are also more serious ones involving the meanings of life and death and one's relationships with others.

"The story moves us not at all, because the boys are just cardboard patterns, and what happens to them is of no moment. The style of the novel is dilute-Hemingway." Clare Godfrey

— Books p12 O 5 '41 240w

"I think this a youthful story with promise of a fine talent for its wit, its sensibility in portrayal of prep-school callowness, its thematic seriousness. But I think it is faulty and goes completely offside during the last quarter. The opening is delightful and the school-lad kidding and kiddishness that runs through the early sections of the novel, mixed up with serious youthful reflections, twining about the developing tragedy, is perfect in its economy and exactness." F. T. Marsh

+ — N Y Times p32 O 26 '41 900w

"Mr. Newman tells all cleverly and seriously, with a decent respect for adolescent twinges and in good colloquial dialogue."

New Yorker 17:87 O 4 '41 40w

NEWSOME, MRS EFFIE LEE. Gladiola garden; poems of outdoors and indoors for second grade readers; il. by Lois Mailou Jones. 167p $1.50 Associated pub.

811

41-3681

"A collection of 'poems of outdoors and indoors for second grade readers.' . . Whether Mrs Newsome writes of the everyday experiences of a four-year-old or of animal and insect fantasies, her verses are of the type children enjoy saying aloud." Spring'd Republican

Christian Century 58:291 F 26 '41 10w

+ Spring'd Republican p7e My 25 '41 60w

NEWTON, JOSEPH FORT. His cross and ours; the presiding bishop's book for Lent. 157p $1.50 Harper

232.96 Jesus Christ—Passion

41-4089

"In seven studies, or sermons, Dr. Newton discusses the fact and the meaning of suffering, the significance of the cross in the work of Jesus, in human history and in personal experience." Christian Century

"A Lenten book that will be found valid and timely for any season in the year. . . Dr. Newton's careful thinking is not blurred by the devotional spirit which accompanies and enriches it."

+ Christian Century 58:291 F 26 '41 90w

"There was a time when the writings and sermons of Dr. Newton seemed to the reviewer to be of such superior literary excellence that often the ideas were—for him—lost in the enchanting music of the style. But this is emphatically not the case with this remarkable book. . . This study of the Cross has all the eloquence of the author, but his sentences have a vital 'punch' that stabs the soul awake. It is full of quotable phrases with the deep spiritual insight for which the writer is justly noted." W. L. Caswell

+ Churchman 155:17 F 15 '41 350w

NEWTON, JOSEPH FORT. Living up to life. 590p $2.25 Harper

242 Conduct of life

41-23097

Three hundred and sixty-five short essays on such subjects as courage, common sense, compassion, collected from Dr Newton's syndicated newspaper column.

"Interesting and stimulating."

+ Christian Century 58:1444 N 19 '41 20w

"Dr. Newton has a rare magic not only in his writing but in his sound human insight. His gift of polishing rough diamonds of commonplace thoughts and experiences until we wonder at our stupidity in not having seen it for ourselves, makes his writing thought-provoking and interesting. Anybody would be able to read this book and like it, 'every day in the year.'" H. J. Simpson

+ Churchman 156:17 Ja 1 '42 110w

"All have a broad—as well as a brisk—pertinence. In the mind of this 'inspirational' writer there is no comfort of facile withdrawal, no easy optimism. . . These are vigorous thoughts for every day."

+ N Y Times p42 N 9 '41 260w

NICHOLL, LOUISE TOWNSEND. Dawn in snow [and other poems]. ltd autog ed 60p $1.50 Dutton

811

41-17116

A second volume of poems by the author of Water and Light (Book Review Digest, 1939). "There is a mixture in the philosophy of this poet; discovering the myriads of forms as the illusion of the one thing and that life is a straight line, the shortest distance between the point in consciousness and the point of God. It is not to lose one's self while seeking beyond the actuality, or to chase Him down the labyrinth of arches the way Francis Thompson did." (N Y Times)

"Although distinguished by the same deft simplicity as the lyrics in her first book, 'Water and Light,' those in Miss Nicholl's new volume are as a whole less original, less memorable. Many seem motivated by emotion drawn from personal suffering not yet sufficiently detached and objectified. There are a number of religious poems of deep feeling and technical merit; but few of them equal the sure, sensitive observations set forth in her previous poems on Time and Space."

Books p31 O 26 '41 270w

"All Louise Townsend Nicholl gives us is a tenuous book of verse and a musty, unusable philosophy which says that the turning of a knob is as simple as father-and-mother which will reveal the face of God to us. If it were only as simple as all that, then the theologians and their metaphysician friends have produced only a heap of rubbish. Miss Nicholl has skill, but it is unfortunately on a narrow plane." Maurice Swan

— + N Y Times p53 D 7 '41 550w

Spring'd Republican p7e Ja 18 '42 110w

NICHOLS, EGBERT RAY, comp. Western hemisphere defense. (Reference shelf) 398p map $1.25 Wilson, H.W.

355 U.S.—Defenses. U.S.—Foreign relations. American republics—Defenses (W) 41-2253

Selected documents on the military, economic, and political aspects of the Pan-American problems in the light of the present crisis.

Booklist 37:327 Mr 15 '41

Christian Century 58:328 Mr 5 '41 40w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 19:885 Jl '41 10w

Pratt p8 D '41

Wis Lib Bul 37:71 Ap '41

NICHOLS, MRS JEANNETTE (PADDOCK), and RANDALL, JAMES GARFIELD, eds. Democracy in the Middle West, 1840-1940. 117p $1.25 Appleton-Century

977 Mississippi valley. Democracy 41-8993

Five essays, presented at the Mississippi Valley historical association, setting forth studies of the life and institutions of the Middle West. Contents: Foreword, by W. E. Lingelbach; Remarks by the chairman, by J. G. Randall; The advance into the Middle West, by W. O. Lynch; Regionalism and democracy in the Middle West, 1840-1865, by H. C. Hubbart; Contradictory trends in middle western democracy, 1865-1900, by J. P. Nichols; Our own Middle West, 1900-1940, by J. D. Hicks.

"The essays are such a fine combination of scholarship, keen analysis, and good writing that one's only disappointment will be that they are so short." E. M. Kirkpatrick

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:1197 D '41 260w

"Small but valuable volume. The authors are competent authorities who have given much study to the history of the middle west. Their contributions were well planned to treat the movements of the century in this area in historical sequence, and to give a broad picture with due regard to the rich variety of elements and influences which constitute its details." + Christian Century 58:782 Je 11 '41 80w

NICHOLS, MRS MARIE LEONA (HOBBS). Ranald MacDonald, adventurer; woodcuts by William J. C. Klam. 176p maps $3 Caxton printers

B or 92 MacDonald, Ranald. Northwest, Pacific 40-35617

Ranald MacDonald was born in Astoria, Oregon, in 1824. He was the son of a Siwash princess, and a Scottish trader, a post factor of the trading company controlling the country around the mouth of the Columbia river. He was possessed of a wandering spirit, was never content in school, and when sent to work in an Ontario bank he ran away. His travels took him to Australia, Japan, Europe, and back to British Columbia, where he operated a ferry, did some prospecting, and finally in his old age retired to a log cabin near Fort Colville, Washington. Index.

Reviewed by S. H. Holbrook

Books p14 F 16 '41 700w

"Mrs. Nichols' material is good and there is evidence of painstaking research but her pious enthusiasm for her subject makes him dull and two dimensional. It is too bad, as the travels of this tireless wanderer make an interesting footnote on the Pacific north-west." Eleanor Godfrey

— + Canadian Forum 20:293 D '40 50w

NICHOLSON, JANE. Shelter. 242p $2.50 Viking (W) 41-11975

Story of life in London during August and September of 1940, when the aerial bombardment of the city was just beginning to take its toll. The central characters are Louise and Jos Mason, who had been married seven years, and Camma with whom Jos was mildly in love.

"In this story of London bombed, the picture on the whole is sharp, clear, and impressive, but the ephemeral triangle of Joseph Mason, successful business man turned fire warden, his wife, and his neurotic mistress is an unconvincing and incomplete piece of work." R. E. Danielson

+ — Atlantic S '41 190w

Booklist 38:12 S '41

"Miss Nicholson's delightfully unpretentious little novel of domestic life in London today is, in the good sense of the word, ordinary." Iris Barry

+ Books p5 Jl 13 '41 1050w

Reviewed by C. G. Paulding

Commonweal 34:378 Ag 8 '41 450w

Reviewed by A. L. Graham

Library J 66:615 Jl '41 30w

New Repub 105:166 Ag 4 '41 60w

"It reads like a diary or a series of letters, its syncopated style reflecting the horrible freshness of immediate experience, its mood carrying a wealth of love and human understanding." Marianne Hauser

+ N Y Times p10 Jl 13 '41 800w

"I must state in all candor that I find her three major characters dull and slightly unpleasant. I would not care much about their lives and loves set against a background of normal conditions, and therefore I see no reason I should care much about them just because they are involved in a horrible experience. The strain under which they live does not increase their stature or decrease it. They remain footling. But that strain itself, the common darkness into which all are plunged, is naturally absorbing to us who, almost surely, will be living in similar circumstances before we are much older. . . As a warning, flat, plain, unhystrical, it has untold value." Clifton Fadiman

+ — New Yorker 17:69 Jl 12 '41 850w

"The specific human situation in Miss Nicholson's novel is amateurish in conception and in handling; the people have no substance; too much is left out and most of what is put in seems wrong. But the real trouble with the book is hardly her fault. To write about London during a year of bombardment is no task for a beginner." Frances Smyth

Sat R of Lit 24:12 JI 19 '41 450w

"Yes, it may be called propaganda, as any authentic tale of the stupendous trial of the British might be called propaganda. But its truth and sincerity impress one and its pictures of horror, stress, and bravery will be long remembered." M. D.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e JI 13 '41 950w

Time 38:70 JI 14 '41 650w

Reviewed by Robert Littell

Yale R ns 31:xii autumn '41 270w

NIDA, RICHARD HALE, and ADAMS, MRS FAY (GREENE). Man, the nature tamer; from cave man to American citizen. 423p il $1.64 Holt

300 Social sciences. Civilization—Juvenile literature 42-2757

"Man, the Nature Tamer is 'an integration of history, geography, science, invention, and civics.' It is one of the newer type texts that provides for motivation and attempts to build on the daily experiences of the pupils. Attention has been paid to vocabulary level and to simplicity of presentation. The narrative is in double columns; the illustrations are clear and well selected." Social Studies

School & Society 53:744 Je 7 '41 30w

"The book is interesting in its attempt to integrate the social studies with science for junior high school classes, in the motivation provided, and in the excellent illustrations." Theodore Libber

+ Social Educ 5:624 D '41 440w

Social Studies 32:333 N '41 40w

NIEBUHR, HELMUT RICHARD. The meaning of revelation. 196p $2 Macmillan

231.74 Revelation 41-5080

"This is a careful study of the real meaning of divine revelation, which dodges none of the issues. The author begins by admitting the relativity of all our knowledge, but insists that any knowledge of God must begin with faith in Him, and it must be a particular faith, since there is no other kind. It must adopt the confessional, not the apologetic, method in its study of revelation." (Churchman) Index.

"The only adequate response to the yearning for meaning and authority, in the present mood of desperation, is Christian theology. The revelation of God is the concern and content of great theology. On this twofold premise Dr. Niebuhr has written a cogent and compact book which meets the need of the times and worthily represents the scholarship in this country which is alive to its obligation to revitalize religion in the people." A. C. Dieffenbach

+ Books p25 O 5 '41 500w

Reviewed by W. L. Caswell

Churchman 155:13 Mr 15 '41 300w

Reviewed by G. W. Davis

Crozer Q 18:262 JI '41 1000w

"This is one of the most thoughtful books on Christian theology which has appeared in recent years. Subtle in argument and at times difficult in statement, it is penetrating and, in the main, clear. The spirit of the book is one of deep seriousness and humility. The writing is marked by laborious analysis, yet its style often rises to a kind of subdued eloquence." G. F. Thomas

+ J Religion 21:455 O '41 2450w

Reviewed by O. G. Lawson

Library J 66:139 F 1 '41 140w

NIEBUHR, REINHOLD. Christianity and power politics. 226p $2 Scribner

261 Sociology, Christian. Europe—Politics. World war, 1939—Religious aspects 41-1736

For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

"In this volume of occasional essays dealing with varied subjects, religious and political, Dr. Niebuhr reveals himself as a militant antipacifist, and in so far as modern pacifism represents all too often a refusal to face the stark problems of a warring world, there is much to be said in favor of his thesis. . . . While we cannot but admire his forthright courage in condemning numerous wrongs committed in the name of society and especially of religion, we deprecate the religious and ethical defeatism expressed in his allusion to those whom he regards as clinging 'so desperately to the illusion of the goodness of man.'" T. L. Leishman

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Mr 1 '41 550w

Foreign Affairs 19:674 Ap '41

Reviewed by John Knox

J Religion 21:229 Ap '41 450w

"I consider this book a genuine message for the times. It is comforting to know that America has men of Dr. Niebuhr's stature and intellectual depth; and it is a proof of the continuing virility of American Protestantism that such a book could appear now." G. N. Shuster

+ Sat R of Lit 23:17 F 15 '41 400w

NIEBUHR, REINHOLD. The nature and destiny of man. 306p $2.75 Scribner

233 Man, Christianity (W) 41-51676

"This volume contains the first of Niebuhr's two series of Gifford Lectures, delivered at the University of Edinburgh in 1939. It is a study of three views of man and various combinations of these. The classical view is contrasted with the biblical view, and the modern view of man is measured against both of these." Churchman

Booklist 37:381 Ap 15 '41

Bookmark 2:4 My '41

"A bare statement of the thesis gives no idea of the wealth, vigor and profundity of Dr. Niebuhr's thought, and it must ignore the innumerable shrewd applications to the concerns of today, for this book on eternal problems is also a tract for the times. The work needs no indorsement besides the author's name. The best response is to continue the argument. No reader will fail to be impressed, but not a few readers, like myself, may not be fully convinced." Albert Guerard

+ Books p11 Je 22 '41 1650w

"To many who accept wholeheartedly the concept of man as spiritual, the stress laid on the human, philosophical, and psychological aspects of man may well seem too pronounced; still, the study is of real interest, and it is only fair to reserve judgment with regard to its ultimate adequacy until the appearance of the second volume of the lectures, dealing with the destiny of man." T. L. Leishman

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ap 19 '41 600w

"This is the most exciting, thorough, and scholarly work to appear from the pen of America's most stimulating theologian." R. C. Miller

+ Churchman 155:17 Ap 1 '41 340w

Reviewed by G. W. Davis

Crozer Q 18:261 JI '41 700w

"No one can read this book attentively without being conscious of both exceptional power and grievous weakness. To my mind the former carries the greater weight and makes the book a memorable one. The author's power shows itself mainly in the acute, vigorous, and genuinely profound exposition of his own view; his weakness mainly in his treatment of other thinkers, especially those of whom he disapproves." R. L. Calhoun

+ J Religion 21:473 O '41 3450w

NIEBUHR, REINHOLD—Continued

"Dr. Niebuhr clarifies many confusions and introduces a preliminary and indispensable order. One may think, to be sure, that lectures, even Gifford Lectures, are not a very redoubtable weapon against the demonic forces which are now unleashed. But if these lectures are read, they will contribute vitally to an unmasking of the reality of the demon among us. And the first trick of Satan, as André Gide so profoundly remarked, is to make us believe that he does not exist." Denis De Rougemont

+ Nation 152:328 Mr 22 '41 1200w

"These lectures, work of painstaking scholarship and penetrating thought, demand reading by those seriously concerned with morals, sociology and politics." B. I. Bell

+ N Y Times p14 Ap 6 '41 1100w

"With almost incredible learning and with a series of insights as brilliant and as penetrating as any in contemporary philosophy, Professor Niebuhr brings all secular philosophies to judgment before the bar of logic. . . The author requests that the volume be not judged in itself but only in terms of the second volume, which will discuss in detail the Christian view of the nature and destiny of man and consider the relation of Christian doctrines to contemporary theories of salvation. It is as easy to grant this request as it is difficult to communicate the tremendous scope and power of the present work. At the same time, however, it is not unfair to suggest that some inconsistencies remain and that the author, in his criticism of secular philosophies, utilizes a suspicious logical device known as the paradox of double implication." Robert Bierstedt

+ — Sat R of Lit 23:10 Ap 12 '41 700w

Reviewed by Hans Kohn
Survey G 30:301 My '41 210w
Wis Lib Bul 37:133 Jl '41

NIELEN, JOSEF MARIA. The earliest Christian liturgy; tr. by Patrick Cummins. 416p $3 Herder 264.01 Worship. Liturgies. Prayer. Bible.

New Testament—Rites and ceremonies
41-3972

"[A] study of the earliest Christian Liturgy as revealed in the pages of the New Testament. The author discusses the questions: What do we learn from the inspired writers with regard to the origin of our liturgy, its relation to the Jewish and pagan forms of worship? How, where, and when did the primitive Christians pray and sing and prophesy? With what precise ceremony and discipline did they celebrate the Lord's Supper?" Cath World

Cath World 153:636 Ag '41 240w

"It combines erudition with an attractive and often inspiring style, and certainly contains much to bolster the position of those championing the present liturgical revival, especially their emphasis upon the primacy of praise in primitive Christian prayer, and the essentially social character of Christian worship. It should prove a worthy (and more up-to-date, of course) companion to Abbot Cabrol's 'Le Livre de la Prière Antique' ('Liturgical Prayer: Its History and Spirit') which has hitherto stood practically alone in this particular field of liturgical enquiry." W. M. Ducey

+ Commonweal 34:43 My 2 '41 110w

NIEMEYER, GERHART. Law without force; the function of politics in international law. 408p $3.75 Princeton univ. press

341 International law and relations. Political science 41-10101

"In this somewhat enigmatic volume, addressed chiefly to students of international law and international relations, an exiled German scholar tries to explain why the twentieth century world is lawless and to point out the direction of orderly progress. He offers a brief survey of the development of international law, an analysis of its present plight, and an argument in favor of a functional approach to the problem." (Christian Century) Index.

"This is an extremely interesting and an unusually provocative book, in which the author makes a thoroughly unorthodox approach to international law and international organization." C. A. Berdahl

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:777 Ag '41 1300w

Reviewed by C. G. Fenwick

Ann Am Acad 217:206 S '41 1200w

"The layman is likely to be puzzled and impatient with such scholarly theorizing. He might wonder whether traditional international law has been shattered beyond repair. Impressed by the author's lengthy excursions into philosophic argument and his frequent references to the ponderous writings of German professors, he might not share this faith in functionalism. . . Is it of great value? Can it help solve twentieth century problems? If so, how can the principle be applied? This formidable book offers no real answer. The layman is likely to stop with the summary introductory chapter, leaving the body of the book to be read and variously judged by students of international law. They will consider it an honest and provocative work, though repetitious and lacking in clarity." C. L. LaFuze

+ — Christian Century 58:863 Jl 2 '41 650w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:374 Ja '42 30w

"In these days only a philosophically-minded person would attempt to find an audience for a work on the foundations of international law, especially on 'law without force.' Gerhart Niemeyer, lecturer in Politics at Princeton University, is just such a person, and he has made an admirable analysis of the philosophical premises of contemporary international law. His book is recommended especially to anyone interested in the illuminating and directive power of basic philosophies when they are brought to bear on a specific subject-matter such as our present international disorder." Edwin Garland

+ J Philos 38:696 D 4 '41 780w

"We can not praise Dr. Niemeyer too highly for his anatomical exposure of the causes for the failure of international law and the breakdown of international society. We also think his criticisms of traditional conceptions of the law, while not exactly new, equally valuable. Unfortunately, our natural scepticism and acquired cynicism prevent us, in the present state of the world, from taking seriously his constructive proposals in the eighth and ninth chapters of his book." Rubin Gotesky

+ — Living Age 360:289 My '41 1300w

Social Studies 32:288 O '41 30w

Springf'd Republican p6 Ag 2 '41 650w

NIEMOLLER, MARTIN. God is my fuehrer [Eng title: The Gestapo defied]. 294p $2.75 Alliance bk; Philosophical lib, inc, 15 E. 40th st, N.Y. [6s Hodge]

252 Sermons. Church and state in Germany [A41-1744]

"Martin Niemoeller, who sits in prison on Hitler's explicit orders after even a Nazi court has declared him innocent, will undoubtedly be known as one of the heroes and martyrs of this period. Twenty-eight sermons of his, preached just before his incarceration, are recorded in this book. They clearly reveal that he could not be 'innocent' in the eyes of Hitler, for they breathe a religiously motivated and religiously exalted defiance of tyranny." Nation

Booklist 38:151 Ja 1 '42

"These sermons as sermons are not remarkable. They will never be cited as distinguished examples of the homiletic art. But art is insignificant in this place. It is life that we are here concerned with—life tested to the uttermost limit of courage and sacrifice. 'Here is a man,' writes Thomas Mann, in his passionate introduction to this volume, 'who went his way to the cross with full awareness of the terror of the way.' There has been no nobler following of Christ in our time, or in any time. What wonder that Mann confesses, as every sensitive reader must confess, that he has 'read (these sermons) with feelings akin to reverence!' J. H. Holmes

+ Books p11 Ja 11 '42 400w

Christian Century 58:1444 N 19 '41 10w

"Pastor Niemoeller rightly deserves the universal esteem in which he is held, and his words as expressed in these sermons have been confirmed by his actions. His sermons are not learned theological discourses, but of a simple evangelical character, and if they are eloquent, it is an eloquence that is born of the concrete circumstances as he sees them. The translator deserves credit for the way in which she has solved her difficult task. Pastor Niemoeller would probably be the last person to suggest that these sermons ought to be found in every Christian home, yet there is no doubt that they will be a source of inspiration and comfort to anyone who reads them." Ansgar Nelson

+ Commonweal 35:324 Ja 16 '42 300w

"There is a thrilling note of immediacy and urgency in these sermons. . . To read this book with understanding is to know why 'the blood of the martyrs' has been 'the seed of the church' in all generations." Reinhold Niebuhr

+ Nation 153:519 N 22 '41 320w

"Pastor Niemöller's language is simple but extraordinarily powerful. He loves the parables of the New Testament, and his sermons are full of strong and moving elucidations of them. These sermons are not the work of a comprehensive mind. But their language is memorable, their faith clear, and their courage unshakable."

+ New Statesman & Nation 21:493 My 10 '41 170w

Reviewed by J. K. Mozley
Spec 166:232 F 28 '41 700w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 13 '41
480w (Reprinted from the Sunday Times, London)

Reviewed by J. T. Cleland
Springf'd Republican p7e N 30 '41 650w

Reviewed by H. W. Weigert
Survey G 31:38 Ja '42 460w

"The second selection of Niemöller's sermons which has just been published is even more revealing than the first. They do more than make clear the nature of the conflict of religions in the German Empire. They reveal, in their grasp and their sincerity, the inner conflict that confronts mankind. . . Many in England will learn from this book a wholly new understanding of the meaning of religion."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p86 F 22 '41 400w

NILES, BLAIR (RICE) (MRS ROBERT NILES, Jr). East by day. 330p $2.50 Farrar (W) 40-29653

"Fictionalized account of the Amistad case, the episode of the mysterious sailing vessel which put in at Montauk about a century ago manned by a crew of Negro slaves who had overpowered their Spanish masters. With this as a springboard, Mrs. Niles has told a story of an old clipper-ship captain and his granddaughter, who loved the sea." New Yorker

"'East by Day' is distinguished by Miss Niles's particular gift for calling up, in terms that bring them home to the reader, the qualities of distant times and places." Mary Ross

+ Books p2 Ja 19 '41 850w

"Her insatiable interest in complex and hidden human motives, her deep knowledge of strange people and customs and the flame of her creative spirit, make this a very compelling novel. Her prose is engaging, too. Our only reservation is our uncertainty about the way she puts her plot together; technically, we feel disappointed. . . 'East by Day' is an intellectually thrilling story, a tale satisfying to the spirit." Olga Owens

+ Boston Transcript p1 Ja 18 '41 500w

Nation 152:247 Mr 1 '41 90w

"There are some delightful character studies—best of the lot, perhaps, the old whaling skipper, Jared Hazard. The historical background of the story carries a rare kind of effortless conviction. One is conscious of effort only on the side of philosophy. The bare bones of the Amistad story are heavy with meaning. Blair Niles at least does not flatter her reader when she tries to make it mean even more than it does." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p7 Ja 19 '41 900w

"An unpretentious bit of Americana."

New Yorker 16:79 Ja 18 '41 60w

NILES, MRS MARY CUSHING (HOWARD).

Middle management; the job of the junior administrator. 270p $3 Harper

658.31243 Business

41-3073

A study of the problems and achievements of the men in positions in a business organization between the top management and the supervisors and foremen. The work is based on the author's experiences in contact with an insurance company where there are many clerical employees, but it is hoped that the study will also be found useful in businesses employing chiefly non-clerical workers. Index.

"This book merits reading by junior executives. Some of them may be irritated by the commonplace and obvious incorporated to make the book a balanced whole, and by what some may take to be a writing down to them; but there are plenty of acute observations and wise suggestions to serve as a stimulus to constructive thinking." H. S. Person

+ Ann Am Acad 216:206 J1 '41 380w

Booklist 37:321 Mr 15 '41

"The quality of soundness makes the book of wider application than its immediate purpose implies—its doctrine is appropriate for foremen and senior executives, and for the shop as well as for the office. In short, it can be read to advantage by executives of any rank or type. I would prescribe it at least once a year for the junior executive, with extra readings on promotion (or demotion). Senior executives should be required to read Chapter V ('Junior Officer and Superior') at least once every three years, lest they forget." C. I. Barnard

+ Management R 30:191 My '41 500w

NILSSON, MARTIN PERSSON. Greek popular religion. (Am. council of learned societies. Lectures on the hist. of religions; new ser) 166p il $2.50 Columbia univ. press [12s 6d Oxford]

292 Greece—Religion. Mythology, Classical 40-36194

"This is the fullest account to date of the dynamic religion of ancient Greece; and it constitutes a most enlightening contribution to Greek social history. Greek popular religion is in no way to be confused with those high expressions of a religious nature which philologists have extracted from the literary remains of Greece's greatest thinkers. Greek popular religion was the religion of the masses, and one of [the author's] most interesting accomplishments is the tracing of survivals of it down to the present time." (Publisher's note) Index.

NILSSON, M. P.—Continued

Reviewed by W. W. Hyde

Am Hist R 46:371 J1 '41 550w

Am Soc R 6:927 D '41 100w

Christian Century 58:1275 O 15 '41 80w

"In this small volume Professor Nilsson, an eminent Swedish scholar, long recognized as one of the truly great interpreters of Greek religion, has made a real and lasting contribution. . . It is safe to predict that this volume with its thirty-nine excellently chosen illustrations, will not be overlooked by students of the classical past. It will be a pity if it does not find its way into many a ministerial study."

M. S. Enslin

+ Crozer Q 18:68 Ja '41 950w

Reviewed by D. S. Mackay

+ J Philos 38:186 Mr 27 '41 700w

"The presentation is exceptionally vivid—thanks to the author's mastery of the English language and to his effective use of some forty pertinent monuments as illustrations. Many of these items are difficult of access except in this particular volume." H. R. Willoughby

+ J Religion 21:230 Ap '41 180w

"Nilsson has written both accurately and interestingly; his work is valid both for the specialist and the larger audience. . . The book is clearly and coherently planned, and written in a direct and lucid style, without bogus scholarly ornament." David Grene

+ New Repub 104:188 F 10 '41 600w

Times [London] Lit Sup p76 F 15 '41 800w

NITCHIE, ELIZABETH. The Reverend Colonel Finch. 109p il $1.50 Columbia univ. press [7s 6d Oxford]

B or 92 Finch, Robert 40-33650

"Miss Nitchie identifies 'Robert Finch (1783-1830), antiquary,' as described in a very brief notice in the Dictionary of National Biography, with 'the Reverend Colonel Calicot Finch who bored Byron and Hobhouse and amused and disgusted the Shelleys,' and 'who wrote to John Gisborne the letter on the death of Keats which Gisborne sent to Shelley.' . . From previously unexplored diaries, commonplace books, and letters (few by himself, mostly by friends) left by Robert Finch to Oxford University, Miss Nitchie has worked out as much of a biography as befits a person interesting primarily because of associations with his betters." (Mod Philol) Index.

"Miss Nitchie has given one more new and fascinating biographical side-light on the romantic movement in England." R. E. Keighton

+ Crozer Q 18:77 Ja '41 260w

"It was undoubtedly disappointing to find so little about such major expatriates as Byron and Shelley, but it was obviously important that some competent scholar should carefully examine the Finch collection, and Miss Nitchie seems to have performed a huge task with the utmost thoroughness and intelligence and to have gleaned all that is significant." G. L. Marsh

+ Mod Philol 39:219 N '41 750w

NITZE, WILLIAM ALBERT. Arthurian romance and modern poetry and music. 101p pl $1 Univ. of Chicago press [6s Cambridge]

809 Arthur, king of Britain. Literature, Comparative. Music and literature 40-32475

Five lectures on the Arthurian legends. In his foreword the author says "My object was to illustrate in a kaleidoscopic fashion the present by means of the past: to suggest how a great poetic tradition has been built up and survives as an essential part of our Western culture. Poetry is here used in its general sense as opposed to historic fact. Several of the works described are in prose. Likewise, by music I refer not to musical scores but to the use by musicians, especially Wagner, of Arthurian imaginative motifs." Index.

Christian Century 57:1215 O 2 '40 70w

"This is a charming, slight study whose effortless thoughtfulness can only have been made possible by the years Professor Nitze has spent in the scholarship of the Arthurian Legend."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p35 Ja 18 '41 280w

NIXON, JUSTIN WROE. Protestantism's hour of decision. special ed 154p $1.39 Am. Bapt.

284.0973 Protestantism. Church and state in the U.S. Sociology, Christian 40-32975

"Dr. Nixon believes that the Protestant churches will be the better able to measure their responsibility for the preservation of democracy if they realize the part they played in the development of it. He devotes some attention to that theme. But though a confident democrat, he is not a complacent one. He discusses at length, and realistically, the economic crisis, the struggle for international order, and the need of a spiritual revival. Particularly worth reading and pondering is his discussion of the issue and the common ground between the Christian pacifist and the Christian patriot." (Christian Century) References at ends of chapters. Questions for discussion.

"At a time when many Christians, even many Protestants, are so painfully aware of the imperfect functioning of our democratic institutions that they cannot declare their allegiance to the democratic principle without reservations and disclaimers, it is refreshing to hear the confident voice of an unintimidated defender of democracy."

+ Christian Century 58:89 Ja 15 '41 240w

"If there are preachers whose message is irrelevant to the times (and there are!), this vigorous 'Tract for the Times' ought to wake them from their dreams (if they can be got to read it)." Gordon Potrat

+ Crozer Q 18:181 Ap '41 300w

Foreign Affairs 19:674 Ap '41 10w

NIXON, LILY LEE. James Burd, frontier defender, 1726-1793. (Pennsylvania lives) 198p $2 Univ. of Pa. press

B or 92 Burd, James. Pennsylvania—History 41-19933

"In the Pennsylvania Lives Series, the fourth volume now makes the general public acquainted with the career of a Scottish-born Pennsylvania patriot, who was both pioneer and soldier in the mountain reaches of what was later to be the 'Keystone State.' James Burd's activities were, however, even more varied than those words suggest. He was a pioneer who laid military roads through the wilderness, a soldier who built forts, a settler who influenced the Indians both by prowess and in conference. And his life was full of ups and downs which may be studied with piquant interest in the after-knowledge of history." (N Y Times) Bibliographical note. Index.

N Y Times p16 O 5 '41 490w

Social Studies 32:378 D '41 10w

"Owing to Burd's unusually lengthy and active career as a frontiersman, this volume is a worth while contribution to the history of western Pennsylvania, and one which is not hard to read." H. P. B.

+ Social Studies 33:39 Ja '42 170w

NIXON, ROBERT BRIGHTON, 1902-. Corner druggist. 291p $2.50 Prentice-Hall

B or 92 Nixon, Robert Brighton, 1875-1938. Pharmacists (W) 41-8186

Biography of the author's father, a pharmacist of the old-fashioned kind. Hardly a practical man, Mr Nixon moved from one store to another, sometimes in small towns, again in large cities, but everywhere he is pictured as the friend and helper of the diseased and discouraged who would not look to other sources of help.

"'Corner Druggist' is a pleasantly discursive book with some quaint bits of information about the history of pharmacy, comic and tragic anecdotes from the professional life of a druggist, the picture of a lovable, though doubtless sometimes trying, rugged individualist and his family and the wider backdrop of a composite picture of neighborhood life in small towns. The faith and curiosity and kindness of father dominate the book." Mary Ross

+ Books p4 Ap 27 '41 700w

"The sordid side of corner drugstore business in bad neighborhoods is uppermost. Not an important book and recommended for limited purchase only." Jacqueline Overton
Library J 66:356 Ap 15 '41 90w

"The old-fashioned corner druggist whose store was redolent of freshground drugs and the tinctures and extracts which he was forever preparing has virtually passed out of American life. . . For endless other reasons it was a happy thought that led a man who knew him well to write his story into a book. In 'Corner Druggist,' which is a portrait of his father's life and times, Robert B. Nixon Jr. has done this. . . It takes added zest as a biography from the qualities which set the elder Nixon apart among corner druggists, heightening his interests as a vital character while dooming him to a useless struggle for success." R. G. Doyle

+ N Y Times p3 Ap 20 '41 1300w

Sat R of Lit 24:20 Je 21 '41 150w

"The book is packed with incidents which will pull the heart strings, hold interest, and give one a good laugh in these days when laughter is needed." R. N. Rogers

+ Social Studies 32:329 N '41 130w

Reviewed by Leon Whipple
Survey G 30:439 Ag '41 300w
Wis Lib Bul 37:115 Je '41

NIZER, LOUIS. Thinking on your feet; adventures in speaking; with an introd. by Bruce Barton. 312p $2.50 Liveright
808.5 Public speaking 40-34969

A successful attorney and orator outlines the principles which he has used as toastmaster. He devotes part of the book to sample introductions of well-known people, and comments on their addresses. The rest of the book contains short speeches on a variety of contemporary topics, with explanations of the techniques used. Index.

Booklist 37:171 Ja 1 '41

Books p11 Jl 20 '41 130w

"Sharply etched characterizations of the great and near great serve as illustrations for the author's technique. The work is intimate in nature and is calculated to make the pursuit of learning in this fascinating field sustained and zestful." L. L. Martinson

+ Boston Transcript p2 F 8 '41 50w

Wis Lib Bul 37:32 F '41

NOLAN, JEANNETTE (COVERT) (MRS VAL NOLAN). James Whitcomb Riley, Hoosier poet; il. by Robert S. Robison. 265p $2.50 Messner

B or 92 Riley, James Whitcomb—Juvenile literature (W) 41-19422

An intimate account of the life of the Hoosier poet, written by a native of Indiana, and intended for readers from ten to fourteen. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 38:135 D 15 '41

"The pride taken in Riley by the people of his own state, the affection outlasting his life and seeming to strengthen with the years, characterize this life of him for children, for which one may confidently predict long-lasting popularity." M. L. Becker

+ Books p10 N 2 '41 120w

"Jeannette Covert Nolan herself a native of Indiana, writes with Hoosier pride of a Hoosier poet about whose life very little has hitherto been published. Miss Nolan has a facile pen and brings to life a gracious and charming personality in her pages." E. V. Wyatt

+ Cath World 154:379 D '41 40w

"The style at times seems slightly detached, but on the whole the picture painted is a warm and human one. . . While not a first purchase for small libraries, many of medium size will want to add it to the growing amount of material on American men of letters. May be read aloud and shared with the family." E. A. Groves

+ Library J 66:952 N 1 '41 150w

NOLAN, JEANNETTE (COVERT) (MRS VAL NOLAN). Profile in guilt. 282p $2 Funk, W. 41-3122

Detective story.

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 F 8 '41 70w

"The plot is cleverly worked out, but some of the characters do not quite come alive." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p23 F 9 '41 220w

"Quietly convincing yarn of rattling family skeletons told with much dramatic impact. Above average."

+ Sat R of Lit 23:18 F 15 '41 50w

NOLAN, JEANNETTE (COVERT) (MRS VAL NOLAN). The story of Clara Barton of the Red cross; il. by W. C. Nims. 281p $2.50 Messner

B or 92 Barton, Clara Harlowe. Red cross. U.S. American national Red cross (W) 41-51705

Slightly fictionized biography for young people. The story is completely covered from her birth day, December 25th, 1821, thru her childhood and youth to the great days of service on the field of battle during the Civil war, and the work of establishing the American Red cross in the post-War years, to the quieter days of old age with death not coming until 1912. Bibliography.

Booklist 37:412 My 1 '41

"Comparing this with Clara Barton by Mildred Pace [Book Review Digest, My '41] I find that although the Pace book gives all the essential details of Miss Barton's life in a definite and dramatic manner and can be read by younger children, it lacks the charm of the Nolan book, does not give as intimate a portrayal of Miss Barton, nor as clear a picture of the times in which she lived. Though the make-up of the Nolan book is preferable, the illustrations by Robert Hall in the Pace book are better than those by W. C. Nims in the present volume. Large libraries should buy both books; if only one is purchased, the book by Nolan is recommended." Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 66:403 My 1 '41 210w

"Mrs. Nolan is an adept at the treatment of biography which combines facts with interpretation and the pliant, easy construction of fiction, and if her book lacks something of the sharp, dramatic thrust which is one of the distinctive qualities of Mrs. Pace's study, hers is a warmly human and vital account of a great life." E. L. Buel

+ N Y Times p9 Ag 3 '41 220w

Wis Lib Bul 37:161 O '41

NOLEN, MRS ELEANOR WEAKLEY. The cowhide trunk; pictures by Decie Merwin. 87p $1.50 Oxford

41-5302

The cowhide trunk was an important part of Father's yearly trips to Cincinnati, in this story of pre-Civil war Ohio. Nancy accompanies Father on one such trip and has a frightening experience with a slave chaser; sees McGuffey readers for the first time; meets Johnny Applesseed; and helps Father choose the presents for the family which go into the trunk. For young readers.

Booklist 37:392 Ap 15 '41

"A delightful story, with special significance for Ohio children, but of interest to all ten-year-old girls who like an old-fashioned flavor in their reading. Delicate drawings in black and white by Decie Merwin are just right. Good format for libraries." Marian Herr

+ Library J 66:223 Mr 1 '41 210w

"Though the peak of excitement for which one looks is never quite reached, this is a pleasant and amusing story for children of the middle years, as crammed with details of period and region as a family album, and based on real events." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p12 Ap 13 '41 240w

New Yorker 17:88 My 24 '41 40w

NORCROSS, CARL, and QUINN, JAMES D. Aviation mechanic. (Whittlesey house publication) 563p il $3.50; text ed $3 McGraw

629.134 Airplanes (W) 41-2485

"A complete and up-to-date book written especially for young men about to enter the field of aviation mechanics. The book is divided into three parts: (I) General introduction; (II) Construction; and (III) Maintenance. Student pilots and instructors will find this work invaluable in their civilian pilot training program." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Booklist 37:354 Ap 1 '41

N Y New Tech Bks 26:20 Ap '41

NORDHOFF, CHARLES BERNARD, and HALL, JAMES NORMAN. Botany Bay. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 374p $2.50 Little

(W) 41-22071

A story of the penal settlement at Botany Bay in Australia. The story is told in the first person by Hugh Tallant, Maryland born but a fighter on the king's side in the American revolution. Finding himself in reduced circumstances in England after the war, he joins forces with a highwayman, is caught, convicted and sentenced to deportation for life.

Booklist 38:96 N 15 '41

"That it has been possible to construct on this ugly framework a worthy novel of health and cheer is a testimonial to the best of craftsmanship and the truest of imagination... Everything, I believe, could be found to have an authentic parallel. Yet, first and last the book is a work of fiction, is properly ballasted and stowed with a love story and plenty of dramatic action, and does not overload its stability with too much deadweight historical cargo in the lower hold." Lincoln Colcord

+ Books p1 N 9 '41 1450w

"While this drama of life has its depressing pages, romance triumphs in the end. A lesser tale than Mutiny on the Bounty, but a worthy addition to the fiction section." H. A. Wooster

+ Library J 66:950 N 1 '41 70w

New Repub 105:710 N 24 '41 50w

"For a critical appraisal, I think it is sufficient to say that the authors of 'Mutiny on the Bounty' have repeated." F. T. Marsh

+ N Y Times p4 N 9 '41 1100w

New Yorker 17:95 N 8 '41 30w

"This new tale of the far places of the Pacific is by no means up to the 'Bounty' books, perhaps because no such wealth of contemporary and authoritative detail was obtainable as is found in Sir John Barrow's 'The Mutiny and Piratical Seizure of H. M. S. Bounty,' and certainly because without a good, sturdy, narrative invention, there is not so much drama implicit in the situation as there was in the Bounty affair." Phil Stong

Sat R of Lit 24:10 N 15 '41 600w

Time 39:77 Ja 19 '42 1350w

Wis Lib Bul 37:202 D '41

NORLIN, GEORGE. Things in the saddle; selected essays and addresses. 234p $2.50 Harvard univ. press

814

40-35058

A volume of addresses and essays by the president of the University of Colorado. Contents: American democracy: an interpretation for schools; The college teacher; Things that should go without saying; Athletics in ancient Greece and modern America; An old diabolism on our modern stage; The prison of the present; A meaning of life; Understanding America; Hitlerism: why and whither; Where is the way; I am the way; Prometheus up-to-date; A fighting faith; John Bright; Twenty centuries of Virgil; "That old man eloquent."

Am Hist R 46:965 Jl '41 60w

"A book of wisdom and charm." R. H. Phelps

+ Boston Transcript p3 F 15 '41 160w

"President George Norlin of the University of Colorado was Theodore Roosevelt Professor at the University of Berlin for the academic year 1932-33. On November 5, 1932, he delivered his inaugural address in Berlin on 'Understanding America.' This lecture, forming part of the present volume of essays, is worth rereading at this time." Hans Kohn

+ Nation 151:610 D 14 '40 360w

NORLING, MRS JO. Pogo's house; the story of lumber [il. by Ernest Norling]. 43p $1 Holt

674 Lumber—Juvenile literature

(W) 41-11239

John wanted some boards to build a house for his dog Pogo. The carpenter told him that boards grew in the wood, so John went to find them. There he learned the whole process of lumbering from beginning to end. Illustrations show the process step by step.

Booklist 38:99 N 15 '41

Wis Lib Bul 37:204 D '41

NORRIS, KATHLEEN (THOMPSON) (MRS CHARLES GILMAN NORRIS). These I like best. 732p $2.50 Doubleday

41-2437

Omnibus volume containing Kathleen Norris' favorites from her own work. Contents: Little Ships; Barberry Bush; Mother; Rising water, from Poor, Dear Margaret Kirby; The Kelly kid, from The Callahans and the Murphys; Grand Central pickup, from Baker's Dozen; Sinners, from Baker's Dozen; Masterpiece, from Baker's Dozen; Beauty in letters, from Baker's Dozen.

"730 finely printed pages of Mrs. Norris' finely executed romances. That should go a long way towards satisfying even the most avid readers of our highest paid magazine writer!" M. P. Johnson

+ Boston Transcript p1 Mr 8 '41 170w

Reviewed by E. L. Tinker

N Y Times p33 Mr 23 '41 80w

NORRIS, KATHLEEN (THOMPSON) (MRS CHARLES GILMAN NORRIS). The Venables. 462p $2.50 Doubleday

(W) 41-13941

Family chronicle, scene in San Francisco in the years just before and after the earthquake. It is the story of Willie and Paul Venables, and their many children, and of their second daughter, Flo, who proves to be the dependable one of the family after Paul's death has left them poverty-stricken.

Booklist 38:96 N 15 '41

"That 'The Venables' will be welcomed by Mrs. Norris's public with prompt and approving attention their is no scintilla of doubt." Lisle Bell

Books p16 Ag 24 '41 300w

"We cannot recommend the book." B. L. Conway

— Cath World 154:505 Ja '42 220w

"The natural inference would be that Mrs. Norris' world is not realistic, but it happens that this particular novel does contain some elements of realism. The people are sufficiently like ordinary folk, with ordinary domestic problems. The style is always easy, lively, and persuasive, and the purpose is clear, to vindicate the value of the family as a social unit. Mrs. Norris is a tireless defender of the solidarity of the home."

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 N 1 '41 400w

Reviewed by L. M. Field

N Y Times p18 Ag 24 '41 800w

"The Venables,' is one of the better books Kathleen Norris has written—and she has over 60 to her credit." G. F. P.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 24 '41 390w

NORTH, JESSICA NELSON (MRS R. I. MACDONALD). Morning in the land. 408p $2.50 Greystone

41-3334

Wisconsin in the middle 1800s from about 1840 to 1861 is the locale. It begins when a family of English immigrants lands in the village of Milwaukee, and ends with the young son of the family departing for the Civil war. Between those years it pictures the transformation of an American frontier, with its immigrants from different countries, into a part of the United States.

"Really good in its minor incidents and details, this novel is disappointing in structure; in what it means—or fails to mean—as a whole." E. L. Mann

+ — Books p12 F 23 '41 360w

New Repub 104:158 F 3 '41 40w

"This excellent novel reminds us that New York City is not our only melting pot. Jessica North handles the Norwegians, Indians, British, and other folk with the ease of a trained ethnologist, and reproduces the minutiae of everyday life with an assurance and accuracy that denote extensive and loving research. With an evident distaste for the melodramatic and spectacular the novelist may sometimes restrain her narrative unduly, but the book is never dull." R. A. Cordell

+ Sat R of Lit 23:11 F 15 '41 340w

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 9 '41 190w

Wis Lib Bul 37:56 Mr '41

NORTHCOTT, REGINALD JAMES. Pat McCormick: a man's life. 116p il $1.25 (3s 6d) Longmans

B or 92 McCormick, William Patrick Glyn 42-2995

"A lively life of Pat McCormick of St. Martin's-in-the-Fields. . . McCormick had had a rich and varied experience before going to St.

Martin's, where he became the associate and then the successor of Dick Sheppard." Christian Century

Christian Century 58:1243 O 8 '41 30w

Times [London] Lit Sup p356 J1 26 '41 330w

NORTON, WILLIAM JOSEPH. Bishop Butler: moralist and divine. 336p $3.75 Rutgers univ. 171.1 Butler, Joseph, bp.

40-14103

"Mr. Norton's book is all exposition. It correlates carefully and laboriously, in systematic form, everything that Butler said on any one of the topics he dealt with." J Philos

"Students of the history of eighteenth century thought, or of the interplay of Lockianism and deism with orthodoxy or of Anglicanism on the eve of the Methodist and evangelical movements, will find Mr. Norton's work well worth careful study."

+ Christian Century 57:1084 S 4 '40 180w

"Mr Norton's book is well done. For myself, I would rather read the Fifteen Sermons direct. . . When I turn to Mr. Norton's pages, I do not find he helps me, though he brings together more passages than I had remembered from the texts. I think Mr. Norton has missed a chance for a really illuminating critical analysis." H. T. C.

J Philos 38:50 Ja 16 '41 600w

"The distinctive feature of this exposition of Butler's ethics is that it takes exception to the classical interpretations given by Sidgwick and Broad of Butler's theory of conscience. . . It is unfortunate that chapter xii, the crucial one for the conclusive support of this view, is after the first two pages totally lacking in documentation; but the general drift of the argument is clear and the weight of the general evidence supports this interpretation. The first 122 pages of the book thus contain its most valuable contribution to our knowledge of Butler. The remainder of the volume seeks to elucidate metaphysical and social aspects of Butler's thought in order to show how integrally they are related to his ethical theory. The book will be indispensable for the student of Butler, of deism, and of the eighteenth century." E. E. Aubrey

+ — J Religion 21:214 Ap '41 750w

NORWOOD, HAYDEN. Death down east. 256p $2 Phoenix

41-22776

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p10 D 28 '41 150w

"The author has told the story simply, as befits the setting, and he has made a good job of it." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p7 D 28 '41 140w

NOTKIN, LOUIS M., ed. Quotable Bible; selected passages, for consecutive reading, from the King James version. 736p $3 Samuel Curl, inc, 70 5th av, N.Y.

220 Bible. Whole—Selections

"This is the King James text, but repetitious matter has been omitted by the editor. Each verse appears as a separate paragraph, with the number printed at the end instead of the beginning of the verse, and at the right hand side of the page. The type face is large and the arrangement makes for an open and inviting page, quite in contrast to the conventional Bible with its crowded and forbidding typography." Churchman

"Mr. Notkin has prefaced each book with a brief introduction, and interspersed the text with occasional captions. Both are regrettably superficial. This is no accident; the traditional version, broken into haphazard verses, as in the King James edition, does not invite coherent reading of the text; indeed, it hardly permits it; and few indeed of those who cling to it get more than an occasional chance glimpse of what it is about. . . It is only fair to Mr. Notkin to say that his Bible is not meant for continuous reading but for occasional quotation, and for such use his handsome, open page with its proverblike sentences and clauses will be welcomed by many who still use the Bible chiefly in that way." E. J. Goodspeed

NOTKIN, L. M.—Continued

+ — Books p4 Ja 25 '42 650w

Christian Century 58:1412 N 12 '41 80w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 17 '42 220w

Reviewed by James van Zant

Churchman 155:18 N 15 '41 90w

NOTTINGHAM, ELIZABETH KRISTINE.

Methodism and the frontier; Indiana proving ground. 229p $2.50 Columbia univ. press

287 Methodist church (U.S.) Methodist church in Indiana 41-19465

History of the rise of Methodism in Indiana in pioneer days. The first half of the book is devoted to a study of Methodism in southeastern Indiana as seen thru the eyes of Allen Wiley, who wrote a series of articles on the subject, based upon his own experiences. The latter part of the book deals with basic Methodist characteristics, and contrasts English and American revivalism. Bibliography. Index.

"It is my opinion that Miss Nottingham has written one of the most enlightening books on American Methodism that have appeared in many a day, but the pity is, I fear, few Methodist will ever hear of it, let alone read it." W. W. Sweet

+ Christian Century 58:1378 N 5 '41 600w

"Methodism and the Frontier is one of the most interesting and instructive books on the history of American Christianity which has appeared in many years. Readers will enjoy the many anecdotes concerning Peter Cartwright, Allen Wiley, and James B. Finley—and especially those which tell the story of the rivalries, not always of good report, carried on between the protagonists of the Methodists and Baptists." R. E. E. Harkness

+ Crozer Q 19:77 Ja '42 600w

"The book pictures frontier life with detailed vividness, its crude living conditions, its great camp-meetings with all their absurdities and also their heart-searchings, its sectarian rivalries, its constant fears of danger from Indians or earthquakes or other perils in the forests, its thrilling or humorous anecdotes from the lives of such pioneers as Allen Wiley, Peter Cartwright, James Finley and others. Some of the hymns the author quotes as popular on the frontier are almost unbelievably bizarre." C. F. Price

+ Springfield Republican p6 D 20 '41 380w

NOYES, ALFRED. If judgment comes; a poem; with drawings by John Alan Maxwell. 46p $1.50 Stokes

821 Hitler, Adolf—Poetry 41-8496

Denunciation of Hitler and the chaos he has wrought, written in blank verse. The indictment includes the failures of England, as well, and the degeneracy of the intellectual thinkers in the years before the war, and concludes with a ray of light for a world which must beat the arch enemy.

Booklist 37:643 Jl 15 '41

"I might as well say at once quite plainly that I think this a bad poem. It grieves me to say it for Mr. Noyes's lyric ballads are excellent of their kind, and I detest Hitler, the subject of his poem, quite as heartily as Mr. Noyes does. All the same If Judgment Comes must be set down as a failure. Its language is bombastic at one moment and flat at the next. . . I wish I could praise this latest production of an author who has done much good work, and will no doubt do more. But truth must be served. It is not literature and it is not even good propaganda." Theodore Maynard

— Cath World 153:501 Jl '41 380w
Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 12 '41 250w

"In all the rush and roar of anti-Hitler propaganda, this poem alone sets a rude finger on the actual sore spot; the abandonment of God by the modern world. . . Mr. Noyes' work has always been impressive, not for the beauty of isolated lines or images, but in its total effect. 'The Mermaid Tavern,' 'Drake' and other of his long poems have a splendor of unity that is hard to define or indicate. So with this poem it is blank verse, direct, unsubtle, conventional. There are no precious tricks to win the applause of a coterie, but rather intensely felt and eloquent rhetoric addressed to the heart and the reason of the world." J. G. E. Hopkins

+ Commonweal 34:235 Je 27 '41 330w

"Serious, provocative. Recommended for discerning readers." E. H. Crowell

+ Library J 66:462 My 15 '41 30w

NOYES, ALFRED. Shadows on the down, and other poems. 110p $2.50 Stokes

821

41-21990

The first collection of poems published by Mr Noyes in sixteen years. The subjects include the present war, childhood, and the English countryside.

"The poems are sentimental; but this is a time when sentiment is strong in most of us." Elizabeth Drew

+ Atlantic D '41 240w

Booklist 38:175 Ja 15 '42

"This new collection does not represent brilliant performance, but it does manifest integrity of craftsmanship and of thought, which have come to be recognized as characteristic of Mr. Noyes. For poetic quality he does, taking his previous work into consideration, hold his own with his contemporaries. He has vision, and the piece entitled 'Escape' is proof of this." Pearl Strachan

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 N 22 '41 380w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 D '41

Reviewed by E. S. Brown

Library J 66:949 N 1 '41 80w

"His philosophy touches even the miscellaneous poems in this collection and gives them a quiet serenity that was not explicit in his early work. His skill in using varied metrical forms, from the ballad to the ballade, is still apparent, but some of the fire and variety of imagery of the early work are less apparent. But a poet, in this day, who is a craftsman with a philosophy deserves a large audience." W. A. S. Dollard

+ — NY Times p5 D 14 '41 300w

NOYES, WILLIAM ALBERT, and LEIGHTON, PHILIP ALBERT. Photochemistry of gases. (Am. chemical soc. Monograph ser) 475p il $10 Reinhold

541.35 Photochemistry. Gases—Analysis

41-15584

"This volume presents a review of photochemical reactions in the gas phase. After an introductory chapter of definitions and laws, there are chapters on experimental technique, spectroscopy, and photochemical kinetics and the determination of mechanism. Approximately one-half of the book's pages deal with photochemical reactions following absorption by atoms or molecules. Extensive appendices summarize reactions." Chem & Met Eng

Chem & Met Eng 48:179 S '41 60w

"With proper handling it should be possible to give an interesting course based on this volume." G. K. Rollefson

+ News Edition 19:1216 N 10 '41 400w

NUTCHUK, pseud. See Oliver, S.

NUTT, HOWARD. Special laughter; poems, with an introd. by Richard Wright. 59p $1
Press of James A. Decker

811

41-2391

A first book of poems by a young Illinois poet.

"Remarkably fine." Ruth Lechlitner

+ Books p12 F 2 '41 440w

"Richard Wright, in a preface to this oddly pungent little book, says we must not make the error of thinking that Howard Nutt's laughter is merely bitter; he says Nutt's poems foster fellowship, the fellowship that breeds a special and knowing laughter. It still seems to this reader a rather bitter laughter." John Holmes

Boston Transcript p9 Ap 7 '41 210w

"Mr. Howard Nutt's 'Special Laughter' is effortlessly contemporary, naughty, full of glee, but there is more to it than that. Mr. Nutt is a swift and natural phrase-maker, with a relish for words and rhythms." Conrad Aiken
+ New Repub 104:670 My 12 '41 170w

"Howard Nutt is one of the first poets of originality and promise to be introduced at the beginning of an uncertain and ominous decade. Of those who may endure the hazards of the next several years, Mr. Nutt's chances seem to be among the best, for his resources are those by which survival, if at all, is to be achieved." Willard Maas
+ Poetry 58:162 Je '41 480w

NUTT, ROBERT H. How to develop a good memory for names, faces, and facts. 248p il $1.96 Simon & Schuster

154.1 Memory

(W) 41-4437

The first part of this book is devoted to explaining a method by which to remember facts. This part is headed, The mental filing system, and deals chiefly with associational words. Part two: How to remember names and faces, is illustrated with photographs of real people and explains methods of recalling names when confronted by the faces.

Booklist 37:431 My 15 '41

Management R 30:116 Mr '41 30w

"Before a half dozen chapters are read, Mr Nutt's system works with remarkable ease. His instruction offers an adventure in pleasurable reading as well as beneficial instruction. For more than 20 years Mr Nutt has taught his system to the personnel of outstanding American industries."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e My 4 '41 90w

NYE, NELSON CORAL. Pistols for hire. 197p
$2 Macmillan

Bonney, William H.—Fiction 41-16063

"A tale of the Lincoln County war and the West's most desperate outlaw, (Billy the Kid) Bonney." Subtitle

Booklist 38:160 Ja 1 '42

"Fast and furious, crammed with quick triggers, pounding hooves, palpitating hearts and even a house afire. Okay." Will Cuppy
+ Books p17 O 12 '41 70w

Christian Century 58:1146 S 17 '41 120w

"The tale is salty and snappy. Mr. Nye has steeped himself in the lore of the place and time, and his writing has an authentic ring. The historical characters are life-like enough, and that dirty little killer Billy the Kid is painted in his true colors." G. W. Harris
+ N Y Times p40 N 9 '41 210w

"A good old-fashioned Western, with plenty of shooting, and at the same time a first-class debunking job. . . . Although the author claims his story is fiction, you are likely to find yourself believing every word of it."

+ New Yorker 17:77 S 27 '41 50w

"The movement of the book is so swift that the reader may at times become confused. The picturesque and profane language of the West runs through the book like a flood."
Springf'd Republican p7e S 21 '41 180w

NYLAND, GENTRY. Mr South burned his mouth. 272p $2 Morrow

Detective story.

40-35321

"Mark our words, Mr. Nyland may develop into a whiz if he'll stop copying the mugs and give his own stuff a chance. He appears to have what it takes for grown-up authorship." Will Cuppy

+ — Books p10 Ja 5 '41 160w

"This is a very fast-moving, highly exciting story with a somewhat transparent plot. Characters you'll want to meet again." Marian Wiggin

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 4 '41 40w

"The moral of the piece seems to be that if Joey had remained sober there might not have been any murders. But in that case there would have been no story, so there you are." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p16 Ja 5 '41 200w

"First half of yarn is just another toughie. Story crisps in final section and uncorks some startling surprises and stirring action. Good."
+ — Sat R of Lit 23:19 Ja 4 '41 50w

O

O. HENRY MEMORIAL AWARD. Prize stories of 1941; sel. and ed. by Herschel Brickell. 330p $2.50 Doubleday

(21-9372)

Contents: Defeat, by Kay Boyle; A worn path, by Eudora Welty; Eighteenth summer, by H. S. Abbott; The visit, by Andy Logan; Hello, Tib, by Conrad Aiken; A bottle of milk for mother, by Nelson Algren; Retreat, by Sally Benson; I'm going to Asia, by John Cheever; Hook, by W. V. T. Clark; Seven boys take a hill, by D. C. DeJong; The old people, by William Faulkner; The snow goose, by Paul Gallico; Those are as brothers, by Nancy Hale; I'd give it all up for Tahiti, by Paul Kunsasz; Afternoon in the jungle, by Albert Maltz; Caput Mortuum, by Edita Morris; My friend Flicka, by Mary O'Hara; The conqueror, by Vincent Sheean; The proud walkers, by James Still; My pigeon pair, by Dorothy Thomas.

Booklist 38:114 D 1 '41

"Herschel Brickell, our newly appointed cultural envoy to South America, has performed admirably his first job of editing the annual story collection that goes under the name of the O. Henry Memorial Award. In doing so, he had a high standard to maintain because this collection, since it was first established in 1919, has always been one of the best in its field. . . . Of the volume as a whole it may be observed that none of the writers represented has tried to dodge reality. The war stories are distinguished by their humanity rather than by any political message. If there is such a message, it arises naturally from the material of life itself and is not arbitrarily tacked on. The writers have kept to their business of transcribing the world about them faithfully and no matter what their personal views may be, they have not been flagrantly partisan in their fiction." Milton Hindus

O. HENRY MEMORIAL AWARD—Continued
+ Books p12 N 23 '41 650w

Reviewed by Ruth Byrns
Commonweal 35:300 Ja 9 '42 150w
New Repub 105:710 N 24 '41 120w

"Stories that are serious in their intention, workmanlike in construction, and very pleasant to read. It is difficult to point to any one story here that is likely to be long remembered, but the immediate impact of many of the tales is fairly strong. One is impressed less by the stories themselves than by the very apparent potentialities of some of the writers." Robert Van Gelder

+ N Y Times p7 N 23 '41 440w

"A much-better-than-average lot."

+ New Yorker 17:110 N 15 '41 100w

"Expertness is the single quality shared by all the twenty stories assembled in this year's O. Henry Memorial Award collection. The blended impression this volume makes is not 'vitality' or 'discovery' or 'struggle to say something' or 'rebellion' but simply technical excellence." Gorham Munson

+ Sat R of Lit 24:9 N 22 '41 700w

"No review can cover all these stories; nor should it, but the book as a collection is excellent. It'll solve the difficulties of many Christmas book-givers for it reaches all tastes." Lee Varley

+ Spring'd Republican p7e N 30 '41 550w

O'BRIEN, EDWARD JOSEPH HARRINGTON, ed. The best short stories, 1941; and the Yearbook of the American short story. 407p $2.75 Houghton

Contents: Shadow of a girl, by E. B. Ashten; All around the town, by S. V. Benét; Handy, by Erskine Caldwell; Big Jules, by Morley Callaghan; The net, by R. M. Coates; Mamma is a lady, by D. C. DeJong; To the least, by Henry Exall; A nun no more, by John Fante; Gold is not always, by William Faulkner; 'Color trouble,' by Harold Garfunkel; The magic wire, by Felicia Glizycka; Smile for the man, dear, by Justin Herman; The life of the mind, by Weldon Kees; The white bull, by Mary King; Some people are just plumb crazy, by Arthur Kober; Scorn and comfort, by Christopher La Farge; The system was doomed, by Meyer Levin; Don't get me wrong, by Roderick Lull; Sunday morning on Twentieth street, by Albert Maltz; Ill-winds from the wide world, by Peter Neagoe; The three swimmers and the educated grocer, by William Saroyan; Triumph of justice, by Irwin Shaw; The butcher, by Wilma Shore; Goin' to town, by Wallace Stegner; Love, by Jesse Stuart; The psychologist, by Benedict Tielen; Houdini, by Jerome Weidman; Strip-tease, by George Weller; Almos' a man, by Richard Wright.

Booklist 37:491 Je 15 '41

"Edward O'Brien's last collection may contain few stories that are memorable, but its level both of craftsmanship and substance is as high as any to which he gave his imprimatur. It is, like each of his previous volumes, a concentrated introduction to contemporary American fiction in miniature." Milton Rugoff

+ Books p6 Je 15 '41 600w

Christian Science Monitor p10 Jl 19 '41 300w

"The present volume, like the others, will engage any intelligent reader's attention; if he takes his fiction seriously, or as a mirror of changing taste, he will regret the apparent inevitability of the 'dark brown taste' characteristic of too many of the modern stories." M. L. Eglinton

+ Churchman 155:19 Jl 1 '41 100w

Reviewed by F. X. Connolly

Commonweal 34:330 Jl 25 '41 450

New Repub 105:166 Ag 4 '41 70w

"This final volume under Mr. O'Brien's editorship is one of the finest. The word 'best' in the annual's title usually has been irritating because the stories were all too often amorphous, imitative, draped in dullness. It was as though an ambition to write as an artist was enough to be awarded with a 'best.' It seems, reading this volume, that perhaps at least part of such criticism had no better foundation than that Mr. O'Brien's editorial sense was to an extreme far-sighted. Because many of the writers to whom he gave most encouragement when their stories were bad are now coming through." Robert Van Gelder

+ N Y Times p7 Je 22 '41 600w

"The whole book is more than ordinarily readable and interesting."

+ New Yorker 17:78 Je 21 '41 80w

Spring'd Republican p7e Je 15 '41 480w

Time 37:88 Je 30 '41 240w

Wis Lib Bul 37:156 O '41

O'BRIEN, KATE. The land of spices. 318p $2.50 Doubleday [8s 6d Heinemann]

(W) 41-10682

The scene is an Irish convent, a branch of a French order for the training of young ladies. The Mother Superior, an English woman brought up in Brussels, reviews the course of her life from childhood to the present, in a series of flashbacks. At the same time the story of the life in the convent goes forward to the accompaniment of Mother Superior's mental psychological study of herself. The time is the early 1900's.

"The story is extremely sensitive, both in style and in insight, and there is a delicate humor running through it all. The priest characters are very humanly, if a little unflatteringly, drawn. All in all, the novel merits that very hackneyed review word, 'distinguished.' The writing is delicate and poised, the story warm and restrained, the general impression one of deep reverence for the ideals of the religious life." D. G. Gwynn

+ America 65:469 Ag 2 '41 340w

Booklist 37:546 Jl 15 '41

"Miss O'Brien has presented Helen Archer as a child and woman of rare intellectual power, complete fastidiousness and delicate sensibilities. It is highly improbable that such a finely organized individual could have lived in the near neighborhood of a warped personality and known it only as a worthy object of love and devotion. With her fine understanding of the human soul, Miss O'Brien should know that a normal receptive person senses aberrancy, often without quite knowing what produces his malaise. The incident which provided the shock to Helen's young soul bears no relation to what has gone before. In its essence, it is the only jarring and distasteful note in an otherwise finely fashioned book." Clare Godfrey

+ Books p2 Je 22 '41 950w

"Life in a convent school in Ireland just before the last war is the setting for this very interesting story. Curiously enough, it combines the freshness of detail that one might expect from a youngster home on holiday with a depth of psychological insight possible only to a mature and experienced artist in character portrayal." Claire Armstrong

+ Cath World 153:759 S '41 650w

"A very fine, objective, subtle and even beautiful novel about a convent and its school." Harry Sylvester

+ Commonweal 34:306 Jl 18 '41 700w

"As a study of the religious life the novel needs close reading, but it is lightened with humour—in the characters of the different nuns, the behaviour and conversation of the girls in and out of observation, the ways of parents, and the aggressive nationalism of the priests. Miss O'Brien is to be congratulated on a fine performance of an unusual kind." Charles Marriott

+ Manchester Guardian p7 F 21 '41 220w

"The Land of Spices is adult without being about politics, serious without being about the war, emotional without being about marriage, malicious without being about Bloomsbury, religious without being didactic and ordinarily human without being dull. It is well—if anything too well—written, there are rather too many thoughtful words and not enough economy; but what a rich, appreciative literary fault it seems." Myfanwy Piper

+ New Statesman & Nation 21:250 Mr 8 '41 900w

"Kate O'Brien's latest work can but add distinction to an already distinguished literary reputation. To say that this story of an Irish convent before the first World War is flawless may convey the idea of a somewhat remote and possibly cold perfection. It is anything but that. 'Made' in the old, beautiful sense which requires a book, or any literary creation, small or large, to have adequacy of form befitting worth-while content it is indeed perfect in artistry." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p7 Je 22 '41 750w

"A quiet, acutely perceptive story of life, both practical and spiritual, in an Irish convent school... This is a novel decidedly off the beaten path. Rather slow-paced, though."

+ New Yorker 17:79 Je 21 '41 50w

Pratt p11 autumn '41

"The character of [the Reverend mother]—up to a point—is conveyed with great subtlety. . . I have said 'up to, a point' because at the end of Miss O'Brien's always interesting and sometimes moving novel, we feel a curious gap in our knowledge: we have really learnt nothing at all of the religious life beyond its trappings, and there are moments when Miss O'Brien hovers dangerously close to a kind of vulgarity. . . It is a failure of comprehension, of dramatisation. Miss O'Brien always follows the method of telling us about her characters rather than leaving them to express themselves in speech and action, and the danger of that method is that the character is bounded by the author's explanation."

+ Spec 166:134 F 14 '41 700w

"It is an unusual and searching novel, but with one pronounced weakness. Miss O'Brien in her use of words, which for her seem to have motion rather than form or weight, constantly strives for freshness and incisiveness of feeling, not seldom to good effect. But to that end she also lapses at times into an agitated and even distraught obscurity."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p77 F 15 '41 750w

"A singular and memorable account of life in a Catholic order's nunnery in Ireland. The central character is done with a remarkable mixture of understanding and restraint." Robert Littell

+ Yale R ns 31:xvi autumn '41 130w

O'BRIEN, MAURICE N. Rory O'Mory, the fox that chased an English gentleman; pictures by Richard MacGraw. 42p $1.50 Longmans

41-18357

The story of Rory O'Mory, the biggest, reddest fox in all the world, who left his pleasant home in Ireland to aid his smaller English cousin foxes, and chased an English hunter to make it clear to him how it feels to be hunted. For ages eight to ten.

"The story has tonic gaiety; its fine pictures are decorative yet really illustrate. It is the sort of story book enjoyed by little children who listen and look, and by intelligent adults who read aloud." M. L. Becker

+ Books p12 N 2 '41 240w

Reviewed by E. V. Wyatt

Cath World 154:374 D '41 130w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse

Commonweal 25:111 N 21 '41 20w

"It makes a most amusing tale, filled with typical Irish humor. The entertaining pictures in black and white are made by Richard MacGraw and successfully portray the spirit of the tale." D. M. MacDonald

+ Library J 66:736 S 1 '41 130w

"Misses fire." Zoë Durrell

— Sat R of Lit 24:16 N 8 '41 20w

Springf'd Republican p7e O 26 '41 160w

O'CASEY, SEAN. Purple dust; a wayward comedy in three acts. 181p $1.50 (6s) Macmillan

822

[41-11603]

"Two Englishmen (complete fools) purchase an obsolete Tudor house in Ireland which they are going to rehabilitate and therein create the grace of a vanished day. They have brought with them their young Irish mistresses, to help in the process. The mistresses run off with a couple of stone masons who have been brought in to repair the mansion and who talk like John M. Synge at the very top of his rhythm, and a flood evidently carries off the house and doubtless the Englishmen." Books

"Here is an odd play indeed, compact of farce and symbolism and poetry, one moment in the style of 'Charley's Aunt,' the next in that of 'The Shadow of the Glen,' with here and there peeps of 'John Bull's Other Island.' Not, of course, that it is like any of them; but a mixture of them suggests the confusion a director would have to resolve in staging 'Purple Dust.'" W. P. Eaton

Books p12 F 9 '41 160w

Manchester Guardian p7 D 31 '40 180w

"It is the inequality and unreality of the contest which has driven Mr. O'Casey to flick it up with knock-about. But we should repeat that, briskly acted, the play would go with shouts of laughter. The talk of the Irish characters is rich in the sort of thing that theatrical audiences in England expect of Irish characters; and now and then, as in the foreman's opinion of Wordsworth and one or two of the workman's speeches, it reaches eloquence."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p594 N 23 '40 700w

O'CONNOR, HARVEY. The Astors. 504p il $3.75 Knopf

920 Astor family

(W) 41-5821

This history of a famous American family is made up of eight sections, six of which deal more or less exclusively with individual members of the clan: John Jacob Astor, William B. Astor, John Jacob Astor III, The Mrs Astor, John Jacob Astor IV, and Vincent Astor. Two other sections deal with collateral lines and the English Astors, respectively. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:438 My 15 '41

"Mr. O'Connor's narrative is entertaining and frequently hilarious, but at the end it leaves an astringent taste in the reader's mouth." G. W. Johnson

+ Books p5 Ap 13 '41 1200w

Reviewed by Paul Hutchinson

Christian Century 58:657 My 14 '41

1150w

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '41

O'CONNOR, HARVEY—Continued

"[The author's] journalistic style, although making the book more readable, detracts somewhat from the credibility of his facts." Walter Hausdorfer

Library J 66:264 Mr 15 '41 150w

"Mr. O'Connor's studies of old John Jacob, his son William Backhouse, and their many descendants are as fresh and sparkling as if he had discovered them for the first time. . . Mr. O'Connor presents readable genealogical charts, an extensive bibliography and a complete index to round out the definitive biography of the Astors from 1783 to 1941. It is written throughout in a vigorous and compelling prose." Karl Schifftgiesser

+ N Y Times p4 Ap 13 '41 1250w

"Some new material, plus a good bit of New York social history (in both meanings of the term) since the Revolution. A substantial and entertaining job, quizzically liberal in viewpoint."

+ New Yorker 17:91 Ap 19 '41 80w

"The work represents considerable research; but a little more would have made impossible such passages as: 'It was said that a triumvirate really ran the city: (William B.) Astor, Alexander T. Stewart, and Cornelius Vanderbilt. . . Astor and Stewart had one interest in common: the protection and advancement of Broadway. New York was preeminently the city of one street.' These three never ruled the metropolis; and New York as a one-street city is as romantic as the fleeting references to the big day's loot of the Tweed Ring. . . These lapses do not impair the indictment of the owners of the Astor slums for avariciousness and brutality." D. T. Lynch

Sat R of Lit 23:9 Ap 26 '41 650w

"Mr. O'Connor is pretty frank in showing his low opinion of the Astors, their methods and their attitude toward their fellow men. But he writes in an easy, fast-moving style without any obvious grudges and he seems to have read everything ever written on his topic." Donald Derby

+ Springf'd Republican p7e My 25 '41 950w

Wis Lib Bul 37:115 Je '41

O'DONNELL, EDWIN P. The great big doorstep; a Delta comedy. 354p $2.50 Houghton

41-20730

A story of the Delta of the Mississippi. The characters are the members of the Crochet family, shiftless and impoverished, whose ambition it is to have a house to fit the grand doorsteps one of the sons salvaged from the river. How their ambition is finally achieved is set forth in this humorous, realistic novel.

Booklist 38:131 D 15 '41

"One could wish the author had revealed a craftsmanship, a literary discipline, to match the talent and the material. The work needs pruning, some rearrangement, a more scrupulous selection, more thought in plot construction. Some of the chapters end lamely, the sequent chapters seeming to have no direct reason for following. Yet without perfection of craft, without a single character really to center your affection on, Mr. O'Donnell continually holds the interest and presents several such memorable family scenes that one is hard put to find many surpassing them." Hudson Strobe

+ — Books p4 O 26 '41 1150w

"A delightful fable."

+ New Repub 105:709 N 24 '41 90w

"This is an excellent piece of regional fiction written by some one who has actually lived in the curious country he writes about long enough to know it thoroughly and to love it for what it is. It is a friendly and unpretentious picture of people who are brought to life with loving care, and Evvie is one of the best-done adolescents in recent fiction, thoroughly and sympathetically portrayed." Herschel Brickell

+ N Y Times p22 N 2 '41 800w

"Highly recommended."

+ New Yorker 17:96 O 18 '41 50w

"Anyone who fails to find out how the Crochets got the house to go with that stupendable doorsteps will miss one of the funniest, freshest reinterpretations of the Kallikaks and the Jukes since 'February Hill.'" Bess Jones

+ Sat R of Lit 24:20 N 8 '41 600w

"A little dialect goes a long way with me, but Mr. O'Donnell's people speak a dialect of custom and character rather than misspellings and apostrophes; so they were unusually pleasant company, even if nothing worth calling a story threaded its way through their lives." Robert Littell

Yale R n s 31:x winter '42 80w

ODUM, HOWARD WASHINGTON, and others.

American democracy anew; an approach to the understanding of our social problems. 614p 11 map $1.40 Holt

309.173 U.S.—Social conditions. Social problems 40-7946

"The volume is more of a study manual than it is a text of the orthodox type. Its technique is to introduce each topic dispassionately, to show its relation to the larger scene, and then to lead students into the workshop with inquiring, well-stocked minds. Such a procedure is especially advantageous in a course on contemporary problems. It assumes, and is prepared for, mature students in the senior high school whose vocabulary and outlook are adequate to a candid examination of the grave internal problems that confront the United States today." Social Educ

Reviewed by David Snedden

School & Society 52:594 D 7 '40 300w

"The authors are to be commended for the skilful and sober presentation of problems that can easily be sensationalized." C. M. Destler

+ Social Educ 5:157 F '41 800w

OLLERICH, INEZ. Murder makes us gay. 274p $2 Doubleday

41-20163

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p26 O 26 '41 120w

"The story is a bit confused, chiefly because there are too many characters about whom one knows very little except that most of them like to spend money in a loud tone of voice." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p14 N 2 '41 190w

"Acceptable."

Sat R of Lit 24:36 D 6 '41 40w

OFFORD, MRS LENORE (GLEN). The 9 dark hours. 295p $2 Duell

41-23174

Mystery story.

"Not to damn Mrs. Offord with too faint praise, we'll say that she looks like a very promising author. This being tell-the-truth week, we honestly think most fans, in their lust for gore, will find 'The Nine Dark Hours' too mild a brew for their jaded gizzards. Still and all, it's just the thing for readers who do not wish to be hit over the head with a blunt instrument too often." Will Cuppy

Books p40 N 2 '41 130w

Reviewed by Mort. Post

New Repub 105:598 N 3 '41 30w

"Mystery, horror, adventure and romance are here blended to produce a story that will not easily be forgotten." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p18 N 9 '41 240w

OGG, GEORGE. The chronology of the public ministry of Jesus. 339p $3.50 Macmillan [15s Cambrideg]

232.9 Jesus Christ—Chronology. Bible. New Testament—Gospels [A41-3056]

"The author of this book examines afresh certain commonly accepted opinions as to the date, chronology, and duration of the public ministry of Jesus; and concludes with suggestions, arising out of this study, towards a new chronological outline." (Publisher's note) Bibliography. Indexes.

"A work of this type awakens the admiration if not the envy of every earnest student who yearns for the day when our disrupted civilization will calm itself once more and permit our intellectuals to bring forth things new and old from the sanctuary of pure learning. Perhaps at the present moment only a few readers will find the time to give to this volume the studious attention that it deserves, but everyone will want to place it on the shelf reserved for those more serious books to which he will return in soberer days to come." S. J. Case

+ Christian Century 53:622 My 7 '41 500w

"Books on Gospel chronology are largely records of earnest but futile attempts to arrive at certainty nor is Dr. Ogg's volume an exception to this tantalizing rule. Its chief merit is its detailed and careful analysis of past endeavors; from these at least students will learn many methods whose uselessness has been proved and which therefore should be abandoned for the future." B. S. Easton

Churchman 155:17 Ap 15 '41 280w

"Dr. Ogg has provided a learned and detailed discussion of the evidence which may be used to establish a chronological outline for Our Lord's public career. His book is hardly likely to appeal to the general reader on account of its highly technical character, but scholars who are interested in this particular question will certainly find much to stimulate and provoke thought."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p595 N 23 '40 200w

O'HARA, MRS MARY. My friend Flicka. (Story press bk) 349p $2.50 Lippincott

(W) 41-51872

The story of a dreamy ten-year-old youngster growing up on a Western ranch, where his father, an ex-army officer, was raising blooded horses. Life became real to Ken when his father gave him a colt for his own—the filly named Flicka. But Flicka had a wild strain in her blood, and nearly lost her life trying to escape. Ken's patient nursing finally saved her, but it almost cost him his own life.

Booklist 38:12 S '41

"This story of Flicka is more than a lovingly executed pageant of ranch life. With grace and simplicity, Mrs. O'Hara tells a fine intuitive story of human relationships, the interplay of personalities in a family of people who love and try to understand each other." Page Cooper

+ Books p4 Ag 24 '41 550w

Cath World 154:251 N '41 260w

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 D '41

Reviewed by Mabel Williams
Horn Bk M 17:487 N '41 190w

"A fine and unusual book for any reader who is fairly mature." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 18:37 Ja '42 100w

"Dull reading for a non-horse-lover; otherwise well done." Margaret Winning

+ Library J 66:669 Ag '41 80w

"I haven't seen such warm and intimate and never cluttered writing about living in the West since 'A Lamp on the Plains,' and even if it were not all this, 'Flicka' would still be a fascinating source of lore in the care and understanding of all kinds of animals, including small boys. In its quiet way it is a natural." Otis Ferguson

+ New Repub 105:380 S 22 '41 360w

Reviewed by Jessie Stanton & E. W. Steele
New Repub 105:838 D 15 '41 10w

"To read this story is restful as well as adventurous, like viewing the countryside from the top of a hill. [Mrs] O'Hara has a way of describing a landscape that makes you smell the grass and feel the coolness of the wind. Its face to the sun, the story moves with a firm, free stride. There is a fine, romantic aureole about it all, but it isn't 'sweetness and light.' It's rather the delightful, radiant touch of a fairy tale. And yet this is a very real book. . . . Like 'The Yearling,' this is a wonderful book for people who love to be with children and animals. And it seems to me a fine book for boys and girls in their teens." Marianne Hauser

+ N Y Times p7 Ag 24 '41 750w

"A pleasant tale, skillfully and charmingly done."

+ New Yorker 17:78 S 6 '41 40w

"Horse lovers will like this tale very much. What is more remarkable in a book so full of equines and their ways, the reader-not-interested-in-horses (there should be a portmanteau word to express that) will like it too. There is a human and appealing story here of a boy and his colt, and also an excellent, vigorous description of a Western family and of ranch life in Wyoming. It is a popular combination. A pet story primarily, it has the excitement and flavor of a good Western." R. C. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 24:9 N 1 '41 600w

O'HARE, EUGENE. How to make your own furniture. 94p il $2.50 Harper

684 Furniture (W) 41-18332

"This book deliberately assumes that you have no knowledge of woodworking; neither of tools nor of the materials used, nor of design. Construction of the first piece will introduce most of the uses of the various tools, as much information regarding materials as that piece requires, and something of design. Then each of the pieces following will require some few operations and materials that are new, but will naturally use much of the knowledge gained in making previous pieces." Page 3

Booklist 38:48 O 15 '41

Books p19 O 12 '41 90w

OLDHAM, MRS ETTA BALDWIN. Pedro's pirate; il. by Marian Cannon. 215p $2 Lothrop 41-7321

"In this tale Pedro and Margarita, children of a Spanish merchant of Panama, and his beautiful Spanish wife are left orphaned and homeless when Panama was sacked and destroyed in the seventeenth century by the buccaneer Morgan and his 1,200 followers. The pirate Long Arms, an Englishman and a much battered veteran of the seas, rescues the children and takes them under his protection." N Y Times

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p10 My 11 '41 360w

"Mrs. Oldham is interested in old Panama and has familiarized herself with its history, but her tale is clumsily contrived, and because it is cluttered with too much material the events lack logical sequence. Her characters are not developed to the point of reality, but seem to exist in order to provide an opportunity to describe the climate, flora and fauna as well as the course of history." A. T. Eaton
N Y Times p9 Ag 17 '41 400w

OLDHAM, HENRY PETER. How to fly a plane. 221p il $2.50 Waverly house

629.13252 Aeronautics (W) 40-27557

"The reader will find that this book, while introducing a framework of technical data and training methods, will, in great part, deal with the student pilot's reactions in an element, which must be foreign to him. . . The methods described are based on the Civil Aeronautics Authority's Flight Program, which is followed at all government approved schools." Pref.

OLDHAM, H. P.—Continued

Booklist 36:408 J1 1 '40

N Y New Tech Bks 25:44 O '40

OLF, MRS LILLIAN (BROWNE). Their name is Pius; portraits of five great modern popes. (Science and culture ser) 382p il $3 Bruce pub.

922.21 Popes

41-17718

"The author has chosen to sketch the Pontificates of the five great modern Popes who bore the name Pius . . . Pius VI facing the French Revolution; Pius VII ruling in spite of Napoleon; Pius IX struggling with the Italian Revolution; Pius X defeating Modernism; and Pius XI dealing with complex modern social problems." America

"The history of the Vatican always makes interesting reading, and the present volume is no exception. . . Apart from a slightly lyrical style, only one thing is to be regretted; not enough space is given to analysis of the currents of thought underlying the great political events so ably depicted. The outstanding feature of the book is its clear and inspiring picture of the immovable and courageous confidence of the Papacy." Charles Garvin + — America 65:696 S 27 '41 180w

Booklist 38:94 N 15 '41

Reviewed by G. N. Shuster

Books p33 N 23 '41 450w

"The author, who has specialized on writing about the papacy, is evidently a good Latin scholar, for she has browsed much in the musty documents in that language. By the same token her English indicates her mental training from this source, for it is excellent; practically faultless. The book has the Papal imprimatur." A. L. B. C.
+ Churchman 155:34 O 15 '41 150w

"Thanks to her great industry and enthusiasm for her subject, Mrs. Browne-Olf gives us lively reading and many extracts from papal writings and speeches not easily otherwise accessible. But she writes as a fervent apologist, who has not given much time to the study or understanding of history. . . As for the book's accuracy, one could make quite a catalogue of statements contrary to established facts, of curious omissions, of hasty and prejudiced conclusions, of carelessness regarding names. But if one can and must point out that the book is sadly deficient in accuracy, in detachment and in appreciation of the course of nineteenth century history, one is glad to emphasize that it fulfils its main purpose by bringing us closer to the lives and minds and lips of six Pontiffs from whom we may glean guidance and comfort in these dark and darkening days." H. C. F. Bell
+ — Commonweal 35:146 N 28 '41 850w

OLIVER, SIMEON (NUTCHUK, pseud), and HATCH, ALDEN. Son of the smoky sea; il. by Nutchuk. 245p $2.50 Messner 917.98 Eskimos. Aleutian islands
(W) 41-15390

Life story of a half-Eskimo, half-Norwegian boy, brought up in Unalaska, who came to the United States to study medicine, and found that the career he really wanted was in music. For older boys and adults.

Booklist 38:100 N 15 '41

"A vivid absorbing account of life on the remote Aleutian Islands off Alaska. . . Older boys and girls will find it fascinating." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:467 N '41 90w

Reviewed by E. J. Gray

+ Horn Bk M 17:477 N '41 120w

"The impact of civilization in 'the States' on a fine primitive mind is revealed with modesty and unaffected charm. The importance of the Bering Sea region in the light of current events makes this vivid unpropagandic presentation doubly valuable. Full of hardy, masculine adventure and the sincerity of a youth trying to find himself. An interesting contrast to some of the Halliburton travel books, which it might well supplant. For adults and boys over fourteen." Maude Adams
+ Library J 66:847 O 1 '41 140w

"It is a personal record told graphically, with an engaging humor. It is interesting because of its background, but even more so because of the perception and eagerness for experience which it reveals; and its implications in the question of relationship between a dominant race and a smaller one which has its own noteworthy qualities, of the necessity for tact and mutual respect, are especially valuable now." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p12 N 23 '41 360w

"Good story unimaginatively handled." Raymond Holden

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:9 N 8 '41 20w

Springf'd Republican p10 O 10 '41 500w

Wis Lib Bul 37:206 D '41

OLIVER, WADE WRIGHT. The man who lived for tomorrow; a biography of William Hallock Park, 507p $3.75 Dutton

B or 92 Park, William Hallock 41-21068

The personal biographical detail is not entirely omitted, this book is chiefly devoted to the career of the man who was for many years director of the Bureau of Laboratories of New York's Health department. Index.

"Mr. Oliver gives us a picture of an honest, just and true man; what he was and did and how great a force he was in his own community." L. C. Johnson, M.D.

+ Books p29 N 16 '41 650w

"Not a popular medical biography; more likely to be read by people interested in preventive medicine and public health. Filled with meticulous details to the point of tedious reading." E. D. Hart

Library J 66:840 O 1 '41 90w

"A mine of information on the medical and social history of the city, with particular reference to Dr. Park's brilliant work in the control of diphtheria and other epidemics. . . An important and valuable sourcebook for the history of American medicine."

+ New Repub 105:629 N 10 '41 80w

Reviewed by M. S. Ulrich

Sat R of Lit 24:18 N 8 '41 700w

"Here is history, biography, immunology, public health, all woven with a simplicity, a directness, a swing and sequence of events worthy of the great and good physician, William Hallock Park, himself, whose life was a symbol, a beacon, a very torch of knowledge made the servant of mankind." Haven Emerson, M.D.

+ Survey G 30:713 D '41 370w

OLSEN, DOLORES BIRK. The ticking heart. 268p $2 Doubleday

Detective story. 40-31456

Booklist 37:156 D 15 '40

"The plot, for all its ingenuity, is just a little too complicated." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p13 Je 1 '41 120w

Sat R of Lit 23:18 N 2 '40 40w

OLSON, HARRY FERDINAND. Elements of acoustical engineering. 344p $6 Van Nostrand [30s Chapman]

621.381 Electroacoustics. Sound—Recording and reproducing 40-9457

"The author is acoustic research director of the R. C. A. Manufacturing Company. 'This text is the subject matter of thirty lectures prepared for presentation at Columbia University. It is an exposition of the fundamental principles used in modern acoustics and a description of the existing acoustical instruments. Particular efforts have been directed towards the development of analogies between electrical, mechanical and acoustical systems, because engineers have found that the reduction of a vibrating system to the equivalent electrical circuit is a valuable aid in the analysis of vibrating systems. . . The book includes current acoustic practice in radio, phonograph, sound motion pictures, public address, sound re-enforcing and sound measurements. Practically all modern transducers such as microphones, loud speakers, headphones and phonograph pickups are treated from the mechanical or the acoustical impedance viewpoint." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

"The book is to be recommended to all interested in modern acoustics, especially to those concerned with engineering aspects of the recording and reproduction of sound."

+ Nature 147:311 Mr 15 '41 400w

N Y New Tech Bks 25:43 O '40

Pratt p19 spring '41

"Dr. Olson's text will be of great value for reference purposes. The formulas and diagrams are very complete and conveniently presented. Lack of space has prevented the derivation of many of the fundamental formulae and this fact, together with the absence of problems, makes the text less useful for student purposes. It represents, however, an outstanding contribution to the acoustic field and will be widely useful to engineers and investigators in this field." J. S. Parkinson

+ — R of Scientific Instruments 2:340 O '40 700w

O'MALLEY, LEWIS SYDNEY STEWARD, ed.
Modern India and the West, 834p $10 (36s) Oxford

954 India—Civilization

"This learned study of the interaction of the civilizations of India and the Western world [has been] undertaken by members of the Royal Institute of International Affairs. . . Every aspect of the relations between the ancient Indian traditions and our own is carefully, even elaborately, examined. Sir S. Radhakrishnan discusses Hinduism and the West, while there is a companion chapter on the effect of the Christian ethic upon India. The editor writes on the Hindu social system, and A. Yusuf Ali balances this with a contribution on Muslim culture. . . This encyclopedic study, however, is not restricted entirely to things of the mind, though it is in this department that it is most profoundly interesting. There are chapters on the press, on economic development, on the progress of women, the law, and mechanism and transport." Christian Science Monitor

Reviewed by Harold Hobson

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 N 29 '41 600w

"The book is unsatisfactory and disappointing. There are interesting chapters in it. . . But as a whole, the book flops to pieces." Leonard Woolf

— + New Statesman & Nation 22:333 O 4 '41 300w

"The book embraces 810 closely-printed, solid pages. It weighs two pounds. It costs thirty-six shillings. What influence will it have on the ordinary voter? The question has only to be posed to be answered. . . With this respectful protest, let tribute at once be paid to the mine of information compressed in these pages." Stanley Reed

+ — Spec 167:312 S 26 '41 800w

Times [London] Lit Sup p490 O 4 '41 950w

O'MALLEY, PAT. New Lancashire lad. See Smith, P. G.

O'MALLEY, PATRICIA. Wings for Carol. 320p $2 Greystone

(W) 41-3676

Follows the adventures of an airminded young nurse, from the day she graduates from the nursing school, thru her career as an airline hostess, and her sensational trip from the Normandie to Hollywood with a film star's mother. The author is a newspaper woman who since 1925 has been connected with aviation.

"Scattered among these exploits, which I am assured can readily be identified as actual occurrences on our airlines, is reliable information on aviation." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 F 23 '41 140w

"The training and capacities of an airline stewardess are definitely pricked out on the pattern of an engaging casual story. Natural characters and freshness of approach lift it above the labored career novel. . . It will be welcomed by older girls and some boys." Maude Adams

+ Library J 66:143 F 1 '41 130w

Spring'd Republican p7e Mr 2 '41 190w

Wis Lib Bul 37:162 O '41

OMAN, JOHN WOOD. Honest religion; with an introd. by Frank H. Ballard, and a memoir of the author by George Alexander and H. H. Farmer. 198p $2.25 Macmillan [7s 6d Cambridge]

230 Religion—Philosophy. Authority (in religion) 41-12704

"John Oman sees the weakness of the church and theology, but does not despair of Christianity. The first few chapters present briefly what he means by honesty in religion. Then he turns to the problems presented by biblical criticism, and to the central problems of theology." (Churchman) Index.

Reviewed by H. D. McKeehan

Christian Century 58:983 Ag 6 '41 460w

"This last book by one of our greatest Christian thinkers is a simple, direct, and persuasive presentation of the central truths of our religion against the background of contemporary thoughts and events." R. C. Miller

+ Churchman 155:17 Je 1 '41 150w

Reviewed by Rittenhouse Neisser

Crozer Q 18:258 Jl '41 350w

"Sincerity is the keynote of Oman's last message, both in its presentation and in its constantly recurring plea. The book is not of the same importance as the work of his earlier years. It is based, Mr. Ballard writes, on 'various' addresses delivered in Cambridge. Here and there, he admits, are sentences the author might have re-written, and only by the thinnest of threads are some of the ideas linked together. But the heart of the book lies in a single word. It is a plea for 'honesty' in religion."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p52 F 1 '41 850w

ONSTOTT, KYLE. Beekeeping as a hobby. 137p il $2 Harper

638.1 Bees

(W) 41-8907

Practical handbook on beekeeping for the amateur. Partial contents: The hive and its equipment; Acquiring and hiving the bees; Stings; The site of the apiary; Management and manipulation of the hives; Swarms; their utilization, prevention, and control; Extracted honey versus comb-honey; Queen rearing and requeening; Bees in winter; Diseases and vermin in the hives; Bee forage and forage plants. Index.

Booklist 37:511 Jl 1 '41

ONSTOTT, KYLE—Continued

"The practices which the author discusses are more or less standardized in American beekeeping. Most beekeepers find it takes years of patient study and observation to add to their knowledge of how best to handle bees in any given region. This book by Mr Onstott is at least an excellent statement on the basic principles." E. H. Thomson
 + Springfield Republican p7e Ja 4 '42 330w

OPPENHEIM, EDWARD PHILLIPS. Milan grill room. 264p $2 Little [4s Hodder]

41-1831

Ten short stories of intrigue, romance, and detection. The scene is the grill room of London's Milan hotel, with Louis, maitre d'hôtel, and Major Lyson of the Intelligence department as leading spirits.

"Told with the perennial light touch and grace of the top man at this sort of thing." Will Cuppy

+ Books p22 F 9 '41 160w

"Filled with all kinds of thrills, from the simplest to the highly complex." Marian Wiggan
 + Boston Transcript p2 F 15 '41 30w

"Mr. Oppenheim is not at his best in these stories. Some of them are scarcely good enough to be called mediocre." Isaac Anderson
 N Y Times p16 F 16 '41 80w

"Typical Opp. collation. Some stories pretty thin—others pretty thick—but all faultlessly groomed and told with old master's customary skill."

+ Sat R of Lit 23:22 F 8 '41 40w

OPPENHEIM, EDWARD PHILLIPS. The shy plutocrat. 285p $2 Little

41-8174

This tale in humorous vein relates how a young Western millionaire becomes an actor under an assumed name and impersonates himself.

"It is a good tale to take your mind off your worries." Charlotte Dean
 N Y Times p16 Ag 3 '41 240w

"Light-hearted but rather heavy-handed Oppenheim venture into fields better cultivated by P. G. Wodehouse. Trivial."

— Sat R of Lit 24:17 J1 19 '41 40w

"A light-hearted story told with all this popular author's skill."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p657 D 27 '41 70w

ORANGE, URSULA (MRS DENNIS TINDALL). Ask me no questions. 284p $2.50 Morrow

41-11501

In the fall of 1939, Constance Smith, the vicar's daughter who had married a man "not quite-a-gentleman," takes into her home in Kent five London evacuees. These are an old school friend, Caroline Cameron, her little daughter, and the child's nurse, a London slum mother and her baby. The story is woven around the complications of diverse views on social standings and the unraveling of the mystery concerning Constance's marriage.

"Miss Orange's first 200 pages are rich, fruity, amusing, enlightening, what you will, and the last eighty, though by no means so good, stand up adequately to the standards set by the average light, bright novel. Only 'Ask Me No Questions' is so much better in idea, materials and handling than the average light, bright novel, that Miss Orange has all unwittingly laid herself open to some such mild grousing as mine." F. H. Bullock

+ Books p2 J1 27 '41 500w

"Miss Orange's very considerable gifts have all been requisitioned to make this a book not only of first-rate entertainment, but of literary excellence in its special light comedy genre. Pointed dramatic dialogue, characterization sharp-lit by sly satire and facility in plot-devising have all done their share, but would not of themselves have been enough to carry off a story whose central theme revolves round the intimacies of married life without the Austenish air of supreme innocence that is not the least of her literary assets." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p7 Ag 3 '41 850w

New Yorker 17:54 J1 26 '41 60w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 31 '41 120w

ORCHARD, WILLIAM EDWIN. The necessity for the church. 148p $1.75 Longmans

282 Church. Roman Catholic church 41-1156

An argument for the "necessity" of faith in the church, here meaning the Roman Catholic church, by a convert to Catholicism.

"It will be of direct help to those who are engaged in work among converts and enable them to understand more sympathetically the difficulties, both unconscious and conscious, of those raised in orthodox or liberal Protestantism. The book is not long, but there is a great deal packed into its meaty paragraphs." W. J. McGarry

+ America 64:584 Mr 1 '41 140w

"Scholarly, thoughtful and kindly book."
 + Cath World 153:123 Ap '41 280w

"Dr. Orchard's spirit, as ever, is admirable, and his style is ingratiating, but his argument is not persuasive."

+ Christian Century 58:124 Ja 22 '41 60w

"Dr. Orchard, himself a convert, knows the right approach to Protestants, and credits them with the sincerity which some of his co-religionists fail to recognize. But the impression one gets from reading this book is that even he does not credit them with the intelligence to see when the case for Rome is made out and when it is not." F. J. Moore

+ Churchman 155:19 F 1 '41 400w

"Unlike the old-fashioned manuals of apologetics, this work, written in the flowing, dignified essay form, refuses to systematize arguments and answers, the author prefers to go deeper, to philosophical and psychological principles. He shows the sweet reasonableness of the Catholic Church and thus evokes more an atmosphere of faith than of logic. The book points to the man; Dr. Orchard should be a tower of strength and a beacon to the confused and the vacillating." Richard Flower

+ Commonweal 33:425 F 14 '41 360w

ORMOND, LEON. Laugh and learn; the art of teaching with humor. 277p $2.50 Greenberg

371.3 Educational psychology. Humor. Teaching 41-5127

"An analysis of the benefits and problems of classroom humor presented in a light and informal style that makes palatable reading to those who are not out to 'seriously learn' about why school should be fun." (School & Society) Bibliography.

Booklist 37:402 My 1 '41

School & Society 53:456 Ap 5 '41 20w

O'ROURKE, LAWRENCE JAMES. Your government today and tomorrow. 709p il $1.84 Heath

342.73 U.S.—Politics and government—Handbooks, manuals, etc. 41-6224

This textbook on American political life is divided into three sections: the first discusses the individual's relation to the government; the second shows "how our governments serve the people," and the third follows the usual course of civic textbooks in its discussion of the organization and operation of our governments. Index.

"In general the book gives evidence of accurate and authentic information. However, the chart showing the 'Distribution of the World's Monetary Gold Supply' (p. 153) does not show, as the explanatory note states, that 'the United States now possesses more than three-fourths of the world's monetary gold supply.' Some people might question, also, the selection of some of the cartoons for a tendency to glorify certain aspects of the New Deal. . . These criticisms are minor and should not obscure the major conclusion that this book should achieve distinct success in making more concrete and immediate to pupils the problems of American government and ways of participating in the approaches to them." R. A. Deabler + — School R 49:630 O '41 900w

Reviewed by Deobold Van Dalen
 Social Educ 5:550 N '41 550w

"This book is a valuable addition in its field. The volume is intended for senior high school students and college freshmen. It is not only interesting and comprehensive, but presents the subject in a new and vital manner." J. L. Stockton

+ Social Studies 32:286 O '41 600w

ORTEGA Y GASSET, JOSE. Toward a philosophy of history [tr. by Helene Weyl]. 273p $2.75 Norton

904 History—Philosophy 41-5993

Five essays by the scholarly Spanish author of the Revolt of the Masses (Book Review Digest, 1932), now an exile living in Argentina. Contents: The sportive origin of the stage; Unity and diversity of Europe; Man the technician; History as a system; The Argentine state and the Argentinean.

"The distinguished Spanish philosopher here presents a volume of five essays. The first one, on the 'Sportive Origin of the State,' is distinctly disappointing. One might say that in it the poet had violently intervened upon the philosopher and taken his feet clean off the ground. But for American readers in particular the second essay, called 'Unity and Diversity in Europe,' is most important, with an importance which cannot be exaggerated." A. J. Nock
 + — Atlantic My '41 500w

Booklist 37:462 Je 1 '41

Reviewed by Albert Guerard
 Books p16 Ap 20 '41 1050w

Reviewed by R. Flenley
 Canadian Hist R 22:321 S '41 150w

Reviewed by J. N. Vaughan
 Commonweal 34:115 My 23 '41 550w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
 Foreign Affairs 20:373 Ja '42 20w
 J Philos 38:417 Jl 17 '41 420w

Reviewed by Géza Schütz
 Library J 66:264 Mr 15 '41 50w

"It is only when one finishes the last chapter that one's growing admiration for the man bursts through its chrysalis of prejudice. One is suddenly struck by the fact that Ortega is really a great individual and mass psychologist who, for reasons not easily determinable, has assumed the abstract guise of a philosopher of history. Many incidental remarks that had impressed one as psychologically acute, now take their place in clarifying the man and his role among men. One now understands why his writings have awakened a response in so many people to whom the methods of science are foreign and the superstitions of religion repellant." Rubin Gotesky
 + Living Age 360:286 My '41 2250w

"Let us note that Ortega is not at all driven by the modern and puerile urge 'to give concrete examples' in order to economize the effort of thought. His images rise from the depths of a prolonged meditation, of which he wishes to distill only the quintessence in a symbol durable and chiseled, like the bronze of the Spanish Incitatus. A theoretical formula weakens and limits, but a symbol orients and incites. These essays, which will please the American reader because of their freedom from abstraction and because of their plasticity, are in reality the last flowers of a European thought desperately ripe, which takes on the perfect elegance of an apparent facility, of a sparkling conversation. . . There is a final essay on modern Argentina which in itself is worth a reading of the most 'inciting' book of the season." Denis De Rougemont

+ Nation 152:444 Ap 12 '41 1150w

"Señor Ortega y Gasset has contributed a thoughtful and a careful analysis of our present situation. If he is correct then nationalism and liberalism, as we have known them in the past, are doomed. A new and perhaps a better order and conditioning of life are on the way. This book attempts to justify historically the coming great change—the same great change that was prophesied by William Morris in England more than half a century ago." L. W. Eshleman
 + N Y Times p12 My 4 '41 1500w

"Seems rather weak in its scientific aspects. Plenty of odd insights and amusing digressions, but lots of chancy generalizations too."

+ — New Yorker 17:71 Mr 29 '41 40w

"These essays represent a gleaming from some of Señor Ortega's more recent writings. Though composed against the tragic background of recent Spanish history; and in spite of exile and serious illness, they bear no trace of self-pity and self-righteousness (which are often forms of the same thing)." Crane Brinton
 + Sat R of Lit 23:5 Ap 5 '41 850w

Social Studies 32:239 My '41 50w

"The fecund mind of this author reveals so much of itself in whatever it touches that almost any subject serves for exposition of his flexible and many-sided philosophy. Some of his ideas have made a strong impression on contemporary thought, but as points of orientation rather than as part of a system. He is no system-monger, and he distrusts any logic which does not leave room for the free play of all the complex factors of human nature which have gone into the making and shaping of human history."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 30 '41 1000w

"To explain Ortega by a shorthand formula is unjust to his warmth, scholarship, brilliance of style and historical allusion, humane wisdom." Leon Whipple

+ Survey G 30:254 Ap '41 950w

Time 37:101 Ap 7 '41 450w

Reviewed by Carl Becker

Yale R n s 30:815 summer '41 1200w

ORTON, HELEN (FULLER) (MRS J. F. ORTON). Mystery at the little red schoolhouse; il. by R. Emmett Owen. 126p $1.50 Stokes

(W) 41-15013

A pleasant little mystery story for seven and eight year old readers.

Booklist 38:59 O 15 '41

"There's a steady demand for wholesome yet engrossing mystery stories for children well under ten: this one meets the demand at every point. . . In short, the author of 'Treasure in the Little Trunk' has once more provided seven-year-olds with something they want that is good." M. L. Becker
 + Books p6 S 7 '41 150w

"A fine feeling for that fast-disappearing institution, the one-room red schoolhouse, is created in this story for boys and girls of eight to ten years." R. W. Stewart
 + Library J 66:798 S 15 '41 150w

"Mrs. Orton's twentieth book has the same simplicity of style and easy flow which have made many of its predecessors so helpful to children who are just beginning to experience the delight of reading to themselves." E. L. Buell

ORTON, HELEN—Continued

+ N Y Times p10 Ja 18 '42 200w

OSBORN, ANNIE MARION. Rousseau and Burke; a study of the idea of liberty in eighteenth-century political thought. 272p $3.75 (10s 6d) Oxford

320.15 Rousseau, Jean Jacques. Burke, Edmund. Political science. Liberty 40-35764

"This study maintains that between Rousseau and Burke 'there was no important divergence of opinion on the question of fundamental principles'; that the 'real gulf . . . was rather a difference in tradition which showed itself in their mode of thought and in the methods they used for the presentation of their basic ideas'. After an introductory chapter on Burke's attitude toward Rousseau and the French Revolution, we are led through an account of the intellectual and political background in England and France, and of the careers of Burke and Rousseau. . . The heart of the study follows and is organized thus: a general comparison of the political theories, an analysis of Rousseau's characteristic mode of expressing his theory which centers around the concept of the general will, an analysis of Burke's characteristic mode which centers around the historical fact of the British constitution, and a comparison of the two men on practical problems of government." J Philos

Reviewed by H. V. S. Ogden

Am Hist R 46:899 J1 '41 550w

"In her preface, Miss Osborn says that her special purpose in writing on Rousseau and Burke was to show how their thought applies to modern times, but this purpose is not carried out to any considerable extent. Miss Osborn also says in her preface that the main problem of politics is the dominance of the state. Surely the main problem is how to stop the Nazi tyranny, the tyranny of a party and of an ideology. . . But these criticisms are minor, and have little bearing on the main body of the book. The volume is devoted largely to historical analysis. Next to showing what Rousseau and Burke had in common and the conservatism of Rousseau, the chief virtue of Miss Osborn's work is her portrayal of the historical background of these two writers. She has done an admirable job in revealing the intellectual roots of Rousseau and Burke, tracing the origins of their thought back to the seventeenth century." B. E. Lippincott

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:969 O '41 850w

J Philos 38:109 F 13 '41 380w

"It will be long indeed before men can afford to neglect either Rousseau or his great opponent; and any book which gives us real help in understanding them will always be welcome. Nor ought such a book to be least welcome at a time like the present, when the things held dear by both these mighty prophets are in extreme danger. . . It appears to me that Miss Osborn's book, felix opportunitate natiuitatis, will aid us in forming a clearer conception of their true significance." E. E. Kellett

+ New Statesman & Nation 20:46 J1 13 '40 700w

Reviewed by J. S. Schapiro

Pol Sci Q 56:445 S '41 950w

"Miss Osborn's book, though not very long, would have been better if it had been shorter. The academic pressure which compels so many students in these days to inflate an essay into a volume encourages a habit of redundancy and repetition which does not make for pleasant, or even profitable, reading. None the less, I was glad to have read it, because it gave me occasion to try once more to make up my mind about Burke, and there are times when I wonder whether that 'almost divine man,' as Gladstone once called him, is not one of our national illusions." G. M. Young

Spec 165:18 J1 5 '40 850w

Times [London] Lit Sup p467 S 14 '40 500w

OSBORN, FREDERICK. Preface to eugenics. 312p map $2.75 Harper

575.1 Eugenics. Genetics. Social problems 40-33895

For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

Reviewed by H. P. Fairchild

Am Soc R 6:440 Je '41 600w

"It would be interesting to know what Sir Francis Galton would think of this book if he were here to read it. There is no doubt that he would recognize it as scholarly, interesting, and informative. He would doubtless also be sympathetic to the spirit of social responsibility that permeates it. But it is almost certain that he would be amazed at the characteristics developed in early maturity by the infant that he launched so enthusiastically three quarters of a century ago. Indeed, it is perhaps not quite accurate to speak of 'maturity' at all; perhaps a more accurate word would be 'adolescence.' For this book is very accurately designated a 'Preface'—it does not profess to be a thorough treatment of eugenics itself in its full development." H. P. Fairchild

+ Am Soc R 6:753 O '41 650w

"What we need is a book which will dispassionately examine the eugenic and the dysgenic forces in society, which will appraise the effects of heredity and environment, which will analyze the statistics. And it is precisely such a book that Dr. Osborn has given us. . . Mr. Osborn's book is well entitled a 'preface to eugenics.' It pulls together the more valuable information that geneticists, psychologists, anthropologists and population experts have gathered in the last fifty years. . . It stands out as a notable contribution that must engage the attention of our legislators." Waldemar Kaempffert

+ N Y Times p27 Mr 30 '41 1800w

Reviewed by David Snedden

School & Society 53:451 Ap 5 '41 180w

"For the first time an authoritative and comprehensive summary of all relevant research findings in genetics [is] presented in what the reviewer considers a balanced perspective with regard to other factors. The only defect noted is the overemphasis on 'intelligence' as the criterion for population quality, although the scant scientific information on the incidence of socially desirable attitudes and motivation, or on emotional stability, or on other traits important for population quality, easily explains their omission." M. J. Hagood

+ Social Forces 19:573 My '41 320w

OSBORN, JAMES MARSHALL. John Dryden: some biographical facts and problems. 295p il $3.50 Columbia univ. press

B or 92 Dryden, John. Dryden, John—Bibliography 41-1496

In this volume the author has attempted to do the preliminary "spade work" for what he sees as a much-needed biography of Dryden. The first part of the work deals with the early biographers of Dryden: Thomas Birch, Samuel Derrick, Samuel Johnson, Edmond Malone and Sir Walter Scott. The latter part of the book contains reports on some collateral investigations into specific and unrelated problems. Index.

"The task of tracing and dating Dryden's London residences or of recording his absences from London was one which had perforce to occupy the attention of a biographer; but when these subjects are presented as separate essays or monographs they are not, it must be said, exhilarating reading. It is to be hoped that the abundance of careful scholarship here brought together will later be used in a work of larger compass and in a more attractive form."

Books p24 F 9 '41 300w

"May we suggest that on the evidence of this scholarly work, marked as it is by a charm of style, rare in university productions, Professor Osborn is the logical man to undertake the task? Meanwhile, this book is a necessity for school and college libraries."

+ Commonweal 33:429 F 14 '41 70w

"Not likely to make any great appeal to the average reader, but it will prove invaluable to students of the subject. The book is an impressive demonstration of the author's competence in the highly specialized field of antiquarian investigation."

+ Nation 152:761 Je 28 '41 200w

"To the future biographer of Dryden Mr. Osborn's book will be necessary; to all interested in Dryden it will be a help and a pleasure."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p339 J1 12 '41 240w

OSBORNE, HAROLD PHILIP. Outline of the home furnishing periods. 3d rev & enl ed 168p pl $3.50 Outline pub. co, 1628 American av, Long Beach, Calif.

749 Furniture 41-51813

"A quick reference guide for the identification of period decoration, giving a page of text to each historical setting, and in tabular form the identifying characteristics of furniture, with photographs of representative pieces. Four-page glossary. Earlier editions were in mimeographed form." Booklist

Booklist 37:494 Je 15 '41

"One of the best books issued in a long period giving much needed data for the student of interior decorating or historic ornament, for the teacher of art as well as for the home-builder or layman."

+ School Arts 41:8d D '41 70w

OSIAS, CAMILO. Filipino way of life; the pluralized philosophy. 321p il maps $2.12 Ginn

919.14 Philippine Islands—Civilization 40-30481

"In this volume a Filipino educator and politician attempts to formulate a philosophy for the new order in the Philippines—a philosophy which is 'hopeful, optimistic, and progressive.' The key to this philosophy is the Datayo, or pluralized concept, which the author believes is inherent in Filipino language and thinking and 'should be the way of life for the individual, for the nation, for like-minded nations, and for humanity.'" (Am Soc R) Index.

Reviewed by Fred Eggan

Am Soc R 6:129 F '41 370w

"Mr. Osias' book will encourage all Filipinos in their struggle upward from the blighting effects of their long Spanish bondage, and it should reveal to many outside of the Philippines the tremendous significance of America's part in the affairs of the Orient. The American stake in the Far East is not merely in tin, abaca, rubber and gold, but also in those truths enunciated long ago by the humble carpenter of Palestine. These truths the dictators have flouted. Mr. Osias and his people believe in them and are making a valiant effort to carry them into actual practice." W. D. Smith

+ Pacific Affairs 13:494 D '40 900w

OSSOLI, SARAH MARGARET (FULLER) marchesa d'. Writings; sel. and ed. by Mason Wade. 608p $5 Viking

818 41-6756

Selections from the writings of Margaret Fuller, including Summer on the Lakes; Woman in the Nineteenth Century; various of her critical essays; and twenty-five letters which range in time from 1819 to 1850, and are reprinted for the first time. The book contains a chronology, bibliography, and index.

Reviewed by B. L. Conway

Cath World 153:760 S '41 410w

"Mr. Wade makes no pretense that Margaret Fuller belongs to the top flight of American authors, but his selection from her writings proves that her work is worth preserving, as her personality is worth remembering. His able and ample biography drew clearly the outlines of her mind and life. The volume of writings rescues from oblivion some that were out of print and many that were scattered in inaccessible files of magazines and newspapers, and shows that she was a capable critic and a competent if not supremely great writer, as well as a memorable character." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 58:755 Je 4 '41 1000w

"The editing is a first-class job. Mr. Wade provides us even with what would seem to be a complete list of all her scraps of journalism, including editorials in Horace Greeley's Tribune. All these are carefully dated. The scholarship of the work is so thorough as to make it unnecessary for it ever to be attempted again. All that we need of Margaret Fuller is here. The student of the period who hears so much about her and yet can find so little of her writing accessible, now at last has the best of it in a single volume; he is not likely to want more." Theodore Maynard

Commonweal 34:164 Je 6 '41 480w

New Eng Q 14:602 S '41 280w

Reviewed by F. O. Matthiessen

New Repub 105:314 S 8 '41 800w

"Mason Wade, whose biography 'Margaret Fuller: Whetstone of Genius' appeared last year, has edited a large volume of the writings of his heroine as a huge annex, so to speak, to his distinguished life of a unique woman whose place in the American cultural scene had never been properly set until he put his hand to the task. The two volumes are indispensable to any comprehensive library of Americana." Herbert Gorman

+ N Y Times p3 My 11 '41 1150w

"Here are her more important writings, to be read and judged on their own merits. Her widely scattered work, conveniently brought together, makes a volume well qualified to take its place in the library of every literate American who values the nation's intellectual heritage. Though by no means of equal literary merit, these 'writings' deserve a place beside such compilations as H. S. Canby's one volume 'Works of Thoreau,' for like Thoreau, Margaret wrote with purpose, had ideas, and those ideas still speak today." Townsend Scudder, III

+ Sat R of Lit 24:6 My 17 '41 900w

OTTE, HERMAN FREDERICK. Industrial opportunity in the Tennessee valley of northwestern Alabama. 177p maps $2.25 Columbia univ. press [11s 6d Oxford]

330.9761 Alabama—Industries and resources. Tennessee valley 40-32931

"This book achieves two useful purposes. In the first place it is a thorough, compact survey of the industrial status, resources and prospects of a small region. The seven counties in northwest Alabama, including the industrial centers of Huntsville, Decatur, and Florence-Sheffield-Tuscumbia, are a part of that greater region, the Tennessee Valley, and share its resources and possibilities. . . In the second place, the study provides an excellent pattern for regional study: delimitation of a real subregion; a nice balance between dependence on field work and on library material; logical presentation of pertinent background, present status of industry, resources and raw materials, markets, the human factor, and prospects. Maps, charts and tables add to the clearness." (Social Forces) Bibliography. Index.

OTTE, H. F.—Continued

"Although the author stresses the importance of relating industry to the economic structure of the region, his description of the existing economy and the possible helpful effects of industry is deficient in some respects. Little is said concerning seasonal and cyclical instability of employment. Moreover, the author neglects the implications of the greater employment opportunities for women than for men in the smaller Tennessee Valley towns." G. E. McLaughlin

+ — Ann Am Acad 215:216 My '41 470w

"In addition to contributing to the understanding of a small section of the South, Mr. Otte's monograph gives an excellent picture of the struggle of a part of the South to attain industrialization. It depicts a chain of past and present events that have occurred over wide areas of the southern United States. It adds further evidence of the desire of the South for industrialization, even in the mid-nineteenth century; and it correlates the industrial history of the past with the industrial geography of the present." Loyal Durand, Jr.

+ Geog R 31:520 Jl '41 750w

J Home Econ 33:44 Ja '41 30w

"The study should be useful to the region concerned because of its clear analysis and frank appraisal of the strong and weak factors of the area. By the same token, it should be useful to other areas with similar resources." H. L. Herring

+ Social Forces 19:448 Mr '41 340w

OURSLEER, WILLIAM CHARLES. The trial of Vincent Doon. 306p il $2 Simon & Schuster 41-8175

Mystery story.

Booklist 37:515 Jl '41

"We thought we noticed signs of youth and inexperience in the wordage, some of which is at random, but on the whole, the volume is a pleasing novelty." Will Cuppy

Books p13 My 4 '41 160w

Reviewed by Mort. Post

New Repub 104:802 Je 9 '41 40w

"This is, we understand, Will Oursler's first mystery story, and he has made an excellent job of it." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p19 My 11 '41 190w

"Mr. Oursler has cleverly avoided too much repetition, but the outcome is badly motivated."

+ — New Yorker 17:95 My 17 '41 40w

"Legal give-and-take pleasant relief from normal mystery story procedure. Pictures add reality to affair. Unusual."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:17 My 17 '41 30w

Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 13 '41 130w

Time 37:100 Je 9 '41 50w

OVERSTREET, MRS BONARO (WILKINSON). See Wilkinson, B.

OVERSTREET, HARRY ALLEN. Our free minds. 250p $2 Norton

321.8 Democracy. Liberty. U.S.—Social conditions (W) 41-51677

In our present situation the author sees two threats to our American way of life, the threat from without, and the threat from within. He chooses to consider in detail only the second but this he reviews in all its varied aspects from careless use of words to social injustices, anti-Semitism and red-baiting. Index.

Booklist 37:332 Ap 15 '41

Bookmark 2:5 My '41

Reviewed by A. G. Higgins

Library J 66:264 Mr 15 '41 100w

"The general value of this excellent book lies in its generous liberalism and stimulating vigor, rather than in novelty. Dr. Overstreet's chapter on the use of words is especially crisp and hard-hitting. . . . And there is a fine earnestness in his personal avowal of a new advocacy of world union, after having long believed in it merely as a far vision."

+ N Y Times p3 Mr 23 '41 550w

Wis Lib Bul 37:134 Jl '41

OVERSTREET, HARRY ALLEN, and WILKINSON, BONARO (MRS HARRY ALLEN OVERSTREET). Leaders for adult education. 202p $1.50; to members gratis Am. assn. for adult educ.

374 Education of adults. Teachers, Training of. Leadership (W) 41-51680

"Based on a year's study of adult education activities and methods in different parts of the country, this is a stimulating little book, for librarians as well as other active workers in the field. Considers the qualities desirable in a leader of adults, the opportunities in the field, and the type of training program called for." (Wis Lib Bul) Index.

Booklist 37:390 Ap 15 '41

J Home Econ 33:411 Je '41 80w

Pratt p10 autumn '41

School & Society 53:352 Mr 15 '41 20w

Wis Lib Bul 37:70 Ap '41

OWEN, BESSIE. Aerial vagabond; with a foreword by Prince Bibesco. 260p il $3 Liveright 910.4 Voyages around the world, Aeronautics—Flights 41-11670

Diary of an American woman aviator, whose flights in her little vermilion Waco have covered a good deal of the earth's territory. The time of these flights over Europe and Asia was 1936. Map on end papers. Index.

N Y New Tech Bks 26:36 Jl '41

"While not a thrilling tale of adventure, Miss Owen's clipped, unadorned style makes 'Aerial Vagabond' good light reading for the traveler, real or armchair, or for the bored office girl who longs for the mannish excitements so long forbidden her sex. . . . The book is well illustrated with good photographs, taken everywhere on the trip. Most unusual of these perhaps and most interesting is an aerial view of Germany's largest concentration camp, at Dachau, snapped while Miss Owen was on her way out of the country."

+ Springf'd Republican p12 Je 20 '41 370w

OWEN, MARGET. The book of Maggie Owen. 262p $2 Bobbs

B or 92 Children as authors (W) 41-15052

Purports to be the diary of a twelve-year-old Irish girl, written in 1908, and left long in a forgotten trunk in the attic. Maggie, a delicate child, lives first with a great-uncle and aunt at Castle Rea; and after the death of Great-uncle Tim, at Blackstone Race, with the young heir and his uncle, both "Protestants," but beloved by the Catholic Maggie. This reproduction of Maggie's journal covers about a year and ends as she lands in America.

"What became of Maggie is immaterial. Her twelfth year lives, all by itself." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 S 7 '41 360w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell

N Y Times p3 S 14 '41 700w

"A little of Maggie Owen's journal read aloud is fresh and amusing. But there is a good deal of it, by and large. One is reminded of the timeless adoration that children should be seen and not heard."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e S 7 '41 130w

OWEN, RUSSELL. The Antarctic ocean; maps by Stephen J. Voorhies. (Oceans of the world; Whittlesey house publication) 254p il $3 McGraw

919.9 Antarctic ocean. Antarctic regions. Scientific expeditions (W) 41-6878

Summary of Antarctic history, geography, exploration and adventure, by the New York Times writer who went with Byrd on his Antarctic Expedition of 1929 to 1930. The expeditions of such explorers as Captain Nat Palmer, Wilkes, Ross, Scott, Shackleton, and Byrd, and their share in Antarctic history are studied. Index.

Booklist 37:462 Je 1 '41

"A completely successful handling of a rather difficult job. . . To have taken this fragmentary and somewhat sterile material and made it into a fascinating and strongly moving narrative is no slight achievement." Lincoln Colcord
+ Books p1 Ap 27 '41 1200w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 5 '41 650w

"Romance, heroism, adventure are here, which combined with the personal knowledge of the author, give the reader a book that is engrossing, authoritative, informative, and revealing of man's character." R. C. B.
+ Churchman 155:34 Je 15 '41 130w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:375 Ja '42 10w

"Mr. Owen was the man to write this book. . . A thorough man in his profession, he respects his assignment and, careful in research, he does the job as it should be done. The book is attractively produced. The photographs enable one to visualize the formidable scene. The maps are clear and help to tell the story." P. W. Wilson
+ N Y Times p5 My 18 '41 1450w

"A good, readable collection, some of it first hand. Excellent maps and photographs."
+ New Yorker 17:87 My 3 '41 70w

OWENS, HAMILTON. Baltimore on the Chesapeake. (Seaport ser) 342p il $3.50 Doubleday

975.26 Baltimore, Maryland (W) 41-17790

A history of the city and port from early days—before the city was laid out—to the present. The author is editor of the Baltimore Sun. Index.

Booklist 38:50 O 15 '41

"Mr. Owens is the master of an easy and highly agreeable style; and he is of the discriminating few who are not afraid of a little judicious levity when their purpose is serious." Hulbert Footner
+ Books p4 S 21 '41 850w

"Mr. Owens has just the right combination of local knowledge, historical perspective, and literary skill. The illustrations are effective."
+ Nation 153:649 D 20 '41 150w

"Wise and exceedingly well written history."
+ New Repub 105:446 O 6 '41 80w

"Baltimore lies nearly 200 miles from the ocean, 'but it is a salt tide which laves the docks and piers which line its nearly 100 miles of foreshore.' . . And now, as it takes its place in the Seaport Series, the town is fortunate in having as biographer a man who not only knows and loves his subject but can let his own mind be swept, in intimate acquaintance and affection, by those tides that rush up the Chesapeake from the sea." Katherine Woods
+ N Y Times p4 S 21 '41 1200w

"Entertaining history of a vigorous Eastern port."
+ New Yorker 17:111 S 20 '41 50w

"Mr. Owens agreed that his book 'is almost exclusively concerned with the business of Baltimore and that little of the legendary and picturesque has found a place.' But although this lack is noticeable before he speaks of it, and becomes even more regrettable when he mentions samples of what he might have told about, his story of Baltimore certainly cannot be said to suffer unduly from lack of the unusual. The bare facts of Baltimore's history are interesting in themselves, and the colorful actions of planters and sailors, Federalists and Jeffersonians, and Quakers and Know-Nothings make romance enough for any taste."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 S 23 '41 800w
Wis Lib Bul 37:176 N '41

OXENHAM, JOHN, originally WILLIAM ARTHUR DUNKERLEY, and OXENHAM, ERICA ISOBEL. Out of the body; a plain man's parable of the life to come. 117p $1.25 (3s 6d; pa 1s 6d) Longmans

237 Future life

"This little work [was] written by the late John Oxenham, in the last weeks of his life, with the collaboration of his daughter Erica. The picture given of the future life is founded on a dream, here given in full and showing a remarkable recollection of the kind of detail usually so difficult to recall in the most vivid dreams, such as long consequent conversations. The conception of 'the next life' is based on the survival of the physical powers and tendencies, but only as 'a new beginning leading to still other new beginnings,' and is consistent with the modern spiritualistic teaching that death brings with it little or no change in the mentality of the individual." Times [London] Lit Sup

Christian Century 58:1611 D 24 '41 90w

Times [London] Lit Sup p475 S 20 '41 140w

OXFORD dictionary of quotations; with an introd. by Carl Van Doren. 879p $5 (25s) Oxford 808.8 Quotations (W)

"An impressive collection of quotations whose wide usage has proved their popularity. Alphabetical arrangement by author, with special sections of quotations from the Book of Common prayer, the Bible, and from foreign languages. Indexed by key words. Although the type used is small its arrangement makes an unusually legible page for a reference work of this type." Booklist

Booklist 38:110 D 1 '41

Books p13 Ja 4 '42 300w

"There are many useful dictionaries of quotations already in print, but the latest addition to the excellent series of 'Oxford' reference books quite justifies its existence. . . The index, with about eighty thousand references, is a good one, but is not infallible. For instance, Byron's 'Looking tranquillity' is indexed, while Congreve's earlier use of the words is ignored." E. A.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 O 3 '41 260w

"Though it is intended for reference and not for reading I was reminded by a few hours' delightful browsing that such a book, when really well made, is better than most anthologies and most omnibuses. A college 'survey course' which used it instead of the customary thick volume of 'selections' might give students a rather higher opinion of both the profundity and the liveliness of literary expression in the English language, and I am not sure that it would really be much scrapper." J. W. Krutch
+ Nation 153:514 N 22 '41 600w

"A book necessary to every library, public or private. . . This Oxford Dictionary is exemplary. . . Let me begin, however, with such meagre complaints as I can muster. The sources, wisely, are arranged by authors in alphabetical not chronological order, and the first name is Charles Follen Adams; it ought, I suggest, to be Lord Acton. . . Many of the quotations given strike me as pointless, while others are misleading. Under Swift for instance, we are given the bromides, from Polite Conversation, which the Dean, so far from originating, was satirising with disgust."

OXFORD dictionary of quotations—Continued
 Raymond Mortimer

+ — New Statesman & Nation 22:310 S 27 '41 1150w

"It will not necessarily supersede Bartlett but is certainly as valuable."

+ New Yorker 17:111 N 15 '41 30w

"A more delicious case of English insularity (and I say it as one who greatly honors the English for many things) has seldom come to the attention of this reviewer than is 'The Oxford Dictionary of Quotations.' The idea of American literature to be derived from it is so very startling, that I wonder how Carl Van Doren, the elected introducer, managed to hold his tongue. . . . It's a gorgeous book! Now let's be fair. . . . The pagination and indexing are perfect for quick attribution of the familiar line or verse to the right author." W. R. Benét
 Sat R of Lit 24:14 D 20 '41 950w

"The scope of this dictionary is wide: the password to inclusion, say the compilers, is popularity, not merit. . . . Omissions surprising to some people are no doubt inevitable in a compilation of this kind. Nevertheless it comes as a slight shock to find that the only saying of Winston Churchill's to gain inclusion in this 1941 dictionary is a phrase from a speech delivered in 1906. . . . It is the compilers' practice to give an author's dates, either exactly or as near as they are known. Sometimes, however, there is an irritating silence or the vague comment 'contemp.' . . . Professional users will welcome its orderly arrangement: casual readers will spend happy hours dipping into it. And if anyone is indignant over omissions, let him write to the publishers." Barbara Watson
 + — Spec 167:388 O 17 '41 500w

OXNAM, GARFIELD BROMLEY, bp. The ethical ideals of Jesus in a changing world. 135p $1 Abingdon-Cokesbury

261 Sociology, Christian. Jesus Christ—Ethics 41-14176

Five lectures delivered to the students of Florida Southern College. They are based on the thesis that: "Jesus believed that personality was of supreme value. He put men before things. The question of right and wrong was decided by reference to his estimate of the worth of persons." (p. 15) Contents: The ethical ideals of Jesus; The changing world; The ethical ideals of Jesus and the international order; The ethical ideals of Jesus and the economic crisis; The future of democracy.

Reviewed by J. H. Holmes
 Books p14 S 28 '41 240w

"If you have an intelligent son or daughter who is confused about values today, who may be disturbed about the validity of Christian values, here's an answer. It would be a blessing, also, if adults who compose our church congregations would show enough vital interest in their religion to read such a book." James van Zant

+ Churchman 155:18 S 15 '41 300w

P

PAGE, MRS MILDRED MASTIN. Clara Barton; il. by Robert Ball. 141p $1.50 Scribner
 B or 92 Barton, Clara Harlowe—Juvenile literature. Red cross. U.S. American national Red cross (W) 41-51706

This biography for young people tells the story of Clara Barton, her early years, her work with the soldiers in the Civil war, and finally her part in the formation of the American Red cross.

Booklist 37:412 My 1 '41

"Here is a valuable biography for young people. Its style is direct and dignified, its sweep through the Civil War made without partisanship, its treatment of post-war confusion brief and enlightening." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 My 11 '41 380w

"This is a biography worthy of any one's attention, yet it can be easily read and understood by a ten-year-old." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:216 My '41 160w

"A worthy addition to biography for children." D. L. Wood

+ Library J 66:310 Ap 1 '41 80w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell

N Y Times p10 My 25 '41 440w

"Clara Barton's determined character will appeal to almost any boy or girl and her story makes a book full of action and courage. To read it will give more meaning to the Red Cross work young people are now being asked to do."

+ New Yorker 17:91 My 24 '41 60w

Springf'd Republican p10 Ap 10 '41 300w

Wis Lib Bul 37:161 O '41

PAGE, ARTHUR WILSON. Bell telephone system. 248p maps $2 Harper

384.6 Telephone. American telephone and telegraph company 41-20397

"A glowing account of the business practices and philosophy, the accomplishments and problems of the Bell Telephone System, by a vice-president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company." (Am Econ R) Index.

Am Econ R 31:904 D '41 30w

Booklist 38:184 F 1 '42

"It is an impressive record, and one which Mr. Page's fourteen years with the company make convincing reading." Norman Stabler

+ Books p42 D 7 '41 190w

"Arthur W. Page never forgets that the telephone business in this country is not only enormous . . . but pertinently bound up with family and individual life. . . . He has a stimulating chapter on research and technology. He discusses both State and Federal regulation. His book is compact, interesting and admirably informative."

+ N Y Times p37 N 2 '41 240w

PAGE, KIRBY. Living prayerfully; how to experience life's deepest satisfactions and serve mankind most effectively. 523p $2 Farrar

242 Devotional exercises. Prayer. Sociology, Christian (W) 41-4594

"A handbook of prayer, a study of the spiritual stimuli to prayer and a great body of reading, poems and prayers all bearing on certain phases of the subjects which are invaluable to any man looking for literary helps to the life with God. . . . [Dr Page] has gone back into ancient writings for his illustrations and he has made use of contemporary thinkers as well. It is a gathering together of great religious experiences divided into seven general fields, awe and adoration, praise and thanksgiving, contrition and confession, aspiration and commitment, petition and intercession, communion and fellowship, and social action." (Churchman) Index.

"In this thoughtful, devout and deeply earnest book, prayer is made practical and the life of action is given both a spiritual anchorage and a spiritual objective."

+ Christian Century 58:328 Mr 5 '41 240w

"'Living Prayerfully' will be found a storehouse of excellent topics, beautifully set forth." A. F. Gilmore

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ap 26 '41 850w

"The book is a great treasury of the most penetrating thoughts of great souls in every field of thought and work. . . Such books can be dreadfully dull and mechanical but there is nothing of the prayer-wheel in this book. It is living, real and intelligent and it expresses the best religious thought of the most religious people in any such store-house of religious experiences." H. J. Simpson
+ Churchman 155:17 Ap 15 '41 230w

PAINTER, ELEANOR (MRS CHARLES H. STRONG). Spring symphony. 362p $2.50 Harper

Schumann, Mrs Clara Josephine (Wieck)—Fiction. Schumann, Robert Alexander—Fiction (W) 41-51538

Novelized love story of Robert Schumann and Clara Wieck, a story which began when she was a child of eight.

Booklist 37:270 F 15 '41

"Unfortunately, although Eleanor Painter is a musician herself, she doesn't quite succeed in communicating her knowledge and love of music to the reader. . . The story has been told in a rather rococo manner, which perhaps is suited to its subject, since Schumann himself was sentimental and emotional. Unfortunately, though, something is still wanting—a little more subtlety, a greater delicacy—something to convince the reader that this was a great man." Anne Brooks
+ Books p8 Ja 12 '41 440w

"This book will delight tasters in the saccharine school of fictionalized biography, for the author has chosen a style of sentimentality closely akin to florid melodrama as her medium with which to relate the lives and achievements of the illustrious Schumanns. . . An overwhelming 'gemütlichkeit,' probably caused by unobjective devotion on the part of Miss Painter to her characters may alienate the reading interests of genuine Schumann admirers." H. S. Taylor

— Library J 66:80 Ja 15 '41 140w

Reviewed by Harold Brighouse
Manchester Guardian p3 D 12 '41 80w

"For readers who can't take their biographies straight, here is the fictionalized love story of Robert Schumann and Clara Wieck. The very touching tale of their long betrothal offers plenty of pitfalls for the sentimental writer, and Miss Painter strays into most of them."

— New Repub 104:126 Ja 27 '41 40w

"Miss Painter's book is readable as long as the author quotes or relates simply. It grows annoyingly sentimental or thin whenever she gilds her material novelistically, adding the touches of her own imagination. The contrast between Miss Painter's difficult theme and her slight manner of writing is a disturbing one. Her style is vague; her characters have little color. . . Miss Painter, a singer of distinction, shows a fine knowledge of music. Her understanding in this field and her faithful quotations make up for many of the sentimental or empty stretches." Marianne Hauser
+ N Y Times p7 Ja 5 '41 600w

"When Miss Painter lets them tell it in their own words, it is pathetic and poignant; her own comments are likely to be sugar-coated. Pleasant if you like fictionalized lives of famous persons; in this case, lots of music is thrown in for good measure."

— New Yorker 16:64 Ja 11 '41 50w

"Miss Painter has blocked in a generous background; she has built her characters solidly and honestly, and when her invented dialogue grows too stilted and lifeless, she has turned to the letters themselves which bring Clara and Robert at once and effectively alive." A. C. Dee

Sat R of Lit 23:17 F 1 '41 500w

"The chief characters are well drawn, especially Clara, whose charm is not falsified by the streak of obtuseness she undoubtedly possessed in real life. Her father, Wieck, is perhaps too consistently black, though his behaviour was so outrageous that any retrospective view of him inevitably becomes unbalanced—a biographer could do him justice but hardly a novelist, for whom he is the villain of the piece. . . The picture of old Germany and the internationalism of art add to the attractions of an absorbing story vividly and sympathetically told."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p653 D 27 '41 420w

Wis Lib Bul 37:36 F '41

PAISH, SIR GEORGE. Defeat of chaos. 122p $1 Appleton-Century

330.9 Economic policy. Commercial policy 41-2754

A British economist examines the prospects of a new world order after the defeat of Germany and the contributions toward world prosperity and stability which must be made by the different nations.

"The little book by Sir George Paish impresses this reviewer as an oversimple, uncritical reiteration of old slogans, applied to the problem of creating a new era of peace after this war in such a way as to cover up the real difficulties. . . Something much more positive than a naïve faith in the market system and a return to 'normalcy' will be necessary after this war if we are to achieve a stable economic basis for a democratic world system. The argument of the book is often exaggerated and inaccurate." Eugene Staley
— Am Econ R 31:625 S '41 300w

Am Hist R 46:965 J1 '41 20w

"One of the author's least important books."

O. T. Mallory

Ann Am Acad 215:198 My '41 230w

Christian Century 58:291 F 26 '41 100w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 19:872 J1 '41 50w

"Rather naïve politically."

New Yorker 16:56 F 1 '41 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 19 '41 180w

"The book is essentially propaganda, with corresponding merits and defects. It hardly allows sufficiently for reasoned objections, like the desire of young countries to possess secondary industries; and its own proposals, especially in regard to the gold standard, are not all sufficiently argued. But it states its case clearly, vigorously and ably; and it is in this that its value consists."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p314 Je 28 '41 350w

Wis Lib Bul 37:51 Mr '41

PALENCIA, ISABEL DE. Juan: son of the fisherman; il. by Ceferino Palencia Tubau. 207p $1.75 Longmans

Children in Spain (W) 41-19427

Authentic story of life in Spain, written by the first Spanish woman to represent her country at a foreign court. Juan, who wanted to be a fisherman from the time he was a small boy, had to go inland to stay with relatives. He learned about raising bulls, growing olives, tending goats, and went to school besides. But in time he returned to his seaside village to become a fisherman. For children ten to twelve.

Booklist 38:136 D 15 '41

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p6 O 12 '41 200w

Reviewed by E. V. Wyatt
Cath World 154:377 D '41 40w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse
Commonweal 35:112 N 21 '41 20w

PALENCIA, ISABEL DE—Continued

"Juan is a friendly, likable boy and it is pleasant to learn that he gets back to the sea again and to the boat that was his father's. A Christmas chapter gives an idea of Spanish observances." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:369 S '41 90w

"This is a delightfully written book. . . It has convincing atmosphere and fair characterization, a moderately interesting plot and a charming format. The type is unusually large, the black and white illustrations are numerous, and the page is an off-white that is very restful to the eyes." Gertrude Andrus

+ Library J 66:846 O 1 '41 150w

"The atmosphere is authentic, the style simple and easy, and though the characterization is slight, the incidents of the story will interest 8-to-10 year-olds. The type is clear and large and there are many illustrations in black and white." A. T. E.

+ N Y Times p33 N 2 '41 200w

Social Studies 32:380 D '41 10w

Springf'd Republican p7e O 12 '41 60w

PALMER, ALBERT WENTWORTH. Come, let us worship. 136p il $1.50 Macmillan

264 Public worship 41-5996

A book of practical suggestions on how to add beauty and spirituality to the services in small Protestant churches. The author is president of the Chicago Theological seminary. Index.

Reviewed by Clarence Seidenspinner

+ Christian Century 58:721 My 28 '41 480w

"Ministers and laymen accustomed to liturgical services and familiar with the principles of congregational worship will like the way the president of the Chicago Congregational Seminary seeks the roots, motives and objectives of worship. Others who have not utilized as fully as they might have the principles and practices outlined here, will find this pioneering book full of helpful ideas." A. L. M.

+ Churchman 155:34 Je 15 '41 130w

Reviewed by W. R. McNutt

Crozer Q 18:278 Jl '41 90w

PALMER, MRS ALICE ELVIRA (FREEMAN), and PALMER, GEORGE HERBERT. An academic courtship; letters of Alice Freeman and George Herbert Palmer, 1886-1887; with an introd. by Caroline Hazard. 259p $3 Harvard univ. press

B or 92 Palmer, George Herbert 40-27818

"Alice Freeman had been president of Wellesley College for five years—though her age was then only 31—when she met Professor George Herbert Palmer of Harvard and the acquaintance ripened quickly into friendship. . . Not until a solution could be found for Wellesley's problem did she feel that she could give up her work, or even make public her intention of marrying. And in that year and a half, from the morning of their meeting to the eve of their marriage, Alice Freeman and George Herbert Palmer wrote each other letters which may now take their place in literature. . . Seven years after Professor Palmer's death, Alice Freeman Palmer's sister has, as she says in a brief foreword, 'come to believe that the letters contain too much of general interest and rare spiritual beauty to remain longer a private possession.'" N Y Times

Booklist 37:152 D 15 '40

Bookmark 2:11 My '41

"Many pages of the letters now printed are of a beauty and fineness which transcend the directly personal and suggest something of the universal in a relationship of devotion between men and women at once high-minded and true-hearted. . . There is a capital story of President Eliot's playing the 'hound of heaven' in the field of education to a young clerk he happened to encounter in a Boston store. Other glimpses of Harvard and Cambridge add their value to the book, which beyond its immediate locus will probably appeal most to such an eclectic reader as this brief notice may have disclosed."

M. A. D. Howe

+ New Eng Q 14:153 Mr '41 600w

+ N Y Times p34 N 24 '40 600w

Wis Lib Bul 37:34 F '41

PALMER, GEORGE THOMAS. A conscientious turncoat; the story of John M. Palmer, 1817-1900; with an introd. by Lloyd Lewis. 297p $3 Yale univ. press

B or 92 Palmer, John McAuley 41-8016

Biography of an American Civil War major general, written by his grandson. "Born and reared in a slave state, he became a vehement abolitionist; a Southerner, he became a major general in the Union Army; a hereditary Democrat, he helped found the Republican party; a Republican governor of Illinois, he switched back to the Democratic party; a successful lawyer of means and respectability, he fought for social reform and radical labor legislation; a Democratic United States senator, he helped organize the 'goldbug' revolt and headed the Gold-Democrat third party which probably took enough votes away from William Jennings Bryan to elect William McKinley president and enthrone Mark Hanna Republicanism for its long reign." (Introd) Index.

"Although the author portrays his grandfather with evident sympathy and approval, the book is more than an instance of pious ancestor worship. Palmer's 'character and disposition' make interesting reading. He was vigorous, strong-willed, independent, ambitious, earnest in controversy, and ardent in affections." G. F. Howe

+ Ann Am Acad 217:223 S '41 500w

"The author writes with obvious admiration for his subject, but he makes no attempt to gloss over weaknesses. The result is a well balanced, sympathetic portrait for which a place has long been waiting." P. M. Angle

+ Books p3 My 11 '41 650w

"Essentially this is a personal account of an important and interesting State leader in the period of Civil War and reconstruction. There is no attempt to present any account of the period in a national sense, but only to narrate Palmer's own doings, largely as told in his letters home." T. R. Hay

+ N Y Times p24 O 26 '41 750w

Times [London] Lit Sup p647 D 20 '41 200w

PALMER, JOHN MCAULEY. America in arms; the experience of the United States with military organization. 207p $2 Yale univ. press

355 U.S.—Army—History 41-9795

In this book the author examines and appraises Washington's plan for American defense, shows how and why his plan was nullified, reviews our military organization since Washington's time, and gives a blue-print for our future plans based primarily on Washington's thesis that a democracy should be and could be best defended by a citizen army.

Reviewed by Malcolm Wheeler-Nicholson

Ann Am Acad 218:197 N '41 650w

Booklist 37:540 Jl 15 '41

"Gen. Palmer, with a wealth of historical knowledge and a broad background of military experience, performs a worthwhile service in pointing out past mistakes and presenting remedial measures." P. J. Searles

+ Books p12 Je 29 '41 480w

Reviewed by C. W. Thompson

Cath World 153:757 S '41 600w

Christian Century 58:629 My 7 '41 160w

Christian Science Monitor p11 J1 12 '41
600w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:200 O '41 30w

"Undoubtedly an important book at this time. Recommended." R. D. Minnich
+ Library J 66:400 My 1 '41 80w

"Historically this book is of definite value and General Palmer's views are entitled to the respect which his long experience and thorough studies merit. But one could have wished for a more comprehensive military development of his thesis." H. W. Baldwin
+ — N Y Times p6 J1 20 '41 1550w

PALMER, ROBERT ROSWELL. Twelve who ruled; the Committee of public safety during the Terror. 417p il $3.75 Princeton univ. press 944.044 France—History—Revolution. France. Comité de salut public 41-19539

Detailed history of a memorable year in French history—from July 1793 to July 1794, the year of the Terror, the climax of the French revolution. The twelve were the members of the Committee of Public Safety under the convention. Index.

Reviewed by J. M. Eagan

Ann Am Acad 218:210 N '41 1100w

"The book is challenging, as well as informative. Judged purely as a contribution to factual history, it is a fine piece of work. It is well written: the parable which opens Chapter II, 'remodeling the old house,' could have been amplified by Kafka into a long symbolical tale. I suppose the portraits, 'by an unidentified nineteenth century artist,' were the best available. But they offer no clew to the power of 'the twelve who ruled.'" Albert Guerard
+ — Books p12 O 12 '41 1050w

"A scholarly but eminently readable book." G. H. McNeil

+ Christian Century 59:21 Ja 7 '42 650w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse

Commonweal 35:202 D 12 '41 210w

"This is a good book and it would be unfair to assert that it could have been a better book if the author had been a little more stark with Robespierre. Time alone will reduce that little man from Arras if not to the place he occupied in history during the sentimental nineteenth century at least to a place that he deserves. And it can be done without mud or white-wash." Herbert Gorman
+ — N Y Times p37 N 23 '41 1100w

"Professor Palmer writes from an expert's fund of knowledge of the French Revolution, but he writes for the general reader and not merely for his fellow Ph.D.'s. He has an admirable gift for exposition and for the enlivening detail or anecdote. He has that detachment from French political quarrels which is not so easy for American historians to achieve as one might at first assume. Above all, he maintains a balance between the standards of the professional historian and the demand, nowadays so insistent, that those who write about the past should attempt to arrive at sociological and philosophical generalizations useful in the present." Crane Brinton
+ Sat R of Lit 24:11 S 27 '41 800w

PALMER, STUART. The puzzle of the happy hooligan. 275p $2 Doubleday 41-5113

Detective story.

Booklist 37:410 My 1 '41

"Miss Withers is such a charmer, in her Edna May Oliver way, that you really won't mind the Hollywood people who mill around... This is a good-natured tale, rather carelessly tossed off, we venture." Will Cuppy
+ — Books p25 Ap 6 '41 200w

"Absorbing and very funny."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 19 '41 60w

Reviewed by Mort. Post

New Repub 104:674 My 12 '41 40w

"There are those who say that humor is out of place in a detective story, just as there are those who say that nobody has ever written a good detective story since Edgar Allan Poe, but who cares? In our humble opinion, 'The Puzzle of the Happy Hooligan' is a book that will keep you guessing and laughing from the first page to the last. All the Hildergarde Withers stories have been good, and this is the best of the lot." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p20 Ap 13 '41 200w

"Gossipy gush about studios and stars may amuse some, but slows up thrilling yarn with clever and original pay-off. 60-40."
+ — Sat R of Lit 23:20 Ap 19 '41 40w

"A good thriller and a mine of information." John Fairfield
+ Spec 167:540 D 5 '41 100w

Time 37:100 My 5 '41 40w

PANCOAST, OMAR. Occupational mobility; democratic efficiency through the use of human resources. 155p $1.75 Columbia univ. press

330.1 Division of labor. Occupations. Vocational guidance. Wages 41-20941

"Dr. Pancoast's theme is that a large-scale program of vocational guidance and training designed to increase occupational mobility would help signally in combating unemployment, faulty distribution of workers, monopolistic practices, and waste of human resources. Written for students of economics, vocational counselors, and educators." (J Home Econ) Bibliography. Index.

J Home Econ 34:52 Ja '42 50w

"In these trying days, when it is essential that the full resources of the country be utilized in the war effort, any method that aims at a more efficient use of the nation's man power deserves careful consideration. Such a plan is presented in 'Occupational Mobility.'" W. J. Dunn

+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 28 '41 490w

PANKEN, JACOB. The child speaks; the prevention of juvenile delinquency. 345p $2.50 Holt

364 Juvenile delinquency. Child study 41-8603

For many years the author, as a judge of the Children's court in New York city, has handled the cases of so-called delinquent children. His book is in two parts; part one contains a series of chapters dealing with various aspects of the problem of the delinquent child; part two contains a number of case histories with, in most cases, samples of letters exchanged by the judge and the children. The book closes with a list of books the author has recommended to the children for reading. Index.

Booklist 37:540 J1 15 '41

Reviewed by B. H. Levy

Books p10 J1 6 '41 250w

Christian Century 58:783 Je 11 '41 170w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 30 '41 650w

"The Child Speaks is of importance to more than social workers, it is a book for parents and teachers that will profitably repay them for the reading. It is the recital of good theories which have been put into excellent practice and there is something convincing about whatever has been demonstrated." Raimundo De Ovies
+ Churchman 155:21 O 1 '41 300w

"The author brings to bear an intelligent, humane, and sensitive understanding of the child's point of view, firmly convinced that 'every time a boy is saved, a good man is born.'" G. O. Kelley
+ Library J 66:400 My 1 '41 130w

PANKEN, JACOB—Continued

"This is a searching and candid book."

+ N Y Times p4 Je 22 '41 400w

"Out of his long experience in the children's Court of Manhattan, Judge Panken has written a book on juvenile delinquency which all parents should read. . . More than half of the book is given over to case histories from the files of the Children's Court—fascinating stories as absorbing and as stimulating as any fiction. Some of them are presented, however, in too skimpy a fashion; the book would have benefited had there been fewer case histories with a consequent allotment of more space to each one."

M. H.

+ Sat R of Lit 24:17 J1 5 '41 240w

"The book as a whole is a sane and intelligent contribution to the literature of juvenile delinquency." J. P. Shalloo

+ Social Studies 32:330 N '41 250w

"This book, all things considered, provides much worth-while reading for parents, teachers, and all who are involved in the guidance of children." M. E. Hatch

+ Springfield Republican p7e Je 22 '41 550w

Wis Lib Bul 37:134 J1 '41

PARKER, BERTHA MORRIS. Animals of yesterday; checked for scientific accuracy by Elmer S. Riggs; il. by Frederick E. Seyfarth. 36p $1 Harper

560 Paleontology—Juvenile literature

(W) 41-51708

Pictorial history of prehistoric birds, sea and land animals. Fossils and how they were made, are also described, and how they are collected and preserved in museums. The book was checked for scientific accuracy by E. S. Riggs, curator of paleontology of the Field museum of natural history. For ages ten to twelve.

"Checked for scientific accuracy by an authority, this lucid account of life before the Age of Man is framed for younger readers by an experienced teacher of science in the Laboratory School of the University of Chicago. . . A worthwhile book for beginners in science." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 18:31 Ja '42 100w

"Many excellent illustrations in color." A. E. Brown

+ Library J 66:1049 D 1 '41 70w

"Competent." Raymond Holden

+ Sat R of Lit 24:9 N 8 '41 20w

Wis Lib Bul 37:204 D '41

PARKER, BERTHA MORRIS. Fishes; checked for scientific accuracy by Walter H. Shute; il. by Elizabeth Newhall. 36p $1 Harper

597 Fishes—Juvenile literature (W) 41-17811

"Information about many kinds of fish—where they live, what they eat, how they protect themselves, their life cycle, and their place in the food supply of the world. . . Illustrated with full-color pictures." Publisher's note

Booklist 38:100 N 15 '41

"Miss Parker writes in an interesting and informative style. . . The author addresses her story to any age child with an enquiring mind, but probably her books will be most appreciated by fifth and sixth grade children." A. E. Brown

+ Library J 66:846 O 1 '41 120w

Wis Lib Bul 37:204 D 41

PARKER, BERTHA MORRIS. Seeds and seed travels; il. by Olive Earle. 36p $1 Harper

581 Seeds—Juvenile literature (W) 41-17810

Presents the story of seeds in simple prose and colored pictures. Their characteristics and habits of travel are especially studied, for young readers of from six to ten.

Booklist 38:100 N 15 '41

"It is a very attractive looking book and gives information to lower and intermediate grade children. . . Recommended for all libraries, to be used before Quinn's Seeds, Their Place in Life and Legend." A. E. Brown

+ Library J 66:847 O 1 '41 60w

"Well-presented." Raymond Holden

+ Sat R of Lit 24:9 N 8 '41 20w

Wis Lib Bul 37:204 D '41

PARKER, BERTHA MORRIS, and PARK, THOMAS. Animal travels; il. by Olive Earle. 36p maps $1 Harper

591.52 Animals, Migration of. Birds—Migration 41-22932

Study of the migration of birds and animals, written for children from seven to twelve.

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse

Commonweal 35:111 N 21 '41 20w

"Imagination is stirred by the information in this factual book, clearly written for the six to ten year old and fully illustrated in color." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 18:31 Ja '42 90w

"This book discusses three kinds of migrations: normal, periodic, and occasional. It does not pretend to treat the subject fully, but answers questions in a way to start inquisitive children thinking and send them off on a hunt for migration facts about particular animals." A. E. Brown

+ Library J 66:1049 D 1 '41 70w

"The facts are there but their handling is unimaginative. Informative." Raymond Holden

Sat R of Lit 24:9 N 8 '41 20w

Wis Lib Bul 37:204 D '41

PARKER, DEWITT HENRY. Experience and substance; an essay in metaphysics. 37ip $3 Univ. of Mich.

110 Experience. Metaphysics 41-4338

"Parker's basic doctrine is that reality is essentially social, that is, that the primary units of existence are individuals endowed with experience of some sort, and that they are linked together by relations of direct interaction. The notion of mere, dead matter is effectively criticized, and it is shown that the basic categories, such as causality, relation, quality, substance, can be understood only in psychological terms—'psychological,' however, meaning something much more general than 'human.' The book culminates in an account of God as the cosmic psyche who cannot prevent all evil, not because of any arbitrary or external 'limits' to his omnipotence, but because he wills to create and sustain a community of beings socially related to himself and each other, that is, beings endowed with some independence of action." Christian Century

"This excellent essay shows that metaphysics, often proclaimed dead or dying, is very much alive." Charles Hartshorne

+ Christian Century 58:864 J1 2 '41 330w

"On the whole, where his premises are sound, his conclusions do not seem to follow; where the conclusions hold, the premises seem to be inadequate; where the position is strong, the criticisms are not convincing; and where the criticisms are just, the alternative is not clearly stated. . . It is not enough to tell the truth as one sees it; one must say it so that another can say and see it too. It is regrettable that Professor Parker's conspicuous originality and incisive observations fail to take him over this barrier. His is a book of notes, though written in a continuous fashion. It is to be hoped that it will be followed by a systematic work where the discussion is up to the level of the present insights." Paul Weiss

— + Ethics 51:487 J1 '41 550w

PARKER, ERIC. World of birds. 295p $3 (8s 6d) Longmans 598.2 Birds

Collection of essays on the habits and behavior of some English birds, based on many years of bird study and observation. Partial contents: Birds in a garden; Migrants; Woodpeckers; Drumming snipe; Colours of eggs; Rooks; Curlew; Birds of changing habits; Birds of the wilderness; Bird song in poetry.

"Mr. Eric Parker shows himself to be a real bird-lover. . . That stock-doves and farm pigeons and hybrids between them inhabit London is a statement that must be regarded with surprise. . . Another point, which published ringing records have clearly disproved, is that swallows' young nest in the same place as their parents; the young return to the same neighbourhood, it is true, but never, or very rarely, to exactly the same place. The final chapter on 'Bird song in poetry' is delightful, and contains much familiar verse." A. W. B.

+ — Manchester Guardian p3 S 30 '41 200w

"Amidst the welter of war and the literature that war brings it is pleasant to escape for a while to the memories and the studies of many years in a busy life. For this is an encouraging book. It shows how Nature may be wooed and won not merely by the intrepid explorer in distant lands and tropic jungles but by the ordinary man in ordinary surroundings on no great distance from the heart of Fleet Street. . . His affection may, however, entrap the unwary if they do not remember that many of the problems in this book have been handled by more modern writers."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p486 S 27 '41 440w

PARKER, GLEN LAWHON. The coal industry; a study in social control; introd. by Howard A. Gray. 198p $3; pa $2.50 Am. council on public affairs

338.2 Coal. Industry—Organization, control, etc. 40-29720

"The first part of this study deals with the functioning of the bituminous coal industry in the United States since the World War. . . This part of the book ends with an historical sketch of unionism in the industry. The second half of the book deals with the development of programs for stabilizing the industry. The author traces the evolution of the N.R.A. coal program and considers the problems that were encountered in setting minimum prices. . . Dr. Parker discusses the short-lived Act of 1935, and then turns to the Bituminous Coal Act of 1937. . . The study concludes with an appraisal of various control schemes, ranging from the sales agency device to nationalized coal mining. The author believes the scope of the present law is too narrow, and looks forward to something more comprehensive." Ann Am Acad

Reviewed by C. C. Rohlfing
Am Pol Sci R 35:166 F '41 460w

Reviewed by C. M. James
Ann Am Acad 213:225 Ja '41 360w

"A factual study of a given industry, which incorporates materials from related fields, is perhaps the closest approximation to a laboratory experiment that can be made in the social sciences. The coal industry, inextricably bound up as it is with the larger industrial economy, is only with difficulty made subject to this approach; but whatever the obstacles, it is only a study such as this that can be of value to the legislator and the social scientist in their attempt to promote an efficient industrial system for the nation."

Harvard Law R 54:1430 Je '41 280w

Social Studies 32:239 My '41 30w

PARKER, HARRY EWING. Simplified design of roof trusses for architects and builders. 195p $2.75 Wiley

624.3 Trusses. Roofs. Strains and stresses 41-1447

"The present volume is prepared for those who have had no preliminary training in the design of roof trusses. The stresses in truss members are developed by means of graphical analysis. Beginning with simple systems of forces, the theory of graphic statics is evolved showing the application of the fundamental principles in constructing stress diagrams for various types of trusses and loading. . . Throughout the book will be found basic formulas or principles pertaining to mechanics." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 37:354 Ap 1 '41

N Y New Tech Bks 26:47 J1 '41

PARKER, JAMES REID. Attorneys at law: Forbes, Hathaway, Bryan & Devore. 247p $2 Doubleday

41-20731

Short stories anent the daily life at the offices of a firm of New York corporation lawyers. From the switchboard operators to the senior member of the firm, from the junior clerks to the sardonically humorous resigning librarian, the members of Forbes, Hathaway, Bryan & Devore are portrayed. Many of the sketches have appeared in the New Yorker.

Booklist 38:131 D 15 '41

"Mr. Parker has the effrontery—the outrageous and deliciously successful effrontery—to hold up to ridicule and more the pretentious 'big corporation lawyers' of Pine Street. And, if you doubt that they deserve what they get from him you have only to read his 'Attorneys at Law: Forbes, Hathaway, Bryan & Devore' to catch the authentic ring of steel on stone and see the honest sparks fly." F. H. Bullock

+ Books p6 N 16 '41 700w

"Mildly amusing but rather pointless and generally unsatisfactory. The opening scene of the chatter of the slangy telephone switchboard operators, and the closing, of the flitting of the librarian to greener pastures, are the best in the book." J. E. Cross

— + Library J 66:904 O 15 '41 90w

"Most of the stories of which the book is composed are funny, as befits publication in The New Yorker, where many of them previously appeared. Their humor comes from an adult and tolerant understanding of the wickedness inherent in all human nature, and occasionally evident in lawyers." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p22 O 26 '41 320w

New Yorker 17:91 O 25 '41 40w

"Mr. Parker's . . . sketches are sometimes revealing, occasionally a bit jolting, and almost always entertaining. While such ponderosities as riparian rights, unfair competition, and philanthropic trusts are thrown in now and then just for the fun of it, Mr. Parker's concern is not with the law but with lawyers as human beings." Alexander Lindley

+ Sat R of Lit 24:10 D 6 '41 360w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 2 '41 300w

PARKER, MARGARET TERRELL. Lowell: a study of industrial development. (Wellesley college publication) 238p 11 maps $2.25 Macmillan

330.97444 Lowell, Massachusetts—Economic conditions 40-32932

"Dr. Parker's little book deals with the geography, history, and industrial experience of Lowell, Massachusetts, a city which has been in itself an epitome of the rise and fall of the New England textile industry. She traces this rise and fall in painstaking detail but gives most of her attention to the topographical and geographical position of Lowell in the Merrimac Valley and New England and the successive changes in the location of firms and mills within the city." Am J Soc

PARKER, M. T.—Continued

"Dr. Parker is not happy when she approaches facts of sociological or economic character, tending to be perfunctory with them; and she seems never to have heard of human beings. But the fault is not hers. Rather it is a sign of the too great fragmentation of the social sciences. Yet if any sociologist wants a geographical and historical handbook on Lowell, Massachusetts, with which to begin either a community study or an investigation into the social process or effects of industrial decline, let him arm himself with a copy of Dr. Parker's book." C. M. Arensburg
+ — Am J Soc 47:262 S '41 270w

"Although Miss Parker has avoided fundamental problems, it is evident from her ample bibliography and from various statements throughout the book that she is thoroughly familiar with the material on other major cities of New England. She has confined herself to lesser issues apparently not so much by choice, but because of the nature of the thesis form. It is to be hoped, therefore, that she will now proceed to an analysis of the basic difficulties confronting all the manufacturing cities of central New England. Her gift for clear perception of problems, her capacity for patient and meticulous research, and above all her ability to assess justly conflicting contemporary evidence, these qualities, applied in such a field, cannot fail to produce important results." John Coolidge
+ — New Eng Q 14:185 Mr '41 1500w

PARKES, HENRY BAMFORD. Recent America; a history of the United States since 1900. 664p maps $4.50 Crowell

973.9 U.S.—History—20th century (W) 41-51576

The purpose of this book is to describe the chief forces in the development of American life; political, economic, and social, during the past forty years. The book is divided into five sections: The heritage of the nineteenth century; The progressive era; The world war; The twenties; The thirties. Index.

Reviewed by G. R. Taylor

Am Econ R 31:382 Je '41 300w

Reviewed by Preston Slosson

Am Hist R 47:162 O '41 250w

Booklist 37:290 Mr 1 '41

"As a brief and eminently readable account of the main streams of American development since 1900 Professor Parkes's book may be recommended alike to the formal student and the lay reader. The author moves with equal ease in political, economic and cultural fields; he writes trenchantly and quite often wittily." Louis Hacker
+ Books p17 Mr 23 '41 900w

"We should thank Dr. Parkes for placing in our hands an extremely readable volume of information about our structure that for the reading should enable us to face the future a little more intelligently." R. N. Mayall
+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 8 '41 500w

"Primarily a college textbook, with the qualities of a textbook of the better sort—an unprejudiced point of view, a clear style, close adherence to the facts, an ample spread of attention to include social and cultural as well as political data, and good bibliographies."

+ Christian Century 58:226 F 12 '41 40w

"Not original or startling but serviceable and well worth reading."

+ Commonweal 33:429 F 14 '41 60w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 19:877 Jl '41 30w

"Written in a clear, factual style, this book is a comprehensive review of contemporary events. It is valuable to students of American history." Géza Schütz

+ Library J 66:79 Ja 15 '41 220w

"Excellent, socio-economic history of the United States, notable for its clarity, objective balance, and what looks like an uncommonly accurate and catholic job of research. Easy to read, too."

+ New Yorker 17:83 F 15 '41 30w

Social Studies 32:335 N '41 10w

Reviewed by Harvey Wish

Survey G 30:482 S '41 120w

Wis Lib Bul 37:75 Ap '41

PARKHILL, MARTHA, and SPAETH, DOROTHY. It's fun to make things. 176p il $2 Barnes, A.S.

680 Handicraft (W) 41-10727

Each section is introduced by general comment on the art or handicraft treated including general suggestions on tools, materials and technique. This is followed by definite instructions on how to make half-a-dozen more or less useful articles. There are sections on painting, metal work, wood work, sewing, pottery, raffia, leathercraft, the use of gourds, and the making of party favors. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 38:18 S '41

Christian Century 58:911 Jl 16 '41 30w

Horn Bk M 18:43 Ja '42 60w

"This is a stimulating book to put in the hands of the children themselves or to help the parent who has an eager or restless child."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 2 '41 180w

PARKS, EDD WINFIELD. Charles Egbert Craddock (Mary Noailles Murfree). 258p il $2.50 Univ. of N.C. press

B or 92 Murfree, Mary Noailles (Charles Egbert Craddock, pseud) 41-7106

Biography of the American author Mary Noailles Murfree, who, in the 1880s and 1890s, was known for her novels and short stories of the Tennessee country, which she wrote under the pseudonym of Charles Egbert Craddock. Bibliography. Index.

"Since the creation of Great Smoky National Park has attracted a new generation of readers to this region, and as this author still speaks for it with authority, there is more than academic interest in this book, a blend of biography and criticism."

+ Books p29 N 23 '41 360w

"An interesting portion of the book deals with the subject of local color, its appearance in fiction, its relation to romance and realism, and its limitations." W. K. R.

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ap 19 '41 500w

"Professor Parks tries to enliven the woodenness of the usual dissertation-style biography (for which any biographical bone, no matter how dry, is treasure-trove) by pouring over his earlier pages a syrup of moonlight-and-honey-suckle, lavender-and-old-lace atmosphere of the Old South. His judgment, however, of her quite genuine though modest talent is good; it would have been better still had he boiled it down to half the space." Edgar Johnson
+ — New Repub 105:91 Jl 21 '41 120w

"Minor writers are doubtless entitled to their biographies, but it is questionable whether Mr. Parks's book about the author of 'In the Tennessee Mountains' is a necessary work. The study has all the air of a doctoral dissertation. It fails to evoke anything except a stereotype-aspiring Southern girl, witnessing the waste of the Civil War, who turns to writing about 'our own people'...

Mr. Parks's stylistic infelicities are great, there being times when both syntax and metaphor seem to escape from his control." H. M. J.

— Sat R of Lit 23:20 Mr 29 '41 210w

"We owe a debt to Mr. Parks for his attempt to rescue this little lost lady of letters from complete oblivion. But it is to be regretted that she might not have found a somewhat bolder advocate of her claim for survival. Mr. Parks constantly emphasizes that Miss Murfree was a Southern lady, 'with all the phrase implies.' What he fails to acknowledge is that she was one of the most extraordinary of Southern ladies." A. W. Armstrong

Yale R ns 31:211 autumn '41 1200w

PARRAN, THOMAS, and VONDERLEHR, RAYMOND ALOYSIUS. Plain words about venereal disease. 226p map $2 Reynal

614.547 Venereal diseases 41-52024

This book is a report on what has been accomplished in the fight against venereal diseases and of how that fight is being put into jeopardy by what the authors regard as the laxity of military authorities in regard to organized vice. The authors are, respectively, surgeon general and assistant surgeon general of the United States Public health service. Index.

Booklist 38:126 D 15 '41

"If one is looking for an emotional appeal, he will not find it here. The book is written clearly, convincingly, and without exaggeration. The ground is fully covered. Statements are supported by evidence up to the hilt. This book is a warning to the American people. If it goes unheeded—our present organization of society will have been proved inefficient." Hugh Cabot, M.D.

+ Books p28 N 30 '41 360w

Reviewed by Paul de Kruif

+ N Y Times p16 N 23 '41 1000w

Springf'd Republican p6 D 31 '41 550w

PARRISH, ANNE (MRS JOSIAH TITZELL). Pray for a tomorrow. 282p $2.50 Harper

41-51929

An allegorical tale of man's inhumanity to man. Andrew, a simple fisher boy living on an island off the coast of Cornwall, inadvertently betrays his one friend, a Jewish refugee, and so is contributory to his death. Remorse overcomes the boy, and in his sorrow he finds help in the company of Peter, who had also betrayed his friend and master. Together they journey back thru time, seeing as in a dream the terror and suffering of mankind in many lands and in many ages, until they arrive at Calvary.

Booklist 38:52 O 15 '41

"The story moves soft as a dream, and Andrew finds much childish delight in the wondrous things he sees. Perhaps he learns the lesson of his journeyings; the author leaves that point muted in irony. She has handled this legend with great skill, with warmth and charm, much variation and great beauty. Andrew, the innocent, is the Christian of a latter day; tomorrow must prove his testing." Lorine Pruette

+ Books p2 S 21 '41 850w

"Though the conception is good, the craftsmanship is weak. The choice of the novel form was unfortunate; the compactness of the long short story would not only have lent strength to the allegory but would also have been better adapted to the tastes of the modern reader. Furthermore, the incoherence of the narrative, while conforming psychologically to the dream experience, confuses the reader. . . It is a pity that a work rich in idealism and possessing a certain quality of imagination should have been marred in the execution."

— + Cath World 154:505 Ja '42 230w

"Opinions may differ as to the effectiveness of some of the means Miss Parrish has employed in setting forth this appeal—the dubious blending of religion and fantasy, the emphasis on the violent scenes of horror which have blotted history, the touch of incoherence which is what Milton would have called 'the palpable obscure.' Nevertheless, there can be no doubt as to the depth of the author's sincerity, and the worth of the fundamental message she is endeavoring to convey." M. W. S.

+ — Christian Science Monitor p12 O 25 '41 550w

Reviewed by T. O. Sloane III
Commonweal 35:96 N 14 '41 360w

"Beautifully written but limited in appeal." Catherine Van Dyne

+ Library J 66:731 S 1 '41 70w

Reviewed by S. E. Hyman

— New Repub 105:678 N 17 '41 240w

"Very baffling book, which seems to me curiously mussy, curiously pretentious, curiously unsuccessful. Save for the lovely, limpid quality of Anna Parrish's style, the brightly decorated word pictures which she gives one again and again, 'Pray for a Tomorrow' is, I feel, an unimpressive tale—carrying no such poignance of meaning to the reader as it does, apparently, to Miss Parrish. Having little taste for symbolism and allegory, I may be unjust, but it seems to me that it is kindest to regard 'Pray for a Tomorrow' as something which Miss Parrish, for some reason, had to get out of her system. Having done so, let us hope that she produces no successors along the same bizarre and flowery lines." E. H. Walton

— + N Y Times p7 S 21 '41 750w

New Yorker 17:77 S 27 '41 60w

"It is difficult to avoid the impression that the book has been written in a state of exaltation, and unless the reader is inclined to biblical symbolism, he will find it hard and confusing to follow the thread of the esoteric events. It may well be that by writing this book Miss Parrish found an individual solution of a philosophical problem. But it is a solution which to the ordinary reader must seem as remote and unconvincing as the moral of a fairy-tale." Klaus Lambrecht

Sat R of Lit 24:14 S 27 '41 450w

"The book is beautiful, solemn, deeply religious. It will leave a lasting impression on everyone who reads it." M. D.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e S 21 '41 600w

Wis Lib Bul 37:178 N '41

PARRISH, MRS MARY FRANCES (KENNEDY). Consider the oyster. 117p $2 Duell

641.69411 Oysters. Cookery (oysters)

41-17449

Short dissertation on the life, love, and uses of the oyster, accompanied by some short anecdotes about oysters and the people who eat them. Includes about forty recipes for cooking and serving oysters.

"The book is more than faintly frisky. . . The most luscious chapter will be chosen according to one's own eating experiences, but on grounds of pure beauty the one in which two boys eat breakfast over an oyster bed in Chesapeake Bay, diving for the wherewithal, comes out ahead. It rightly closes a book with which nobody will willingly part."

+ Books p17 O 12 '41 200w

"Excellent, readable book on the oyster, that contains some thirty-nine splendid ways of preparing that toothsome bivalve. . . A gay, pleasant and instructive book." E. L. Tinker

+ N Y Times p38 N 9 '41 800w

"M. F. K. Fisher has now, in her small treatise at last done full justice to the mild and modest mollusk. . . I commend especially the candid chapter entitled 'Love Was the Pearl,' dealing with the fabled powers of the oyster to promote more and better venery." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 17:72 S 13 '41 300w

PARROTT, MRS KATHERINE URSULA (TOWLE). Marry me before you go. 218p $2 Dodd

41-19313

A story of two ill-mated couples: Audrey who wanted a home and babies, and Theodore Syan who wandered from a job in South America to one in Moscow or Paris or most anywhere except New York; and Jacques Yule who wanted a home and children, and Beatrice who wanted a glamorous career as a dancer. Things are finally arranged satisfactorily but only after long years of loneliness for Audrey and Jacques.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p16 Ag 24 '41 300w

"Much better than its title, this charming little story of a serious young woman is filled with flashes of wit and insight into human nature. It is so deftly written that if it has defects they pass unremarked, and the four chief characters are so cleverly individualized that one doesn't notice that all of them are stock." Charlotte Dean

+ — N Y Times p13 Ag 24 '41 210w

PARROTT, MRS KATHERINE URSULA (TOWLE). Road leading somewhere. 171p $2 Dodd

41-4020

Sandra thought her "road leading somewhere" was going to Bradley, with whom she had been in love for years. After months apart, while Bradley worked and played in Boston, and Sandra sang in a New York night club, she discovered the road had a better ending.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p15 Mr 30 '41 220w

"As light and harmless a romance as any one could want." Charlotte Dean
N Y Times p18 Mr 9 '41 110w

Sat R of Lit 23:19 Mr 22 '41 110w

"There is much emotion in the tale although the young people are sophisticated and know their way about in the modern world."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 16 '41 290w

PARRY, DENNIS. The survivor. 318p $2.50 Holt [7s 6d Hale, R]

42-2016

A horror story of the supernatural in a modern setting. When James Marshall, a famous but also notorious doctor, dies, his evil spirit returns periodically into the body of his young, unacknowledged daughter. Acting thru her he pays off old scores, and brings sorrow and disaster to several persons before he is finally overcome.

Booklist 37:216 Ja 15 '41

"'The Survivor' is no thriller; it is a fine piece of writing in a genre that requires unusual talent. The situation is unreal but the characters are not. Every one of them, from the dominating James to the dominated Olive, is real. There may be no Poltergeists or Dybbuks but in writing a story about a modern one, Dennis Parry has made a notable contribution to the creative fiction of the new year." Rose Feld

+ Books p4 Ja 12 '41 750w

"'The Survivor' is an imaginative tale well above the usual run." Edmond Bartnett

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 25 '41 440w

"The life of the village and the bleakness of the time are built quite solidly into it; it is good readable stuff even when there aren't chills, and logical as far as logic can take it." Otis Ferguson

+ New Repub 104:317 Mr 3 '41 220w

"Such a subject, whether its treatment be macabre or farcical, demands lush imagination and an unbridled facility for invention. Mr.

Parry, however, keeps his feet firmly on the ground, and uses his fantastic first premise merely to introduce some common emotional relationships. It is a pity that he has denied his plot the luxuriance it deserved, and hatched his extraordinary egg into quite an ordinary chicken." John Mair

— New Statesman & Nation 19:566 Ap 27 '40 100w

"It is an unusually interesting story, well told in a cool, half-satirical style which is decidedly effective. The characters live. . . The weak point in the book is the author's failure to lead up in any way to the supernatural development. . . Apart from this, the plot is well worked out, and the dissection of human weaknesses is done with a deftly wielded scalpel. 'The Survivor' is a novel in which the fantastic theme of demonic possession is treated with realism, the result being a book that is different." L. M. Field

+ — N Y Times p6 Ja 12 '41 700w

"The complications are sometimes scary but too drawn-out to achieve the completely eerie effect Mr. Parry is after. He writes well, understating his terrifying situations, and is not without a sombre sort of wit. The publishers suggest comparison with 'The Turn of the Screw.' 'The Survivor' falls into the same category as does Henry James' troubling masterpiece, but unfortunately it is inferior in subtlety and power." Clifton Fadiman

+ — New Yorker 16:64 Ja 11 '41 110w

"The end of the book does not seem entirely in scale with the atmosphere that has been building for three hundred pages; it needed something more transcendent, something greater in echo than Mr. Parry finally produced. But it was he who created that atmosphere, with its impossible demands. His talents in this field are plain." N. L. Rothman

+ — Sat R of Lit 23:6 Ja 18 '41 370w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 19 '41 370w

Times [London] Lit Sup p205 Ap 27 '40 220w

PARSHLEY, HOWARD MADISON. Biology. (Sciences; a survey course for colleges) 232p il map $2.25; college ed $1.75 Wiley [10s 6d Chapman]

574 Biology (W) 40-12231

"A brief survey of the main facts and principles of modern biology. Its aim is to present the knowledge in this field which seems essential to a liberal education and therefore appropriate as the biological portion of a course in general science. A large subject has been brought within narrow limits by an elimination of technical detail." (Pref) The author is professor of zoology at Smith college. Bibliography. Glossary. Index.

Booklist 37:288 Mr 1 '41

"This well-planned work is abundantly illustrated and has an excellent bibliography, glossary and index."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Ja 13 '41 60w

PARSONS, MRS VIVIAN (LAJEUNESSE). Not without honor. 342p $2.50 Dodd

41-16064

Back in the eighties Joe La Tendresse left his father's farm in Canada, and settled in a mining town in northern Michigan. He wanted to escape his father's tyranny, and he wanted to be a citizen of a free country. Joe's struggles to bring all the foreigners—French, Swedes, and Italians—to understand what his promised land symbolized provide the theme of the story.

"'Not Without Honor' is a success story, told with vigor and realism and happily without facile optimism or misguided patriotism. Such a story must have occurred many times in the actual development of the United States, but

Mrs. Parsons does not gloss over the hardships and setbacks which barred the way of simple men nor the fact that Joe's rise is a dramatic exception to the lot of the many. . . . The particular chapter of American history from which the tale is drawn is ended or at least interrupted but, ironically, the theme now seems to have become world-wide." Mary Ross
+ Books p8 Ag 31 '41 650w

"The theme of Mrs. Parsons's novel, brilliant in many respects, is that of the great American melting pot. . . . 'Not Without Honor' is a Catholic book, by its very nature, and hence it is surprising that Mrs. Parsons occasionally errs. It perhaps is a small matter that a lower 'c' is used throughout for Catholic; but it is important that she represents the Church as denying the sacrament of matrimony to a man because his life expectancy is presumed to be only several years. These flaws however are minor and the book should find many readers who will be absorbed by this account of America in the making." J. G. Brunini
+ Commonweal 34:452 Ag 29 '41 490w

Reviewed by A. L. Seeling
N Y Times p20 Ag 24 '41 480w

"Now and again the reading public becomes aware of an author who has discovered a locale, probed its heart and its people and, with the understanding and alchemy of fine imaginative writing, produced a bit of life which in narrow confines reflects the universal. Such an author is Vivian Parsons and such a book is her latest, 'Not Without Honor.'"
+ Spring'd Republican p7e Ag 24 '41 800w

PARTRIDGE, BELLAMY. Big family; ill. by Stephen J. Voorhies. (Whittlesey house publication) 323p $2.75 McGraw

B or 92 Partridge, Samuel Selden. Partridge family (W) 41-16371

Memoirs of family life in an upstate New York town in the eighties and nineties. The central character is the author's father, who was the hero of Country Lawyer (Book Review Digest, 1939). The big family consisted of Lawyer Partridge, his wife, and their eight children, with one, and sometimes two, grandmothers.

Reviewed by Wilson Follett

Atlantic D '41 250w

Booklist 38:51 O 15 '41

"Bellamy Partridge has an excellent memory and he tells his story as simply and engagingly here as he told the story of his father's professional life in an earlier volume—which is enough. The pen-and-ink drawings by Mr. Stephen Voorhies are perfectly in character, even to detail." S. H. Holbrook
+ Books p5 S 28 '41 1000w

Cath World 154:253 N '41 260w

"Probably one must be over fifty to understand or enjoy this book. But it is a true picture of the typical American middle-class family in an age that is gone forever." W. L. Caswell

+ Churchman 155:18 N 1 '41 150w

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 D '41

Commonweal 34:619 O 17 '41 30w

"All who enjoy the nostalgia created by intimate family history and humor will like the book." Katharine Shorey

+ Library J 66:668 Ag '41 60w

New Repub 105:446 O 6 '41 50w

Reviewed by J. T. Winterich

N Y Times p3 O 12 '41 500w

New Yorker 17:79 S 27 '41 60w

"To come right out with it, this is a good book—a darn good book. It possesses the nostalgic charm which R. G. Culter conveyed in line when he drew 'The Gay Nineties' series for old Life. One measure of its worth is the fact that it ran serially in the Saturday Evening Post where reminiscent stuff, to be printed, has to be better than fair. For us of the older generations, life in the Partridge family rings bells. Whether it will appeal to our juniors is a question. In the opinion of this reviewer (an old codger), they would derive pleasure and profit from a perusal. Man, they had discipline in those days!" Fairfax Downey

+ Sat R of Lit 24:18 O 4 '41 550w

"As bucolic Americana it is superb. As a picture of boys' life, it is what Booth Tarkington's Penrod is supposed to be and for many people isn't. . . . Author Partridge is no more sentimental than a washbasin. In getting back to the past he completely by-passes the antique shop. His books are nostalgic, but it is not a nostalgia for antimacassars or oil lamps. The nostalgia is for a democracy that was real because in the general dearth of material things, nobody was able to have much more than anybody else."

+ Time 38:88 S 29 '41 1450w

Wis Lib Bul 37:177 N '41

PARTRIDGE, ERNEST DE ALTON, and MOONEY, CATHERINE. Time out for living. 662p il $2 Am. bk.

790 Amusements. Hobbies 41-11439

Discussion of sports, travel, music, and different kinds of hobbies, their ways and means, and the benefits derived from each. Contains a list of hiking trails, a directory of walking, camping, and nature clubs, and an index.

"Interestingly and attractively discussed."

+ School & Society 53:616 My 10 '41 20w

"Every one of its 650 pages contains valuable suggestions. The book runs the gamut of pleasurable activities from concerts and movies to hikes and match cover collections. The authors have profusely illustrated the book with photographs and drawings, and explanations and descriptions are complete yet simply written. It has an appeal to both young and old."

+ Spring'd Republican p12 Je 6 '41 250w

PARTRIDGE, HELEN LAWRENCE (DAVIS) (MRS BELLAMY PARTRIDGE) (PHOEBE SHELTON, pseud.) A lady goes to Hollywood. 259p $2 Macmillan

B or 92 Hollywood, California. Moving pictures 41-19823

The wife of Bellamy Partridge, whose Country Lawyer (Book Review Digest, 1939) became a best seller, writes these letters describing in slightly fictionalized form their life in an aged Connecticut house, and in Hollywood, where they lived during the filming of her husband's book.

Books p37 N 23 '41 200w

Christian Century 58:1275 O 15 '41 100w

"All right if you can stand lady authors who find color in exclamation points, the words 'tummy' and 'scrumptious,' things to be 'ahed and ohed over' and 'just too dear for words.'" New Repub 105:870 D 22 '41 80w

"On the whole, the reader must conclude that the author still likes Conn. better than Calif., though she is very, very fond of Hollywood. Definitely she does her bit to give Hollywood a good press, perhaps because she has a pure and optimistic nature or because she feels that she may go back again some time. At all events, her book is so sincerely informative that it might be classed with the 'So You're Going to—' books and so engagingly intimate and detailed that it is very amusing reading." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p27 O 19 '41 800w

"'A Lady Goes to Hollywood' does not tell the truth about Hollywood, it does not debunk the many fan magazines and tabloids. It entertains because it tells of a delightful visit to the capital of Filmland, because Helen Partridge writes good prose, and because her book is on the whole quite gay. It is entertainment." H. B. Kranz

+ Sat R of Lit 24:39 O 18 '41 550w

PATERSON, ANNE, pseud. See Einselen, A.

PATERSON, DONALD GILDERSLEEVE, and TINKER, MILES ALBERT. How to make type readable. 209p $2.50 Harper

655.24 Printing, Practical. Type and type founding. Reading 40-36005

"A manual for typographers, printers and advertisers; based on twelve years of research involving speed of reading tests given to 33,031 persons." (Subtitle) Selected bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:288 Mr 1 '41

"The library not provided with a good elementary manual on typography will find this a useful work. In addition, educators and others concerned with problems of the reading difficulties of pupils will find it of interest, since it is based on an extensive series of tests relating to speed in reading."

+ Wis Lib Bul 37:30 F '41

PATMORE, DEREK. Balkan correspondent. 319p $3 Harper

940.53496 World war, 1939—Balkan states. Eastern question (Balkan). World war, 1939—Personal narratives, English 41-25333

A young English writer describes his adventures in the Balkans, where he went in September 1939, as a special correspondent, first for the Exchange telegraph company, and later for the London News Chronicle. He gives an eye-witness account of Rumania's attempt to remain neutral; and covers the Greco-Italian war, discusses the position of Turkey, and concludes with the German invasion of Yugoslavia.

"'Balkan Correspondent' has interesting pages especially in the section on Rumania. The author has serious intentions, a pleasant, earnest style, and a gift of quick observation; he also had a number of very helpful connections in Rumania and saw very dramatic political developments. He spares the reader the unpleasantness of wading through reams of pretentious or smart writing, and wins sympathy with his frank descriptions of his efforts to be a good correspondent. In most of his judgments he is rather moderate and tries to be fair. He avoids invective and does not rely on profanity for effect." R. H. M.

+ Christian Science Monitor p20 N 27 '41 550w

"A true picture of the Balkan situation, depicting graphically the gradual but thorough infiltration of Nazi domination." L. R. Etzkorn

+ Library J 66:999 N 15 '41 140w

PATON, WILLIAM. Church and the new order. 188p $1.50 Macmillan [6s Student]

940.531 World war, 1939—Peace. World war, 1939—Religious aspects 41-23666

"The title of Dr. Paton's new book implies that some kind of a new order is going to result from the war. . . The book may be regarded as falling into three parts. The first two chapters give the background with their discussion of the need for peace-aims and of 'the chaos of life out of which the war came and of which it is the expression.' In the central portion of his work Dr. Paton passes from a consideration of those principles of thought and action in which Christians of different communions have found themselves so notably at one to an examination of the 'next steps' that should be taken after an allied victory. Then comes the most remarkable chapter in the book, 'Britain, America and the Future.' . . In his three final chapters Dr. Paton turns directly to the Church and to its concern with 'Human Worth and Freedom,' with 'Law and Understanding' and with 'Forgiveness and Power.'" Spec

Christian Century 58:1443 N 19 '41 80w

"Although he takes positions that some readers will feel weaken his argument, Dr. Paton states impressively the function of the church in creating a new order. 'There is no other way of creating an international ethos than the preaching of the Gospel of God as Lord of the nations.' 'There can be no international ethos without a religious basis.'" J. H. Franklin

Crozer Q 19:82 Ja '42 300w

"Over and above its many particular merits, Dr. Paton's treatment of his theme has the great value of being so clear and intelligible that the reader, Christian or non-Christian will never be tempted to think that he is being supplied with rhetorical appeals in place of rational statement or befogged in the mists of sentimentality when it is a point-to-point argument that he desires. A realistic treatment of ideals and principles in the light of an existing situation, and, conversely, of the situation in the light of the ideals, is no easy achievement. Dr. Paton may not always be successful in his attempts to reach that end; but to that end and to the effort of thought necessary for its attainment he is never untrue." J. K. Mozley

+ Spec 167:242 S 5 '41 320w

Times [London] Lit Sup p344 J1 19 '41 800w

PATRICK, DIANA, pseud. (MRS DESEMEA [NEWMAN] WILSON). Life is to seek. 272p $2 Dutton [8s 6d Hutchinson]

40-35818

Teresa Malling, aged seventy, and her young granddaughter, Carla, share the lime-light in this story of modern Cornwall. Carla left London to have her baby in the safety of her grandmother's home. There she fell in love with a young Cornish pianist, and only her grandmother's wisdom and understanding saved her from making a bad mistake.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p12 Ja 5 '41 160w

"Don't be misled by a banal appearing jacket; 'Life Is To Seek' is above par in popular fiction." M. P. Johnson

+ Boston Transcript p3 F 15 '41 160w

"The author's feeling for the Cornish coast produces many charming scenes and much delightfully quiet atmosphere." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p18 Ja 5 '41 320w

PATRICK, Q., pseud. See Webb, R. W.

PATRIOTIC anthology; introduced by Carl Van Doren. 527p $3 Doubleday

810.8 American literature—Collections. Patriotism (W) 41-8105

A collection of prose and verse "chosen to illustrate high moments in American history, high thoughts, high emotions, high hopes." (Intro) The arrangement is by periods of American history. Author and title indexes.

Booklist 37:543 J1 15 '41

Springf'd Republican p6 Je 14 '41 700w

PATTEN, GILBERT (BURT L. STANDISH, pseud.). Mr Frank Merriwell. 305p $2 Alliance bk.

41-8080

Story of a battle between good and evil waged in a New England mill town during the late 1930s. The hero, Frank Merriwell, is a newcomer to the town, who starts various movements for the improvement of the town and its inhabitants. His chief antagonist is the town's multi-millionaire, heretofore unopposed in his power.

"Mr. Patten, although now well past seventy, has lost none of his hand's cunning. The action is swift, the plot well knit and every one behaves as he and she should in a Frank Merriwell story." Richardson Wright

+ Books p4 Ap 20 '41 550w

"Mr. Patten (Burt L. Standish) whose stories of Frank Merriwell, back around the turn of the century, filled boys with zeal to emulate the hero's prowess, and with discouragement at their inability to do so, has been persuaded to tell of the Frank of today. . . In this story Frank foils villains, heads civic enterprises, founds a league of patriotic youth, and swats communism with the same vigor with which he used to send the ball soaring over the fence in the last of the ninth with the score tied and the bases filled. Mr. Patten's style has not changed." L. E. Cannon
Christian Century 58:462 Ap 2 '41 320w

"The true pleasure is in finding so much vigor still in the pen of a man who started writing 20,000 words every week about Merriwell in April, 1896, and kept up that rate of production for more than seventeen years. The characterizations are straight ham, but Mr. Patten is never on the wrong side of the moral issues." Robert van Gelder
+ N Y Times p26 Ap 6 '41 480w

Sat R of Lit 24:19 Je 21 '41 180w
Time 37:102 Ap 21 '41 550w

PATTERSON, AUSTIN MCDOWELL, and CAPELL, LEONARD THOMAS. Ring index; a list of ring systems used in organic chemistry. (Am. chemical soc. Monograph ser.) 661p $8 Reinhold

547 Chemistry—Notation. Chemistry, Organic 41-84

"The Ring Index is a collection of known parent ring systems, arranged in order from the simplest to the most complex. It attempts to cover the literature to January 1, 1939, but also includes many systems from 1939. It may therefore be used as a check list. . . The volume includes an appendix of proposed international rules for numbering organic ring systems, and a 48-page index of names. The authors are respectively the Professor of Chemistry at Antioch college and the Associate Editor of Chemical Abstracts." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index of names.

Reviewed by L. I. Smith
Am Chem Soc J 63:886 Mr '41 450w

"This book should prove valuable in reducing confusion in the naming and numbering of complex carbocyclic and heterocyclic systems. Owing to the diversity of names and ways of numbering systems, it has been difficult to cover adequately the literature in these fields. Organic chemists, it is hoped, will set any personal preferences aside for the common good and adopt uniformly the standard naming and numbering set forth in the Ring Index." J. R. Johnson

+ Chem & Chem Eng N 19:278 Mr 10 '41 850w

Chem & Met Eng 48:169 F '41 180w
N Y New Tech Bks 25:45 O '40

PATTERSON, HARRIET-LOUISE HOLLAND. Around the Mediterranean with my Bible; foreword by Galus Glenn Atkins. 356p il map $3 Wilde

220.91 Bible. Whole—Geography. Mediterranean sea. East (Near East)—Description and travel 41-19454

"Miss Patterson's journey was made in 1939, just before the storm broke. Hers was leisurely and intelligent travel. Keen observation of present conditions did not divert her from a primary interest in the biblical associations of the sites visited." Christian Century

+ Christian Century 58:1275 O 15 '41 40w

"The book should be an imaginative aid to Bible students placing in their setting the men and women of the Testaments." G. F. Taylor
+ Churchman 155:18 N 15 '41 70w

"It is a double-barreled travel book; a mere tourist may get novel suggestions of historical and geographical value, and a Bible student may get a continuous flow of literary flashes upon age-long customs in the Orient. Viewed simply as a travel book, there is a wealth of description of the lands bordering the great inland sea so far as they have come under the observation and study of the author, who is an experienced tour conductor. But Miss Patterson is no mere dragoman; she is an enthusiast concerning biblical lands, scenes, customs. She makes unusual side trips to cities and districts even casually mentioned in the Bible; and ancient history, biblical and secular, grows luminous under her literary spotlight."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 Ja 16 '42 370w

PATTERSON, HENRY WHITELY. Meetinghouse Bay; il. by John D. Whiting. 250p $2 Coward-McCann

41-8633

A homeless, penniless boy of eighteen becomes mixed up with illegal traffic, involving night voyages on a fast motor craft off Cape Cod. When his chief disappears, Eric settles down to a peaceful quiet life of earning his own living in Meetinghouse Bay, on the Cape. Then Marvell appears again, bringing more complications for Eric. For older boys.

"This tale of Cape Cod country is one of the few stories in the first person not to be dismissed by a young reader as 'another I-book.' The hero, the narrator, takes hold of the sympathies. . . It is not often that a troubled soul emerges so clearly from a crowded adventure story addressed to younger boys." M. L. Becker

+ Books p20 My 11 '41 360w

"This is a stirring and well-told salt water story of a boy who wanted a job but made a mistake in choosing his employer. . . Mr. Patterson has been particularly successful in his portrayal of the sterling qualities of the villagers which had a marked effect upon Erik's growth in character and judgment. He has spun a good yarn which will hold many a reader in breathless suspense." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:209 My '41 120w

"Only the most benighted landlubber could resist this tale of intrigue and sea-soaked adventure on Cape Cod. It is one of the most satisfying adventure stories to come our way in a long while, this narrative of a boy's rehabilitation which combines high suspense with the soundest of character values. . . It is an exciting yarn, but it is, first of all, a fine story of a lad's quest for integrity." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p12 Ap 13 '41 340w

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 8 '41 110w

PATTERSON, NORMA. Love is forever. 282p $2 Farrar

41-23268

Twice in her life Barry had trusted the same woman—supposed to be her best friend. The first time she walked off with Barry's intended husband. The second time she created havoc in Barry's happy home, but that time Barry kept her husband.

"If your sympathy for the plight of the foolish matron is somewhat lukewarm, it is through no fault of the author. Norma Patterson champions her case resolutely, but we prefer a martyr not quite so gullible. A worm of verified duplicity is not a wise woman's home companion."

Books p9 D 21 '41 210w

"Miss Patterson's latest novel is a shade more domestic and quite a lot more befuddled in its people's thinking than the one before this." Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p28 D 7 '41 200w

PATTERSON, NORMA. West of the weather.
279p $2 Farrar 41-2438

A youthful love story with settings laid in San Francisco, on board a Pacific luxury liner, and in Hawaii.

"A light item with a sprightly plot." Lisle Bell

Books p18 F 23 '41 120w

"This is the best of Miss Patterson's growing list of romances." Charlotte Dean
N Y Times p28 Mr 2 '41 240w

Times [London] Lit Sup p505 O 11 '41
50w

PATTERSON, SAMUEL WHITE. Horatio Gates, defender of American liberties, 466p il $4.25 Columbia univ. press

B or 92 Gates, Horatio. U.S.—History—Revolution 41-10193

A full-length, sympathetic biography of the English-born American revolutionary general who won the battle of Saratoga over Burgoyne, and was later the center of the alleged conspiracy against Washington's leadership known as the Conway cabal. Bibliography. Index.

"Undoubtedly the most difficult task for the biographer is to establish a proportion and to evaluate his subject with a true sense of relative importance; in making Gates a little less than Washington, and lessening Washington too by subtle innuendo Mr. Patterson tried to give his subject stature." Paul Fullam

Books p14 S 21 '41 1050w

"Here is a fascinating book for the general reader and a must item for the student of American history." J. J. Reilly

+ Cath World 154:364 D '41 450w

Christian Century 58:865 Jl 2 '41 200w

"One could wish that proofreading had eliminated some of the not-too-shining composition. . . Horatio Gates is not to be dismissed with minor criticism, however. This first full-dress biography of the forgotten man of the Revolution, with its painstaking notes and bibliography, is an important addition to the record of pettiness and greatness, self-seeking and selflessness, which is the American story." Codman Hislop

+ New Eng Q 14:758 D '41 950w

Reviewed by R. M. Lovett

New Repub 105:484 O 13 '41 600w

"Horatio Gates was a man of many contradictions. . . The story of his career as here told would be more convincing if it were not so unrestrained in its praise of Gates, often unjustly at the expense of others. But at least Horatio Gates has had his day in court. Perhaps some day another, in less partisan mood, will follow the middle course between uncritical condemnation and indiscriminate praise and write an objectively fair and impartial biography that will explain and evaluate Gates both as a man and as a soldier." T. R. Hay

N Y Times p7 Jl 13 '41 1350w

"Occasionally a bit hard to follow, and somewhat too eager to vindicate Gates at times, but altogether the most substantial American biography of the season—scholarly, urbane, and persuasively written."

+ New Yorker 17:71 Jl 12 '41 130w

Reviewed by O. M. Dickerson

Social Educ 5:621 D 1 '41 700w

Reviewed by R. T. Solis-Cohen

Social Studies 32:328 N '41 240w

"Prof Patterson goes too far in some ways—such as calling Gates the 'founder' rather than simply 'a founder' of American liberties. Yet his work is sound and moderate in its tone. Washington is not decried nor are others, in the effort to vindicate Gates. They are merely placed in a more realistic light than has been customary among writers until recently." Donald Derby

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 6 '41 850w

PATTON, CLIFFORD WHEELER. The battle for municipal reform; mobilization and attack, 1875-1900; introd. by Arthur M. Schlesinger. 91p $2; pa $1.50 Am. council on public affairs

352.073 Municipal government—U.S.

41-3544

"Presents a sketch of the salient features of a formative period in American municipal development, the characteristics of which prompted Lord Bryce to label municipal government 'the one conspicuous failure of the United States.' Chapters on basic conditions and causes, evils of machine politics, arousing citizens to action, the era of reform, the organized movement for better government, improvement of living conditions in the cities, and, better governmental machinery serve to present the story of the enlistment of public opinion and the resulting accomplishments thereby made." Am Pol Sci R

"Footnote references indicate failure to use valuable source materials, but useful bibliography of primary and secondary materials is presented in the appendix." H. C. Cook

Am Pol Sci R 35:383 Ap '41 110w

Social Studies 33:41 Ja '42 220w

PATTON, ORION EDWARD. Aircraft instruments; their theory, function and use. 220p il maps $2.75 Van Nostrand

629.135 Aeronautical instruments

(W) 41-7091

"This book is designed to present a brief yet overall study of the common and important aircraft instruments. Its objectives are in a sense twofold; it has been prepared for class use in aviation schools and as a reference manual for student pilots, yet it is hoped that its usefulness will touch even broader fields and that experienced pilots will find in its pages helpful and valuable information of importance to their flight technique. Beyond an understandable description of the instrument itself, the author has sought to explain the physical laws and basic principles that are applicable to each type of instrument." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 37:460 Je 1 '41

N Y New Tech Bks 26:37 Jl '41

PAUL, ELLIOT HAROLD (BRETT RUTLEDGE, pseud). Intoxication made easy [il. by] Luis Quintanilla. 148p $2 Modern age

817

41-17543

"The versatile Elliot Paul, author of Life and Death of a Spanish Town, and Luis Quintanilla, painter and muralist, have collaborated to produce a gourmet's book on how to make a Spanish rice, but the directions are often and wittily lost while the authors consider the merits of each ingredient of this Lucullan feast." Library J

Reviewed by F. A. Boyle

Library J 66:792 S 15 '41 60w

"Mr. Quintanilla's illustrations lack the bite and clarity of his drawings of the cadavers and tragedies of the late Spanish civil war that appeared in 'All the Brave' but they echo the general wackiness of the text with great fidelity. Although from time to time a strained effort to be funny is felt in [this book] it is infused with gaudy gayety that will make a strong appeal to those who enjoy a general atmosphere of lusty carnal conviviality." E. L. Tinker

+ N Y Times p24 O 26 '41 900w

"The requisite amount of agreeable literary obscenity is sprinkled through the text, and the whole makes diverting reading." Clifton Fadiman

New Yorker 17:108 S 20 '41 200w

"The horrors of the Fascist conquest of a great land have not dimmed Mr. Paul's gusto nor Senor Quintanilla's wild and robust humor."

Between them they have furnished a proper tidbit for gourmets and an inimitable epic of cookery!" W. R. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 24:18 O 4 '41 350w

PAUL, LOUIS. The Reverend Ben Pool. 314p $2.50 Duell

41-8923

"Tells of a young Congregationalist clergyman, who, increasingly conscious of the spiritual inadequacy for him of formal religion, leaves his small-town church and seeks in the anonymity of New York the reason for his being. He lives in an obscure rooming house, devoting himself selflessly to the lodgers he finds there, a group of strange folk blindly concerned with their own special problems and wholly unaware of relationships which bind them to each other and to a large human society." Publisher's note

"If there is any weakness in this novel it is due to the fact that, though he has written several novels, Louis Paul's talent lies more naturally in the direction of the short story. The result is that parts of this book taken separately are often more impressive than the book as a whole. But it is ungrateful to cavil at trifles when there is so much that is fine in this picture, without sombre Dostoyevskian shadows, of a modern Prince Muishkin in New York." Milton Hindus

+ Books p8 My 25 '41 600w

"The plot is an unusual one and the descriptive writing is of the first order. One's only regret is that such a splendid opus should be marred by a number of salacious details which are quite unnecessary to the flow and interest of the narrative. If one can have a blind eye to these he will find great enjoyment and not a little profit in this book." Clifton Macon

+ Churchman 155:19 Jl 1 '41 160w

"As a study of the search of one man for the real values in life the book is highly interesting. At this time, when values small and large are being shifted rapidly by the force of events, Ben's individual and original problem of digging out the eternal verities for himself is a fascinating one. . . Books that are a bit baffling are sometimes salutary—as well as entertaining—to read, and 'The Reverend Ben Pool' rates all three adjectives." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p6 My 25 '41 950w

"Fine if you don't object to the earnest-missionary type."

+ New Yorker 17:77 Je 7 '41 90w

"Mr. Paul writes with such a curious mixture of forthright raciness and downright literary pretentiousness, the reader unfamiliar with any of his other work is puzzled to know exactly what to think of him. Here he combines all the cynicism of the sentimentalist and all the sentimentality of the cynic." Bess Jones

— Sat R of Lit 24:6 My 31 '41 460w

PAULL, GRACE. Raspberry patch [il. by the author]. [25p] $1.50 Doubleday

41-9282

Picture-story book about Mary Jane's experiences in the raspberry patch on the day when she and her mother went to gather berries for jam.

"In large type and with a profusion of brightly colored full-page pictures, Grace Paull puts on record, without retouching, one of the simple but memorable joys of a child's life in 'the real country.' This, as every country child knows, is picking berries; not when you are old enough to do it as a task but at the idyllic age when everything seems to be happening for the first time, and usually is." M. L. Becker

+ Books p5 Je 15 '41 190w

"Each page has a picture in lovely bright color or black and white, and from one to half a dozen lines of text. This is a gay picture storybook of a satisfying experience for children from four to seven." E. G. Mullan

+ Library J 66:620 Jl '41 80w

Wis Lib Bul 37:159 O '41

PAYNE, ELISABETH STANCY. Perfect lamb. 264p $2 Dodd

41-23675

Story of a family feud and young love, and of a dependable older brother and sister who share the responsibility of a near tragedy, and smooth the paths of two thoughtless youngsters.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p30 N 23 '41 280w

"An agreeable little story," C. D.

N Y Times p28 D 7 '41 180w

"A very human tale."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 30 '41 80w

PEACOCKE, T. A. H. Mountaineering. (Sportsman's lib) 212p il $2 Scribner [5s Black, A. & C]

796.52 Mountaineering

A book on the technique of mountain climbing written for the beginner. Partial contents: Equipment; Rock-climbing; Snow and ice; Glaciers; Mountaineering in winter; Route-finding; Weather; Alpine photography; Training; Food; The dangers of mountaineering. Glossary. Index.

Booklist 38:77 N 1 '41

"Nearly fifty years have passed since Dr. Claude Wilson published a little book with the same title and, oddly enough, with almost the same number of pages as that under review. Dr. Wilson's book was received at the time as a most excellent summary of all that could be taught about the craft. . . Mr. Peacocke is as simple, direct and sound as Dr. Wilson. The book is succinct, yet it covers the subject. . . This is a most excellent textbook for the beginner; to the more experienced it can teach many useful things. The finished mountaineer, in whatever sense the word is used, will read it with pleasure and profit."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p230 My 10 '41 390w

PEARSON, RALPH M. The new art education; foreword by Eduard C. Lindeman. 256p il $3 Harper

707 Art—Study and teaching (W) 41-10872

Study of modern creative art methods. It describes a new theory and method of art education, practised in the Design workshop in New York city. The principle upon which the work is based is a substitution of "designed creation" for "skillful copying," which was the older form of teaching art. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:543 Jl 15 '41

Pratt p10 D '41

Wis Lib Bul 37:152 O '41

PEASE, HOWARD. The black tanker; the adventures of a landlubber on the ill-fated last voyage of the oil tank steamer, Zambora [il. by Anton Otto Fischer]. 312p $2 Doubleday

(W) 41-51814

Adventure-mystery story of the sea. The hero, a freshman from Stanford university, ships as engine-room wiper on an oil tanker going to China. Mysterious signals cause trouble, the boy is looked on with suspicion by some of the crew, but Rance is able to help the captain, if not to save the tanker. For boys eleven to sixteen.

Booklist 37:496 Je 15 '41

PEASE, HOWARD—Continued

"These 'adventures of a landlubber on the ill-fated last voyage of the oil tank steamer Zambora' go faster and come closer to the present moment than even the other Pease books for boys. This may be because he treats boys as men in the matter of thrills." M. L. Becker

+ Books p12 My 11 '41 400w

"It is another swift-moving story, as vigorous in characterization and convincing in plot as any that Mr. Pease has written. Besides the absorbing action the objectives of the voyage involve a question of principle in international relations, very timely for young people to face today." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:209 My '41 120w

"Readers of the other Howard Pease stories will find their friend Tod Moran as third officer, the same Captain Jarvis, Poppy, and others, all having their parts to play in this new adventure tale." Florence O'Gara

Library J 66:466 My 15 '41 140w

"The well sustained suspense, the many conflicting clues and the climax of the action when the cargo of fuel oil destined for Japan is disposed of in an unexpected and satisfactory fashion make this an absorbing and timely tale." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p8 Jl 13 '41 320w

PEATTIE, DONALD CULROSS. The road of a naturalist [il. with woodcuts by Paul Landacre]. (Life in America ser) 315p $3 Houghton

B or 92 Naturalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (W) 41-51873

Autobiographical chapters, in which this American author, botanist, and philosopher, discusses the beauties of nature and the charm of the botanical and zoological life. The book is not arranged in chronological sequence; it is told in a series of flashbacks as he describes an automobile trip thru the Southwest.

"The book becomes two things at once: first, the account of a particularly recent journey, jeweled with the descriptions of fauna and flora that Mr. Peattie writes as excitingly as anyone now doing it in English; secondly, his intellectual and emotional autobiography to date. As a master of description the author of An Almanac for Moderns has perhaps had his due: has it been sufficiently remarked that he is also a master of aphorism?" Wilson Follett

+ Atlantic Ag '41 250w

Booklist 38:10 S '41

Reviewed by L. J. Halle, Jr.

Books p3 Ag 24 '41 1050w

Reviewed by Alan Devoe

Cath World 154:116 O '41 600w

"Rarely does one find a book on nature with so wide a variety of experiences more fascinatingly told. The charm of the volume is not a little enhanced by the artistic drawings by Paul Landacre which perfectly convey the spirit of the author. It is a volume one lays down reluctantly; the best of the author's work thus far produced." A. F. Gilmore

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 N 1 '41 1050w

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 D '41

Reviewed by J. M. Kater

Commonweal 35:23 O 24 '41 600w

"The book will appeal to lovers of nature and is recommended for purchase." M. E. Clark

+ Library J 66:614 Jl '41 70w

"Mr. Peattie's capacity for unashamed surrender to nature, which most of us have relegated, along with the raptures of first love and the rhetoric of first poems, to the attic of adolescence, is well known. Often he merely achieves lushness, but in this case he succeeds in making the reader surrender too. The result is that one recaptures the heady excitement ment of one's first conscious joy in nature and of the first overwhelming realization of one's own involvement in it." Margaret Marshall

+ Nation 153:344 O 11 '41 200w

"Scientists may quibble about some of its facts, and no doubt will. Rather careful and frankly skeptical reading of the book discloses no errors worth higgling about. Carping would be superfluous, because the whole tone of the book is beyond science—it is a breath of fresh air, a bit of nature, a fantasy. Riddling such a book because it is almost brazenly anthropomorphic would be child's play—and about as significant." Norman Taylor

+ N Y Times p3 Ag 24 '41 550w

"The Road of a Naturalist' can only by courtesy be termed an autobiography for Mr. Peattie is as miserly with personal facts as he is spendthrift with general reflections. But it is for these reflections, couched in a prose of slightly elaborate beauty, that we read him." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 17:64 Ag 23 '41 350w

"For the most part, American scientists have not been very successful in their attempts to record for posterity their own life histories, but this autobiography is a most welcome exception to the general rule. . . Perhaps a casual, disinterested reader may consider this book a wandering and disjointed narrative. But anyone who loves beautiful words, beautifully used, who delights in humility in the presence of beauty, who sees the rock of realism upon which such beauty is built, who himself blends memory with new experiences, this person will sense and appreciate both the reticence and revealing philosophy of its author." A. H. Compton & others

+ Scientific Bk Club R 12:1 Ag '41 1300w
Wis Lib Bul 37:155 O '41

"As a nature writer Donald Peattie stands apart in certain regards from the nature writers of the past. . . His style is highly mannered, often gaudy and sentimental, more often truly beautiful and moving, but always when compared with earlier writing on nature oddly 'unnatural.' Underneath this sophistication of thought and manner is a charming simplicity of feeling. With all his erudition and his art, Peattie brings to the contemplation of nature the open-eyed wonder of a child. And he brings to his comments on nature a gusto which perhaps more than any other quality has enabled him to make us aware of beauties which we have been too busy or too blind to see." J. H. Bradley

+ Yale R n s 31:184 autumn '41 1100w

PEATTIE, RODERICK. Geography in human destiny; original maps and charts drawn by Arthur H. Robinson. 323p $3 Stewart

910 Geography, Historical. Man—Influence of environment 41-51539

For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

"Illuminating and readable essays." R. G. Woolbert

+ Foreign Affairs 19:871 Jl '41 10w

"Although his material is not always easy to assimilate, his style is enlivened throughout not only by his interest in his subject but by his human sympathy."

+ — N Y Times p33 Mr 2 '41 400w

Reviewed by P. E. James

Social Educ 5:555 N '41 750w

"Here is a book which will serve very well for those of us who have been looking for an introduction to the geographic background of current economic and political affairs. It is not a 'Spain is bounded in the north by . . . ' geography, nor is it in any sense a textbook. It is rather a lucid and entertaining discussion of geography's important part in the making of history." J. M.

+ Special Libraries 32:25 Ja '41 240w

Wis Lib Bul 37:53 Mr '41

PEATIE, RODERICK. The incurable romantic. 270p il $3 Macmillan

B or 92

(W) 41-51815

Biography of an "incurable romantic," who has been a professor at Ohio State college for some twenty years. Born in Omaha, son of a liberal newspaper editor, and his authoress wife, this older brother of Donald Culross Peattie, describes his college years, his part in the first World war, his happy marriage, his trips to outposts of civilization in Europe and Africa, his beloved Vermont farm, and the years as college professor.

Booklist 37:490 Je 15 '41

"The Incurable Romantic" is the cheerful confession of faith of a man who has found life well worth eager living, a college professor who nonchalantly declares that he is not an intellectual but is happiest when he can hew and build. An interesting debate could be held on the question whether it is he, after all, or Hemingway who is the romanticist, or both of them, taking out 'romanticism' in different ways. That, however, is a doctrinaire point quite apart from the pleasure that many readers will surely find in this book—the pleasure of meeting a family with whom life is apparently never dull." Mary Ross

+ Christian p5 My 18 '41 800w

Booklist 37:490 Je 15 '41 130w

"His life is portrayed with dignity and not without occasional humor." A. M. Colt

+ Library J 66:356 Ap 15 '41 90w

"Significance is indeed to be found in this book, in a playful but no less sound consistency. This lingers in thought when the reading is finished. But in the reading itself there are gaiety and fun and humanity—youth in the heart, the mind's zest, maturity of work and love and laughter—springing effortlessly from fifty years of the reality of romance." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p4 My 18 '41 1450w

"Peattie has been lucky and he knows it. But in this chatty and often witty chronicle of his activities at home and abroad, his lusty enthusiasm for life never degenerates into self-satisfaction. His exultant sentimentality seldom becomes solemn. His prose, which is characteristically forceful, seldom becomes forced. Throughout, the reader feels the vitality, independence, and above all the humaneness of a very human human geographer. He also feels the richness of the environment that nourished so rich a life, an environment which with the help of God and perhaps a few marines we may yet be able to preserve in one corner of the earth." J. H. Bradley

+ Sat R of Lit 24:5 Je 7 '41 380w

"There is no doubt about it, Mr Peattie writes with a chuckle and his wit is more swift to turn on himself than on others. His is a kindly and nostalgic humor. . . 'The Incurable Romantic' is good reading, good living and great fun. The reader closes the book regretfully. He has had the rare privilege of being briefly with some delightful people and of sharing an extraordinarily happy family life. Only the most cynical and disgruntled could possibly fail to respond to the candor and charm of this personal record."

+ Spring'd Republican p7e My 25 '41 800w

Wis Lib Bul 37:139 Jl '41

PECK, ANNE MERRIMAN. The pageant of South American history. 405p il maps $3 Longmans

980 South America—History (W) 41-52025

Popularly written history for young readers. The book is in five sections: Native peoples, The conquest of South America, Colonial empires, South American colonies become nations, South America today. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 38:136 D 15 '41

"Miss Peck is an experienced traveler and a skilled writer about peoples and places. This is popular history and description, but it is readable and generally accurate."

+ Christian Century 58:1442 N 19 '41 100w

"The whole volume gives an interpretive foundation to an intelligent comprehension of the background of the South American nations." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 18:42 Ja '42 70w

"Highly recommended for purchase." M. E. Clark

+ Library J 66:792 S 15 '41 90w

"The writing is smooth, warm, and colorful, the material necessarily condensed. Should be a useful reference book. Contains a bibliography, index, sixteen photogravures and five maps. Recommended for young people twelve to sixteen." Emily Hutson

+ Library J 66:1050 D 1 '41 90w

"This book, although not rich in new interpretations nor in deep original thinking, is a very successful and solidly factual presentation of South American history's chief features. It is a book to be taken along by most travelers to the Hispanic parts of our continent—and more especially by those who go thither for the first time. The bibliography, the admirable pictures and the index all aid in making it indispensable for those who need a reliable and readable introductory volume to carry with them." P. A. Means

+ N Y Times p54 D 7 '41 900w

"A pageant should be colorful, picturesque, and unfortunately the author's description of South American historical events, conquests and characters is pedestrian, wholly lacking in verve and color. By attempting to crowd in too many events, the author destroys both continuity and historical significance. Actually when the book is finished the reader's mind is a welter of persons and places, that have yet to be placed in proper perspective. The main virtue of Miss Peck's book is as an inducement to further reading."

— + Spring'd Republican p6 N 22 '41 240w

PECK, JAMES L. H. So you're going to fly; with official photographs and diagrams by the author. 241p $2.50 Dodd

629.1325 Aeronautics (W) 41-51786

Graphic description of aviation training for young beginning aviators. Part one takes the student thru certain stages of flying training. Part two deals with tactics and general procedures of America's air defense of interest to both airman and layman. Part three covers commercial aviation and airplane production and maintenance. Glossary and bibliography but no index.

Booklist 37:460 Je 1 '41

N Y New Tech Bks 26:35 Jl '41

PECKHAM, MRS BETTY (CLOCK). Sky hostess. 84p il $1.75 Nelson

629.13 Women in aeronautics (W)

"The practical information that girls want about the life and duties of an air stewardess is contained in the eighty-four pages of this attractive little book, with good photographs supplied by leading airlines. It is written in direct, clear style by a librarian and is endorsed by a chief stewardess as presenting the main facts. It gives briefly the history of this career, the usual salaries, social opportunities, personality and educational requirements, and appends a list of plane equipment." Library J

Booklist 38:100 N 15 '41

Reviewed by Maude Adams

+ Library J 66:848 O 1 '41 100w

PEDERSON-KRAG, GERALDINE. The Melforts go to sea [Eng title: All aboard for England]. 251p il map $2 Holiday [6s Heinemann]

(W) 41-51816

Jolly story of ten lively children and their mother on a voyage by sailing vessel from Australia to England in 1855. Their trip took six months, and was complicated by a rascal of a captain who tried to starve them en route, but they all arrived in England well and hearty.

Booklist 37:496 Je 15 '41

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p7 Jl 6 '41 410w

"Gregor Duncan's drawings add interest to a story whose humor and real characterization should make it a classic," E. V. Wyatt
+ Cath World 154:376 D '41 150w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p13 Je 26 '41 150w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse
Commonweal 35:112 N 21 '41 10w

"Written from family records and tradition, the lively imaginative children are natural and lifelike, and the events of the voyage with its food shortage are convincing. The amusing descriptions of the manners and dress of the period, together with the humor and animated conversation, make a sparkling story of family life in an unusual environment," A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk M 17:215 My '41 120w

"Beautiful in format, unusually well written, and full of a bustling family life, this first book well merits the attention ten to fourteen year olds are going to give it. In fact, it is a sort of Innocent Voyage, written for children as well as about them," S. J. Johnson
+ Library J 66:466 My 15 '41 150w

"The story is based on family records, undoubtedly colored by the author, who has a sense of humor and a gift of characterization all her own,"
+ New Yorker 17:89 My 24 '41 70w

"A nice combination of excitement, suspense and humour, which children may like all the better for the tales it may evoke beginning with 'Your grandfather. . .'"

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p633 D 14 '40 170w

Wis Lib Bul 37:204 D '41

PEDLER, MARGARET (BASS) (MRS W. G. Q. PEDLER). Not heaven itself. 305p $2 Doubleday [8s 3d Hodder]

41-530

Barrie Forster's father committed suicide when he was found guilty of embezzlement, her mother died of grief, her brother fled to Australia. Barrie pursued her career as a dancer until she fell in love with a famous surgeon. Then her brother, returning to England, discovered the surgeon was the same man as the famous barrister who sentenced his father and caused his death. The story describes Barrie's way out of this dilemma.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p11 F 2 '41 80w

"Miss Pedler's very British stories are always pleasantly written, with credible characters and solid backgrounds. This one is no exception. Melodrama and romance are suitably mingled," C. D.

+ N Y Times p20 Ja 26 '41 240w

Times [London] Lit Sup p533 O 19 '40 60w

PEEL, ROY VICTOR, and ROUCEK, JOSEPH SLABEY, eds. Introduction to politics; written by Ethan P. Allen [and others]. 587p $3.75 Crowell

320.1 Political science 41-4604

"The stated object of this book is to satisfy the demand for an appropriate introductory textbook in the field of political science. With this in mind, the editors undertook a cooperative scholarship project wherein a number of collaborators joined their efforts with those of the editors to produce this volume. Each collaborator contributed a chapter summarizing the materials in a specific given area—presumably an area for which he possesses unusual competence. . . The volume presumes to cover all fundamental aspects of politics. Nor is it confined to a treatment of domestic politics. Comparative politics and theory and much comparative history permeate the book. Legalistic and functional treatments are not abandoned, but certainly they are thoroughly subordinated to 'the understanding of political realities' through a study of the social forces which bear on the political processes." (Am Pol Sci R) Bibliography. Glossary. Index.

"The Introduction to Politics is a 'venture in co-operative scholarship'. The editors, believing that the subject, in its growing complexity, can no longer be treated adequately by one man or even by a few men, have enlisted the services of more than twenty 'distinguished' collaborators. In most cases the title to distinction and to 'expert knowledge' seems a little dubious. One looks in vain for the insight and mature judgments of an authority like Sidgwick or for more than a superficial sketchiness in the handling of basic problems. Serious inaccuracies have escaped the attention of the editors. . . An attached glossary indicates how elementary the book is. This glossary defines such recondite English terms as 'body politic' and 'chauvinistic' and translates such foreign terms as ex cathedra, caveat emptor, and vaterland," E. M. Sait
Am Hist R 47:302 Ja '42 280w

"If this introductory textbook is intended as one to be used as an outline for a one-semester course in colleges and universities, this reviewer believes that one of the two results will follow. Either the materials will be hastily and superficially treated or the topics projected in the volume will not be covered. . . Only a most experienced and successful teacher could hope to present a satisfactory course covering so comprehensive an area. The task would be the more difficult because of only fairly successful integration of materials throughout the book. A second observation seems justified. If today 'the bulk of government is administration,' and this reviewer believes that it is, it is to be regretted that in this volume we have another textbook in which this amazing development is comparatively neglected. For if 'the bulk of government is administration,' surely administration must be a substantial part of 'the essence of politics,'" Cathryn Seckler-Hudson

Am Pol Sci R 35:554 Je '41 950w

"As may be expected, these chapters are uneven in value and widely different in style and presentation. Some of them ripple along and are as limpid as mountain streams, while others are almost as sluggish and brackish as the waters of southern bayous. Here and there are chapters which present excellent essays on the subject matter discussed; but when considered as an orderly treatment of the theme as a whole, the chapters are often disconnected, sometimes overlapping, and frequently fail to cover topics which would seem appropriate to a well-rounded discussion of politics," A. E. Buck

+ Ann Am Acad 215:228 My '41 550w

PEET, CREIGHTON. Defending America; il. by Fritz Kredel. 160p $1.50 Harper

355 U.S.—Army. U.S.—Navy. U.S.—Defenses. Military art and science—Juvenile literature (W) 41-51870

"Handy reference book for younger boys who want to distinguish uniforms, ranks and symbols used in the United States Army and Navy. Many full-page pictures and smaller drawings accompany the factual text, telling of the work of each branch of the service, of the training necessary, equipment supplied, methods of communication, and types of battleships now in use." (Horn Bk M) For grades five to seven.

Booklist 33:18 S '41

"The arrangement is such that anything in which a young reader is especially interested may be easily found; besides, it runs in about the order in which the services present themselves to a boy's mind. . . . The many pictures are clear, in natural colors, and sufficiently detailed to convey the information for which the boy is looking. It is an excellent example of fact book." M. L. Becker

+ Books p9 S 28 '41 200w

"Mr. Peet's facts are readable, simple and well presented." E. V. Wyatt

+ Cath World 154:377 D '41 100w

"Kredel's pictures are magnificent. An up-to-date summary of what America has to fight with." H. L. Binsse

+ Commonweal 35:110 N 21 '41 20w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn BK M 17:372 S '41 60w

"Since suggestion in both pictures and text is frankly warlike, the book may be desired more for reference use than for circulation to children as young as many who will be able to read it. Print and general format excellent." J. K. Dillon

Library J 66:736 S 1 '41 70w

New Yorker 17:146 D 6 '41 60w

PEET, CREIGHTON. How things work. 116p il $2 Holt

530 Physics—Juvenile literature. Technology—Juvenile literature (W) 41-24268

Explanations, with photographs, of some important physical phenomena and their mechanical application. For grades four to seven.

Booklist 33:162 Ja 1 '42

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p6 Ja 18 '42 230w

"Well done." H. L. Binsse

+ Commonweal 35:113 N 21 '41 20w

New Yorker 17:147 D 6 '41 20w

PEET, MRS LOUISE (JENISON), and SATER, LENORE ESTELINE. Household equipment. 2d ed 391p il $3 Wiley [18s Chapman]

643.3 Household appliances. Home economics 40-33425

"This textbook, developed in the Home economics division of Iowa state college, covers equipment for kitchen and laundry, as well as home lighting, heating, ventilation, and plumbing. Some technical details, and some fundamentals of electricity and physics, are included. Developments in equipment features and in lighting are added in this edition, as well as additional illustrations." (Booklist) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1935. References at ends of chapters. Index.

Booklist 37:219 Ja 15 '41

J Home Econ 33:45 Ja '41 30w

Pratt p15 autumn '41

PEFFER, NATHANIEL. Prerequisites to peace in the Far East. 121p $1 Inst. of Pacific relations. Am. council [5s Allen, G]

950 Eastern question (Far East). Japan—Foreign relations—China. China—Foreign relations—Japan. Peace 41-515

"An analysis, from what might be called the strictly Western viewpoint, of certain of the causes underlying the present conflict in the Far East, and of conditions prerequisite to the establishment of a durable peace in that area. [The] general thesis is simple: that most of the troubles which have beset the Far East have been due to the impact of Western capitalistic imperialism, which Japan has accepted and put on like an outer garment, but which China has merely had imposed upon her; and that these troubles can be dissipated by the withdrawal from the Far East of political and economic controls now exercised by Western nations, and by permitting and aiding Japan and China to industrialize as rapidly as possible, without fear of each other or of Western powers." Am Pol Sci R

"One has the feeling that Peffer, in justice to the scope of his subject, should have gone farther. Nevertheless, his thesis is ably, even brilliantly, developed. It is adequately oriented both to the past history and current scene of the Far Eastern conflict, and to the even greater conflict concurrently proceeding in Europe. It merits careful and respectful reading." E. B. Price

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:391 Ap '41 320w

Reviewed by W. P. Maddox

Ann Am Acad 215:183 My '41 70w

Booklist 37:239 F 1 '41

Reviewed by G. N. Steiger

Pacific Affairs 14:230 Je '41 550w

"For some years Nathaniel Peffer has been an able contributor to the growing body of literature dealing with the international relations of the Far East. It is not at all probable or necessary that serious students of international affairs will accept in every detail the author's proposals for a durable peace in the Far East. Nonetheless, few informed persons could read this valuable book without being deeply impressed with the sheer logic, the historical sense, and the sympathetic but realistic and objective approach here made to find a proper basis for a permanent civilized international order in the farther Orient." A. P. Ludwig

+ Social Educ 6:45 Ja '42 850w

PEIRCE, CHARLES SANTIAGO SANDERS. Philosophy of Peirce; selected writings; ed. by Justus Buchler. (Int. lib. of psychology, philosophy and scientific method) 386p $3.50 Harcourt [16s 6d Routledge]

191 Pragmatism

A41-1981

"The work of Charles Sanders Peirce has hitherto been available only in the 'Collected Papers' (1931-'35) in six volumes. Mr. Buchler, author of the recent study of 'Charles Peirce's Empiricism,' hopes that this later volume 'contains Peirce's best work and is at the same time thoroughly representative of his philosophy as a whole. Intended both for new readers and those already acquainted with Peirce, it will perhaps, besides reaching many to whom his work has been inaccessible, practically speaking, make possible a perspective of that work which might not otherwise have been attained.'" (Books) Index.

Am Soc R 6:927 D '41 180w

Books p29 Mr 2 '41 200w

"Peirce's Collected Papers are too costly for most students to own, and Professor Cohen's edition of Peirce essays (under the title of Chance, Love, and Logic) has been out of print for some years. Dr. Buchler has therefore performed a valuable service in bringing together many of Peirce's outstanding philosophical papers and making them more generally available." E. N.

+ J Philos 38:189 Mr 27 '41 190w

Nation 153:233 S 13 '41 120w

"C. S. Peirce was a thinker of rare originality and depth, a logician brought up, as he said, in a laboratory. . . . It is to be hoped, that this selection of published and unpublished work, with an excellent introduction by the editor, will make his work better known; for it is worth knowing in spite of its peculiar defects." A. D. Ritchie

+ Nature 147:220 F 22 '41 1150w

"This new volume is a technically philosophical [one]. . . . The selections emphasize academic ideas in such a way as often to repel the average reader. The old flavor of Chance, Love and Logic has been sacrificed to a new precision. One of Peirce's very best papers, 'Man's Glassy Essence,' has been omitted entirely. Even the introduction is addressed primarily to the special student. On the other hand, Peirce's thought now appears with greater clarity, continuity, and organization. Professor Buchler has selected much material heretofore hidden in the voluminous Collected Papers." F. I. C.

PEIRCE, C. S. S.—Continued

+ — New Eng Q 14:601 S '41 240w
Social Studies 32:240 My '41 20w

"In his previous work on the philosophy of C. S. Peirce Dr. Buchler laid students—and others—under an obligation by a profoundly suggestive study of the epistemological portion of a great and obscure philosopher's vision. In the present book he supplements this boon in a form which is to all intents and purposes a Peirce anthology; and while those who enjoyed the critical power Dr. Buchler formerly displayed may be sorry to find his own contribution to be restricted on this occasion to some ten pages of introduction, they may rest assured that these pages are of such quality that it will only be after a thoughtful perusal of the whole that they will find themselves in a position even to begin to appreciate the force of Dr. Buchler's enumeration of the fundamentally strong and weak points in Peirce's philosophical system."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p640 D 21 '40 750w

PELUS, MARIE JEANNE. Yankee ballerina. 234p il $2 Dodd

(W) 41-19367

"This is fiction in which the author, a real ballerina, rather skillfully provides background and appreciation for the beholder as well as the aspirant in dance art. In nowise belittling Russian ballet—whose rich traditions and influence she presents, with other countries—the author's distinct purpose is to inspire respect for an American school of ballet, shorn of snobbery and foreign affectations. She does this in the story of a girl of sixteen, member of a New York troupe of young people barnstorming the country." Library J

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p8 N 16 '41 360w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 17 '42 360w

"While the plot is slight, with many flashbacks, it breathes sincerity and originality. On personal attitude, professional demands, and 'educating the public,' the tone is convincing and sympathetic, with no ivory-tower attitude. For older girls who liked the Katrinka books and Choate's Dance of the Hours." Maude Adams

+ Library J 66:909 O 15 '41 150w

PENFIELD, THOMAS. Guardians of America; men and machines of the U.S. army, navy, and marine corps. 64p il $1 Rand McNally

355 U.S.—Defenses. U.S.—Army. U.S.—Navy. U.S.—Marine corps

Describes three branches of the United States defense forces, the army, navy, and marine corps; emphasizing their methods and equipment. The author had the cooperation of the various United States bureaus in obtaining information and pictures. Many illustrations, some in color. Identifying insignia pictured on end papers. Index.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p7 D 28 '41 30w

"It is a useful and inexpensive book. Ages nine and up." D. M. MacDonald
+ Library J 66:952 N 1 '41 80w

PENNOCK, JAMES ROLAND. Administration and the rule of law. 259p $1.50; college ed $1 Farrar

353 Administrative law. U.S.—Executive departments 41-11629

The volume is designed to give the reader an impartial review of the whole issues arising out of the growth of administrative rule making and adjudication. The volume, which is evidently designed for the student, is devoted for the most part to an account of the rise of administrative process in modern society, and the remedies and rules which courts have applied in reviewing administrative actions. It draws largely from judicial decisions." (Ann Am Acad) Selected bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by J. P. Harris
Ann Am Acad 218:220 N '41 350w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:380 Ja '42 10w

"Mr. Pennock deals adequately and sensibly with one of the most important problems now confronting our government." Lindsay Rogers
+ Sat R of Lit 24:13 Ag 2 '41 110w

PENNSYLVANIA, UNIVERSITY. Bicentennial conference. Religion and the modern world; by Jacques Maritain [and others]. 192p $2 Univ. of Pa. press

204 Theology. Religion 41-6144

Fifteen papers dealing with various phases of religion and the modern world. Contents: Contemporary renewals in religious thought, by Jacques Maritain; The modern trends in European Protestant theology, by J. L. Hromádka; Modern trends in Catholic theology, by W. J. McGarry; Unchanging ethics in a changing world, by J. A. Ryan; Ethics in a changing world, by P. J. Tillich; The place of religion in higher education, by R. L. Calhoun; The place of religion in higher education, by C. W. Gilkey; Religion and action, by Reinhold Niebuhr; The church as an organ of social ideals, by R. M. Jones; The church and the present social order, by R. E. L. Strider; The rôle of the church as a world force, by J. A. Mackay; The rôle of the church as a world force, by H. St G. Tucker; How Christian-Jewish ideas affect Christian-Jewish conduct, by M. S. Lazaron; The economic factor in religious prejudice, by H. N. MacCracken; The political aspect of Christian-Jewish relations, by G. N. Shuster.

"As a presentation of the present convictions of some of the leaders of thought of modern religion, this book is of very great value." H. J. Simpson

+ Churchman 155:17 Ap 1 '41 240w

"Taken as a whole, the fifteen essays which make up this book offer a vivid picture of the contemporary religious scene with its unities and its dilemmas alike. The authors are agreed on certain basic truths and are one in their faith that they can be put to work to save a world even so far gone as our own. Their disagreements are what one would expect in a field where sectarian lines count for so much as they do in religion. Yet controversial issues are here treated in so irenic a spirit that one closes the book with hope for the future unity of religion rather than despair over its present divisions." J. S. Bixler

+ Crozer Q 18:255 Jl '41 700w

School & Society 53:288 Mr 1 '41 30w

Reviewed by E. N. Jenckes
Spring'd Republican p10 F 22 '41 1300w

PENROSE, STEPHEN BEASLEY LINNARD. Philosophy for lowbrows, by one of them. 210p il $2.50 Whitman pub. co, 7 College av, Walla Walla, Wash.

110 Philosophy 41-8048

"Discarding the traditional categories of philosophy, Dr. Penrose writes with breezy informality, but also with ripe wisdom, about the meaning of life, the chief end of man and the important issues that arise as men try to understand the world and live in it." Christian Century

Christian Century 58:564 Ap 23 '41 90w
Cleveland Open Shelf p19 O '41

"Charming and witty little volume. . . The amusing drawings by Mr. Norling contribute much to the charm of the book." H. W. S. + J Philos 33:334 Je 5 '41 110w

Reviewed by B. M. Loomer
J Religion 21:487 O '41 180w

School & Society 53:792 Je 28 '41 30w

"Philosophy for Lowbrows," is a book as easily read as fiction, but of considerable substance."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Jl 22 '41 210w

PERCY, WILLIAM ALEXANDER. Lanterns on the levee; recollections of a planter's son. 348p $3 Knopf

B or 92 Plantation life (W) 41-4570

An autobiography, which also describes a way of life—present day life on the Yazoo-Mississippi delta. "The author was born in 1885, son of a gallant father who served as a United States senator before the first World War. The tradition of the Percy family is consistently opposed to the new demagogic Southernism of such men as Talmadge, Bilbo, and Huey Long. . . 'Lanterns on the Levee' is the record of a serene and philosophic defeatist. It has the Marcus Aurelius touch; indeed, much of the book is modelled on the 'Meditations,' especially those early chapters in which Mr. Percy pays eloquent tribute to his forebears and to his teachers, gentle and simple, black and white." (New Yorker)

"A volume well conceived and delightfully well written, a remarkable achievement, worthy of recommendation to any and all readers. It is full of authentic information, it reflects a rich experience, and above all it is wholly free from the neurasthenic drivel which afflicts so many of the current sentimental outpourings about the Old South." A. J. Nock

+ Atlantic My '41 120w

Booklist 37:407 My 1 '41

Bookmark 2:14 N '41

"The book is an indispensable addition to the record of Southern life and Southern tradition. As one man's story it is the story of a whole section and its people, written with great skill and understanding." Lawrence Olson

+ Books p6 Mr 9 '41 850w

"In addition to being warmly amusing, it is charming, urbane and genuinely civilized. In it we trace the history of the Mississippi Delta region from early days up to the present, guided courteously by Mr. Percy himself." George Smart

+ Boston Transcript p1 Mr 29 '41 450w

Reviewed by George Stretor

Commonweal 34:138 My 30 '41 550w

"The book is somewhat uneven both in its style and in the interest of its content. Its chapters resemble a series of essays rather than an associated narrative. However, much of it is beautifully written with real traces of the poet. It is instinct throughout with devotion for the section of the South the author knows best, a devotion which enables him to picture its past and present vividly, even though at times it narrows his perspective of other parts of the country. The book is to be recommended." Jacqueline Overton

+ Library J 66:80 Ja 15 '41 150w

Reviewed by C. C. Munz

Nation 152:644 My 31 '41 850w

"You may not agree with all Mr. Percy says, but you have rarely heard his side stated with so much wisdom, gentleness and wit. Since the regime he lived for and by is a passing one, set this down as a very creditable swan song."

+ New Repub 104:510 Ap 14 '41 60w

"Mr. Percy's autobiography to the age of 55 is a work of exceptional merit and importance. The high quality of its prose would entitle it to consideration for a permanent place in our literature, and it has numerous other virtues as well. Its real significance, however, lies in the candor and completeness of the revelation of the Southern aristocrat's point of view." Herschel Brickell

+ N Y Times p5 Mr 23 '41 1700w

"It has charm, Southern charm, perhaps even too much of it for our frosty Northern hearts. It is single-minded, sentimental, humorous, and liberal in a manner very different from the programmatic economic-political liberalism of the Northeast. Whether Mr. Percy makes out an airtight case for the feudal regime whose tradition he inherited is questionable, but that he makes out a case for the sort of person he is himself is not." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 17:83 Mr 15 '41 550w

"'Lanterns on the Levee' is a beautifully written book; Mr. Percy's prose has dignity and vigor and style; and in every sentence he writes his own character is manifest. The book is rich in anecdotes well told and in people well portrayed. As autobiography it has few equals in recent books. It gives voice forthrightly to the faith of its author, and no one who wants to understand the conflicts in the South today can afford to neglect reading it." W. J. Gold

+ Sat R of Lit 23:24 Ap 5 '41 1000w

"Mr. Percy's irony seems slightly excessive, just as his comments are sometimes colored by personal emotion. But this book is, after all, a biography, and the sociological interpretation is incidental, if illuminating. There are passages that seem verbally overwrought, and, perhaps, one or two, such as the discussion of the Negro sex question that are underdone. Yet the book has substance, individuality and considerable charm."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 16 '41 1200w

Time 37:90 Mr 24 '41 900w

PERDUE, VIRGINIA. The case of the grieving monkey. 270p $2 Doubleday

41-11797

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p10 Je 22 '41 160w

"This whodunit is the work of a new writer who has not sufficiently withstood the temptation to mix all her ingredients in one dish. Even if there is too much in the story, however, it is still a good one. And we hope the author has ideas enough in waiting to keep Eleanor Burke active in our midst." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p17 Je 22 '41 270w

"Nicely thought-out characters and a good plot in this first mystery."

+ New Yorker 17:80 Je 21 '41 30w

"Above average."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:15 Jl 5 '41 40w

PERDUE, VIRGINIA. The singing clock. 269p $2 Doubleday

41-18052

Psychological mystery story.

Booklist 38:81 N 1 '41

"This one ought to please almost any grade of customer. It's a shocker written so cleverly that even highbrow fans can read it without shuddering for the wrong reason. . . A splendid bunch of murders, too, and smooth detecting by Lieutenant Brady. Good entertainment in a week fairly short on masterpieces." Will Cuppy

+ Books p17 O 12 '41 150w

"An expert and dreadful tale." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p24 S 21 '41 240w

"A dramatic story, beginning with a murder and ending with a bang-up mental collapse. Not a mystery, but very frightening indeed."

+ New Yorker 17:112 S 20 '41 50w

"Bulk of characters ripe subjects for psychopathic wards—and act that way. Plot has neat surprise for tough-fibred addicts. Creepy."

Sat R of Lit 24:18 O 11 '41 50w

PERKINS, DEXTER. Hands off; a history of the Monroe doctrine. 455p il $3.50 Little 327.73 Monroe doctrine (W) 41-5947

Scholarly study of the Monroe doctrine, its origins, vicissitudes, present status, and probable future. The author is professor of history at the University of Rochester, and an authority on the Monroe doctrine. Bibliography by chapters. Index.

Reviewed by S. F. Bemis
Am Hist R 47:389 Ja '42 800w

"Professor Dexter Perkins is well known as one of the leading authorities on the Monroe Doctrine through the previous publication of three monographs dealing with different periods of its history. His latest volume is, in a sense, a synthesis of the earlier volumes and, embodying a general survey of the whole history, will have a greater appeal for the general reader, or, at least, for the more thoughtful and sober-minded section of the general reading public. The striking title and the entertaining style, as well as the relegation of all footnotes and bibliographical data to the appendices, while making the book more attractive for the general reader, do not conceal its scholarly qualities." J. M. Mathews

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:996 O '41 700w

"There is a definite place for Professor Perkins's scholarly, workmanlike study of the Monroe Doctrine and its effects." W. H. Chamberlin

+ Atlantic My '41 160w

Booklist 37:432 My 15 '41

Bookmark 2:6 N '41

"A brief, clear, accurate, dispassionate, intelligent, and even entertaining history." H. S. Commager

+ Books p3 Ap 20 '41 1300w

"'Hands Off,' is a most timely book. We should be able to appraise the present and plan for the future far better if we have an understanding of the past. This interpretation of the Monroe Doctrine should help much toward that understanding. It is a book that should be read widely. If a democracy is to act wisely its public must be well informed." F. H. Pardee

+ Boston Transcript p11 Ap 23 '41 550w
Christian Science Monitor p20 My 6 '41 500w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 19:884 Jl '41 60w

"Dexter Perkins' book is probably the most important and complete work on the Monroe Doctrine yet written. . . An excellent index and a bibliography of source material after each chapter, as well as notes at the end of the book, contribute greatly to the value of the work for reference." S. N.

+ Living Age 360:291 My '41 600w
Nation 153:166 Ag 23 '41 70w

"This book, of absorbing interest to the scholar and thoughtful general reader alike, deals with a topic which was never of more vital importance than at the present moment. . . The story is a long and fascinating one, and no other authority today is more competent to tell it than the author." J. T. Adams

+ N Y Times p3 Ap 27 '41 1600w

"Mr. Perkins proves what should be abundantly clear to everyone save professors of history and Henry Ford—that American history is exciting. He draws upon none of the juggler's tricks made familiar by the popularizers. He does not lay on color for the sake of color, he plays no favorites, he invents no villains. . . Mr. Perkins' book will tell you how we got the way we are, why we are still saying to Europe—and to Asia—Hands Off." Hubert Herring

+ Sat R of Lit 23:5 Ap 5 '41 650w
Wis Lib Bul 37:112 Je '41

Reviewed by J. P. Baxter, 3rd
+ Yale R ns 31:178 autumn '41 1050w

PERRY, GEORGE SESSIONS. Hold autumn in your hand. 249p $2 Viking

(W) 41-51540

The story is about a poor Texas farmer who contracts with a big landowner to farm sixty-eight acres of San Pedro bottom land. At the end of a year of desperately hard work, of many disappointments and some small joys, he is bravely holding up his head and looking forward to better years to come.

Booklist 37:270 F 15 '41

Bookmark 2:14 Mr '41

"To my way of thinking, a superb piece of work. . . Mr. Perry's novel is jaunty, robust in its humor as befits the saga of lusty young Sam Tucker. . . It's an unmixed pleasure to make his acquaintance. A real, persuasively human chap is Sam, a good husband, a good father, a good fighter, a real man on his own two feet and moving, ready to go on and up, aware to the very marrow of his bones that this is America where a real man has a chance." F. H. Bullock

+ Books p2 F 2 '41 950w

Reviewed by G. K. Smart
Boston Transcript p1 F 8 '41 900w
Cath World 153:121 Ap '41 250w
Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '41
Nation 152:247 Mr 1 '41 110w

"This is an appealing little novel about a Texas sharecropper who is licked but won't stop punching. . . If you can find truth in fiction without authors' asides to make the point, 'Hold Autumn in Your Hand' spells out a sharper indictment than half a shelf of social-document novels that never rise above a dreary survey of CONDITIONS, woodenly fitted out with the appropriate, and equally dreary, situations, characters and dialogue." Max Gissen

+ New Repub 104:704 My 19 '41 650w

"Deserves an all-out recommendation as a warm, rich, absorbing story. . . This is a fine book—a wholesome and heart-warming combination of ventures and problems on the land, with a racy mixture of earthy humor. It ought to be an enjoyable antidote to the bitter vintage of 'The Grapes of Wrath.'" Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p6 Ja 26 '41 950w

"A sound, sweet little story, a buttanut of a novel, is George Sessions Perry's 'Hold Autumn in Your Hand.' It's a miniature 'Grapes of Wrath' seen through optimistic glasses. . . 'Hold Autumn in Your Hand' leaves you with a pleasant feeling in your mind and heart." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 16:53 F 1 '41 450w

"Sam Tucker is a magnificent character, cheerful, hard-working, competent. . . The story has true intimacy, nobility, and suspense and it is written with considerable humor." Phil Stong

+ Sat R of Lit 23:6 Ja 25 '41 600w

"There is plenty of humanity in the raw in this picture of life among the downtrodden in Texas. But it is not a tale of gloom. It is told with vigor and has a half-humorous, half-serious zest of adventure."

+ Spring'd Republican p7e F 16 '41 650w
Wis Lib Bul 37:56 Mr '41

Reviewed by Robert Littell
Yale R ns 30:xii spring '41 170w

PERRY, JOSEPHINE. The rubber industry. (America at work) 96p il $1.50 Longmans

678 Rubber industry and trade (W) 41-19991

Fourth in the America at work series. It traces the rubber industry from the discovery of the raw material to the manufacture of rubber products, Grades five and up. Index.

Booklist 38:100 N 15 '41

"The material is adequate, Miss Perry's presentation of it is simple enough for the grade-school child, photographs are good. . . Recommended for both school and public libraries." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 66:908 O 15 '41 70w

Social Studies 32:380 D '41 10w

PERRY, KENNETH FREDERICK, and BAAB, CLARENCE T. The binding of books. 160p il $2 Manual arts

686 Bookbinding (W) 40-35557

Manual for amateurs who are interested in bookbinding. Part one explains the different ways of binding a book, when to rebind and when to merely repair, and the kind of binding to use. Part two gives directions for binding all types of books. No index.

Booklist 37:321 Mr 15 '41

N Y New Tech Bks 26:4 Ja '41

Pratt p8 autumn '41

PERRY, RALPH BARTON. On all fronts. 189p $1.75 Vanguard

973.917 U.S.—Foreign relations. Democracy 41-22341

The holder of the Edgar Peirce chair of philosophy at Harvard, addresses this plea for unified action against Hitlerism to his fellow Americans, many of whom, at the time of writing, were confused and uncertain, seeing America's salvation in isolationism and defense of democracy at home.

Booklist 38:156 Ja 1 '42

Reviewed by H. A. von Urf

Library J 66:731 S 1 '41 100w

"The book possesses an interest even more general than the already general one of forcing us to willingly accept war on all fronts. It is a subtle, wholly unobtrusive example of a mature philosophy applied to a concrete situation." Jacques Barzun

+ Sat R of Lit 24:11 D 20 '41 550w

Reviewed by E. C. Lindeman

Survey G 31:38 Ja '42 100w

PERSECUTION of the Catholic church in the Third reich; facts and documents [tr. from the German. 565p il $3 Longmans [5s Burns]

274.3 Church and state in Germany. Roman Catholic church in Germany. Roman Catholics in Germany [A41-1668]

An anonymously published work by a German which with many documents and case histories reviews the story of the persecutions of Catholics and the Catholic church in Nazi Germany. Index.

"To anyone who thinks there is no persecution of the Catholic Church in Germany, we recommend this volume. To anyone who wishes to learn the facts of the bloodless, poisonous martyrdom of the Catholic Church by Nazism, we urge the reading of this volume." Adrian Peyton

+ America 66:47 O 18 '41 700w

Christian Century 58:629 My 7 '41 60w

"American Catholics may wonder if the accounts of the sufferings of the German Church are overdrawn. They will find a convincing answer in this valuable book. Without polemics of any kind it gives the evidence of the persecution. Here are the writings and speeches of the Pope and the German Hierarchy, the official decrees and instructions of the Government, and the speeches and teachings of the Party. The cumulative weight of this testimony is sufficient to establish the German persecution as the worst, because it is the most efficient, of modern times. The cartoons are very interesting. Nothing like them has been seen here since 1928." F. D. Cohalan

+ Commonweal 34:137 My 30 '41 700w

Manchester Guardian p7 Ja 21 '41 400w

"The main essentials of the story have already been told in various books, notably by Dr. Micklem. The great value of this work is the immense number of documents that it provides with truly German thoroughness. The detailed exposure of the action taken by the Government in its official capacity against the officials of the Roman Catholic Church and their teaching, especially in relation to the work of education, makes it impossible for any fair-minded person to maintain either that there was no persecution or that it was merely the work of irresponsible individuals." A. S. Duncan-Jones

+ Spec 166:66 Ja 17 '41 850w

Times [London] Lit Sup p296 Je 21 '41 550w

PERTWEE, ROLAND. Lovers are losers. 310p $2.50 Doubleday

41-4408

Psychological study of the friendship which unites two men, one the hero of the novel, a playwright; the other an actor. When one of them falls in love with the girl, Sarah, the friendship is destroyed. The time is shortly after the first World war, and the place, England.

"What happens is emotional melodrama, if you will, but it has the sharp reality of truth. It is shattering, but out of the wreckage there is much to be salvaged. The ending will surprise you, but Mr. Pertwee has the skill to carry it off convincingly." Lisle Bell

+ Books p8 My 25 '41 600w

"Much of the early part of the novel is very good indeed. . . But with Michael's engagement to Sarah begins a section of the book in which the characters seem to be acting on lines laid down for them by the author, not according to their own propensities. There is a moment when it seems as if Mr. Pertwee might be planning to give his novel an unconventional and satisfying conclusion, but this soon passes. The novel is interesting, it contains many discerning and amusing comments and a considerable amount of excellent material." L. M. Field

+ — N Y Times p22 Ap 20 '41 750w

"A novel written with subtlety and insight, but it suffers from the usual difficulty in making the supposed genius of playwrights, actors, or artists plausible." H. S.

+ — Sat R of Lit 23:20 Ap 19 '41 60w

PETERS, CHARLES CLINTON, and VAN VOORHIS, WALTER ROE. Statistical procedures and their mathematical bases. 516p $4.50 McGraw

311 Statistics. Mathematics 40-32591

"Designed to 'bridge the gap between elementary courses in which the formulas are given from a purely authoritative viewpoint, and the original monographic contributions which are so often highly mathematical in character. The authors bring together and synthesize the classical statistics and the new developments worked out by R. A. Fisher. The book explains mathematical derivations and their use from the standpoint of the student with little prior mathematical training.'" (Am Econ R) Index.

Am Econ R 30:912 D '40 60w

"While probably too advanced for beginning students, the volume is invaluable for those acquainted with the fundamentals. . . While the examples and problems are drawn almost entirely from psychology and agronomy, there is from the sociologist's point of view only one serious criticism, namely, that there is no discussion of time series. Use of this volume in conjunction with such a volume as Mills's Statistical Methods or Croxton and Cowden's Applied General Statistics would compensate for this shortcoming." R. F. Winch

PETERS, C. C.—Continued

+ Am J Soc 47:243 S '41 350w

"The reviewer believes this book to be one of the outstanding contributions to the field of statistical literature. Its presentation is lucid, comprehensive and extraordinarily stimulating to the teacher as well as to the practicing statistician. The reviewer would heartily recommend its use as both a class-room and reference text." M. S. Heidingsfeld
+ Am Soc R 6:618 Ag '41 300w

Reviewed by M. J. Hagood
Social Forces 19:569 My '41 240w

PETERSEN, WILLIAM JOHN. Iowa: the rivers of her valleys. (Iowa centennial history) 381p maps $3 Iowa state hist. soc.

977.7 Iowa—History. Rivers—Iowa 41-12905

Scholarly study of the rivers of Iowa and their part in the history of the state. The author records not only the physical features, but also the human history of the rivers. Index.

"As part of the Iowa Centennial History, in which Iowa takes stock of her past and present, Mr. Petersen's book is a valuable work of reference for the rivers of the state." Horace Reynolds

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 30 '41 460w

Social Studies 32:335 N '41 10w

PETERSHAM, MRS MAUD (FULLER), and PETERSHAM, MISKA. An American ABC [il. by the authors]. [56p] $2 Macmillan

973 U.S.—History—Juvenile literature. Patriotism—Juvenile literature (W) 41-16285

A patriotic picture book, combining American history and a colored ABC book. For grades three to six.

Booklist 38:59 O 15 '41

"Patriotism of the kind that counts is not only the keynote but the melodic scheme of this beautiful picture book with accompanying text. . . It would be hard to go through this book without a thrill." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 N 2 '41 200w

"A book of great distinction and as lovely as anything they have given us is Maud and Miska Petersham's An American ABC." E. V. Wyatt

+ Cath World 154:373 D '41 70w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p9 N 3 '41 170w

"Patriotism and American history blossom hand in hand in this volume, which is strikingly illustrated on every page with color. Any child who can read will treasure it."

+ Churchman 155:5 D 15 '41 30w

"Through a profusion of sincerely conceived and softly colored pictures the artists' deep feeling for America is revealed." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk M 17:471 N '41 70w

"The most dramatic pictures are those illustrating the landing of the Pilgrims and Yankee Doodle. One wishes that more of the pictures showed the strength of character and virility which these two display. The text is simple, yet written with feeling. The book could be used with children from five to eight. Its artistic format will appeal to adults." E. T. Dobbins

+ Library J 66:908 O 15 '41 100w

Sat R of Lit 24:15 D 6 '41 20w

"Does a splendid job of combining a child's ABC book with American history, character and liberty. Finely conceived and vivid illustrations also distinguish this reader, only one of many children's books produced by this team."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 2 '41 80w
Wis Lib Bul 37:203 D '41

PETERSON, ALVIN M. Wild bird neighbors. 283p il $2 Bruce pub.

598.2 Birds—Juvenile literature (W) 40-9416

Informal essays on the author's experiences in observing some thirty-five species of North American birds. He describes appearance, habits, nests, food, songs, and protective methods. For grades five to six or over. Index.

Booklist 36:395 Je 15 '40

Wis Lib Bul 37:22 Ja '41

PETERSON, ROGER TORY. A field guide to western birds. 240p il pl $2.75 Houghton

598.2 Birds (W) 41-9559

Companion volume to the author's Field Guide to the Birds (Book Review Digest, 1934) which included birds found in eastern North America. This is a field manual for the identification of birds of the western part of the United States. The shapes and colors of the birds are shown in illustrations, some in color, some in black and white, but all plainly marked and with the omission of confusing details. Index.

Booklist 38:5 S '41

"Peterson is that rare thing—a true artist and a highly trained scientist. When the combination is really sound, it is irresistible; it is ambidextrous; it takes the imagination and the intellect by double assault. 'A Field Guide to Western Birds' can be slipped into the pocket, or into the front pocket of a car, or a mountain climber's knapsack. It will go this summer over Sierra trails and on Cascade fishing trips and down to the shores of the Pacific where the murrets and guillemots wheel and fly. For any one planning a Western trip, it makes the perfect gift." D. C. Peattie

+ Books p9 Jl 27 '41 230w

"Solves the problem of identifying all avian species west of the Rockies much better than any other single volume. Like the Peterson field guide to the birds of the East, this compact but complete little work employs an original and superior system of field identification based upon the characteristic features of the birds and facilitating quick recognition at a distance." C. B. M.

+ Springf'd Republican p8 Jl 1 '41 480w

Wis Lib Bul 37:152 O '41

PETROVIC, SVETISLAV. Free Yugoslavia calling; tr. and ed. by Joseph Ciszek Peters. 356p $3 Greystone

940.53 World war, 1939-. Yugoslavia—Politics and government 41-22003

Articles on the war by a Yugoslav journalist and radio commentator, who, though living in exile, still broadcasts every day to his native land from America. The articles are grouped under the main heads: France, Czechoslovakia, Poland and Yugoslavia, and concern the progress of Hitler's conquests in those countries. A final section is entitled, What price peace?

"In the days of late March, when a Yugoslav government was ready to yield before the Axis, Dr. Petrovitch deliberately called his people to revolt. The Axis press said later that Colonel William J. Donovan and Dr. Petrovitch were the chief instigators of the Serbian national uprising. The author of 'Free Yugoslavia Calling' would be proud of the honor. . . Dr. Petrovitch's book is full of healthy optimism. He is convinced that Victory will come, that civilization will prevail with the help of America, that the terror of Europe will make the world want democracy."

+ Books p27 O 26 '41 200w

Christian Science Monitor p16 D 29 '41 450w

New Repub 105:869 D 22 '41 70w

PETTERSEN, SVERRE. Introduction to meteorology. 236p il maps $2.50 McGraw

551.5 Meteorology 41-14983

"The aim of this book is to present in an elementary manner the basic principles of modern meteorology. Intended for students without previous acquaintance with the subject, it is written in response to a demand for a nontechnical text to serve the many short and elementary courses in meteorology already in progress in the United States. It is written more for the purpose of creating interest and background than for furnishing a technical and detailed discussion of the various branches of meteorology. For this reason the use of calculus in the presentation of meteorological theories has been avoided. Actually, this book is an expansion of a chapter on meteorology written for the British Empire edition and the American edition of Weems's 'Air Navigation' and an abbreviation of the general principles of the author's recent book 'Weather Analysis and Forecasting.'" (Pref.) Index.

Booklist 38:30 O 1 '41

Eng N 127:96 N 20 '41 70w

PFEIFFER, ROBERT HENRY. Introduction to the Old Testament. 917p $4 Harper

221.6 Bible. Old Testament 41-19456

A textbook for student or layman. In it the author has attempted to combine a study of the Old Testament as a whole, in its religious, literary and historical aspects; a study of its canonization and textual transmission; and a critical analysis of each of its several parts or books. Selected bibliography. Indexes.

Booklist 38:172 Ja 15 '42

"A book of more than nine hundred pages does not lend itself to brief review. One can do no more than offer a few sweeping judgments. Errors of fact are remarkably few and, in general, minor. . . But matters of judgment provide a wider field for comment. Hosts of issues arise where the reader's disagreement will vary from mere question to emphatic opposition. One may feel that Pfeiffer has given too much place to his own theory of Edomite sources in the Hexateuch and in the Wisdom literature. . . And so we might run. But the net result would be to obscure the excellence and importance of Pfeiffer's work." W. A. Irwin

+ Christian Century 59:16 Ja 7 '42 700w

"One cannot well do justice to this important and comprehensive volume within the limits of a brief review. It achieves remarkable success in being on the one hand scholarly and most carefully documented, while, on the other, retaining a fresh and essentially readable style; and may be recommended both to the scholar and to the layman." T. L. L.

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 D 27 '41 700w

Reviewed by L. W. Batten

Churchman 155:18 N 15 '41 270w

"Here is a treasury of scholarship, interpretations new and old, evaluated and presented in fine literary form by a competent student of the Old Testament, whose scholarship is never dry, and whose criticism is always fundamentally religious." I. G. Matthews

+ Crozer Q 19:63 Ja '42 1200w

"Here is a large, detailed, and comprehensive critical introduction to the Old Testament, such as we have not had in English for a long time. It is more like the older works of a generation ago such as Driver's 'Introduction to the Literature of the Old Testament,' long the standard book, on which it is patterned and which it is intended to supersede. Critical study has not been idle all these years, and a compendium incorporating the newer investigations is sure to be welcome, if it is prepared by so competent a scholar as Professor Pfeiffer." J. A. Bewer

+ Sat R of Lit 24:37 D 6 '41 750w

PFEILER, WILHELM KARL. War and the German mind; the testimony of men of fiction who fought at the front; with a foreword by George N. Shuster. 349p $3.25 Columbia univ. press

833.09 German fiction. European war, 1914-1918—Literature and the war 41-21951

A study of the works of German novelists during the period between two wars, particularly as those works were affected by the earlier war, or as they were a preparation of the people for the second war. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by H. N. Doughty, Jr.

Books p17 Ja 25 '42 550w

Canadian Forum 21:316 Ja '42 600w

"This is a very important contribution to the understanding of the German mind as conditioned by the First World War."

+ Christian Century 58:1442 N 19 '41 140w

"Dr. Pfeiler's extremely fair study will increase our understanding of the strange and threatening phenomena presented by modern Germany." Hans Kohn

+ Nation 153:518 N 22 '41 260w

Reviewed by Marianne Hauser

New Repub 105:833 D 15 '41 900w

"This is the basic problem of a study of German war novels written between 1918 and 1939, presented in a book which for the first time reveals the German literary reaction to the war experience. But 'War and the German Mind' is much more. It is a factual, readable, and stimulating analysis of the German conception of life and death as expressed in the ideas of important writers about peace and war." H. B. Wreath

+ Sat R of Lit 24:9 D 20 '41 750w

"The summaries are at times over-long, so that readers will feel they know more about what German authors wrote about the war than about the deeper reasons for the similarities and differences in opinions found in their books. There is, however, an excellent critique of the subject as a whole in an appendix and a permanently valuable bibliography of German war fiction. While rather an exploration of literature than of the 'mind' of the German people, the study is in many ways an illuminating comment on the effect of war upon those who participate in the struggle and who write about it." Donald Derby

+ Spring'd Republican p7e N 23 '41 550w

PHELPS, MRS NETTA SHELDON. The valiant seven; il. by Helen Hughes Wilson. 221p $2.50 Caxton printers

41-4139

This story of the seven Sager children is based upon diaries and reminiscences. It is the story of the westward journey of the Sager family from St Louis, Missouri, to Oregon, in 1844. When the father and mother died on the trip, the children, led by John, aged thirteen, pressed on until they reached the Whitman mission in Oregon.

"While a more experienced story writer would doubtless have produced a narrative more dramatic and more closely knit, it might have proved less convincing than the quiet, unaffected fashion in which the author sets down these pioneer experiences which she either read in diaries or heard by word of mouth. "The Valiant Seven" is impressive in its simplicity and sincerity and boys and girls from 11 to 14 will fall under its spell." A. T. Eaton

PHELPS, N. S.—Continued

+ N Y Times p10 Mr 23 '41 600w

"This particular version of the famous northwest trek of the Sager family is intended mainly for young readers, but the author is an authority on the early history of the American Northwest and has developed her story from reliable sources, which include both writings and oral testimony of the several Sager girls who survived a massacre at the Whitman mission deep in the woods of what is now the state of Washington." C. B. M.

Springf'd Republican p8 Mr 5 '41 850w

PHELPS, WILLIAM LYON, ed. Children's anthology. 388p $3 Doubleday

808.8 Literature—Collections. Children in literature (W) 41-25718

A collection of prose and verse about children with excerpts from Plutarch, Shakespeare, Barrie, Louisa May Alcott and many others.

Books p46 D 7 '41 70w

"This paralyzingly inclusive volume purports, if we may trust its jacket, to be made up of selections about children, and must be directed at a reading audience which has no sample children to observe, or which doesn't care for the samples it has and can escape to those of Prof Phelps's choice."

Springf'd Republican p7e D 7 '41 170w

PHILIPS, JUDSON PENTECOST. Odds on the hot seat. 241p $2 Dodd

41-3335

Mystery story.

Booklist 37:410 My 1 '41

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p22 Mr 23 '41 120w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 F 15 '41 50w

"It is a lively and exciting tale presented in an appropriately racy manner." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p22 F 23 '41 200w

"Although principal actors are slightly reminiscent, plot is handsomely tangled, story moves like greased lightning, and excitement is rife. Hard-boiled headliner."

Sat R of Lit 23:20 F 22 '41 40w

PHILLIPS, ALEXANDRA. Where the apple reddens. 312p $2.50 Putnam

41-1358

Madras, a small city in upper New York state is the scene of this first novel. It is told by Gretchen, niece of the beautiful schemer, Irena, whose pursuit of the town's one celebrity ends in disaster for huntress and hunted.

"Alexandra Phillips is a young writer of marked maturity, who knows how to say what she wants to say. The narrative is quietly written, the characters are distinct and their relationships are presented intently but not tensely." Lisle Bell

+ Books p20 Mr 2 '41 280w

"We would say that the publishers underestimate Miss Phillips' first novel in considering it just a relaxing agent. There is more serious interest than amusement in the tale. . . O. O. As first novels go, this is a very good one."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 8 '41 250w

"Alexandra Phillips tells her story with verve, a keen sense of comedy and underlying thoughtfulness." Anita Moffett

+ N Y Times p27 Mr 2 '41 600w

"Miss Phillips handles her city background well enough, although not very revealingly. . . Unfortunately, however, her story is presumably set in the nineteen-thirties, and the atmosphere which she evokes is unmistakably that of a period at least twenty years earlier; which testifies to the accuracy of her recollection but is less of a tribute to her inventiveness. All in all, however, her novel would be acceptable enough if the unexpected hint of portentousness at the end didn't cause the reader to review all that has gone before in a harsher light." F. S.

+ Sat R of Lit 23:19 Mr 15 '41 360w

PHILLIPS, CHARLES JOHN. Glass: the miracle maker; its history, technology and applications. 424p il $4.50 Pitman

666.1 Glass manufacture and trade. Glassware (W)

This study of glass as an industrial material "is intended primarily, but not exclusively, for the architect, the civil, mechanical, electrical or chemical engineer, the industrial designer, or other industrial executive—in short, for those who may see in glass a unique and versatile material, interesting in its own right, and full of unexplored possibilities for creating products and improving production methods." (Foreword) Partial contents: The glass of years gone by; Glass today; The chemistry of glass; The mechanical properties of glass; The principles of glassworking; Glass in architecture and building construction; Glass in the home; Glass in illumination; Glass in science and research; Fiber glass. Index.

Booklist 38:127 D 15 '41

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 D '41

"Presents the subject of glass in an accurate, up-to-date and comprehensive account. . . From the admirable poem 'I Am Glass,' by George Overmeyer, with which it opens, to the final chapter, it abounds in information, illustrated by a wealth of photographs and explanatory figures." A. H. Comp-ton and others

+ Scientific Bk Club R 12:1 S '41 1150w

PHILLIPS, ETHEL CALVERT. A name for Obed; il. by Lois Lenski. 119p $2 Houghton

41-5681

Obed Timmons had all a small boy's dislike of a name that the other boys made fun of, but he didn't know what to do about it. When he went to live with a lively young aunt who kept a candy shop in Timmons Cove, Maine, Obed's joy was complete. Not only was he able to help his aunt, but in Timmons Cove his name was important. He was named after his sea captain grandfather, who "was the best man who ever lived in Timmons Cove."

"This is one of the stories of development of character in a small boy, for which many older people are looking as they make out shopping lists. All is told by example not by precept; Obed is a fine little fellow to begin with and you see him steadily rising to meet opportunities for being better—but nobody preaches. The talk is brisk and amusing, with the laconic directness of the district. Miss Lenski's pictures have the same old-fashioned directness in showing how small boys look and act today. They are in black and white touched up with bright sea-blue." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 Ap 27 '41 200w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p10 N 24 '41 170w

"The author at times seems to write in an almost over-simplified manner. But boys and girls of nine and ten will enjoy the story. There are numerous Lois Lenski illustrations." E. A. Groves

+ Library J 66:403 My 1 '41 150w

"A mere summary of events cannot possibly do justice to the flavor of Miss Phillips's stories for younger children. This one, sparkling with the light and color of a Maine Summer, is another of those books which she knows how to fill so skillfully with the happy incidents, the friendships, and the problems of childhood, presented with the proper seriousness (which has nothing to do with solemnity) with which a nice child encounters them." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Je 8 '41 320w

"This is a good one."

+ New Yorker 17:87 My 24 '41 60w

Wis Lib Bul 37:204 D '41

PHILLIPS, HARRY IRVING. The private papers of Private Purkey; with drawings by Alan Dunn. 121p $1.50 Harper

817

41-14107

Collection of letters, supposedly written by an American drafted soldier in camp to his "Dear Ma," back home. Private Purkey has his doubts about many things from bayonets to being syko-animalized, and his reactions are stated succinctly and humanly, with not a little humor.

Booklist 38:6 S '41

"The Private Papers of Private Purkey" will entertain a lot of civilians, and it might be a good idea to pass along to a few generals." Lisle Bell

+ Books p6 Ag 3 '41 240w

"There are thousands of Purkeys in the camps today. And they'd get a big laugh out of this volume." J. Van Z.

+ Churchman 155:34 O 1 '41 150w

"These letters from a selective service soldier to his Ma are no manual of what every citizen should know about the Army, but for all that they are extremely illuminating. Oscar Purkey's papers convey a convincingly accurate jeep's-eye view of Army life. Designed, executed and illustrated in broadly humorous style, they make mighty amusing reading." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p7 Ag 10 '41 400w

"Bluff, shrewd humor guaranteed not to be understood by the brass hats. Sympathetic illustrations by Alan Dunn."

+ New Yorker 17:55 Ag 30 '41 20w

Springf'd Republican p10 Ag 22 '41 300w

PHILLIPS, JOHN. Bomb that wouldn't go off, and other fables from Moronia; with pictographs by W. A. Dwiggins. 81p $1.50 Humphries

817

"A collection of twenty-one fables that begin with the old-fashioned 'Once upon a time there was,' but quickly thereafter strike a modern note touched with lunacy. Steam shovels, linotype machines and merry-go-rounds have names and personalities and outlandish adventures. Glamour girls ride in taxis, horses talk Latin, trolley cars feel the mating urge, concrete mixers give blood transfusions, and all work up to neat but astounding morals." N Y Times

"The collection is a hodgepodge of nonsense and record-breaking non sequiturs. For the reader who likes to follow flights of fancy in mad hedge-hopping style with no regard for likelihood or coherence, this should be the stuff. Mad and dizzy and bold are these cracks at fabling, but somehow the essential spark of combustible humor seems lacking. The illustrations by W. A. Dwiggins are excellent." B. S.

N Y Times p3 D 21 '41 200w

"Mr Phillips's satire has a heart-beat as delicate as one of those automobile body crushers. W. A. Dwiggins provides the illustrations, one for each of the 21 fables and each one admittedly 'quietly crazy.' The combination is enough to take almost anyone's mind off the war, except, of course, where the war is carried into the fable."

Springf'd Republican p7e D 28 '41 90w

PHILLPOTTS, EDEN. Awake Deborah! 330p $2.50 Macmillan [8s 6d; 4s Methuen]

41-12721

Detective story.

"If you don't become restive at Mr. Phillpotts's lengthy speeches and such—and we didn't—you'll find that this adds up to Grade A stuff, well worth two bits extra." Will Cuppy

+ Books p9 Ag 17 '41 400w

"A pity if Mr. Phillpotts's rotund and ample style tended to set younger readers against his new story, Awake Deborah, wherein his gifts for narrative and characterisation are shown to great advantage." E. R. Punshon

+ Manchester Guardian p7 JI 9 '40 150w

"This is not a story for those who demand swift action and thrills on every page. Rather it is for those who enjoy good writing even though the pace is a bit too leisurely." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p17 Ag 24 '41 130w

"Slow, calm reading for these hot, hazardous days."

New Yorker 17:56 Ag 30 '41 50w

"Old-fashioned gentleman narrator of great help to perplexed professionals in solving wordy and slow-moving but always interesting case."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:16 Ag 30 '41 40w

Time 38:92 S 1 '41 30w

"The story can hardly be classified as a thriller, nor is it an exercise in detection: it is, rather a study of the criminal twist which may sometimes be found in educated minds of uncommon ability—an interesting and fruitful theme which is developed with the accustomed skill of Mr. Phillpotts."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p365 JI 27 '40 100w

PHILLPOTTS, EDEN. Ghostwater. 285p $2 Macmillan [8s Methuen]

41-18114

Mystery story.

"A Grade A Phillpotts number, complete with the good old flavor and writing style." Will Cuppy

+ Books p30 O 5 '41 360w

Christian Century 58:1242 O 8 '41 40w

"There are some judges who consider that Mr. Phillpotts has done for Devon what Hardy did for Dorset, or at least what Quiller-Couch did for Cornwall. As to that I cannot say, for I have never read any of Mr. Phillpotts' other books; and, frankly, if they are like 'Ghostwater,' I do not much want to read them."

— Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 9 '41 110w

"A novel which can scarcely be called a detective story, although there is a detective in it. But as a novel of clashing temperaments and of mysterious crimes it has a quality that will be appreciated by lovers of good writing and good story-telling." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p24 O 12 '41 240w

"The search for the murderer, or murderers, is in the older tradition of detection. And then there is the unexpected ending which must not be disclosed but which climaxes a good yarn with a good end." G. G. Bates

+ Sat R of Lit 24:13 O 11 '41 310w

Reviewed by John Fairfield

Spec 166:534 My 16 '41 100w

"It is all written in Mr. Phillpotts's later manner, verbose and occasionally laboured, but the story will carry the reader through to the end."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p189 Ap 19 '41 280w

PICASSO, PABLO (PABLO RUYS). Picasso, by Jean Cassou; tr. from the French by Mary Chamot. (Hyperion press bk) 167p il $4 Art bk.

759.6 Picasso, Pablo (Pablo Ruys) 40-27842

This volume contains more than one hundred plates, some in color, and a long introduction by Jean Cassou dealing with Picasso's art and influence.

Booklist 37:217 Ja 15 '41

"The long introduction is a masterpiece of its kind, though one needs an abnormal appetite for those strange, metaphysical trances into which writers on art used to get themselves when undertaking to distill a unique spiritual essence from a simple technical exercise. Whatever may happen to the world, it will probably be a long time before critics revert again to the language employed by Jean Cassou." Thomas Craven

Books p4 Ja 5 '41 1100w

"The volume is of particular merit, because it is a matter of conjecture whether Picasso can continue to create under present European conditions. In any case, 1940 is bound to mark a sharp break in his work, which now can be judged with some measure of detachment. In an introductory essay, Jean Cassou has written a penetrating and sympathetic study of Picasso's work." Charmion von Wiegand

Living Age 359:596 F '41 480w

"The account of Barcelona and its possible share in Picasso's genius and practice is fresh and exciting and I think more or less dependable. . . . The allusions to Barcelona and the ancient Mediterranean, and her great fantastic architect, Gaudi, are excellent lights on Picasso. The plates are passable." Stark Young

+ New Repub 105:339 S 15 '41 550w

Pratt p18 spring '41

PICASSO, PABLO (PABLO RUYS). Understanding Picasso; a study of his styles and development, by Helen F. Mackenzie; sponsored by the Art Inst. of Chicago. 19p1 in folder $2 Univ. of Chicago press [in folder 12s Cambridge]

759.6 Picasso, Pablo (Pablo Ruys) 40-32276

"[This] is a portfolio of plates arranged to illustrate the artist's various styles and development from his first imitations of Toulouse-Lautrec to his latest excursions into the most confounding bypaths of surrealism. The painter's development . . . is broken up into sixteen sub-divisions with supporting examples from the different periods and with reproductions of the sources from which he has elaborated his styles. . . . The comments on the plates, for the most part, are quotations from writers who might have lived in the Middle Ages." Books

Reviewed by Thomas Craven
Books p4 Ja 5 '41 130w

Reviewed by Jerome Mellquist
Commonweal 33:149 N 29 '40 120w

Reviewed by Charmion von Wiegand
Living Age 359:595 F '41 700w

"The Art Institute of Chicago is to be congratulated for at least trying to bring a fascinating artist closer to the public."

+ Nation 151:430 N 2 '40 200w

Pratt p18 spring '41

PICKELS, GEORGE WELLINGTON. Drainage and flood-control engineering. 2d ed 476p il maps $4 McGraw

627.5 Drainage. Flood control. Reclamation of land 41-51752

"During the fifteen years that have elapsed since the first edition of this volume, much new information has become available on the several phases of the subjects of drainage and flood control. The purpose of this revision is to bring the original text up to date by the inclusion of as much of this new material as possible without changing materially the size of the book. Since the subject of excavating machinery is somewhat foreign to the title of the book, the chapter on this subject has been omitted in the revision to make room for added material in the other chapters. In all, some 95 pages of old material have been deleted and replaced by 125 pages of new or revised material." (Pref. to the 2d ed) For earlier edition see Book Review Digest, 1926. Index.

Booklist 37:443 My 15 '41

N Y New Tech Bks 26:40 Jl '41

PICKEN, MRS MARY (BROOKS). Sewing for the home; how to make fabric furnishings in a professional way; with il. by C. Florence Valentine and Marie Struve. 178p $3.50 Harper

747 House decoration. Sewing (W) 41-12754

Instructions for making curtains, draperies, slip covers, bed spreads, quilts, rugs, and other accessories for the home. The many illustrations include line drawings and diagrams and several photographs in color of decorated rooms. Index.

Booklist 38:5 S '41

Books p21 S 21 '41 160w

Wis Lib Bul 37:136 Jl '41

PICKERING, ERNEST. Shelter for living. 370p il $3.75 Wiley

728 Architecture, Domestic. Housing 41-21840

"A professor of architecture has written this book primarily for students in schools of architecture and home economics, secondarily for architects, builders, and prospective homeowners. Chief interest is in the single-family detached home owned by its occupants, though discussion of basic principles would make the book of some value also to renters and apartment-dwellers. The book emphasizes the 'functional house which should develop in response to' the physical-social environment." (J Home Econ) Index.

Booklist 38:127 D 15 '41

J Home Econ 34:51 Ja '42 80w

PIERSON, MRS ELEANOR (MEHNERT). The good neighbor murder. 208p $2 Howell, Soskin 41-14545

Tale of international intrigue, in which a United States official and his wife on a goodwill trip to Brazil, become involved with spies, murderers, and a huge Nazi plot.

"An exciting story, not too cleverly presented but timely enough to be well worth while." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p14 Ag 17 '41 210w

"Well-informed narrative about machinations of Hitler agents in South America. Plot and dialog nothing startling. Backgrounds nicely done. Average."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:16 Ag 16 '41 40w

PIERSON, JOHN HERMAN GROESBECK. Full employment. 297p $2.50 Yale univ. press 331.137 Unemployment. Economic policy. U.S.—Economic policy 41-8832

This discussion of the economic conditions, under which unemployment would cease to exist, provides a background for the construction of a full-employment program. "The author distinguishes between production planned by public agencies and production for a market. Full employment can readily be achieved by centralized planning of all production with a view to making use of the whole labor supply. In an economy of production for profit and decentralized initiative, however, the problem of full employment is more difficult to solve." (Ann Am Acad) Index.

"Because the scope of the book is so broad, the author has found it necessary to express opinions on a wide variety of subjects. . . In general, the reviewer agrees with the views expressed by the author. . . Readers holding different views may, however, feel that the book does not contain an adequate treatment of the various issues discussed. Certainly the monetary-fiscal measures suggested by the author deserve a more extended treatment, while too much space is taken up by rather simple material or by excursions that tend to sidetrack and lose the reader. The theoretical discussions in the book are interesting and instructive, although too much faith seems to be placed on the interest rate and the Chamberlain marginal-revenue-equal-to-marginal-cost analysis as determinants of corporation policies." R. A. Lester

+ Ann Am Acad 216:212 J1 '41 500w

Booklist 37:510 J1 1 '41

Management R 30:273 J1 '41 210w

"A major virtue of the book is the prescience with which [the author] has anticipated his readers' possible objections and the skill with which he has marshaled arguments which will satisfy them. No non-professional reader who comprehends the importance of the problem of unemployment can afford to pass it up." Willmoore Kendall

+ New Repub 105:226 Ag 18 '41 900w

Reviewed by E. F. Baker

Survey 77:343 N '41 650w

PIGOU, ARTHUR CECIL. The political economy of war. rev ed 169p $1.50 (5s) Macmillan 330.19355 War—Economic aspects. European war, 1914-1918—Economic aspects. War, Cost of A41-2604

"This is a revision of the book originally published in 1921 under the same title but long since out of print. A brief Prologue and Epilogue have been added; the chapters on the Aftermath have been eliminated; relatively little new material has been incorporated; the general arrangement is much the same as formerly." (Ann Am Acad) "The subject-matter of the book covers the war-time problems that have to be faced by the economic life of a democracy. . . Within its limits, the book provides a very careful survey of resources (both real and financial) and their war-time distribution; of fiscal policies with respect to both taxation and borrowing; of price controls made necessary by the exigencies of war; of rationing, particularly as regards consumers goods." (Am Pol Sci R)

"The book covers only a part of the problems which have to be faced in pursuit of the modern war, but that part is dealt with in a masterly way." M. A. Heilperin

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:571 Je '41 450w

Reviewed by H. M. Gray

Ann Am Acad 216:181 J1 '41 450w

"Professor Pigou's book is a saddening reminder as well as a classic statement. It was first written just after the last war when it had extra chapters discussing problems of peacetime reconstruction. Now only the war chapters remain. Limpid and shrewd, they state what are still the basic principles of war economics. . . It is all there. No better introduction or permanent standby for the study of war economics could be found. But the peace chapters have not been rewritten. In their place is a sad short refusal to look again into a false dawn."

+ Economist 138:380 Mr 2 '40 170w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 19:872 J1 '41 100w

"This little book has that characteristic quality of its author's work, the quality of architectural and symmetrical unity and logical elegance, which—incongruous as the idea may on the face of it seem to the non-economist—has something in common with that of the music of Bach. To see the subject steadily, sub specie aeternitatis, here is the book to read." Honor Croome

+ Spec 164:494 Ap 5 '40 500w

PILAT, OLIVER RAMSAY, and RANSON, JO. Sodom by the sea; an affectionate history of Coney Island. 334p $3 Doubleday

974.722 Coney Island, New York

(W) 41-12188

Saga of Coney Island, beginning with the November day in 1830 when four piratical seamen came ashore there and buried $54,000 in Mexican silver dollars, which they had stolen, and ending with 1940.

Booklist 38:8 S '41

"A cockeyed, amusing, bawdy tale this is, with strange and poignant overtones. . . It is all a merry tale, and a sad one, too. There are anecdotes by the bale, most of them excellent. . . A rich and rewarding book—rich and a little bit creepy." Stanley Walker

+ Books p4 J1 13 '41 1050w

"Certainly no one will find the volume tedious, and much that it includes is fascinating—if you have any nostalgic leanings, or like to hear about how the great American public entertains itself."

+ Commonweal 34:452 Ag 29 '41 100w

Reviewed by Otis Ferguson

New Repub 105:125 J1 28 '41 400w

"The authors haven't had much to say about the people who came to Coney and why they came. They haven't dug into the meaning of recreation in a great metropolis. There is deep tragedy, that they did not bother to examine, in the kind of amusement long prevalent at Coney Island and the limitations placed by circumstance on the recreation that people found there. The story could have been significant. It is hardly that, but it is highly readable." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p1 J1 13 '41 1300w

"A fine job, attractively written, and not unduly cynical."

+ New Yorker 17:56 J1 19 '41 30w

Reviewed by Fairfax Downey

Sat R of Lit 24:6 J1 26 '41 500w

"Smartly written and well illustrated, this gaudy-covered book with its bright contents is one of the most unusual and interesting studies of American social history to appear in recent years."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e J1 13 '41 900w

Time 37:79 J1 21 '41 450w

PILSUDSKA, ALEKSANDRA (SZCZERBINSKA) (MME JOZEF PILSUDSKI). Pilsudski [Eng title: Memoirs of Madame Pilsudski]. 352p il $3 Dodd [10s 6d Hurst]

B or 92 Pilsudski, Józef. Poland—History (W) 41-3952

The widow of the great Marshal who was virtually dictator of Poland during the years following the restoration of her independence in 1919, gives fragments of personal reminiscence against an historical background. Madame Pilsudski, writing in exile in England, tells in her first chapters how the war came to Poland in 1939 and of her escape to England. Then, going back to the Poland of her youth, she describes the movement for the liberation of her country before 1918, her meeting with Pilsudski and their work together for the young new Poland. Index.

Atlantic Ap '41 200w

Booklist 37:386 Ap 15 '41

PILSUDSKA, ALEKSANDRA—Continued

"There are statements in this book which challenge argument, such as, for instance, Madame Pilsudska's claim that the Polish nobility did nothing to help in the battle for independence, but rather proved to be the element counted on by foreign rulers to keep the status quo. She writes, too, with a natural prejudice against her husband's enemies and a conviction that only Pilsudski's followers were the true patriots. But this tale of dangers faced and tenacity in the teeth of the impossible makes a brave tribute to human power." Virgilia Sapieha

+ — Books p3 F 23 '41 800w

Reviewed by B. E. Nelson

Boston Transcript p1 Mr 15 '41 1000w

"The book is not only a true picture of Poland, comparable to some parts of Mme. Eve Curie's book about her mother, but is also a thorough account of eastern European problems over the last hundred years." A. T.

+ Cath World 152:760 Mr '41 700w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse

Commonweal 33:544 Mr 21 '41 2500w

Reviewed by Paul Sapieha

Current Hist & Forum 52:57 Ap '41 400w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 19:381 Jl '41 10w

"There is only a slight allusion to the one great thing Pilsudski could have accomplished if he had succeeded in persuading the Allies to act on his suggestion to wage a 'preventive war' against Germany at the time Hitler started to rearm. Had he succeeded, all his sins might have been forgiven. A critical, historical biography of Pilsudski would throw a clearer light on the man and his time than this loving panegyric." Stephen Naft

Living Age 360:96 Mr '41 800w

Manchester Guardian p7 D 20 '40 280w

New Repub 104:382 Mr 17 '41 40w

"Her memoirs were written under very difficult conditions. Many of her books of reference and documents had to be left behind in Poland. Her English collaborator, Mrs. Jennifer Ellis, knew no Polish, and she no English. She dictated her book in French. Mrs. Ellis translated it. 'Then every chapter had to be read to me in Polish so that I could judge it and make final suggestions.' It is surprising that a book produced in this roundabout way should have such a direct and personal style. I am glad to be able to assure Madame Pilsudski, who knows no English, that Mrs. Ellis has interpreted her admirably." Christopher St John

+ New Statesman & Nation 21:18 Ja 4 '41 1000w

"Mme. Pilsudska writes about her husband with a delicacy of touch and yet a critical sense that enhances rather than detracts from his stature. . . The book is excellently written. The spirit of the moods of the changing epochs is captured with an artistry that commands respect. Pilsudski's enigmatic person appears in clearer outlines in this book than in the numerous biographies of paeon-singers." Emil Lengyel

+ N Y Times p9 F 23 '41 1200w

Pratt p7 autumn '41

"We should welcome this volume as illuminating an obscure period of recent times. For Madame Pilsudski writes mainly of the events during her famous husband's life, which ran from 1867 to 1934, and was mainly occupied with Poland's struggle for freedom from the domination of Russia, first Tsarist and then Soviet. She writes with natural enthusiasm and with intimate knowledge, for she played a considerable part in the struggle, shared its dangerous conspiracies, suffered long imprisonment, and showed all the spirit and courage of a Slav revolutionist." H. W. Nevins

+ Spec 165:534 N 22 '40 420w

Spring'd Republican p8 Mr 12 '41 900w

"This book is remarkable and readable not only because the author is the widow of Poland's great Marshal but also because she was a distinguished and active agent in the resurrection of Poland. Even if Alexandre Pilsudski had never met the Marshal, her story would have been illuminating and interesting to all those whom the recent history of Central Europe and Poland fascinates."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p550 N 2 '40 700w

PINCHON, EDGCUMB. Zapata, the unconquerable. 332p map $3 Doubleday

B or 92 Zapata, Emiliano. Mexico—History—Revolution, 1910— 41-5668

Fictionized biography of the leader of the Indians in the Mexican revolution of 1910. Emiliano Zapata. Born in 1877 of a liberal rancho family, Zapata first learned of the policies of Diaz when he represented his native state, Morelos, in a land dispute. From that time until his death in 1919 he was a leader in the Civil war. The author pictures him as a generous man, with the makings of a statesman, and sincerely devoted to the cause of the Mexican peon.

Booklist 37:514 Jl 1 '41

"Despite the shortcomings of the hybrid form, which sacrifices to some extent the historical-social fullness of straight biography and the free play and psychological intimacy of straight novel, 'Zapata the Unconquerable' manages to be an enlightening study of a significant figure and a dramatic story of an exciting life." Milton Rugoff

+ — Books p5 Ap 6 '41 950w

"Mr. Pinchon has a tendency to gild the lily. Zapata is indeed the spiritual hero of Mexico today and is already woven into legend for his exploits and idealism. Because of this he needs no romanticizing but rather a quieter telling of his tale, which would, by contrast, make him loom greater. It remains for other writers to put him in a setting which will add luminosity to a great hero, and they undoubtedly will. Meanwhile, Mr. Pinchon has provided a racy, readable, colorful account of a modern Robin Hood and his era, which must be commended for its spade work." Betty Kirk

+ — Christian Science Monitor p10 My 31 '41 480w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:387 Ja '42 10w

"Pinchon's book, though rather novelistic in style, fills an important gap in the literature of Mexico and that of the liberation of the down-trodden."

+ Living Age 360:297 My '41 250w

"The author has chosen the novel form for his biography. He does not avoid the pitfalls that are common to the method: fabricated dialogues of dubious accuracy throw doubt upon greater matters. He fails to reproduce the text of the plan of Ayala, more stirring and dependable than any fabricated conversation. He consults only favorable sources and makes his hero just a shade too perfect. Here and there overwriting weakens scenes which naked exactness would have made terrific. The editing and proofreading of Spanish expressions are surprisingly careless, and some of the attempts at bringing the narrative 'up-to-date' are unfortunate, too. . . But in spite of its defects, the book remains on the whole an exciting and substantially accurate biographical novel and breaks ground for the appreciation of Zapata in this country. In accuracy and truthfulness it represents a great advance over the same author's 'Viva Villa.' May it get as good handling in Hollywood!" B. D. Wolfe

+ — New Repub 104:706 My 19 '41 700w

"In describing the struggle in Morella, Mr. Pinchon paints Zapata with a pure white palette and makes of Mexico's greatest President a cruel and monstrous figure. . . Barring Mr. Pinchon's slight astigmatism as to historical values, his 'Zapata the Unconquerable' is a rousing tale told with a tenseness, vitality and bravura in keeping with the 'Robin Hood' qualities of Zapata himself. It gallops with the speed of Pavón, the Morelense charo's favorite mount, as he carried his master out of a hail of Rurale bullets." E. L. Tinker

+ N Y Times p10 My 4 '41 900w

"Sharp, impressionistic writing, that manages to bring the subject to life."

+ New Yorker 17:87 Ap 12 '41 60w

Sat R of Lit 24:17 Je 28 '41 180w

PINCHOT, ANN. The talk of the town. 291p $2.50 Houghton

41-8358

Story of a battle fought between graft and honesty in a typical American town. The climax came when a large school collapsed from the use of poor cement by a rascally contractor.

"The Talk of the Town' has the suspense of a good mystery." George Conrad

+ Books p8 Je 1 '41 440w

"It may be that Miss Pinchot has tried to put too much into it, has left herself too little space to develop any single story or situation so fully as we might like. Nevertheless, if 'The Talk of the Town' is not a particularly important novel, it manages to be unfailingly readable." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p7 Je 8 '41 700w

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 8 '41 230w

Wis Lib Bul 37:140 Jl '41

PINCKNEY, JOSEPHINE. Hilton Head; il. by Raffaello Busoni. 524p $2.75 Farrar

Woodward, Henry—Fiction 41-1359

This novel, picturing the life of a young surgeon in the seventeenth century, is based on the actual adventures of one Henry Woodward who came to Carolina from England by way of the Barbados.

"The many characters are not only credible but convincing and often very amusing. The reader who values good writing will experience constant pleasure in the purity, firmness, and freshness of the style. Especially recommended for boys in their late teens." R. M. G.

+ Atlantic Ap '41 220w

Booklist 37:325 Mr 15 '41

"Josephine Pinckney's fine novel must be described as 'historical,' but rather for lack of a more adequate term than because it conforms to the conventional pattern of the historical novel. . . This is not mere narrative, this is art. Miss Pinckney is a poet and the book is poetic; but its poetry is not mere melody, not lush and resounding eloquence. On the contrary, its style is severe, at times austere. It is hammered and chiseled, wrought with such infinite labor that it seems effortless, and its beauty is due, not to ornament, but to lucidity and a gem-like quality of catching and reflecting light until it seems luminous." G. W. Johnson

+ Books p4 F 23 '41 850w

Reviewed by E. G. Howe

Boston Transcript p3 Mr 22 '41 550w

"The wealth of detail filling in the picturesque background bears witness to long research on the author's part, and the whole is couched in a facile prose worthy of the highest praise. Unexpected turns of phrase, wry and subtle humor, sagacious observations, and colorful, descriptive passages abound to such an extent that they alone are sufficient to carry the book. This is fortunate, because there is little suspense in the narrative, and scarcely any of the devices customary in fiction are utilized." M. W. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 26 '41 550w

"The novel begins in rather a low key. Miss Pinckney has few of the usual tricks for creating artificial interest at the outset. Or, at any rate, she scorns to use them. Accordingly her readers may find 'Hilton Head' a hard book to get into. The present reviewer found it so. It is also, what is considerably rarer, a book one reading will fail to exhaust. A second or third reading will disclose good things—odd details of characterization, unexpectedly shrewd and pertinent comment—which escaped one at first. This is, beyond doubt, one test of first-rate writing." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p6 Mr 2 '41 900w

"On the whole, a routine job, though readable."

New Yorker 17:58 Mr 1 '41 50w

"A first class historical novel." H. F. Pringle

+ Sat R of Lit 24:10 My 24 '41 400w

PINKERTON, KATHRENE SUTHERLAND (GEDNEY) (MRS R. E. PINKERTON). Two ends to our shoestring. 362p $2.75 Harcourt B or 9? (W) 41-51930

The author of Wilderness Wife here tells the story of her thirty years of married life—of the five years on an Ontario lake, of automobile trips thru the West, of a few months or a year or two passed in Los Angeles, San Francisco, and Carmel, of months spent cruising Northern Pacific waters in a small yacht.

Booklist 38:51 O 15 '41

"With humor and, at the same time, with deep sincerity, Mrs. Pinkerton writes about their difficulties to maintain a balance between their desire to live completely as individuals, to fulfill their responsibilities as parents and to be productive as writers." Rose Feld

+ Books p8 S 28 '41 850w

Christian Century 58:1214 O 1 '41 60w

"The many readers who have enjoyed Kathrene Pinkerton's two previous books on the adventures of the unconventional 'Pinks,' will be glad to find that she has now told the whole story. . . The net result is a wholesome and invigorating tale of a happy marriage, wherein the proverbial shoestring is shown to be capable of being stretched to fabulous lengths when two people of imagination and courage take hold of the ends and pull together."

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 O 25 '41 600w

"It affords very interesting reading for all ages." B. R. Copithorn

+ Churchman 156:18 Ja 1 '42 60w

"The story of the Pinkertons' home, and their happy marriage, is a story of adventure—and it's the most unusual and exhilarating adventure story this reviewer has read in many a long moon." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p42 D 7 '41 1250w

New Yorker 17:79 S 27 '41 30w

"A good deal of 'Two Ends to Our Shoestring' has already been told in the earlier books, and the adventures in them are often more exciting because they are described in greater detail. But this is splendid reading if only for the general view of two enviable lives, of people who have lived hard and happily. Their sort of sky-writing still has plenty of space to fill." Hassoldt Davis

+ Sat R of Lit 24:15 O 11 '41 500w

Springf'd Republican p7e S 28 '41 480w

Wis Lib Bul 37:155 O '41

PINKHAM, EDWIN GEORGE. Aunt Elsa; il. by Warren Chappell. 104p $1.50 Knopf

(W) 41-51541

Story of an old lady who lived alone on the Salem road and was accounted "queer," told thru the mouth of her great-nephew who as a boy visited her every week. Aunt Elsa had created an imaginary world of her own as a "protective invention" living in it with serenity and shutting out the real world which had proved unbearable.

Booklist 37:270 F 15 '41

PINKHAM, E. G.—Continued
Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p6 F 9 '41 360w

"Here is a treasure to be owned, re-read and chuckled over for years to come. . . Mr. Pinkham's character sketch of this New England great aunt is perfectly integrated, completely unsentimental, and brisled up by that dry humor which is such an unexpected quirk in the New England make-up." Margaret Clark
+ Boston Transcript p1 F 8 '41 250w

"Excellent descriptions of New England character and village life. Delightful bits of American wit and humor as well as pathos."
E. H. Crowell

+ Library J 66:80 Ja 15 '41 60w

"The little book is filled from cover to cover with that rare, warming quality which for want of a better word we call human. Before you have read half a dozen pages you have become genuinely fond of both aunt and nephew."
L. M. Field

+ N Y Times p25 F 2 '41 700w

"Has some tart New England humor, and that's about all."

New Yorker 16:65 F 8 '41 20w

"As far as the number of its printed pages is concerned 'Aunt Elsa' is not impressive, but as a memorial to the courage of one elderly woman, it will be treasured wherever there remains a New Englander, native or transplanted, to read it."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e F 9 '41 440w

PINKHAM, MRS MILDRETH (WORTH).
Woman in the sacred scriptures of Hinduism.
239p $2.75 Columbia univ. press

294 Hinduism. Women, Hindu 41-7015

"In this volume we have presented the history of the status of woman down through the long history of Hinduism. The various strata of India's religious literature are examined to determine in each era how woman was regarded and treated. In all some 14,000 pages of representative passages of the Hindu scriptures are consulted to ascertain the position and treatment of the women within the Hindu community. This long trek takes the reader through the Vedas, the Brāhmanas, the Upanishads, the Laws of Manu, the Purāṇas, the Mahābhārata, the Bhagavad Gītā, and the Rāmāyana." (Crozer Q) Bibliography. Index.

"The book is valuable chiefly because it gathers together under one cover the many and often diverse views regarding woman in the voluminous literature of Hindu India. Not only is the volume informative to the student of religions, but it should also, if carried into the languages of India, prove an effective force in the emancipation of women from the socially destructive views concerning woman formulated by many of the scholars of the past."
G. W. Davis

+ Crozer Q 18:277 Jl '41 260w

"Because religion has been an important factor in placing woman in Indian society, this book is valuable and interesting, partly because it includes scriptural authority for improvement."

+ Social Studies 33:48 Ja '42 30w

PINTNER, RUDOLF; EISENSEN, JON, and STANTON, MILDRED BACON. The psychology of the physically handicapped. 391p $3 Crofts

371.91 Educational psychology. Defective and delinquent classes. Education of children 41-5921

"[This book] is designed as a textbook for those professionally engaged in work with physically handicapped children or adults in schools, hospitals, psychological clinics, guidance bureaus, rehabilitation centers, and convalescent homes. . . The book consists of two parts. The first part deals with general considerations of personality development, mental hygiene, the nervous system, and psychological tests. . . The second part deals specifically with the handicapped groups; the deaf, the hard of hearing, the blind, the partially sighted, the crippled, the allergic, the cardiac, the diabetic, the encephalic, the epileptic, the undernourished, the tuberculous, and finally the defective in speech." (Springf'd Republican) Indexes.

Reviewed by W. T. Root

Am J Psychol 54:624 O '41 450w

Booklist 37:486 Je 15 '41

"The fact that the book has been designated as a text for professional workers should not keep away from it the intelligent public whether as parents, teachers or social workers who are interested and wish to secure reliable and up-to-date information about the physically handicapped." Dr Seth Arsenian
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 20 '41 1300w

"This contribution merits warm appreciation, not merely by students of psychology but by all working professionally with the physically handicapped whether they be doctors, teachers, counselors or social workers." I. S. Wile, M.D.

+ Survey 77:343 N '41 250w

PIPER, ANSON. Black Creek buckaroo. 276p $2 Morrow

41-5695

Western story.

Booklist 37:440 My 15 '41

"Action, atmosphere and lingo in the right proportions distinguish this story of a new Western hero." Will Cuppy

+ Books p14 Ap 27 '41 60w

"It is Anson Piper's first Western and, while it is rather discursive and slow-paced, it is fairly well written, has authentic local color and atmosphere, and so gives good promise."
G. W. Harris

+ N Y Times p23 Ag 24 '41 140w

PIPER, OTTO. The Christian interpretation of sex. 234p $2 Scribner

176 Sex and religion. Marriage 41-14065

"The rediscovery of the Biblical view as well as the necessity of such an approach seemed to the author to justify the publication of this book. Its purpose is to show that the problem of sex relationships cannot be solved on the basis of purely moral principles, or primarily from the standpoint of hygiene or pedagogy. . . Our first and most urgent need is that sex and sex life should be discussed in their religious significance." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

"What a satisfaction it is to read a book, scholarly, open-minded, frank, which gives a true picture of the Christian attitude toward sex. . . Dr. Piper's book, whatever our assent or dissent in matters of specific opinion, must be regarded with profound respect and will be read with intense interest." J. H. Holmes

+ Books p13 S 21 '41 330w

"One of the limitations of the presentation is an oversimplification of the sex problems with which people are faced. It is not sufficient to point out that premarital sex relations or homosexuality are contrary to the divine plan of sex experience. That does not help the counselor of young people to assist those young people in the ordering of their own behavior. Also, it seems unwise to assume that Christians do not need the enlightenment that comes from modern medical, sociological and psychological investigation. A biblical foundation of thought and action is good if supplemented by what science has to offer, but in such a realm as sex it is hardly sufficient by itself." D. S. Klaiss

Christian Century 58:1082 S 3 '41 450w

"The author gives an interpretation of sex that makes a great many of the books offered Christian people on the subject utterly inadequate and useless. This reviewer having meandered through a seminar of Christian views of sex and sex problems and having read several books on these themes knows of no other that so concisely, thoroughly and satisfactorily fulfills the promise of its title."

A. L. Murray

+ Churchman 155:20 S 1 '41 200w

PIRONE, PASCAL POMPEY. Maintenance of shade and ornamental trees. 422p il $5 Oxford 635.977 Trees 41-51817

This volume on the care and maintenance of shade and ornamental trees by an associate professor of plant pathology at Rutgers university is divided into two sections. The first is a study of the normal tree, its structure, soil and the relation to the tree, transplanting, pruning, treatment of wounds, etc. Part two contains data on tree abnormalities—insect control, spraying practices, general diseases, diseases of street and roadside trees, etc. Selected bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:487 Je 15 '41

"Dr. Pirone's book is packed with good, straight, broad-gauge information, convincingly presented and with an obvious authority that is bound to inspire confidence. The ground it covers is precisely what the title implies—and that's a good deal!" R. S. Lemmon

+ Books p9 Je 22 '41 140w

PISTON, WALTER. Harmony. 310p $3.90 Norton
781.3 Harmony 41-8307

"The aim of this book is to present as concisely as possible the harmonic common practice of composers of the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries. Rules are announced as observations reported, without attempt at their justification on aesthetic grounds or as laws of nature. The written exercises should be performed as exemplifications of the common practice of composers and not as efforts in creative composition. The author believes that through these principles a prompt and logical grasp of the subject will be achieved." (Intro) The author is associate professor of music, Harvard university. Index.

Booklist 38:6 S '41

Reviewed by Nicolas Slonimsky

Christian Science Monitor p11 J1 19
'41 800w

PITTENGER, BENJAMIN FLOYD. Indoctrination for American democracy. 110p $1.25 Macmillan

321.8 Democracy. Propaganda, American 41-15764

"Arguments for indoctrination interpreted as the positive teaching of democratic principles." Social Studies

School & Society 54:284 O 4 '41 60w

Social Studies 32:380 D '41 10w

Reviewed by F. J. Carbon

Social Studies 33:40 Ja '42 550w

PITTENGER, WILLIAM NORMAN. Christ and Christian faith; some presuppositions and implications of the incarnation. 190p $2 Round table

232.1 Incarnation 41-10652

"Study of the nature of Christ from the 'liberal Catholic' viewpoint. 'It is a statement in modern phraseology of the essential elements in the Chalcedonian formula.'"

(Churchman) The author is a fellow and tutor at the General theological seminary, New York city.

"The brevity of these 155 pages should not lead one to mistake them for a popular tabloid. No one in a hurry should attempt to read them while running for a train; they merit calm leisure to meditate. The book is compact yet profound with illuminating notes that indicate thorough historical scholarship and intimate acquaintance with the literature of the subject. The value of this statement is not in its startling originality so much as in the clarity of its analysis and the sane moderation of its judgment." P. E. Johnson

+ Christian Century 58:1241 O 8 '41 490w

"A scholarly, semi-popular treatment. The author is one of the leading theologians in the Protestant Episcopal Church, and he has done a great service in attacking the most difficult problem of modern theology in a convincing, lucid, and helpful fashion." R. C. Miller

+ Churchman 155:18 S 15 '41 250w

PLAGEMANN, BENTZ. William Walter. 313p $2.50 Greystone 41-7946

Novel in the form of a biography of a misunderstood genius, who was never happy himself, and who made everyone who came in contact with him miserable.

"With so difficult a theme, Bentz Plagemann has done astonishingly well. His story is interesting. His jibes at literary fads and sycophancies are shrewd though all too infrequent. His picture of the height of perfection at the beginning of decay is excellent. The novel's heroine, to be sure, never seems quite real. Other characters, too, are left unresolved or neglected. And the part played by tuberculosis as the White Plague seems feverishly overstressed. But this 'biographical novel' holds promise for the young novelist's next work." John Patton

+ Books p6 Je 22 '41 450w

"A first novel, notable for its well-built and clear characterization. Though autobiographical in its basic problems it is written with an artistic discipline rarely to be found in a first novel with so personal a theme." Marianne Hauser

+ N Y Times p7 My 18 '41 600w

"While the author has a sympathetic insight into a tortured and lost soul, he is unable to convince the reader that William Walter was worth writing a book about, or that a man who could so deeply misunderstand other human beings could be capable of writing novels of profound literary significance."

— Sat R of Lit 24:20 My 10 '41 60w

"Mr Plagemann has managed to construct a passably interesting story around this rather unpromising character, and while the reader may lack the author's sympathy for William Walter, he will probably enjoy his biography."

+ Springfd Republican p7e My 18 '41 280w

PLASTES, pseud. Plastics in industry. 241p il $5 Chemical pub. co. [12s 6d Chapman]

668 Plastic materials 41-50181

"Contents include chapters on: definitions and the plastics industry, thermo-plastic and thermo-setting resins, specifications, moulding and fabrication technique, engineering and chemical machinery and plant, the electrical industry, aircraft construction, motor-car manufacture, textile industry, building industry, synthetic glues, synthetic rubber in modern industry, fancy goods trade, furniture manufacture, packaging and display, miscellaneous, and design." N Y New Tech Bks

Chem & Met Eng 48:179 S '41 250w

N Y New Tech Bks 26:27 Ap '41

PLATT, MRS JUNE (EVANS). Plain and fancy cookbook. 356p $2.50 Houghton

641.5 Cookery 41-25097

In trying to meet a "plain sister's" challenge the author set out to write a plain cookbook to complement her Party Cookbook (Book Review Digest, 1936). But she couldn't resist some of the "fancy" touches and some elaborate recipes have crept into this book along with directions for baked potatoes, corned beef hash, boiled coffee, etc. The book contains a section devoted to menus and another of household hints.

"I have said I like Mrs. Platt best when she is fancy. I think what I really mean is that I like her best in her grand manner using the finest materials and taking infinite pains to make a dish perfect, not to the eye but to the palate. The fanciness with which I am a bit impatient in this volume is the assumption that infinite pains are worth taking to construct an enormous butter rose, or calla-lily turnips, or daisies of carrots," Sheila Hibben

+ — Books p11 D 28 '41 500w

Spring'd Republican p7e N 30 '41 130w

PLATT, RAYE ROBERTS, and others. European possessions in the Caribbean area. 112p pa $1 Am. geographical soc.

917.29 Caribbean sea. West Indies 41-4517

"The four authors sought 'to bring together in convenient form factual information needed for following the news while the need for such information is still pressing.' This useful volume contains data on the population, physical geography, resources, industries, trade, government, and strategic importance of these possessions. The six-page 'list of references' only emphasizes the need for the present publication by demonstrating the unsatisfactory state of the literature on the subject. Doubtless reflecting the professional interest of the authors, the volume allots space more generously to geographic than to political data. The material is arranged by sovereignties involved." Am Pol Sci R

Am Econ R 31:383 Je '41 20w

"Comparative tables would permit much of the statistical data to be more readily grasped. Especially useful for political scientists is the essay on the strategic importance of these colonies." W T. R. Fox

Am Pol Sci R 35:597 Je '41 180w

Foreign Affairs 19:689 Ap '41 20w

Reviewed by T. R. Smith

Pol Sci Q 56:468 S '41 260w

PLUMMER, WILBUR CLAYTON, and YOUNG, RALPH AUBREY. Sales finance companies and their credit practices. 298p $3 Nat. bur. of economic research

658.883 Credit. Instalment plan 40-13749

"The National Bureau of Economic Research has sought to prepare authoritative studies of the financial institutions engaged in consumer installment financing. The present volume is the second in the series. . . The greater part of the volume is given over to automobile financing, which bulks large in the portfolios of sales finance companies. . . Attention is also directed to the financing of electrical appliances, as well as to experience in other fields. The book ends with chapters on the finance charges, the regulation of abuses in the industry, the measurement of income, expenses and profits of sales companies, and the competitive relationships of the agencies." (Ann Am Acad) Index.

Reviewed by C. O. Fisher

Am Econ R 31:421 Je '41 250w

Reviewed by C. E. Warne

Ann Am Acad 214:262 Mr '41 500w

POLIER, MRS JUSTINE (WISE). Everyone's children, nobody's child. 331p 1l map $2.75 Scribner

362.7 Children—Charities, protection, etc. Juvenile courts 41-7788

"Justine Wise Polier has been for the past six years Children's Court Judge of the Domestic Relations Court of New York City. . . In this book—to quote its subtitle—'a judge looks at underprivileged children in the United States'. . . The book leads up to conditions and needs of today by a historical sketch of needy children's care, from poorhouse to orphanage and on through institution to foster home." N Y Times

Booklist 37:486 Je 15 '41

"Justine Polier's book is well-nigh definitive in its range and practically mandatory, not only for lawyer, social worker, psychiatrist and teacher but for wise parents." B. H. Levy

+ Books p10 J1 6 '41 700w

"The work is carefully done, well documented and indexed." J. A. Mitchell

+ Churchman 155:21 Ag '41 200w

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '41

Nation 152:761 Je 28 '41 90w

"To 'see the child as a whole,' and behind the child to get an equally comprehensive view of society's responsibility and remedial hope, may indeed be set down as the object of this illuminating and socially important book. It is an object which is admirably fulfilled. The book's photographs are enlightening also. This broad study by a New York judge should have a thoughtful reading throughout the country." + N Y Times p14 My 4 '41 600w

"[Written] from the depths of wisdom, experience and human sympathy."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 12:2 My '41 550w

Reviewed by M. L. Carolan

Spring'd Republican p7e Je 22 '41 440w

Reviewed by A. H. MacCormick

Survey 77:195 Je '41 750w

Wis Lib Bul 37:112 Je '41

POLLOCK, HORATIO MILO. Mental disease and social welfare. 237p $2 State hospitals

614.15 Mental hygiene 41-8362

"This is a collection of original studies of various phases of mental disease, with special reference to its social significance, made from time to time during the past few years, by a noted mental health statistician. Dr. Pollock [has been] since 1911 director of statistics of the New York State Department of Mental Hygiene." Survey

Reviewed by G. S. Stevenson

Am J Pub Health 31:1094 O '41 600w

Reviewed by R. E. L. Faris

Ann Am Acad 218:245 N '41 320w

"One turns the last page with the conviction that the statistician and editor for the New York state department of mental hygiene and consultant for the National Committee for Mental Hygiene has given us a noteworthy contribution to available knowledge concerning the relation of mental disease to the welfare of humanity." E. B. Willard

+ Spring'd Republican p10 My 30 '41 750w

Reviewed by P. C. Komora

Survey 77:247 Ag '41 500w

POLSKY, THOMAS. Curtains for the copper. 318p $2 Dutton

Detective story. 41-4717

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p25 Ap 6 '41 80w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p8 Ap 12 '41 40w

"A lively mystery-adventure yarn with a reporter in the leading role." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p23 Ap 20 '41 160w

"Ubiquitous, brash, and believable reporter and memo-writing co-worker supply plenty of action and zestful talk to peppery puzzle. Full marks."

+ Sat R of Lit 23:36 Ap 5 '41 40w
Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 27 '41 170w

PONCINS, GONTRAN DE MONTAIGNE, vicomte de, and GALANTIÈRE, LEWIS. Kabloona; il. by [Gontran de Poncins]. 339p map $3 Reynal

919.8 Eskimos. King William land, Canada. Arctic regions (W) 41-51645

In the summer of 1938 the author made the journey from France to Canada, and then to King William Land, to study the Eskimos. He spent fifteen months among them, studying their customs and character, living, hunting, and fishing with them, in a land where there were only two other white men. This is an interpretation of Eskimo life and its spiritual and psychological effect upon the author.

Booklist 37:357 Ap 1 '41

Bookmark 2:10 My '41

"A curiously absorbing book. Curiously absorbing and oddly powerful. These epithets are used with deliberation. For it is hard to define the essential quality or interest of this book, and its quality of absorption will vary for different readers. For some it will be simply a fascinating and sophisticated travel book. . . . It is, though much smaller in scale, a kind of Arctic analogue to 'Arabia Deserta.' It is engrossing, simply as narrative, filled with dramatic episodes. . . . But the distinctive character of 'Kabloona' lies not simply in what it tells about the Eskimos in a region where white men almost never penetrate. What gives the book its peculiar cachet is the impact of what it does tell about the Eskimos on the spirit of the author and through him of the reader himself." Irwin Edman

+ Books p1 Mr 9 '41 2150w

Boston Transcript p2 Mr 29 '41 600w

"The accounts of living with the Eskimo, of living with Mr. Gibson at Gjoahaven and of living with Father Henry are written with skill and with introspective power. For this reason the volume is significant." H. A. Innis

+ Canadian Hist R 22:191 Je '41 270w

"He relates many an instance of murder, suicide, lust and thieving, but he might have paralleled these crimes had he written about his native city, Paris. Not all Eskimos lend their wives, murder and steal. Had M. de Poncins visited the thirteen Catholic Oblate Missions, he could have given us a different picture. The book contains a number of good photographs and pen sketches; it is well written and holds our interest on every page. The statement that the writer 'reconstructed himself from within' during his stay on the Arctic tundra we take with a grain of salt."

+ Cath World 153:254 My '41 270w

"Not since Antoine de Saint Exupéry's Wind, Sand and Stars—a book whose uniqueness makes even this comparison of doubtful validity—has there been a book of high adventure in which the spiritual element (for lack of a better term) so far outran the description of strange experiences and the facing of dangers. . . . What this French 'scientist,' lineal descendant of old Montaigne, learned among the Eskimos is more important than what he learned about them, though that is interesting too." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 58:460 Ap 2 '41 650w

"The subjective nature of the narrative will many times certainly shock the sensibilities of the reader. But this cannot obscure the spiritual values which emerge triumphantly from its deeply absorbing context. Plainly the outward manifestations of our civilization have nothing in common with the world M. de Poncins discovered in his arctic exile. But sharper than any two-edged sword is the compassionate quality which, one senses from his narrative, the white man brought into his intimate existence with the Eskimos. The response it evoked in the heart of the Stone-Age man proves how completely such enduring values transcend the limitations of place or time." H. T.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Jl 26 '41 600w

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '41

Reviewed by David Burnham

Commonweal 33:624 Ap 11 '41 420w

Current Hist & Forum 52:61 Ap '41 170w

"Intelligent, thought-provoking, and sympathetic description of the country, the character, and communal spirit of these people. Illustrated with fine sketches and photographs by the author. Recommended for small libraries." F. A. Boyle

+ Library J 66:218 Mr 1 '41 80w

Reviewed by Margaret Marshall

Nation 152:299 Mr 15 '41 850w

"'Kabloona' is exceptionally well felt and well written. The author's patient inquiring intelligence and unassuming humanity make this diligence of his in note taking and polishing automatically a source book for ethnology in general." Otis Ferguson

+ New Repub 104:348 Mr 10 '41 650w

"Here is something fresh, serious, unconventional and thoroughly well done. If one does not put his book at the exciting level of Peter Freuchen's astonishing book on the Eskimos published some seven years ago, one does recognize in the Vicomte a traveller of real curiosity and temperament." V. S. Pritchett

+ New Statesman & Nation 22:236 S 6 '41 1600w

"[The author's] English, supplemented to some not specified extent by that of Mr. Galantière, is natural and good, and at times it is much more than that. He is obviously not an eccentric running away from something but a potential enthusiast running toward something. Perhaps his restlessness is related to that which sends less imaginative men into the extremes of right or left movements, to find peace in surrender to some irrational doctrine or some ballooned-up 'leader.'" R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p1 Mr 9 '41 1400w

"No book about the Far North that I have read is written with so much sympathy, vividness, and dramatic imagination. It is not that de Poncins loads you with information but that you remember what he tells you." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 17:83 Mr 15 '41 800w

Pratt p22 D '41

"One reads this book with interest like that aroused by an absorbing novel. The style of the author is graceful and vivid. The book arouses and sustains one's interest in even the smallest event, such as fastening the load onto a sledge, or trying to keep warm at forty below zero when riding on a sled no more than two feet long. . . . A book that discloses the inner workings of the Eskimo mind, a book that makes you feel that you have visited the people and been initiated into their lives—such a book is a scientific as well as literary masterpiece." Ellsworth Huntington

+ Sat R of Lit 23:5 Mr 15 '41 1350w

"Here is that rare book about a primitive people which actually penetrates beneath the surface of casual observations and attempts to understand native life and thought. . . . While the author has occasionally gone too far in putting thoughts in the minds of his companions, Kabloona gives us an authentic feeling for native Eskimo life, and as such

PONCINS, G. de M.—Continued
deserves a place beside the accounts of the late Knud Rasmussen." Fred Eggan + Social Forces 20:119 O '41 330w

Reviewed by John Fairfield
Spec 167:186 Ag 22 '41 750w

Reviewed by C. B. Moore
Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 6 '41 1850w

Time 37:94 Mr 10 '41 450w

Times [London] Lit Sup p384 Ag 9 '41 1200w

Wis Lib Bul 37:75 Ap '41

"De Poncins' great ability is his capacity for experience. He has the intelligence to see what an experience means. And he can write. In 'Kabloona' he brings to English prose a new clarity and sweep. It is a revealing document of the primitive life, ideas, and characters of the North, and of the fine mind of Gontran de Poncins." C. H. Leonard
+ Yale R n s 30:835 summer '41 180w

POPE, ERNEST R. Munich playground. 260p $2.75 Putnam

914.3 Germany—Social conditions 41-22007

Series of sketches on the relaxations of the higher Nazi officials, written by an American correspondent, who was stationed in Munich from 1936 to the outbreak of the war. The writer's evident intimacy with members of the Gestapo, whom he delighted in teasing, has brought to the fore new material on the lives of Nazi leaders.

"Mr. Pope has written a very breezy account of the more important Nazi party officials reigning in Munich, the birthplace of the Nazi party, who are virtually unknown in the United States, and of the political and recreational activities of Berlin officials, from Adolf Hitler on down, who make Munich their playground. The emphasis on beer and sex makes it authentic enough for any one who has ever seen Nazi officials at play." Beach Conger

Books p38 N 2 '41 550w

"Author's evident delight in describing the more lurid details of the Nazi chieftains' personal life renders the rest of the book somewhat suspect. A note by William L. Shirer on the book jacket indicates the book's authenticity, but this reviewer found the material sensational in nature. Not recommended for library purchase." R. H. McDonough

— Library J 66:902 O 15 '41 80w

New Repub 105:709 N 24 '41 40w

New Yorker 17:91 O 25 '41 40w

POPKIN, MRS ZELDA. Dead man's gift. 287p $2 Lippincott

41-23269

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p24 N 9 '41 160w

"A grade-A story." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p32 N 30 '41 200w

New Yorker 17:112 N 15 '41 60w

"Distinguished."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:24 N 8 '41 40w

"'Dead Man's Gift' is not fast in tempo, but it provides good mental gymnastics. The conclusion is clever. It is better than average." L. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 25 '42 340w

PORTER, SYLVIA FIELD. If war comes to the American home; how to prepare for the inevitable adjustment; introd. by Harry Scherman. 304p $2.50 McBride

330.973 U.S.—Economic conditions. World war, 1939—Economic aspects—U.S. 41-5134

Discussion of the probable effect of the present war upon the American home and the American pocketbook. Some of the topics considered are: import and export trade; rising prices; inflation; taxes; government control of industry; and war loans. The author conducts a financial column in The New York Post. Bibliography.

Reviewed by E. M. Stabler
Books p12 Jl 27 '41 550w

"Facts, figures, broad word-pictures and succinct arguments are all presented with conversational ease. The book should be widely useful."

+ N Y Times p33 Mr 2 '41 420w

"The book deals with a vital concern of the American home, to which most people have given too little consideration." Palmer Harman
+ Sat R of Lit 24:14 My 17 '41 480w

PORTINARI, CANDIDO. Portinari; his life and art. ltd ed 9p 100 il $7.50 Univ. of Chicago press

759.981 Paintings, Brazilian 41-4424

Reproductions, some in color, of the work of the Brazilian painter, who has recently had one-man shows at the Detroit Institute of Arts, and at the Museum of Modern Art, in New York. A short biographical sketch, and an introductory chapter by Rockwell Kent, are included.

"Portinari is no mere imitator: he is developing rapidly and significantly as one of the important painters of the Americas. This book about him comes at a most opportune moment, and I heartily recommend it to all those who would like to understand Latin-American art better." Helen Frye

+ Canadian Forum 21:28 Ap '41 500w

"Unhappily, [the artist] comes through weakly in black and white and the eight color reproductions are worth the hundred duotones, good as these are. Rockwell Kent's brief introduction is 'inspirational' rather than critical."

Commonweal 33:405 F 7 '41 90w

New Yorker 16:68 F 8 '41 30w

Times [London] Lit Sup p183 Ap 12 '41 270w

POST, CHANDLER RATHFON. History of Spanish painting; v 8 in 2 pts. The Aragonese school in the late middle ages. [2v] il $15 Harvard univ. press

759.6 Painting, Spanish (30-7776)

"This volume carries the history through the Middle ages and in an appendix gives notes and additional bibliographies for preceding volumes." (Booklist) For volume seven see Book Review Digest, 1938.

Booklist 38:77 N 1 '41

"It must, I think, be felt by every reader that an element of increased and very poignant value attaches to Professor Post's accomplishment as one ponders the possibility that many works of art discussed may have disappeared, never to be seen again—or not until, at some possibly distant time, they are rediscovered. The art of Spain, whatever the tragic vicissitudes of conflict, will live serenely on in these lovingly and learnedly written pages." E. A. Jewell

+ N Y Times p14 O 19 '41 1000w

"These volumes, like their predecessors, are a model of cautious and conscientious scholarship. What is even more remarkable is that, treating pictures usually of small esthetic importance, perhaps too often quite sub-esthetic, Professor Post is never under any illusion on the issue of taste; while apparently sustained by the zest of facing problems, he is never bored by what would bore most critics, and never fails to write an English exemplary for clearness and a certain elegance." F. J. Mather, Jr.

+ Sat R of Lit 24:21 N 8 '41 500w

POSTON, MRS MARTHA LEE. Ching-li, pictures by Weda Yap. 40p $1.50 Nelson
(W) 41-13240

"The story of this stupid little Chinese boy is reminiscent of Epaminondas. . . . When he is sent to the market for crabs, Ching-li becomes involved in a series of ludicrous situations. Each time he remembers only the last bit of advice received and acts upon it, although it does not fit the present case. In the end, in spite of Ching-li's bungling, he and his mother have a feast of crab meat, cabbage, and rice." Library J

Booklist 38:59 O 15 '41

"Mrs. Poston heard this story from her native amah in Shanghai, where she was born and grew up, daughter of a medical missionary from Virginia. Weda Yap, a New Englander, lived for years in China. So this book has authority in text and in pictures—but it also has genuine entertainment value." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 S 7 '41 200w

"Pictures and story are amusingly combined in this tale from old Shanghai." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:357 S '41 50w

"The brief story, together with Weda Yap's spirited illustrations, give considerable information concerning Chinese customs. Might be told or read aloud to children of seven or eight. Nine-year-olds could read it by themselves." Claire Nolte

+ Library J 66:798 S 15 '41 110w

"This book has the individuality and humor to win a real place among our many excellent stories about Chinese children. Its familiar pattern and amusing repetitions possess true folk-tale flavor." I. S.

+ N Y Times p31 N 2 '41 220w

"A charming nursery fable from China."

+ New Yorker 17:140 D 6 '41 60w

POTTEAT, EDWIN MCNEILL. These shared His cross; studies in the last day of the life of Jesus. 192p $1.75 Harper

232.963 Jesus Christ—Crucifixion. Jesus Christ—Friends and associates 41-2741

Describes the experiences of the people who were close to Jesus at the time of his death, after most of his friends had fled. Among them were the scourger, Simon of Cyrene, the lamenting women, the malefactors, Joseph and Nicodemus, and the executioner. Similar to the author's These Shared His Passion (Book Review Digest, 1940).

Booklist 37:351 Ap 1 '41

"The details are not all historical. Here is a case where truth transcends fact, and where timeless reality shines more clearly through an imaginative re-creation of the scenes than it could through a photographically accurate representation of the known details. Especially suitable for Lenten reading, this book has permanent value for any season."

+ Christian Century 58:153 Ja 29 '41 80w

"The author out of a vivid imagination and an accurate knowledge of the biblical and historical background, has created 'in some cases a name, and in some a character' for these almost unknown figures. But through giving his imagination free play, he has very likely got closer to the truth, and surely he has delved deeper into the truths that we need for our guidance, than if he had conscientiously limited himself to what we know. Only once perhaps does he overstep the bounds of plausibility, when he makes the penitent thief Legion, the Gadarene demoniac, who, finding every man against him, simulated insanity, and possessed of seven devils, remained among the tombs, and preyed upon travellers." W. L. Caswell

+ Churchman 155:17 F 15 '41 440w

"Looking toward the Easter period in the life of the churches, I am happy to review and commend this volume. Dr. Potteat has an ever increasing reading public which has been taught to expect religious insight, downright honesty, and literary merit in his writings. In none of these will there be disappointment with These Shared His Cross. The reader will welcome the absence of that maudlin sentimentality too generally found in those who write concerning the cross of our Lord. Here, on the contrary, is a study worthy of that dynamic, courageous, divine man who died on Calvary's cross" W. R. McNutt

+ Crozer Q 18:171 Ap '41 250w

"In the imaginative sections of each chapter the author writes beautifully and thoughtfully, reconstructing his characters out of a mind made fertile by a combination of sound scholarship and poetic insight. The second section of each chapter is dynamic interpretation of how the principle of sacrifice may be related to the burning issues of modern life. It is a book especially suitable for Lenten reading." H. W. Hansen

+ J Religion 21:338 Jl '41 150w

POTOCEK, CYRIL J. Saints Cyril and Methodius, apostles of the Slavs; with pref. by Stanislas F. Gmuc, and foreword by George Waskovich. 172p maps $2 Kenedy

922.1 Cyrillus, Saint, of Thessalonica. Methodius, Saint, abb. of Moravia 41-10406

"[An account of] two ninth-century missionaries, Saints Cyril and Methodius. These two brothers, scions of an aristocratic Greek family, brought Christianity to the Slavs and devised their written language. The author first brings to life the Europe of the ninth century and vividly portrays the origin, homeland, customs and political background of the early Slavs. The second part treats of the life and work of the brother missionaries, based upon a study of the earliest sources, which are said to have been written by Methodius and his disciple, Clement. An English translation of the Mass in the Byzantine-Slavonic liturgy and a bibliography form the last section." Books

Reviewed by S. G. Chaconas

Am Hist R 47:184 O '41 260w

Reviewed by J. D. Prince

Books p13 Mr 30 '41 240w

POTTINGER, DAVID THOMAS. Printers and printing. 143p il $2 Harvard univ. press

655 Printing A41-2190

"The Associate Director of the Harvard University Press has written a simple, matter-of-fact treatise on various aspects of the printer's art, especially intended to interest the lay reader, and to answer some of his questions about printing. In chapters devoted to the history of printing, to type design and the printer's tools, and to book design, the author seeks to assuage the growing curiosity of the common reader." Sat R of Lit

Booklist 38:76 N 1 '41

Bookmark 2:8 N '41

Reviewed by L. C. Wroth

Books p21 S 7 '41 200w

"I don't believe a professional printer or typographer would get too much out of it, nor a student of printing who wants to get at the thing thoroughly and systematically. But it is a very pleasant and readable first introduction to the whole subject of printing." Hellmut Lehmann-Haupt

+ Publishers' Weekly 140:48 Jl 5 '41 130w

"To cover so wide a field in a hundred and fifty pages of large type is obviously to touch lightly or not at all on innumerable details, and there are some deficiencies, as in the list of supplementary reading on the history of printing. But hereafter, when 'Anxious Inquirer' wants a short first aid to his curiosity, this will be the book to recommend, both because it is full of succinct information, and because it is itself a credit to the printer's art." C. P. Rollins

+ Sat R of Lit 24:12 Jl 12 '41 180w

POWDERMAKER, FLORENCE, and GRIMES, MRS LOUISE (IRELAND). Children in the family. 403p $2 Farrar

136.7 Child study. Children—Management. Parent and child 41-536

"A psychological guide for parents." (Sub-title) The senior author is associate in psychiatry at the College of physicians and surgeons. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:286 Mr 1 '41

"A psychiatrist and a mother have combined their knowledge to provide this excellent account of the child's development from infancy through adolescence. The approach is modern but without eccentricity. Although it is clear that the authors accept and make use of certain Freudian concepts, they wisely make their applications in terms of every day expression."

+ Books p16 Ap 13 '41 160w

J Home Econ 33:411 Je '41 100w

Pratt p20 spring '41

Social Forces 19:589 My '41 50w

"The authors' introductory word says that their book is the outgrowth of their observations in a nursery school of the difficulties parents unwittingly make for themselves, combined with their belief that the mother of several children and a psychiatrist of varied experience might produce a book that would help prevent these difficulties. They have not betrayed their purpose. Their book, characterized throughout by simplicity and profundity, deserves to be read limp, and shamelessly marked by those responsible for the physical and emotional soundness of tomorrow's adults." M. D. Gutman

+ Survey 77:131 Ap '41 300w

Wis Lib Bul 37:70 Ap '41

POWELL, HICKMAN. What the citizen should know about the Coast guard; il. by Charles E. Pont. 194p $2 Norton

351.792 U.S. Coast guard (W) 41-4797

Contents: A military tradition; Careers in the Coast guard; The Coast guard afloat; Rescue from the beach; Surfmen of the air; The Coast guard reserve; Aids to navigation; National defense. Index.

Booklist 37:382 Ap 15 '41

Bookmark 2:4 My '41

Reviewed by P. J. Searles

Books p2 Je 1 '41 320w

Boston Transcript p1 Ap 19 '41 60w

Nation 152:481 Ap 19 '41 10w

N Y Times p20 Mr 23 '41 120w

Reviewed by Fletcher Pratt

+ Sat R of Lit 24:14 My 17 '41 180w

POWER, EFFIE LOUISE. Osceola Buddy, a Florida farm mule; il. by Howard Simon. 57p $1.50 Dutton

(W) 41-8962

Buddy, a mule raised in Georgia, was sold to the owner of Osceola Farm in Florida. This story for young readers describes Buddy's life on the plantation, its crops, the other creatures he met, and his various activities.

"Buddy, born in Georgia, lived what you might call a quiet life, but somehow he can take hold of a child's imagination as well as affection, and provide one of the most ingratiating 'real' animal stories of the year for a little listener." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 F 9 '41 310w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p9 Mr 31 '41 140w

"The writing has a quality of unpretentious simplicity that is engaging. However, the story has little plot and Buddy is not sharply drawn as an individual. The book will have greatest appeal for readers of seven to nine in the locality about which the book is written."

M. F. Potter

+ — Library J 66:223 Mr 1 '41 70w

Spring'd Republican p7e Ap 20 '41 200w

POWER-WATERS, MRS ALMA (SHELLEY).

John Barrymore; the legend and the man; foreword by Brooks Atkinson. 282p il $2.75 Messner

B or 92 Barrymore, John 41-5793

Biography of the youngest Barrymore, by the wife of the company manager of his most recent play, My Dear Children. "This is a faithful record, as informative as it is informal and, withal, searching and explanatory." (Publisher's note) Index.

"Mrs. Power-Waters's husband was the company manager of 'My Dear Children,' her daughter was an attractive member of the cast of that little jewel, and her book remains uncompromisingly friendly. There is, in fact, the quality of a fan magazine story or a column by Louella Parsons in the work. Barrymore admonished his biographer not to spare the blemishes and Mrs. Power-Waters gives us the vices with the virtues, but her tone is inclined to be hero-worshipping. . . In justice to Mrs. Power-Waters, it must be said that she has achieved one remarkable feat. She has written a discreet biography of one of the most indiscreet of men." Richard Watts, Jr.

Books p14 Ap 13 '41 550w

"Mrs. Power-Waters re-creates only a two-dimensional character in her biography. One trouble is that her rather naive style and approach are not suited to her mercurial subject. Her book is neither the lurid saga which Barrymore's 'Don't whitewash me!' would suggest, nor a successful analysis of his triumphs and peccadilloes. Although she describes the events in his life with reasonable care, she fails to penetrate the forces which led him to the pinnacle of his profession and the subsequent lack of force which caused his downfall. However, the pages are plentifully stocked with amusing tales, some old, some new." S. M. Berger

+ — Boston Transcript p1 Ap 19 '41 240w

"The book is popular in style and careless with facts, but should make entertaining reading for those who like 'inside stories.' It is far from the biography which should and will be written when the present generation of Barrymores are dead and gone. For adults only. Not recommended for general library purchase." George Freedley

+ — Library J 66:218 Mr 1 '41 90w

"It is first of all the story of a witty and willful playboy, a joker, an enfant terrible, who never grew up, a creature of gay humor, lavish generosity, the fascination of unstable and unpredictable conduct and character. . . The book gives us an entertaining and kindly written biography of a man who made himself a fabulous home in Beverly Hills and found his 'supreme joy' in a yacht whose palatial equipment was complete even to a mint bed for fresh juleps."

+ N Y Times p2 Ap 20 '41 550w

POWERS, JOHN ROBERT. The Powers girls. 224p pl $2.50 Dutton

646 Models (person). Clothing and dress.

Beauty, Personal (W) 41-22804

Mr Powers is the founder and head of an agency which supplies the commercial photographer with beautiful models. His book tells the story of the development of his agency, where and how he discovered the girls he has made famous, and how to train and develop models.

Booklist 38:153 Ja 1 '42

Reviewed by Thomas Sugrue
Books p25 N 16 '41 500w
Springf'd Republican p7e N 30 '41 70w

POWLEY, MRS JEAN (MAKINS) (ANN CARDWELL, pseud). Crazy to kill. 256p
$2 Arcadia

42-2912

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p32 N 30 '41 120w

"What is a detective to do when most of his witnesses are insane and when even the doctors and the nurses are afraid to tell all that they know? It is a mad story, but if you can forgive the nonconformity to rules you will find it fascinating." Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p7 D 28 '41 200w

POWYS, JOHN COWPER. Owen Glendower; an historical novel. 2v $5 Simon & Schuster
Glendower, Owen—Fiction (W) 41-51542

A two-volume historical novel the scene of which is laid in Wales in the early fifteenth century. The principal characters are Owen Glendower, who led the great revolt for Welsh independence and the chieftain's young kinsman and secretary, Rhisiart ap Owen.

"The book is far too long for its substance, very diffuse, and done in an archaic literary manner and a baroque style which make the task of going through it rather formidable." A. J. N.

Atlantic Mr '41 170w

Booklist 37:270 F 15 '41

"Owen Glendower" is written with Mr. Powys's characteristic exuberance, which gives vigor to its portraits of both historical and fictional characters. This exuberance, however, and the very breadth and intensity of Mr. Powys's concern for his subject tend to diffuse interest to an extent that is often confusing, the more so in a realm of strange names, customs and legends. The wealth of material that has gone into this novel makes it at points more dazzling than clear, a fault that becomes serious as one progresses through nearly a thousand closely printed pages." Mary Ross

Books p4 Ja 26 '41 950w

"On the intellectual side, 'Owen Glendower' is a very full, accurate work of history, a monument to patience and loving skill; the copious learning of an accomplished antiquarian permeates the book. On the artistic side, the strength of the human spirit and the eternal beauty and dependability of inanimate nature are the great things to Mr. Powys." W. C. Derry

+ Boston Transcript p1 Ja 25 '41 800w

"Despite a plethora of murders, feuds, burning loves, alarms and excursions, it seems unconscionably long-winded; and on top of a style which is unaccountably labored, especially in the first volume it is overlaid with a dank miasma of Celtic mysticism which seems to emanate more from the mind of the author than from the circumstances of the story. Mr. Powys, himself steeped in Welsh history and folklore, strews his narrative prodigally with dark allusions to bygone Cambrian celebrities without a vowel to their names, the symbolical significance of which cannot but mystify the overwhelming majority of modern readers. On the credit side, he has effected an astounding reconstruction of the spirit and trappings of a turbulent epoch." L. B. Salomon

+ Nation 152:103 Ja 25 '41 800w

"The story is disproportionate, wind-baggy, and loaded with references to legends that only a Cymric specialist would know; it is lumpishly written, and full of stylistic ineptitudes. But if the book is read it will be for the unquestionable power of its dramatic moments, and for its evocation of the past. At least one can say for it that it is a most unusual combination of the impressive and the goofy." H. T. Moore

New Repub 104:509 Ap 14 '41 600w

"This is a book into which you plunge and lose yourself; led back through the centuries and ages by the oldest of all enchantments, that of the gifted word." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p7 Ja 26 '41 850w

"Only readers with oodles of time and patience or those already permanently committed to the odd talent of John Cowper Powys will be able to master the complex maze of 'Owen Glendower,' with its Welsh names, its theological squabbles, its mad priests and fanatical Lollards, its hazy nationalist intrigues, and its thick 'magical' atmosphere. There can be no doubt that the novel is a mountainous achievement." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 16:68 Ja 25 '41 350w

Pratt p11 spring '41

"In Mr. Powys's romance, interminably verbose, over-accentuated, pompously and vaguely mystagocic, and with its adolescent emphasis on sexual cruelty, the historical figures are stirred to life only occasionally. . . Mr. Powys takes no pains to make his period references accurate. . . His ignorance of the period, especially in matters of religion, is so great that the book loses all pretensions to being an historical novel, except in certain details of decoration." R. E. Roberts

+ Sat R of Lit 23:10 F 1 '41 800w

"Owen Glendower" is not for those who want light reading. But neither is it a dull book. It is an absorbing story from beginning to end. Mr. Powys's command of language is superb; with this he has created in 'Owen Glendower' a medieval world."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e F 2 '41 350w

Time 37:75 F 10 '41 350w

POWYS, LLEWELYN. Love and death; an imaginary autobiography [introd. by Alys Gregory]. 303p $2.50 Simon & Schuster [15s Lane]

41-6868

Partly fiction, partly dream-like fantasy, partly autobiography, this is the story of a youthful love affair recalled by a man dying of consumption years after the event.

"In his philosophy of the moral obligation to be happy, to seek experience as its own justification, Mr. Powys shows a likeness to D. H. Lawrence. Both stressed a determined paganism, of a most literary sort, and both could communicate exquisitely the heightening of reactions to the experiences of living, loving and walking on this earth which was to be too early denied them. But 'Love and Death' has a freshness, almost a sweetness, without those darkly turgid passages of Lawrence; it is healing reading now, as it gives us an England of green valleys and deliciously empty skies." Lorine Pruette

+ Books p6 Ap 27 '41 950w

"An erotic rhapsody written in exquisite prose, an aging man's lyric hymn to the poetry of earth that is never dead."

Nation 152:648 My 31 '41 80w

Reviewed by Marianne Hauser

New Repub 105:198 Ag 11 '41 370w

"Llewelyn Powys died before the fields and trees he loved were broken and blackened. In the rarity and passionate sensitiveness of his last book he has left the free poetic testament of earth's ancient beauty, that can be caught in a moment and known as imperishable." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p4 Ap 27 '41 1350w

"Books that treat sensual love as incomparably the greatest thing in the world are rare in our skeptical day. Hence 'Love and Death' gives the effect of a curiosity. But, I should add, it is not curiosa." Clifton Fadiman

New Yorker 17:85 Ap 26 '41 250w

PRATT, ALICE DAY. Animal babies; il. by Kurt Wiese. 148p $1.50 Beacon press 41-9385

Stories of animal babies, told with accuracy as to biology, and including not too obtrusive morals. Illustrated in black and white.

Christian Century 58:985 Ag 6 '41 20w

"Throughout the book there is much that will teach children about the intelligent care and kindly treatment of animals. The author's style is clear and simple, she respects her child audience and never condescends. The book deserves a better format." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p9 Ag 17 '41 390w

PRATT, FLETCHER. America and total war. 318p il maps $3 Smith & Durrell

355 Military art and science, World war, 1939—U.S. U.S.—Defenses (W) 41-5443

"The military expert of Time magazine and an established author of books on military subjects presents a study of the military might and methods of totalitarianism as demonstrated by Germany in the present war. The author visualizes a total war between Germany and Japan on one side and the United States on the other, explaining the military, political, and economic factors involved. Deals directly with our National Defense program." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 37:406 My 1 '41

Bookmark 2:6 N '41

"Not the least attractive feature of this book is its extreme readability. Mr. Pratt has an easy and lucid style, which means that his thoughts will be absorbed by far more minds than would the same thoughts expressed in the close and heavy phrasing of a Mahan or a Clausewitz. This is as it should be, at a time when such matters as Mr. Pratt writes of are the intimate concern of every citizen, and when the average citizen's knowledge of them and interest in them may gravely affect the security of the republic." G. F. Eliot
+ Books p10 Ap 20 '41 900w

Cath World 154:125 O '41 250w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 19:876 Jl '41 20w

"A little all-wise in tone, timely, and sure to receive wide attention and favorable reviews. Recommended for purchase." H. A. Wooster

+ Library J 66:218 Mr 1 '41 80w

"Fletcher Pratt is not a great military thinker or theorist, but he does possess the ability to present military theory in an understandable manner, and his aggressive and patriotic tone will doubtless be stimulating to many." H. S. Ford

Nation 152:702 Je 14 '41 170w

"On a subject of such vital importance, the comments of Mr. Pratt, who has truly a catholicity of taste and a breadth of interest which give him wide grasp and a remarkable outlook, were never more deserving to be read. Many of those comments are sound, others are marred by what seems to be a haste of compilation and an inadequacy in research that have before now detracted from too many of the author's writings. One cannot depend upon all his facts, though one must pay tribute to his comprehension and his keenness." H. W. Baldwin

+ N Y Times p12 My 25 '41 1100w

"Absorbingly written. Good photographs, and superior maps by Liam Dunne."

+ New Yorker 17:92 Ap 5 '41 60w

Reviewed by O. G. Villard

Sat R of Lit 24:10 My 10 '41 1200w

"The book is readable and written so that the reader need not be a technician, military or strategic expert to understand it. A considerable part of the concluding chapters is a somewhat detailed explanation of specific resources, the lack of certain vital essentials, possible or theoretical means of attack and defense of western hemisphere areas and other relevant matter. It is well worth the time of any person who wishes to be interestingly informed of what this country faces in its defense problem, military and economic, and a plausible suggestion of how to meet the test."

+ Springf'd Republican p12 My 16 '41 500w

PRATT, FLETCHER. Fighting ships of the U.S. navy; il. by Jack Coggins. [26p] maps $1 Garden city pub. co.

623.825 U.S.—Navy. Warships (W) 41-26052

Colored pictures and short descriptive text, showing all classes of our fighting ships, from newest battleships to the navy tug. Details of each ship are given; also pictures of uniform insignia, and some material on guns and gunnery.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p7 D 28 '41 50w

"With the demand for this type of book increasing daily, several adequate volumes have recently appeared. This one will be found very useful, because of its clarity and simple arrangement." Florence O'Gara

+ Library J 67:43 Ja 1 '42 90w

New Yorker 17:147 D 6 '41 30w

PRATT, GUY A. Let's bind a book. 137p il $2 Bruce pub.

686 Bookbinding

40-33001

"The elementary principles of hand bookbinding are set forth in a concise and simple manner for the amateur. There are brief chapters on the history of bookbinding, on equipment and the bookbinding industry in the United States. Photographs and illustrative drawings. Appendixes include minimum specifications for class 'A' library binding, a glossary of terms and bibliography. Index." Bookmark

Booklist 37:321 Mr 15 '41

Bookmark 2:5 My '41

PRATT, HELEN GAY. The Hawaiians, an island people; drawings by Rosamond S. Morgan and Juliette May Fraser. 193p maps $1.88 Scribner

919.69 Hawaiian Islands—Description and travel. Legends—Hawaiian Islands (W) 41-6938

Textbook on Hawaii for fourth and fifth grades. Subjects covered include geology, geography, history, flora and fauna, native industries and handicraft, social life, and government. Appendixes contain Hawaiian poetry and legends, a glossary, and index.

"A well-made textbook. Recommended." Emily Hutson

+ Library J 66:466 My 15 '41 190w

"The story of the Hawaiian aborigines is told in simple language, for almost the youngest of readers, but with a wealth of information that many mature readers will be glad to acquire."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 Je 24 '41 420w

PRATT, JAMES BISSETT. Can we keep the faith? pub. for the Dept. of philosophy of Williams college. 218p $2.75 Yale univ. press 230 Christianity 41-6822

A philosophical discussion of the meaning and necessity of a Christian faith in the modern world. Index.

Booklist 37:539 Jl 15 '41

Bookmark 2:5 N '41

"I do not share the faith this book expresses, yet I believe it to be one of the best statements of the liberal position in many years." Reinhold Niebuhr

+ Books p26 O 5 '41 750w

"Reading this is like spending an afternoon away from wars and alarms in the quiet study of a mature scholar and hearing him discuss with clarity and good humor the prospects of the Christian faith. . . . Even the sympathetic liberal may be unsatisfied at two points. The first is Pratt's failure to argue his case for Christian belief. . . . The other source of disappointment is the failure to penetrate to the heart of the crisis in the modern spirit." D. D. Williams

+ — Christian Century 58:1030 Ag 20 '41 850w

"While modern in outlook, Prof. Pratt incidentally provides Fundamentalists and others with the best refutation this reader has read of Humanism and of the 'New Thought' teachers. Incidentally, also, this present book would be eagerly read by a great many lawyers, professors, politicians and business people who may not be interested in its theme, if they knew what sheer delight Dr. Pratt provides by his concise logic, freedom from prejudices and courageous dependence on the appeal to reason, experience and history." A. L. Murray

+ Churchman 155:19 Je 15 '41 350w

"The book points to the beauty and majesty of the Christian faith, its essential reasonableness, and emphasizes our opportunity to pass it on purged of its weakness and superstition. It is a book to read with interest, to mark with care, and to pass on to one's students with expectancy." J. S. Bixler

+ Crozer Q 18:340 O '41 650w

"On the whole, Pratt's argument is exceptionally straight-forward and clear. But two chapters seem to me evasive: Chapter X on the Christian Moral Ideal is confined too much to the Gospels in view of Pratt's avowed purpose to take into consideration the historical tradition of Christianity, and Chapter XI on Immortality is confusing because it continues to shelter under the mantle of Platonic eternity many of the untenable 'primary-school' beliefs about personal immortality. Professor Pratt's most valuable contribution is to state empirically the grounds for Christianity's tenability on the mission field." H. W. S.

+ — J Philos 38:444 Jl 31 '41 750w

"The book is for the serious-minded reader, philosophical and academic, rather than popular in treatment." J. S. Cleavinger

+ Library J 66:264 Mr 15 '41 110w

Living Age 360:598 Ag '41 280w

"This summing-up on the part of a mature philosopher makes worthwhile reading. It is the product of a balanced and sane mind." F. G. Bratton

+ Springfield'd Republican p7e Je 29 '41 900w

Times [London] Lit Sup p416 Ag 30 '41 900w

PRATT, JOHN BARNES, comp. Present day hymns and why they were written. 115p $1 Barnes, A.S.

245 Hymns 41-1347

Collection of hymns, written during the last thirty years, together with an account of the circumstances under which each was written. Bibliography. Indexes.

Booklist 37:351 Ap 1 '41

Christian Century 58:60 Ja 8 '41 20w

PRATT, THEODORE (TIMOTHY BRACE, pseud). Mercy Island. 308p $2.50 Knopf

41-3686

Through the arrogant act of one man, a small group of people are shipwrecked on an isolated island off the Florida Keys. There they discover the presence of a man who has lived there alone for six years, obviously in secret. Opposing wills and desires lead to conflict, eventual tragedy, and final rescue for most of the party.

Booklist 37:546 Jl 15 '41

"'Mercy Island' makes no pretensions at being anything more than it is, a romantic adventure set in surroundings which the efforts of novelists have not yet made commonplace. As such the book is pleasantly entertaining and skillfully contrived." Robert Wilder

+ Books p14 Ap 6 '41 550w

"An 'escape' story of today, with an extraordinarily wide gamut of possible readers. Kathleen Norris fans will like the virtuous triangle and the simplicity of style; Conrad readers, for example, will enjoy the island setting among Florida keys, also the general vigor, and authentic feeling." M. E. Clark

+ Library J 66:178 F 15 '41 40w

"The tension and the lush, tropical background are both OK. You'll stick close to this one till the end."

+ New Repub 104:642 My 5 '41 60w

"It seems to this reviewer that there is confused psychology here, but whether there is or not the tale is worked out in a highly dramatic fashion. So far as I know Theodore Pratt is the first novelist who has attempted to deal with the conflicting logical and psychological factors of mercy killing, so-called." Percy Hutchison

N Y Times p22 Ap 27 '41 650w

"Good, mosquito-ridden background and some clever character development. Altogether, a lively and entertaining adventure piece."

+ New Yorker 17:86 Ap 12 '41 40w

"Mr. Pratt builds up his engrossing story to a tense climax. His local color is well developed and in particular his portrayal of the Conchs, those Anglo-Saxon descendants of Cockney London fisherfolk who migrated to the Keys via the Bahamas, is worthy of commendation." S. K.

+ Sat R of Lit 24:18 My 24 '41 220w

PRENTISS, AUGUSTIN MITCHELL. Civil air defense; a treatise on the protection of the civil population against air attack. (Whit-tiesey house publication) 334p il $2.75 McGraw

623.3 Air defenses 41-7238

Discussion of the various problems to be met in the protection of the civilian population in time of aerial warfare. Includes defensive measures against high explosive bombs, incendiary bombs, gas, fire, as well as training for the types of service required: Aircraft warning service; Air raid warden service; First aid and medical service; Fire precautions service; Rescue and debris clearance service; Demolition and repair service; Decontamination service. The book is based on European practice. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:487 Je 15 '41

Books p12 S 28 '41 320w

"This new book by the author of 'Chemicals in War' should be of interest to every intelligent American, since it is both a timely and detailed study."

+ Chem & Met Eng 48:182 N '41 200w

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '41

"This book is one that should be in the library of every organization which is doing any thinking and planning associated with a civil defense program in the United States. . . . Much of the material, of course, is taken from British publications, but this does not detract at all from the value of the book, even though engineers recognize that our practices in this country differ somewhat from British practice in various technical fields. . . . Colonel Prentiss is to be congratulated for bringing together in one volume, which is published in this country and hence easily obtainable, so much of the diverse information which the British authorities compiled and published in a large number of documents just prior to the outbreak of the war and also during the initial months of the conflict.”

PRENTISS, A. M.—Continued
H. E. Wessman

+ Eng N 126:86 My 22 '41 310w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:380 Ja '42 10w
N Y New Tech Bks 26:36 Jl '41
New Yorker 17:56 Ja 3 '42 20w

PRESTON, WHEELER. American biographies.
1147p $7.50 c1940 Harper

920.073 U.S.—Biography (W) 40-34059

For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 19 '41 110w

“The teacher will find in it a volume worthy of a place on his desk alongside Ploetz' manual, The World Almanac, and The Statistical Abstract—and one which will soon come to be as well-thumbed.” D. L. Cherry

+ Social Educ 5:548 N '41 320w

“This one-volume biography would be useful for quick reference in any library but especially in small public or school libraries which do not have the more extensive biographical works. It is recommended for general use.”

+ Subscription Bks Bul 12:1 Ja '41 500w
Wis Lib Bul 37:54 Mr '41

PREWETT, VIRGINIA. Reportage on Mexico. 322p $3 Dutton

972.08 Mexico—Politics and government.
Mexico—Social conditions. Mexico—Economic conditions 41-5667

This work is largely an account of Mexican politics and government under Calles and Cárdenas and a discussion of the presidential campaign of 1940 which ended in the election of Camacho. One chapter is given to the assassination of Trotsky and a final chapter to Mexico's defenses and her situation in the present state of international affairs. Index.

“The book is exactly what the title suggests: a reporter's account of current Mexican developments and problems. It is a good book, though not a great one. For a popular account, this study shows a commendable amount of insight and poise. The chief fault, especially in the early chapters, is one of oversimplification resulting from too much condensation.”
R. H. Fitzgibbon

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:589 Je '41 380w

“This book is written in a popular, journalistic style for laymen, but the recent events treated in it will be of interest to the scholar also. The sketch of Mexican history from 1519 to 1910 is rather brief and superficial. . . The author is at her best when she deals with the more recent period.” L. E. Fisher

+ Ann Am Acad 216:195 Jl '41 410w

Booklist 37:406 My 1 '41

“Miss Prewett's book is easy to read, although her style has the faults as well as the virtues of a news-report; and her point of view is somewhat unsympathetic to the Cárdenas regime.” H. E. Parkes

+ Books p16 Ap 13 '41 750w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 19:885 Jl '41 20w

“Timely, informative, readable.” A. L. Jewett

+ Library J 66:304 Ap 1 '41 60w

“As investigator and reporter of what went on under her eyes, Miss Prewett is enterprising, inquisitive and clear headed, and writes so well that it is a pity not to have some more evocative word than the modest term 'reportage' which she employs as title. . . Only her final chapter on the problems of Mexico's defense and its relations with Germany and Japan shows any weaknesses in reporting.” B. D. Wolfe

+ New Repub 105:283 S 1 '41 390w

“Virginia Prewett's report on Mexico is informative, conscientious, vivid, and very interesting. Moreover, it is precisely to thoughtful readers that her work is addressed. And the work itself is intelligently specialized.”

+ N Y Times p12 My 11 '41 600w

“‘Reportage on Mexico’ is not a solution-finding book and the reader is left, in most instances, to develop his own opinions as to what should be done about the problems it presents. Miss Prewett has, however, given such an intelligent presentation of backgrounds and alternative possibilities, that the foundations for opinion are cleared.”

+ Springf'd Republican p7e My 18 '41 850w

Reviewed by Hubert Herring
Survey 77:230 Jl '41 50w
Wis Lib Bul 37:114 Je '41

PRICE, HARRY. Most haunted house in England; ten years' investigation of Borley rectory. 265p il $3.50 (10s 6d) Longmans

133.12 Borley rectory. Psychical research

“Borley Rectory, completely gutted by fire in February last year, was built in 1863 by the Rev. Henry Bull, and the full account of its ‘psychic’ history [is] here given by Mr. Price. . . The more remarkable phenomena since the rectory has been scientifically investigated in the course of the past eleven years are of the familiar Poltergeist type: ‘the appearance and disappearance of objects within the house; voices, footsteps, banging of doors, . . . the spontaneous combustion of portions of the house, mysterious wall writings; paranormal bell-ringing; inexplicable and sudden thermal variations . . .’ and so on. . . But the Borley story is complicated by a further haunting on traditional and more romantic lines.”
Times [London] Lit Sup

“As fascinating an excursion as psychical research has enjoyed in this suspicious century.” M. L. Becker

+ Books p20 Mr 23 '41 180w

Manchester Guardian p7 O 4 '40 400w

“Granted that you want to forget the war, I do not know a better book; granted that an account of Borley was worth doing, I do not see how it could have been better done.” C. E. M. Joad

+ Spec 165:396 O 18 '40 900w

“Mr. Price, in this volume, has added another valuable piece of evidence to the many he has contributed in the course of a career largely devoted to a patient inquiry into the material of psychical research. His material is admirably presented, and although he has not attempted to make a ‘story’ of the case, the greater part of it is very interesting reading.”

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p510 O 5 '40 550w

PRICE, JAMES L., and MCCOY, SAMUEL DUFF. The autobiography of James L. Price, Jungle Jim. 310p il $3 Doubleday

917.28 Central America—Description and travel 41-14429

Collection of stories based on the author's career in the jungles of Central America, where he has spent the last twenty years. He has been explorer, business man, hunter and anthropologist, and a great story-teller, since he left Alabama Polytechnic just before the World war.

“Much of his story is told in a series of episodes, each one a dramatic short story in itself, and all contributing to the feeling of jungle life that the book as a whole produces. Many of the tales . . . are of blood-curdling character, but the narrative is so matter-of-fact, almost prosaic, that it is only after later reflection that one realizes what hardships and dangers of sudden death were routine in the life of a banana plantation manager, or an explorer in the vast Darien jungles. Perhaps the most important part of the book is the author's detailed description of the animal and vegetable life of the region." R. W. Dunlap

+ Books p11 J1 20 '41 400w

"In spite of an undistinguished manner of writing, the book achieves a high degree of reader interest through a dramatic handling of incident. For those who are minded toward tropical adventure it will afford considerable satisfaction." E. F. Allen

+ N Y Times p16 J1 13 '41 470w

PRICE, WILLARD DE MILLE. Barbarian. 310p $2.50 Day

41-21406

This story of the early stages of Japan's contact with America begins with the landing of Commodore Perry on Kurihama beach in 1853. Jonathan Boone, a young American midshipman is one of the landing party. Carried away with the idea of trading in the East, Jon determines to return with his own ship, and five years later he succeeds. With him is his newly married wife. Misfortunes greet Jon, but it is impossible to hold him. With the rising tide of Western influence in Japan, Jon gains success; but with the wave of frenzied "expel the foreigner" policy which follows, Jon loses out and is killed. The book ends with his wife and young son on their way home to America.

"His novel should make clear to many the background of Japan's present actions and attitudes. For Mr. Price's book is timely as well as entertaining. Mr. Price knows how to keep a story moving. He understands the arts of complication and suspense. Novelty of background and exciting incident are here in force. That deeper penetration of character which is the final satisfaction of fiction, is not attempted. But the book is both entertaining and informative." Bradford Smith

+ Books p20 O 26 '41 550w

Reviewed by Max Gissen

New Repub 105:770 D 8 '41 650w

"This is a vastly entertaining story with its colorful descriptions of significant historic events and personages, the abundant action, the incidental interpretation of Japanese racial characteristics. The first novel of a student of Far Eastern affairs who has written numerous articles and non-fiction books on contemporary Japan, which he knows as a resident, it would be strange if this work of fiction should appear to have no relation to the present crisis." Drake de Kay

+ N Y Times p34 O 26 '41 1000w

"The author has seized on a theme worthy of the classic Greek dramatists, and he develops it with boldness and skill. Except for the very early years, the historical background tends to be sketchy and a little thin, but the essentials come through with remarkable clarity and force." T. A. Bisson

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:11 D 6 '41 360w

PRIDGEN, TIM. Tory oath. 371p $2.50 Double-day

41-7801

Historical novel of the 1770's in the tide-water country of North Carolina. At the time of the Revolution this section had a large settlement of Scotchmen, and with the coming of Flora MacDonald, who had once saved Bonnie Prince Charlie, the group was more firmly welded together. After the Revolution many migrated to Nova Scotia or Bermuda, but the hero, young Duncan Stuart, stayed to cultivate his lands in peace, thanks to his Whig bride.

"Mr. Pridgen writes his historical scenes well. He has a certain dramatic sense that makes his battles seem less like engagements between a couple of armed forces than gigantic conflicts between men. They make good reading not alone because they are arresting fragments of our history but also because they re-create with wholly admirable vividness scenes which show living men at their best and at their worst." A. B. Tourtelot

+ Books p4 My 25 '41 480w

"[The author] writes with headlong fervor, heedless of an occasional anachronism or a wildly romantic coincidence. 'Tory Oath' has color enough for half a dozen stories its size. Action comes first in it and scholarship something later—a state of affairs which may be good news to hordes of hard working readers of novels about the American Revolution." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p7 My 18 '41 700w

New Yorker 17:78 Je 14 '41 40w

"A good example of escape literature for anyone who wants to forget the present war for an older one." H. S.

Sat R of Lit 24:20 My 10 '41 110w

Wis Lib Bul 37:140 J1 '41

PRIESTLEY, JOHN BOYNTON. Out of the people. 160p $1.50 Harper

914.2 Great Britain—Social conditions, Democracy. World war, 1939—Great Britain (W) 41-51931

"In this book the author of Good Companions and Angel Pavement speaks his mind energetically and frankly on the social and political problems now facing England. He demands the disappearance of the slums and of unemployment and the abolition of all special privileges. He asserts that as the burden of the war is being carried by 'the people' of England, England should belong to 'the people.'" Library J

"Here is no profound blueprint, but, as I have said, the thinking aloud of a man who is honest, energetic, and constructive." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic N '41 200w

Booklist 38:46 O 15 '41

"Mr. J. B. Priestley's is not the least of the many minds which are now seriously trying to shape the democratic future and make real the immense promise which it holds; and this simple little lecture, because it is thoughtful as well as simple and hopeful, is useful medicine for pessimists, defeatists and wave-of-the-future riders." Walter Millis

+ Books p3 S 21 '41 550w

Reviewed by W. L. Caswell

Churchman 155:19 N 1 '41 250w

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 O '41

Reviewed by E. M. Olcott

Library J 66:792 S 15 '41 80w

"If Mr. Priestley is an accurate reporter, and he is generally conceded to be something more than that, then this account presents matter of the first importance to all of us in this country who are concerned with the immediate future." Archibald MacLeish

+ New Repub 105:544 O 27 '41 1000w

N Y Times p9 O 19 '41 600w

"A brief, meaty, simple book." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 17:106 S 20 '41 500w

Pratt p24 D '41

Reviewed by Klaus Lambrecht

Sat R of Lit 24:32 O 13 '41 300w

Spec 167:316 S 26 '41 430w

"Here is an idealistic conception of the democratic state, but one presented with forceful reasoning and a ready recognition that it is not to be attained except through hard and bitter tasks."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 O 7 '41 850w

Times [London] Lit Sup p462 S 13 '41 650w

Booklist 38:13 S '41

PRINCE, DON. S-w-o-o-p [il. by Robbie].
256p $2 Messner 41-3912

The adventures, slightly ribald and alcoholic, of one Rudyard Culpepper, who suddenly discovered that his secret wish—to be able to fly—had come true.

"The book ignores all the laws of gravity, as befits its merry purpose," Lisle Bell
Books p11 Mr 16 '41 110w

"The story is adventure, mostly alcoholic and amorous. Mr. Prince has a neater gift for fantasy than for humor, though the comedy here is less forced than in his first book, 'Tom.'" Charlotte Dean
N Y Times p18 Mr 9 '41 280w

PROGRESSIVE EDUCATION ASSOCIATION, NEW YORK. Commission on the secondary school curriculum. Committee on the function of art in general education. Visual arts in general education; a report. 166p $1.50 Appleton-Century; $1.50, to members $1 The association

707 Art—Study and teaching. Educational psychology 40-7784

"The teaching of art in secondary schools is examined in its relation to general education and to the individual growth of the student. Present-day theories and the needs of adolescents are considered in the development of a modern philosophy of art teaching. Other chapters discuss the application of such a philosophy to the methods of art teaching, along with the qualifications and training of art teachers." (Booklist) Selected bibliography. Index.

Booklist 36:379 Je 1 '40

Boston Transcript p2 My 4 '40 20w

"The book should go far to create in art a real instrument for better daily living." C. C. Crawford

+ School & Society 53:640 My 17 '41 90w
School Arts 40:8a Mr '41 300w

"As in many studies of a special aspect of our complex society, there is a tendency in this report to look upon art as the cure-all for the whole range of adolescent ills. This ambition on the part of art advocates becomes tempered somewhat when the committee gets down to actual cases and tries to indicate how they would put their program into practice." W. H. Hartley

Social Educ 4:595 D '40 550w

PROKOSCH, FREDERIC. Death at sea; poems.
52p $2 Harper [6s Chatto]

811

40-35350

For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

Booklist 37:289 Mr 1 '41

"The strength of his imagination, the depth of his vision, his swift, natural imagery, and his lyrical fire, all conveyed in a finely cadenced and musical verse, lift his themes out of the grasp of horror or despair and set them in a light that exalts them and communicates the exaltation as the redeeming beauty of life. 'Death at Sea' will rank above Mr. Prokosch's first two books." C. P.

+ Manchester Guardian p7 F 14 '41 160w

"The music is beguiling and the style quite masterful, unless one feels that a poem is occasionally overwritten, with more adjectives than verbs. If this is so it is because Prokosch is not a poet of action but of contemplation, of appreciation. . . . There is no conclusion to Prokosch's poetry, neither appeasement nor a call to arms. It is written by a spectator, in a neutral country. And yet we are involved in it, we readily identify ourselves with its music, imagery and sensations." P. M. Jack

+ N Y Times p22 Mr 23 '41 500w

"The reader's ear is enchanted by the music of these verses. But when a poem is read we may well ask, as Prokosch says himself in Sunburned Ulysses, if it is 'scarcely to be grasped as anything other than music.' Or, if we study the content apart from the Lorelei-charm of the phrasing, what have we? A splendid historical symbol, yes. But is it enough merely to project the symbol, to leave the meaning in terms of exact contemporary significance vague or unstated? Mr. Prokosch, of course, has that privilege. But is the plight of the individual the chief concern of thinking poets today? Growth and change for ultimate good are not to be promoted by uttering honeyed words, Mrs. Miniver fashion." Ruth Lechlitrer

+ Poetry 57:327 F '41 850w

Reviewed by Dudley Fitts

Sat R of Lit 23:14 Ap 12 '41 110w

"Mr. Prokosch is self-absorbed, like a large pebble, in many of these latest poems. Read Sunburned Ulysses, 'The Sand,' 'Molière,' 'The Victims,' 'War of Nerves,' 'The Country House,' 'The Reapers,' think of his image of the waves—the sea of history and the 'wilderness of transition'—moving backwards and forwards over us. With many different intensities he will illuminate and delight those who can read him without prejudice." Geoffrey Grigson

Spec 166:68 Ja 17 '41 500w

Wis Lib Bul 37:73 Ap '41

PROKOSCH, FREDERIC. The skies of Europe. 500p $2.50 Harper

(W) 41-14057

"The story carries a young American writer named Philip back and forth across Europe—Paris, Munich, an Austrian town, Barcelona in the Spanish Civil War, a small French town, Florence, Monte Carlo, Marseilles, and so forth—during the two years before September, 1939. . . . He encounters a heinously beautiful Ruthenian girl, an old-school Austrian noblewoman, Ignace the Burgundian (probably the author's first sizable comic character, and a lulu), a redoubtable Spanish soldier, and a Munich family under Hitler, among others, and in some longish didactic passages he muses on Europe, America, life, death, the future of man." New Yorker

"Philip, one sees at last, has simply been the vehicle of the novelist's interest in Europe and its people. He takes no sides, belongs to no group; he is the companion of all. In each city he loses himself in the spell of the scene. Here and there he stops and listens to an artist, a student, a vagabond, a soldier dilate on contemporary European culture, on men, on war. The manner of these passages is perhaps reminiscent of Thomas Mann but the matter is that of Mr. Prokosch—with less metaphysics and profundity than the older writer, but with no little wit and wisdom. Such a vein, along with the lavish variety—almost a virtuoso display—of characters, sensitivity to the spirit of places, and luminous prose, mark 'The Skies of Europe.'" Milton Rugoff

Books p2 Ag 10 '41 850w

Reviewed by Eleanor Godfrey

Canadian Forum 21:220 O '41 270w

"Long, precise, and so carefully polished as to seem extremely mannered. Although eventually effective and truly poignant, the novel would probably be borrowed in public libraries only by intelligentsia or by readers who know well even the small streets, squares, and parks of many European cities." M. E. Clark

+ Library J 66:669 Ag '41 70w

"This new book by Frederic Prokosch, the mystic, the visionary, the poet who so often utters his scorn for 'the mad materialists,' is a sampler of the mood and temper of various parts of Europe before the war. These subjective impressions of the taste and texture of life here and there on the Continent are in the typical Prokosch manner, but they are tied together by a love story which, in its subtle irony, its excitement, its barbs of deflating wit, exhibits qualities entirely new to his writing." Harold Strauss

+ N Y Times p1 Ag 10 '41 1000w

"Perhaps, in effect, Mr. Prokosch is giving us his nostalgic farewell to the Europe that was, in a series of vignettes distinguished for their delicate observation, fine character engraving, and precise, highly varied detail. I confess that things seemed to me rather implausible at times, that I found some of the ideas cloudy, and that much of the subject matter looked faded. Then, too, I don't pretend to understand all the ins and outs of Mr. Prokosch's symbols. Even so, 'The Skies of Europe' is a very, respectable novel, and a fascinating one too." Vincent McHugh

+ New Yorker 17:56 Ag 9 '41 450w

"Mr. Prokosch, can lay unction to his soul for this book; if his greatest desire, as he has said, is to make 'an approach to writing which exceeds national limitations, both in matter and mentality,' he has done it in this novel. . . The book is alive; its personalities, minor as well as major, are animated, vigorous, piquant, its towns and countryside have color and reality, and its atmosphere is surcharged with political electricity. And Mr. Prokosch writes a beautiful prose, shimmering, delicate, and yet precise. It invests his book with distinction as well as interest and makes it one that imminently repays the reading." Amy Loveman

+ Sat R of Lit 24:7 Ag 16 '41 700w

PROPPER, MILTON MORRIS. The handwriting on the wall. 277p $2 Harper

41-21544

Detective story.

Booklist 38:132 D 15 '41

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p24 N 9 '41 160w

"The plotting of this mystery is excellent, but in the telling of it the author fails somehow to hold the interest of the reader, partly because he leaves too much to be explained in the final chapter, after the murderer has been apprehended and his guilt has been made manifest." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p18 N 9 '41 150w

"Tommy Rankin, detective, covers a lot of ground chasing from city to city before he arrives at a startling and satisfactory conclusion."

+ New Yorker 17:92 N 1 '41 90w

Wis Lib Bul 37:202 D '41

PROUTY, MRS OLIVE (HIGGINS). Now, voyager. 340p $2.50 Houghton

(W) 41-19417

The voyager was Charlotte Vale, spinster daughter of a proud Boston family. While recuperating from a serious illness, Charlotte was sent on a cruise, along with a new wardrobe and some startling changes in personal appearance worked by a beauty parlor. When the lassitude left by her illness had worn off, Charlotte discovered some surprising things about herself, and her belated romance completed her cure.

Booklist 38:81 N 1 '41

"Now, Voyager' provides an excellent opportunity for the use of Mrs. Prouty's outstanding gift as a novelist—delineation of character. . . Like its predecessors, this book is pleasantly substantial. One gets to know and to like and believe in these people. As though they were friends, there is both suspense and satisfaction in watching them work out the freedom which is hardest to attain—the freedom of peace with one's self." Mary Ross

+ Books p8 O 26 '41 500w

"It is all very sentimental and very unconvincing."

+ Cath World 154:504 Ja '42 270w

"Well handled, light, entertaining. Young people and women will like it. Libraries with a fair margin for good, light titles will order" Catharine Van Dyne

+ Library J 66:841 O 1 '41 60w

"Hollow, yet presented with a considerable amount of décor, it is as disappointing as a bottle which, though labeled 'champagne,' contains nothing but lemonade." Marianne Hauser

+ N Y Times p32 N 30 '41 750w

"Mrs Prouty has, to a certain degree repeated the same formula which made 'Stella Dallas' such a success. That is to say, she has again done a compassionate and intense study of a woman's mind and heart, made vivid and real by her selection of significant and effective details. . . While this latest novel is no more profound than 'Stella Dallas' it is a welcome addition to the field of light fiction of the better sort."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e O 26 '41 300w

Wis Lib Bul 37:178 N '41

PULESTON, WILLIAM DILWORTH. Armed forces of the Pacific; a comparison of the military and naval power of the United States and Japan. 273p map $2.75 Yale univ. press

355 U.S.—Defenses. Japan—Defenses

(W) 41-8629

"The author of a noted biography of Admiral Mahan compares the history, organization, and strategy of Japanese and American fighting strength in the Pacific. He concludes that in the event of war an American victory would be inevitable but we should be able to avert a fight by persuading Japan to adopt a moderate policy." (New Yorker) Index.

"The author urges a more aggressive foreign policy which will enable the United States to achieve what the author forcefully sets forth as the manifest destiny of this country to become the world's leading power in the years ahead. Admiral H. E. Yarnell contributes a thoughtful, well-written Foreword. The book has no documentation or bibliography, but there is an adequate index which enhances its utility for reference purposes. Although obviously written for the general reader, the volume contains much that will be useful for the special student of government, administration, military geography, and international politics. Captain Puleston does well what he set out to do, and is to be congratulated for thus contributing a timely addition to the rapidly growing literature of power politics." H. H. Sprout

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:1003 O '41 550w

"This book contains far more than a valuable comparison of naval forces in the Pacific. . . The experience of the author as a former Director of the Office of Naval Intelligence, as liaison officer with the Japanese Navy in 1917, and as a life-long student of American-Japanese relations, provides unusual and valuable background. Captain Puleston's book is not designed as an incentive for conflict but stands as a careful, objective, and statesmanlike appraisal; and contributes to the promotion of mutual forbearance." S. F. Bryant

+ Ann Am Acad 217:184 S '41 450w

Reviewed by Harold Sprout

Atlantic Ag '41 200w

Booklist 37:486 Je 15 '41

"This is a book which deserves a wide and attentive audience at a moment when the country is confronted with momentous decisions. We may find our major attention absorbed by our Atlantic problems, but that does not mean that we have abolished our Pacific difficulties; they are still there and must not be forgotten. Capt. Puleston not only describes our military and naval anxieties, he offers constructive solutions which merit the careful study of the citizens of our Republic on whom, in the last analysis, rests the responsibility for our present and future security." G. F. Eliot

+ Books p3 Je 15 '41 800w

PULESTON, W. D.—Continued

Christian Century 58:886 Jl 9 '41 120w

"While Captain Puleston is more sparing of descriptions of possible battles and strategic problems than is the British naval critic, Hector Bywater, in his analysis of an imaginary war in the Pacific, this book must be considered a first-rate, solid addition to naval literature." W. H. C.

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Je 6 '41 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '41

Living Age 360:492 Jl '41 360w

Reviewed by Herbert Rosinski

Nation 153:282 S 27 '41 600w

"This book is a welcome antidote against too dark fears. It is recommended for State Department medicine chests." W. H. Hale

+ New Repub 105:27 Jl 7 '41 550w

"Captain Puleston must know that what he warns against has already happened. . . . Moreover Captain Puleston does not treat at any length the vexing problems of supply of a fleet based on Singapore or Manila, nor does he sufficiently stress the lack of adequate fleet base facilities at Cavite and Olongapo. He does not seem to attach sufficient weight to the importance of air power, or to the influence upon the course of a campaign of attrition attacks by Japanese submarines and planes. Nevertheless, this book is so meaty, its facts so carefully compiled, and its opinions usually so well supported that it is not only stimulating but also essential reading. And in its refreshing insistence upon a strategy of boldness, its emphasis upon the strength, rather than the weaknesses, of America, this book comes as a refreshing tonic to a people ridden by too many fears." H. W. Baldwin

+ N Y Times p3 Je 8 '41 1250w

New Yorker 17:71 My 31 '41 50w

"Captain Puleston can claim to be the leading living disciple of the great Mahan, as well as his official biographer. But the relationship is somewhat that of Calvin to Luther; he is a good deal more forthright, preaches a stronger and headier doctrine, than his exemplar." Fletcher Pratt

Sat R of Lit 24:12 My 31 '41 500w

Time 37:104 My 26 '41 240w

"Captain Puleston's view, that of a naval man, is clearly and convincingly expressed. It is in accord with the impression left by the detached histories of Mr. Brodie and Mr. Marder." Paul Schubert

+ Yale R n s 31:193 autumn '41 500w

PUNCH (periodical). Punch and the war. 120p pa $1 Blue ribbon bks.

741 Caricatures and cartoons. World war, 1939—Humor, caricatures, etc. 41-22913

"The wartime humor of Punch's artists has been collected in a volume for American cartoon-lovers. . . . The 120 pages of cartoons are in the traditional manner of Punch in peacetime, though the martial settings and situations are new." Springf'd Republican

"Will we be able, two years from now, to bring out an American annual as good-natured, imperturbable and true to life as 'Punch and the War'? If so, we are unbeatable." M. L. Becker

+ Books p5 D 21 '41 100w

Christian Science Monitor p11 O 11 '41 210w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 31 '41 120w

PURDY, MRS CLAIRE LEE. Song of the North; the story of Edvard Grieg; il by Susanne Suba. 274p $2.50 Messner

B or 92 Grieg, Edvard Hagerup

(W) 41-8300

Biography of the Norwegian composer, Edvard Grieg, written for young people of high school age. The book not only gives the facts of his life, but also traces the development of his character, and shows the effect of his Norwegian heritage upon his life and his work. Contains a list of Grieg's works, some samples of his music, a bibliography, and indexes.

Booklist 37:516 Jl 1 '41

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p5 Ag 3 '41 370w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p13 Je 26 '41 140w

"It is a well-written and interesting biography, full of the music of the North, beautifully made and adorned with Susanne Suba's captivating drawings." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:290 Jl '41 150w

"Fine biography of Edvard Grieg. . . . Susanne Suba has done an attractive head-piece for each chapter." Claire Nolte

+ Library J 66:466 My 15 '41 130w

"This biography, to be fully appreciated, calls for more than a casual familiarity with [Grieg's] work, tracing, as it does, the technical development, and so will be of greatest interest to musical students, but in its account of the traditions and influences which formed the musician's, in its portrayal of Norse life almost a century ago, it is also a happy introduction to [his] work. . . . [The] bibliography will make this a useful reference book for students." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Je 22 '41 310w

PLYE, ERNEST TAYLOR. Ernie Pyle in England. 228p $2 McBride

940.5342 World war, 1939—Great Britain. World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American (W) 41-13208

Compilation of dispatches sent from England by an American war correspondent, from December, 1940, to March, 1941. He traveled thru much of England and Scotland, and talked with everybody he met from Lord Beaverbrook and the cartoonist, Low, to railway porters, farmers, waitresses, miners, longshoremen, and preachers. He visited people in their homes and in their shelters, and sent back his impressions of the average Briton's reactions to the war.

Reviewed by Frank Kelley

Books p25 O 26 '41 160w

"Three months in Great Britain in 1940 and 1941 cover the whole of Mr. Pyle's war background for this book, but he made gratifyingly good use of his time and skill as an observer. And the manner in which he sets down his findings, observations and emotional reactions is as effective as it is unassuming. . . . Mr. Pyle's large following among readers of the Scripps-Howard newspapers is likely to welcome the appearance of his dispatches in a somewhat more enduring form than heretofore. For readability the book holds up alongside the best of those by correspondents." E. F. Allen

+ N Y Times p4 Ag 31 '41 430w

Q

QUEEN, ELLERY, pseud. of FREDERIC DANNAY and MANFRED LEE. The black dog mystery; drawings by William Sander-son. 290p $1.75 Stokes

(W) 41-16480

Mystery story for young readers.

"The management of events is adroit, the talk easy, and the clues not too difficult to follow; there is even a map on the end papers; it makes an introduction to adult detection in fiction. Though why, considering how easy it is to read adult detective stories once you are old enough, it should be thought necessary to have them introduced before you are old enough, I don't see. So far, the line between the juvenile mystery and the adult crime-story of detection has been sharply drawn and generally respected. Djuna has taken his young sleuths across it. They have gone under expert guidance and in the best modern manner. "His well done, but why do it?" M. L. Becker

+ Books p9 S 28 '41 230w

"This is a mystery story which sensible parents can safely recommend to 8 to 12 year olds. It is intelligent and deftly knit, as one would expect from the author or authors whose name it bears, and though the tougher-minded of young mystery fans may regret that there is not even a smidgen of gore, there is danger enough and plenty of clues to pique the curiosity." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p12 S 21 '41 240w

QUEEN, ELLERY, pseud. of FREDERIC DANNAY and MANFRED LEE, ed. 101 years' entertainment; the great detective stories, 1841-1941. 999p il $3 Little

(W) 41-24967

Anthology which traces the development of mystery and crime stories during the years 1841 to 1941. The book begins with Poe's The Purloined Letter, and ends with Ben Ray Redman's The Perfect Crime.

Booklist 38:177 Ja 15 '42

"Now, here's a hefty volume that comes as near perfection in its field as any fan in his senses has a right to expect in an erring world, and perhaps even that reservation should be omitted in so striking an instance of merit." Will Cuppy

+ Books p31 N 23 '41 400w

"The editors of this volume deserve a vote of thanks for their diligent research and for the discriminating taste that has gone into the selection of the tales that make up this truly remarkable anthology." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p6 N 30 '41 500w

New Yorker 17:112 N 22 '41 40w

"Mr. Queen has done brilliant job in rescuing numerous stellar stories from oblivion and supplying informative foreword and lively editorial notes. Required reading."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:36 D 6 '41 40w

QUENNELL, PETER COURTNEY. Byron in Italy. 274p il $3.50 Viking

B or 92 Byron, George Gordon No8l Byron, 6th baron 41-21751

"This sequel to the author's 'Byron: The Years of Fame' [Book Review Digest, 1935] carries the poet from his farewell to England in 1816 to his departure for Greece in 1823." New Yorker

Booklist 38:158 Ja 1 '42

"A reluctance to whitewash Byron is evident all through; but the central figure of a composition may be brightened by darkening its surroundings. Unconsciously perhaps, he sometimes resorts to this device. Lady Byron appears as a jealous fanatic probably responsible for Byron's excesses, because she had come between him and his sister Augusta; Shelley's influence on Byron's poetry is minimized; Claire Clairmont becomes a silly tease. But if these dashes of gray seem unnecessary, the result is excellent as far as Byron himself is concerned." Margaret Armstrong

+ Books p3 N 9 '41 1200w

"Mr. Quennell has really very little that is new to say, though he tells the old tale with considerable vigor and clarity." S. C. Chew

Christian Science Monitor p12 D 13 '41 700w

Reviewed by M. D. Zabel

New Repub 105:673 N 17 '41 1500w

Reviewed by Raymond Mortimer

New Statesman & Nation 22:443 N 22 '41 1200w

"A superb narrative, charming, subtle, and intelligent, with some penetrating reflections on the interplay of talent and personality in the literary process."

+ New Yorker 17:91 N 1 '41 40w

"Fascinating, often penetrating and brilliant essay." R. E. Roberts

+ Sat R of Lit 24:13 N 29 '41 850w

"Anyone who possesses Mr. Quennell's earlier volume, Byron: The Years of Fame, will certainly wish to put this one beside it on his shelf. Most biographies are either journalism, or uninspired scholarship: this one is a book. But on the score of scholarship, there is one complaint to be made against Mr. Quennell: not that there should be (so my learned friends tell me) a few minor slips in detail, but that there are no references, and no bibliography." Bonamy Dobrée

+ Spec 167:560 D 12 '41 1000w

Reviewed by Ralph Rutenber

Springf'd Republican p7e N 23 '41 360w

Time 38:98 N 10 '41 1900w

Times [London] Lit Sup p607 D 6 '41 3000w

QUIGG, JANE. Crispin's acres; pictures by Gertrude Howe. 112p $1.50 Oxford

Dan, aged eight, lived at the bottom of a Connecticut hill, and his friend Crispin, aged seventy or more, lived in an interesting house on the hilltop. Crispin loved and understood both children and animals, and in return they all loved him. This is the story of the summer when Mary Brewster came to stay next door to Dan's house, and of the fun Dan and Mary and their friend Crispin had.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p6 Ja 11 '42 200w

"Children of fourth and fifth grades will enjoy the story with its adventures and good times for all concerned. Should be a popular book for the middle grades and is recommended as an excellent addition for small libraries as well as large." A. L. Shea

+ Library J 66:908 O 15 '41 130w

"This is a most pleasing tale for children from 8 to 12, and the author, who is a West Hartford (Ct.) teacher, is to be particularly commended for her excellent understanding of young children and the things they enjoy doing most from day to day."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 16 '41 180w

QUIMBY, CHESTER WARREN. Jesus as they remembered Him. 220p $1.50 Abingdon-Cokesbury

232.9 Jesus Christ

41-11137

A study of the personality of Jesus Christ, as evidenced by the Gospels. The chapters are devoted to his environment, heritage, body, experiences, mind, emotions, motives, unpopularity, distinctive qualities, perfection, gospel, and achievements.

"Carefully studied and skillfully written picture of Jesus. . . An admirable book, modern in scholarship and fresh in style."

+ Christian Century 58:912 JI 16 '41 80w

"The author gives due recognition to the results of modern scholarship, and is careful in his selection of material, but he refuses to believe with the extremists that we can know nothing of the personality of the Lord. . . None of the author's suggestions are far-fetched, but one wonders that what he has done has not been done more often. . . For the preacher searching for an original and forceful presentation of the events in the Gospels, or the laymen seeking a new analysis of the personality of Jesus, this book is worth far more than its modest price." W. L. Caswell

+ Churchman 155:20 S 1 '41 300w

QUINN, ARTHUR HOBSON. Edgar Allan Poe; a critical biography. 804p il $5 Appleton-Century

B or 92 Poe, Edgar Allan (W) 41-23761

Scholarly biography of "America's most maligned and most misunderstood poet," based upon exhaustive research in the Poe family archives. The book puts forth a new interpretation of Poe's marriage, and proves that the defamation of Poe's character by the Reverend Rufus W. Griswold was unjustified. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 38:158 Ja 1 '42

"Without warning, without any preliminary fanfare of trumpets, a book has now appeared that towers above others of its kind, a book in which resourceful scholarship and a lucid gift of expression are happily joined. I wish I could recapture all I have recklessly said in praise of other books and concentrate it here." G. F. Whicher

+ Books p3 N 30 '41 1350w

"A fair and judicious estimate of this biography should strike a balance somewhere between almost unqualified commendation accorded it by Prof. G. F. Whicher and the acidulous praise of certain particulars combined with an implied condemnation of the whole which has come from Miss Frances Winwar." S. C. Chew

Christian Science Monitor p12 D 27 '41 1200w

Reviewed by George Barker

Nation 153:673 D 27 '41 850w

"The Griswold forgeries are Dr. Quinn's important contribution. . . For the rest, Dr. Quinn follows the pattern of previous biographers, only more exhaustively and often unnecessarily so. While it is helpful to the scholar to know in what plays Poe's actor parents appeared, it makes tedious reading to have each and every performance mentioned. . . Again, toward the end of the book, as in a number of instances preceding, Dr. Quinn indulges in speculation which, if perpetrated by one of humbler academic pretensions, would have the college faculties up in arms. . . Discounting [a few] flights of fancy, Dr. Quinn's book will be valuable to the scholar as a storehouse for reference. The definitive biography, the book that will re-create the poet and the man, has not yet been written." Frances Winwar

+ — N Y Times p3 N 30 '41 1000w

"Anyone who has ever been interested in getting anything straight about Poe and has struggled with the available books will hail this biography with delight and will read it. The desire for clear truth will lead him on. It will be a sober but real joy to find the mazes of mystification made easy—a gratification like reading the last chapter of a detective story." W. K. Winsatt, Jr.

+ Sat R of Lit 25:20 Ja 24 '42 800w

"The chief virtue of Professor Quinn's book is that it restores the man: the critic, editor, story-teller and poet. . . Against this warm and solid background, Poe's flaws and the inner struggle fall into perspective. Writing a careful, honest and full-bodied biography, the author has supplied the missing material for any dramatist tempted by the challenge to provide a final illumination."

+ Theatre Arts 26:141 F '42 350w

QUINN, ELEANOR BAKER. Death is a restless sleeper. 248p $2 Arcadia [7s 6d Heinemann]

[40-12036]

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p17 Ap 13 '41 80w

N Y Times p17 Je 29 '41 200w

"Death is a Restless Sleeper" may disconcert Miss Baker Quinn's many admirers. Her two earlier books were so admirable and unusual; this is much less distinctive though still extremely good of its kind."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p269 Je 1 '40 100w

QUINN, VERNON. Picture map geography of South America; with il. by Paul Spener Johst. 112p $1.50 Stokes

918 South America—Juvenile literature (W) 41-21377

Factual material on the ten independent nations of South America, and the three colonies of British, Dutch, and French Guiana. The information given is on physical features, agriculture, industries, trade, vegetation, and animal life. Eight pictorial maps. Grades four to six.

Booklist 38:100 N 15 '41

"In simple language, it gives the reader, adult as well as child, a valuable fund of information concerning the different countries and their peoples, besides a brief account of the continent's history from its earliest days." Grace Phelps

+ Books p11 N 2 '41 120w

"Such a book will be particularly valuable because of the emphasis now being laid upon all things South American. Recommended for children ten to twelve." Emily Hutson

+ Library J 66:952 N 1 '41 80w

QUINN, VERNON. Shrubs in the garden and their legends; il. by Marie A. Lawson. 308p $2.50 Stokes

635.976 Shrubs. Plant lore (W) 40-31808

Essays on thirty different shrubs: their history; old superstitions about them; their uses from ancient times to the present; their geographical origins; and facts about shrubs originating in America's mountains and lowlands. Index.

"Miss Quinn has done it again! To her previous delightful quartette of volumes on Seeds, Leaves, Roots and Garden Flowers she now adds Shrubs in the same general pattern and with undiminished success in ferreting out the amazingly varied and often intensely human oddities in their history. There is a note of practical usefulness in her story, too, for she has included numerous observations of a cultural nature which many a gardener will welcome." R. S. Lemmon

+ Books p13 S 15 '40 160w

"Fascinating volume for the garden enthusiast. . . Charming informal style."

+ Wis Lib Bul 37:16 Ja '41

R

R.A.F. in action; produced in collaboration with the Air ministry. 100 il $2 Macmillan [7s 6d Black, A. & C]

940.544 World war, 1939—Aerial operations. Great Britain. Royal air force. Photographic books [41-51850]

"Produced with the cooperation of the Air Ministry, this is at once a record and a picture of the activities of the various commands of the Royal Air Force in the first year of war. Most of the volume is taken up by one hundred excellent photographs portraying the many activities of the Royal Air Force on land and in the air. Preceding the illustrations is an intelligent and instructive summary of the year's activities." Times [London] Lit Sup

Booklist 37:544 J1 15 '41

"For so slim a volume, this book manages to convey an exceedingly comprehensive and lively impression of what it means to be one of the gallant few to whom so much is owed by so many." C. M.

+ Canadian Forum 21:93 Je '41 200w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:197 O '41 10w

"An extremely skilful pictorial record, a selection being most adroit, the photography brilliant." Barrington Gates

+ New Statesman & Nation 21:194 F 22 '41 430w

"The photographs are for the most part not technically remarkable; but their merit as a collection is that they do provide a relatively complete pictorial survey of the routine work of the three main Commands of the Air Force during the first year of the war. There are a few mistakes." Derek Verschoyle

+ — Spec 166:232 F 28 '41 260w

Spring'd Republican p7e Je 8 '41 200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p650 D 28 '40 440w

RAINE, WILLIAM MACLEOD. They called him Blue Blazes. 250p $2 Houghton

41-9245

Western story.

Booklist 38:36 O 1 '41

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p17 Ag 24 '41 70w

"By dint of long and assiduous practice the veteran William MacLeod Raine has placed himself in the very front rank of the writers of Western fiction. He always has a tale that is worth the telling, and he always tells it expertly. He has never written better than in this novel." G. W. Harris

+ N Y Times p12 Ag 17 '41 150w

Times [London] Lit Sup p521 O 18 '41 30w

Wis Lib Bul 37:140 J1 '41

RALEIGH, JOHN MCCUTCHEON. Behind the Nazi front [foreword by Wythe Williams]. 307p $2.50 Dodd

940.5343 World war, 1939—Germany. World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American (W) 40-29987

The author, an American newspaperman, arrived in Germany shortly before the war began, and remained there for the greater part of the first year as assistant to the Berlin correspondent of the Chicago Tribune and also as a commentator for NBC. His book is an eyewitness account of Berlin in war time, and of trips to Poland and Czechoslovakia.

Booklist 37:268 F 15 '41

"Mr. Raleigh has written a readable, interesting book. . . His picture of the Germany behind the front is a grim one. He was impressed with the severity of life and skeptical of civilian stamina. In Poland and Czechoslovakia, he saw no signs of an enduring 'new order.' At the same time, Mr. Raleigh's book reveals almost nothing about the significant mysteries of Nazi Germany, and it carries a heavy freight of small errors." Joseph Barnes

+ — Books p9 F 2 '41 550w

Cath World 154:127 O '41 110w

Foreign Affairs 19:678 Ap '41 20w

Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 19 '41 390w

"A fast-moving, vivid and clearly-written account of life inside warring Germany." H. C. W.

+ Sat R of Lit 23:22 Ja 4 '41 390w

Reviewed by Bernard Foley
Spec 167:88 J1 25 '41 600w

Times [London] Lit Sup p342 J1 19 '41 800w

RALL, HARRIS FRANKLIN. Christianity; an inquiry into its nature and truth. 363p $2.50 Scribner

200 Christianity

41-523

"This volume is an attempt to deal with [certain] questions. It is divided into four parts. I. The Christian Religion (What is religion and its function? What is the Christian religion and what of its claim to finality?) II. The Present-Day Setting of Religion (In what kind of world does Christianity find itself, today? What of threat and what of help and what of need does this world show?) III. The Knowledge of God (Can we believe in God? How can we know God?) IV. Some Problems for Faith (What can we say and what may we learn as we face the questions raised for faith by science, history, psychology, and ethics, and even more by the fact of evil?)." (Foreword) Bibliography. Indexes.

Reviewed by W. J. McGarry
America 64:611 Mr 8 '41 270w

Booklist 37:286 Mr 1 '41

"Professor Rall is one of the most gifted and revered systematic theologians of the Methodist Church. His book, which won a $15,000 prize upon occasion of the fiftieth anniversary of the Bross award for outstanding religious books, is quite obviously a magnum opus. Its carefully written pages betray the industrious scholar who has spent a lifetime in pondering upon the problems which he clarifies in these pages. The theology which Professor Rall elaborates might not unjustly be defined as 'evangelical liberalism.'" Reinhold Niebuhr

+ — Books p22 F 23 '41 550w

"Professor [Rall's] book is the ripe fruit of a lifetime of reflection, research and orderly presentation. It is, in a sense, the summary and climax of his work up to date, but those who know the author will not mistake it for the conclusion. And it may be added that its documentation and the appended bibliography, without being burdensomely elaborate, form an excellent reading list in theology." W. E. Garison

+ Christian Century 58:225 F 12 '41 1100w

"The reader is at once impressed with Dr. Rall's wide scholarship, with his analytical sense, and his ability to reach logical conclusions. He skillfully winds his tortuous way amid the maze of religious and philosophical opinions of the present age, never swerving from his fundamental faith in the Christian norm, never unduly influenced either by intellectual profundity or skillfully wrought homiletics, but always carefully examining each phase of present-day doctrines, each facet of modern society, with cool judgment." A. F. Gilmore

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 7 '41 1550w

Reviewed by R. C. Miller
Churchman 155:20 Ja 15 '41 200w

Reviewed by G. W. Davis
Crozer Q 18:250 J1 '41 1500w

"Apologies are the most ephemeral form of Christian literature; but it would be fairly safe to predict that this one, which combines the tempered wisdom of the age now passing with the basic courage required by the age now coming, will endure longer than most." W. M. Horton

+ J Religion 21:460 O '41 1450w

"The book is broad in scope. It defines religion and Christianity. There are sections concerning the approaches to faith and the modes in which it finds expression, and the ancient battleground of arguments for the validity of Theism is charted carefully. Critics of Christian belief—psychologists, scientists, historians—are studied with a highly commendable fairness and definiteness. Possibly, however, the best part of the discussion is the final chapter which has to do with good and evil in the world. Dr. Rall's style makes crooked lanes straight; and even those who cannot agree with his position will agree that it has been set forth eloquently and well."

RALL, H. F.—Continued

G. N. Shuster

+ Sat R of Lit 23:19 Mr 1 '41 490w

RALSTON, JACKSON HARVEY. The quest for international order. 205p $2 Byrne

341 International cooperation. International law and relations. Peace 41-9612

"Judge Ralston, who has had wide experience in the practice of international law, makes a fresh approach and gives a cogent argument for a doctrine of limited sovereignty, world citizenship, a concept of international law as dealing with individuals rather than with states, removal of all trade barriers, and absolute neutrality (no shipment of arms) by non-belligerents to warring states." Christian Century

Reviewed by A. K. Weinberg

Am Pol Sci R 35:1021 O '41 320w

"The book is worth studying both for its critical and for its constructive content."

+ Christian Century 58:935 J1 23 '41 80w

"I found this book interesting and entertaining because of its vigorous style and the obvious sincerity of its criticism, much of which is perfectly true and to a large measure justified. But as an answer to the solution for which we all search, it gives but little satisfaction." Francis Deak

+ — Yale Law J 50:1514 Je '41 2000w

RAME, DAVID, pseud. See Divine, A. D.

RAMSDELL, CHARLES WILLIAM, ed. See Confederate states of America. Laws, statutes, etc. Laws and joint resolutions. . . 1864-1865

RAMSEY, LOGAN CARLISLE. Navigation of aircraft. rev ed 2v 230:48p il $4.50 Ronald 629.1325 Aeronautical instruments. Navigation (aeronautics) 41-9935;41-9936

First published in 1930. Book Review Digest, 1930. "It is now revised and only the general principles of instruments are given, instead of descriptions of specific models, and the new method of utilizing celestial observations is used. A bound volume Air Pilots' Dead Reckoning Tables (48p) accompanies the textbook." (Booklist)

Booklist 38:57 O 15 '41

N Y New Tech Bks 26:36 J1 '41

RANDALL, GEORGE ARCHIBALD. Saddle up; il. by [the author]. 224p $2 Dutton

41-11238

Story of young Bob Sercomb's summer vacation on his uncle's western ranch, where round-ups, rodeos, riding lessons, Indian pow-wows, and hunting trips were the order of the day. For children from twelve to fourteen.

"A well-written and informative 'western' which should prove popular with boys especially, and with all young lovers of horse stories—in spite of the fact that it is an 'I' story and takes shape through a series of letters. . . Recommended for children twelve to fourteen." Emily Hutson

+ Library J 66:678 Ag '41 90w

"The book at times sounds like a conducted tour. The author is conscious of this flaw and excuses himself in the words of Bob, 'I suppose this sounds like a travelog, but I can't help it.' The author presents all this in the form of letters by Bob to his father. At times, especially in the beginning, one wonders whether this was merely an excuse for poor writing. But for an inexpensive summer tour of the West—'Saddle Up!'"

+ — Spring'd Republican p7e Ag 3 '41 110w

RANDALL, JEAN. Peppertree inn. 252p $2 Macrae Smith co.

41-19313

When Rosemary's impractical, archeologist father came to an end of his resources, they moved out to a small inn in southern California and Rosemary embarked on a career as inn-keeper. With the help of two young men, Rosemary makes the inn pay and when her father wants to move on again Rosemary decides to stay.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p29 O 5 '41 90w

"A diverting story." Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p28 O 19 '41 210w

RANDALL, WILLIAM MADISON, and GOOD-RICH, FRANCIS LEE DEWEY. Principles of college library administration. (Studies in lib. science) 2d ed 249p $2.50 A.L.A.; Univ. of Chicago press

027.7 Libraries, University and college. Library administration 41-51818

"Instructions for the making of library budgets, a sample budget, new statistical material on salaries and book expenditures, and notes on new developments in the college library field bring up to date a book first entered in Booklist January, 1937." (Booklist) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1936. Index.

Booklist 37:495 Je 15 '41

"Since 1936, when the first edition of Principles of College Library Administration was published, college librarians and students of college library administration have found guidance and help in their approach to the many problems involved in the organization and work of a college library. The second edition of this book is an equally acceptable aid and will be received by the college library world with similar satisfaction. The amount of revision is not extensive and consists, mainly, of some recent books and articles added to the references cited at the ends of chapters, with the deletion of some older titles. Another evidence of bringing information up to date is the substitution of 1939-1940 for 1933-1934 statistical data in the various tables. . . The authors have succeeded in writing in a clear and agreeable style the best book so far published on college library administration." L. E. Fay

+ Library J 66:607 J1 '41 800w

"This is an important book. It was a timely and valuable treatise when it first appeared in 1936; it is no less so today with the publication of the second edition. For this was the first, and still is the only general work covering the whole field of college library administration with—and this is, perhaps, the main point—a thorough discussion of the roles of the president, faculty, and librarian in making possible really satisfactory library organization and resources. . . The book is a well-written, logically presented, provocative, and comprehensive statement of what the modern college library should be, what it should do, and how it should do it." J. P. Danton

+ Library Q 11:510 O '41 1450w

RANDOLPH, MARION, pseud. See Rodell, M.

RANEY, WILLIAM FRANCIS. Wisconsin; a story of progress. 654p il maps $5.35; to schools $4 Prentice-Hall

977.5 Wisconsin—History 40-7607

A history of Wisconsin from earliest times to the present. About half of the volume is devoted to the period since 1900, some of the matter being typically rather than chronologically treated—e.g. with chapters on Labor, Education, Politics, etc. The author is professor of history, Lawrence college. Index.

"This latest addition to the Prentice-Hall series of state histories will find its greatest value as a tool for ready reference and secondarily as a textbook. It is crammed with detailed facts and statistics from cover to cover but supplies little of interpretation, is not sufficiently complete for the specialist, and lacks the narrative quality which would appeal to the general reader. This is not to belittle its many good features, for it bears the impress of scholarly workmanship, is clearly written, has excellent selective bibliographies as well as a fair index, and its format is to be commended. Until the art of writing state histories has been better perfected it will serve well the state for which it was written." B. H. Wilcox

+ — Am Hist R 46:682 Ap '41 500w

"Raney covers, within 520 pages of text, a scope of history often thought to require four or five volumes of that size. The result is conciseness in treatment, but not inadequacy. He has identified the important features of Wisconsin's three centuries, and he generally gives the selected episodes due attention." Joseph Schafer

+ Am Soc R 5:829 O '40 250w

Wis Lib Bul 37:33 F '41

RANSOM, ELMER INGLESBY. The last trumpeters, and other stories. 228p il $2 Univ. of Ga.

Animals, Legends and stories of 41-5500

"There is little sentimentality but much tragedy in these 10 stories of trumpeter swan, raccoon, setter, silver fox, wolverine, buck, mongrel dog, sailfish, airedale, and rattlesnake. Unusually well written by a man who obviously knows intimately the lives he writes about, they are good nature tales; some have appeared in magazines." Booklist

Booklist 37:465 Je 1 '41

"This book is excellent... Most of the book's incidents have real information to offer—as of the fox who 'is always a good father,' and his enemy the more clumsy wolverine; and of the raccoons who hunt at night, by families. The last story points a moral of discrimination in the killing of snakes. There is excitement in the battles of the fishes. The ten stories vary in tone and tempo as in their wildlife personalities. And the illustrations, like the tales, have a real sense of life." H. M. Shaw

+ Books p8 Je 22 '41 360w

RANSOM, JOHN CROWE. The new criticism. 339p $2.50 New directions

801 Literary criticism. Poetry—History and criticism 41-16905

"Mr. Ransom does not explicitly define the 'new' criticism, the novelty of which lies for him in its extraordinary acuity, its 'depth and precision.' He does, however, point out what he considers to be its two chief errors, that of making literary judgments in psychological rather than in cognitive terms, and that of an old-fashioned moralism. He discusses in turn I. A. Richards: 'the psychological critic,' and his pupil, William Empson; T. S. Eliot: 'the historical critic,' and Yvor Winters: 'the logical critic.'" (Books) Index.

Reviewed by Babette Deutsch
Books p11 Je 15 '41 950w

"Mr. Ransom's is a very tense book. It is so tied up that no real definition and no cool exposition of 'the new criticism' ever come through. Mr. Ransom is so determined to haggle with his material as he goes along that his neatly articulated 'objective cognitions,' his 'structures,' and his 'textures' dissolve, in the end, into a confused blur. A few round, whole, firmly presented images would help enormously, but Mr. Ransom has passed through the 'image' stage to presumably higher and purer air." Louise Bogan

Nation 153:37 Jl 12 '41 900w

"A provocative and useful, if not completely satisfactory, book. . . All the matters which fall under consideration in this book are, to use the author's phrase, 'copiously discussible.' One must add that in the present volume they are not always readily assimilable. The reasons are two. First, Mr. Ransom attempts not a treatise but a series of essays. Second, the author's statements, though often intuitively shrewd, are not sufficiently clear and coherent. The book has an air of charming but somewhat indolent improvisation; it sheds a good deal of light but fails to focus it. Its value lies not in its judgments, which are sometimes extravagant and erratic, but in its many fine aperçus and in various unallocated comments on the poetic method. As always, Mr. Ransom here proves himself a sensitive student of poetry." Alexander Cowie

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:13 Jl 5 '41 550w

RANSOME, ARTHUR. The Big six; il. by the author. 353p map $2 Macmillan [7s 6d Cape, J]

(W) 41-5682

Describes the adventures of the Coot club, sailing on the Norfolk Broads. When they are accused of setting boats adrift, they are able to prove their innocence only after some clever detective work.

Booklist 37:445 My 15 '41

"It is my reasoned opinion that this is Arthur Ransome's best book. Rally round, Ransome fans; this is a beauty." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 Ap 6 '41 440w

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 19 '41 60w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk M 17:208 My '41 110w

"A story to delight Ransome fans for its mystery and suspense. Attention is given to sailing and fishing details and the characters emerge as distinct personalities. A gallant, refreshing book to have come from war-torn England." E. A. Groves

+ Library J 66:404 My 1 '41 140w

"It is late to start congratulating Mr. Ransome on his series of books, but 'The Big Six' passes magnificently the test of being enjoyable by readers at any age in two figures, and the drawings are delightfully simple and humorous." M. C.

+ Manchester Guardian p7 D 6 '40 90w

"The prolific Mr. Ransome again, extraordinary writer, so original, so matter of fact, with his maps and his local place names and his almost grinding insistence on matters of technical proficiency. . . As usual the style is clipped, pared-away, astringent, to my ear monotonous and, somehow, a bit suffocating. As usual the characters are flat, colourless, humourless, totally external; symbols of co-operative efficiency. I don't know why I always rather dislike them: I suppose it is because they are always so on the spot, up to the mark, and, somehow, sterilised. But that is beside the point. The point is that Mr. Ransome again equals or perhaps excels himself, and that every boy who enjoys him—and every boy does—will vote this detective story super." Rosamond Lehmann

New Statesman & Nation 20:576 D 7 '40 220w

"These are real children, drawn by one who has observed boys and girls with wisdom, sympathy and humor, one who enjoys and understands them. The schemes of the Big Six for catching the wrongdoers have the same mixture of practical good sense and make-believe that is found in the doings of children in real life. Mr. Ransome has made satisfying drawings, including practical sketch maps that show the routes and distances the young detectives needed to know." A. T. Eaton

RANSOME, ARTHUR—Continued

+ N Y Times p10 My 18 '41 480w

"The latest volume by this British author is quite up to standard. . . It's a perfect blend for a ten-to-thirteen-year-old reader."

+ New Yorker 17:89 My 24 '41 100w

"The good writer for children sticks out a mile. He or she respects children, enjoys what they enjoy, is actively interested in the story, loves incidental detail, and never writes down. Mr. Arthur Ransome, our Children's Author No. 1, has all these qualities, and adds to them a vivid charm, and a mastery of the technique children love best. He has no scruples against giving instruction, but it is always a necessary part of the story, and he always assumes an active and enquiring intelligence in his readers." L. A. G. Strong

+ Spec 165:616 D 6 '40 420w

Spring'd Republican p7e Je 1 '41 110w

RANSOME, STEPHEN. Hearses don't hurry.
272p $2 Doubleday

41-4409

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p25 Ap 6 '41 110w

"Lots of airplanes and killings and one of the niftiest fires to date. You'll like it."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 5 '41 20w

"The story has speed, puzzlement and a satisfactory ending which probably few readers will anticipate." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p25 Mr 30 '41 150w

"Good enough."

Sat R of Lit 23:18 Mr 29 '41 40w

RAPER, ARTHUR FRANKLIN, and REID, IRA DE AUGUSTINE. Sharecroppers all.
281p il $3 Univ. of N.C. press

330.975 South—Economic conditions. South—Social conditions 41-1880

A study of economic conditions and trends in the South. The authors use the term "sharecroppers" to include non-farm workers in industry and trade who share the risk but not the control of their labors. Index.

Reviewed by B. M. Gile

Am Econ R 31:389 Je '41 550w

Reviewed by H. C. Nixon

Am Hist R 47:393 Ja '42 550w

"The book is substantial and written for popular consumption. Familiar as much of its material is to sociologists, the freshness of its presentation and its insight into actual situations make this book of real value to all students of society. If written by northerners, Sharecroppers All probably would meet a pretty stiff reception in Dixie. It's a tribute to southern Americans that they can give one another—and take—such searching self-criticism." P. S. Taylor

+ Am J Soc 47:642 Ja '42 420w

Reviewed by Ellen Winston

Am Soc R 6:748 O '41 160w

"The book is important and should be read by all students of the South, of farm tenancy, or of the Negro." F. G. Detweiler

+ Ann Am Acad 215:220 My '41 450w

Booklist 37:352 Ap 1 '41

Reviewed by Erskine Caldwell
Books p10 Mr 30 '41 500w

"This grim book about the American South is no product of the literary carpet-bagger.

It was written by Southerners who now live and work in the South and was published by a Southern university press. . . Yet the very fact that this book can be written and published in the South shows that Southerners themselves, perhaps a small intellectual group as yet, are intelligently seeking a way out."

R. L. Duffus
+ N Y Times p9 F 2 '41 1400w

"A good many things in 'Sharecroppers All' are not pleasant to regard now when we have other things on our hearts. Some aspects of the pleasant lullaby South are not stressed. There is more humanitarianism in the book than humor, though humor is not lacking. . . There is a sense of people in its statistics and of America in the tragedy which is the sum of them. The book is an honest American picture which deserves remembrance at a time when people talk, eloquently, in cities about democracy and its worth and meaning in the world. The sad thing is that this book is not Hitler's propaganda. This is home." Jonathan Daniels

+ Sat R of Lit 23:10 Mr 1 '41 500w

"A thoroughly stimulating work, the volume closes with a discussion of movements which may point towards a southern renaissance. . . Sharecroppers All makes an electric, if sometimes startling, combination of views about life in the Southern Regions, and ought therefore to be read by everyone concerned with the future of our civilization." John MacLachlan

+ Social Forces 20:282 D '41 400w

RASCOE, BURTON. Belle Starr. 340p il $3
Random house

B or 92 Starr, Mrs Belle (Shirley). Outlaws (W) 41-8767

Belle Starr, born Myra Belle Shirley, was a member of a notorious band of thieves and killers who infested the Southwest in the seventies and eighties. In this book the author has attempted to set forth the known facts concerning her life story, but at the same time, finding the legendary Belle "a more enticing person," he has also included many of the "tall stories" told about her exploits. Index.

"This, obviously, was a difficult book to assemble; the material was scattered, and much of it contradictory and unreliable. And, once having gathered his material, Mr. Rascoe must have been confronted with the question: Shall I write the story, as a story, sticking to the facts as nearly as possible, or shall I write a critical account of her life? He chose the latter method—a sound enough method, and probably the best one, but the result inevitably is a halting and backtracking narrative. It does not move steadily and chronologically from start to finish, but it would be defective biography if it did. It was absolutely necessary, in telling the story, to stop now and then and carefully remove the phony garlands which legend had woven about the great woman." Stanley Walker

+ Books p5 My 25 '41 1400w

Reviewed by G. E. Brown

Library J 66:400 My 1 '41 130w

"Mr. Rascoe has done a good job—almost too good, for the passing of the West he depicts is nothing to regret." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p6 Je 8 '41 1500w

New Yorker 17:78 Je 7 '41 100w

"As historian Mr. Rascoe has rendered genuine service in exploding the crackpot mythology perpetuated by oldsters; but, as Rascoe well knows, Belle Starr without the legends is as drab as a Paul Bunyan without the tall stories." Robert Whitehand

Sat R of Lit 24:5 Je 21 '41 320w

"As a historian, Critic Rascoe is angrily allergic to legend. He worries old newspaper accounts like a terrier, impatiently separates fact from fiction, sometimes makes the reader impatient while doing it."

Time 37:87 Je 2 '41 400w

RATCHFORD, BENJAMIN ULYSSES. American state debts. 629p $5 Duke univ.

336.3 Debts, Public. State governments
41-10409

Treatise on the historical, constitutional, economic, and administrative aspects of the debts of the forty-eight states of the United States. The material is arranged chronologically from the Colonial period to the present. Bibliography. Index.

"Students of public finance will find the volume very helpful in its coverage and careful analysis. To all public officials who may hereafter have responsibility in connection with state debt policies, it can be recommended as profitable reading." F. H. Guild

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:1183 D '41 700w

"This book is by far the most comprehensive study of American state debts that has yet appeared, and represents an outstanding contribution both to the economic history of this country and to the literature of public finance." T. R. Snively

+ Ann Am Acad 218:224 N '41 800w

RATCHFORD, FANNIE ELIZABETH. The Brontës' web of childhood. 293p il $3.50 Columbia univ. press

928.2 Brontë family 41-9025

After spending twenty years in research, the author has finally tracked down more than a hundred of the tiny manuscripts into which the Brontë children poured their imaginative souls. The volume is a critical study of these manuscripts, showing their effect upon the later writings of each of them. Bibliography. Index.

"Miss Ratchford has had the imagination, patience, and good fortune to make a major contribution to the understanding of English literature. No future study of the Brontës can conceivably be undertaken without using her book as a cornerstone." G. F. Whicher

+ Books p4 Je 8 '41 1000w

Reviewed by Eleanor Godfrey

Canadian Forum 21:154 Ag '41 490w

"Miss Ratchford has produced a fascinating book which throws light on the ways of the creative imagination in general and that of the hitherto mysterious Brontës in particular."

J. J. R.

+ Cath World 153:628 Ag '41 850w

"Important and fascinating book." S. C. C.
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 14 '41 800w

"When Mrs. Gaskell was preparing her life of Charlotte Brontë, she was given access to the immense mass of Brontë juvenilia, but the little manuscript books were difficult to read, and Mrs. Gaskell's examination was cursory; she found them of no significance. . . . After nearly twenty years of arduous research, Miss Ratchford is able to give the full history of the little books; it is one of the most interesting stories I have ever read. . . . [The book] is far more fascinatingly complex than I can briefly indicate—with a taste and skill that almost match her scholarly pertinacity. But even though she speaks with the authority of a unique knowledge, I cannot agree with some of her interpretations. One thing that troubles me is her treatment of Branwell. . . . I find, too, an incomplete insight in the thesis Miss Ratchford advances about Charlotte's relation to the Angrian stories." Lionel Trilling

+ — Nation 153:16 J1 5 '41 1150w

Reviewed by Louise Bogan

New Repub 105:285 S 1 '41 750w

Reviewed by E. S. West

New Statesman & Nation 22:479 D 6 '41 1000w

"Miss Ratchford has written the most important book about the Brontës since Mrs. Gaskell laid down her pen eighty-three years ago. She calls a halt to insane speculations and wild surmises. . . . Without any qualifications, Miss Ratchford must be said to have established a revolutionary interpretation of the Brontës in this book. It is possible, however, that in the Héger matter she may go too far. She admits some autobiography in 'Jane Eyre,' despite its Angrian connections. . . . I am also inclined to question Miss Ratchford's conviction that Emily's genius and Charlotte's were identical, that 'Emily's one point of superiority was her full surrender to the creative spirit which Charlotte fought with all the strength of her tyrannical conscience.'" Edward Wagenknecht

+ N Y Times p6 Je 15 '41 1650w

"Throws considerable light on the nature and development of the Brontë genius."

+ New Yorker 17:80 Je 21 '41 40w

"The literary importance of Miss Ratchford's work is very great, since it both corrects the Brontë history and illuminates the creation of their work. But it has also a more general and psychological value. I do not know whether daydream worlds of the Angria type are created by a large proportion of the world's children, but that they are created by many children who are later destined to become novelists I am quite sure, for so many fictions show familiarity with such worlds." Phyllis Bentley

+ Sat R of Lit 24:6 Je 7 '41 2100w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bowen

Spec 167:286 S 19 '41 950w

RATCLIFF, JOHN DRURY. Lives and dollars; the story of today's research. 225p $3 Dodd 607 Research. Medicine, Agriculture
(W) 41-18334

Popular stories of present-day scientific research, the greater part of it in the field of medicine. The first section of the book takes up such subjects as flu epidemics and their control, the new vitamins and vaccines, manufacture of biological products, and child psychology. The second section is devoted to commercial and agricultural research. No index.

Booklist 38:91 N 15 '41

"This new 'story of today's research'—another among many—has merits that justify its publication and make it well worthy of general attention. These merits are, briefly, variety and importance of subjects chosen for discussion, scientific balance and accuracy of presentation, and lively and entertaining style of writing. The author has scientific training and wide experience in popularization, and he seems to have come into close contact with many of the research projects he glowingly describes." H. M. Parshley

+ Books p15 O 12 '41 500w

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 O '41

"The articles, which are of magazine type, are short, lively in style, and full of the kind of general information that spells 'science' for those who must read as they run. A pity there are no pictures and no index."

+ — New Repub 105:518 O 20 '41 80w

"Solely on the basis of the book's internal evidence the author can be classified as a member of the Paul de Kruif school of science writing. They use the same enthusiastic adjectives, the same calling of scientists by their first names, and almost but not quite the same abundance of exclamation points. This is a tested formula, and it works. The result is interesting reading, and the reader will be left with an insight into the current history of science." H. M. Davis

+ N Y Times p14 Ja 25 '42 440w

"'Lives and Dollars' is a collection of human stories of the latest developments in science, told with colorful detail."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 O 22 '41 480w

RATH, MRS VIRGINIA. Death breaks the ring. 298p $2 Doubleday 41-11801

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p10 Je 22 '41 120w

RATH, VIRGINIA--Continued

"The complicated problem of this capable writer's newest tale is solved only by withholding some evidence from the reader and thus necessitating some long explanatory statements at the end. But Michael and his wife, Valerie, are such good company in themselves that their creator's evasion of the rules may be forgiven." Kay Irvin

+ — N Y Times p17 Je 22 '41 240w

"Pleasant summer reading."

New Yorker 17:80 Je 21 '41 40w

"Agreeable."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:15 J1 5 '41 50w

RAUSCHNING, HERMANN. The conservative revolution [Eng title: Make and break with the Nazis]. 280p $2.75 Putnam [8sd Secker & Warburg]

943.085 Germany—Politics and government, Germany—Nazi movement (W) 41-14381

"Having expressed his hatred for Hitler in 'The Revolution of Nihilism' and 'The Voice of Destruction,' Hermann Rauschning now tries to explain why for three years he accepted Hitler as his overlord. The story he tells—in a series of letters to an unnamed Englishman—is a political tragi-comedy with elements of burlesque. Rauschning and his conservative friends were planning to use the Nazis for their own ends. The movement they represented had no basis in the masses; therefore they would not only join Hitler's party but would try to take it over. Hitler, they believed, was a horse they could ride in their own direction—and if they couldn't ride him, they would turn him out to pasture. . . . The dupers were duped and the riders tossed off, some being killed by the fall." New Repub

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin
Atlantic O '41 200w

Reviewed by Walter Millis
Books p4 Ag 31 '41 1250w

Reviewed by Max Fischer
Commonweal 34:618 O 17 '41 700w

"As an involuntary portrait of the confused mind of persons of a certain type and level, 'The Conservative Revolution' is not without value. A better title for the book would have been 'Revolutionary Reaction.'" Franz Hoeller-ing

Nation 153:184 Ag 30 '41 1150w

"His present work, though it advocates a theory of government that is dangerous in the circumstances, and possibly unworkable at any time, is not without value. It explains what most Americans have failed to see: the moral strength of the Nazi movement and its appeal in the past to many honorable men. It conveys a truth that most of our radicals have failed to realize, in their traditionalism more obstinate than Rauschning's own: that the whole game of nineteenth-century politics is played out; that an era is coming to an end. And it makes a plea for common efforts in fighting Hitler and in planning the new Europe that might follow his defeat." Malcolm Cowley

New Repub 105:260 Ag 25 '41 800w

Reviewed by George Troeltsch
New Statesman & Nation 22:334 O 4 '41 1050w

"Herr Rauschning is not a clear thinker. There is something mysterious in the way he loads metaphysical freight on simple ideas. Yet it is a tribute to the man that when he talks, hard as it is to understand him, we are wise to listen. On the vital question of Germany and Germans he has more information than some of his critics." Shepard Stone

+ — N Y Times p9 S 14 '41 1550w

Reviewed by Clifton Fadiman
— New Yorker 17:66 Ag 23 '41 260w

Reviewed by David Thomson
Spec 167:286 S 19 '41 600w

"Though these may not be genuine letters, they have the repetitiveness of argumentative correspondence. Also, the style is a little heavy, and in an alien tongue the author sometimes blurs his meaning where the turns of argument especially require careful clarity. Yet Rauschning's book is immensely worth reading."

Springf'd Republican p6 Ag 16 '41 950w
Times [London] Lit Sup p54 S 13 '41 1000w

RAUSCHNING, HERMANN. The redemption of democracy; the coming Atlantic empire [tr. from the German by Barrows Mussey] [Eng title: Beast from the abyss]. 243p $3 Alliance bk. [8s 6d Heinemann]

940.53 World war, 1939-. World politics. Democracy (W) 41-51577

The author of 'The Revolution of Nihilism' (Book Review Digest, 1939), now living in exile in England, writes again of Hitler's threats against the democracies and attempts to show what line the democracies should follow after Hitlerism has been defeated.

"We could have wished that the work had been given a more disciplined form. Whoever writes political philosophy today touches red-hot iron; and if the new conservatism is some day to prove its truth in practice, it will have to be very precise in its self-imposed distinctions from the old." Golo Mann

Am Pol Sci R 35:548 Je '41 1000w

"Hermann Rauschning, whose Revolution of Nihilism is one of the most thoughtful and most profound interpretations of Nazi Germany, is one of the few men who possess the gift of writing about the present in terms that are likely to be acceptable to the future. His new book possesses the qualities of its predecessor—clear and vigorous thought, a style distinguished, sometimes almost apocalyptic in its force, the capacity to see contemporary phenomena sub specie aeternitatis." W. H. Chamberlin

+ Atlantic Ap '41 750w

Booklist 37:287 Mr 1 '41

"There is much that is interesting and suggestive in this book. But in spite of that, in spite of the sincerity of his plea for a democratic future and the nobility of his tribute to the democratic virtues, the book itself conceals a basic intellectual frustration which tells, I suspect, much more about Rauschning—the deeply religious Prussian Junker, ex-officer, ex-Nazi emigré caught up in democracy's perilous voyage—than it does about democracy or about the realities of our times." Walter Millis

+ — Books p4 Mr 23 '41 1350w

"Rauschning's book is a very earnest book. Though it is well and even beautifully written, much more so than his two preceding books, it will not be a popular book. There are none of the false, cheap, and therefore attractive generalizations which easily produce best-sellers, there is no pleasant way of telling people not to do what they don't wish to do. But this book should be read because it recognizes more deeply the fundamental elements of the present crisis, reveals the true face of National Socialism." Hans Kohn

+ Boston Transcript p1 Mr 8 '41 400w

Cath World 153:245 My '41 600w

"Rauschning strikingly parallels Anne Lindbergh in his description of the facts of contemporary history; the main difference is that, while Mrs. Lindbergh regards 'the revolt of the masses' as an inevitable development to be studied sympathetically and if possible directed into healthy channels, Rauschning is mortally afraid of the masses and hopes that Britain and America will combine to suppress them. Democracy 'redeemed' on Rauschning's terms would be a throwback to aristocratic oligarchy. If Hitlerism is to be defeated it must be by some better ideal of society than that."

— Christian Century 58:427 Mr 26 '41 190w

Christian Science Monitor p18 J1 28 '41 600w

"Dr. Rauschnig, having been high in Hitler's confidence, is an unexcelled authority on the aims and methods of Nazi Germany. . . . But when he enters the field of prophecy and calls for a sort of 'Pax Anglo-Americana' to rule the coming Atlantic Empire' he is not so convincing. Never having believed in democracy, he is not well equipped to understand its fundamental qualities and predict its future." R. G. Woolbert

— + Foreign Affairs 19:870 J1 '41 70w

"If his book has to be regarded as a contribution to the future it is a negative contribution. For all it does is to draw the accumulated red herrings of pseudo-conservatism across the way which must be found." P. F. Drucker

— Living Age 360:191 Ap '41 400w

Reviewed by Ernest Barker
Manchester Guardian p7 Mr 25 '41 400w

"Rauschnig senses clearly that we stand at the threshold of a new period in history. Yet, with due respect for his earnestness, he seems, as a political thinker, no less a dilettante today than he was at the time he associated himself with Hitler. For the student of contemporary political confusion, his new book will have a special interest. It puts forward honestly all the questions which a bad conscience must ask in pain—and who can have a good conscience today?" Franz Hoellering
+ — Nation 152:274 Mr 8 '41 750w

Reviewed by Ralph Bates
New Repub 104:474 Ap 7 '41 850w

"Few books could be more difficult to sum up than this statement of Dr. Rauschnig's political philosophy in which the reader has a perpetual sense, while reading Dr. Rauschnig the philosopher, of playing hide and seek with Dr. Rauschnig the politician." T. R. Fyvel
New Statesman & Nation 21:390 Ap 12 '41 1150w

Reviewed by Simeon Strunsky
N Y Times p3 Mr 9 '41 1250w

"I think the Doctor said his say in 'The Revolution of Nihilism,' a genuinely educational book. Now he is endeavoring, like a good Teuton, to refine his theories, to spin new and more terrifying abstractions, to become 'profound.' The muddy translation is doubtless a faithful reflection of the original." Clifton Fadiman

— New Yorker 17:74 Mr 8 '41 550w

"This is a noteworthy book, but also a puzzling one. It is puzzling in relation both to substance and style. It is called the 'Redemption of Democracy,' but it is less a consideration of democracy than it is the extension of Mr. Rauschnig's remarks on Nazism in respect to the current crisis, leading one to suspect that the English title, 'The Beast from the Abyss,' is perhaps closer to the theme. . . . What is of particular value in this book, frankly, are Mr. Rauschnig's guesses concerning the possible next moves of the Nazi war machine; his discussion of the strategy of internal disintegration; his account of the long-range war aims of Mr. Hitler. Mr. Rauschnig's appeal is as an insider; he is the authority on Nazism, and no one can dispute him except the principals themselves. But when he discusses democracy, we become the insiders." Norman Cousins

+ — Sat R of Lit 23:7 Mr 15 '41 750w

"Rauschnig's frankness is disarming, and we are bound to agree with his apology for a shift of parties when he says, 'It is not those who have changed in these years of change that should be suspect; but those who have not changed.' But if we are going to condone the author for his one-time support of Nazism, it will be less easy for American readers to share his attitude toward life, toward government, and toward the future. . . . This book could only have been written by a German, and will not be really understood by many people who have not steeped themselves in German philosophy and traditions." Douglas Miller

— + Sat R of Lit 24:5 Ag 16 '41 700w

Reviewed by David Thomson

Spec 166:347 Mr 28 '41 850w

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 16 '41 60w

Reviewed by Sigmund Neumann

Survey G 30:307 My '41 800w

Time 37:84 Mr 3 '41 450w

Time 38:72 Ag 18 '41 1400w

"For all the breadth and depth of his analysis, Herr Rauschnig, like almost every political theorist among the anti-Nazi Germans to-day, reveals all too plainly in his historical thinking the perfervid element of German transcendentalism which has helped so largely to bring Hitler to power and on which so many of Hitler's successes with his own people have been built."

Times [London] Lit Sup p146 Mr 29 '41 1200w

RAUSHENBUSH, CARL, and STEIN, EMANUEL, eds. Labor cases and materials; readings on the relation of government to labor. 674p $4 Crofts 331 Labor laws and legislation—U.S.

41-11242

"This book about the influence of government on labor conditions is addressed to students of society: students of economics, of government, of law. . . . We have divided this book into two parts, one, by Raushenbush, dealing with the influence of government on the relative bargaining power of labor unions and employers, and thus on conditions of labor; the other, by Stein, dealing with changes in conditions of labor brought about by government in dictating certain minimum terms for the labor contract. To a considerable extent these two sorts of intervention overlap; many union demands relate to aspects of the job which are already affected by legislation. But in general the two sorts of intervention complement each other. The changes which bargaining and legislation together are able to bring about are of course limited by 'what the traffic will bear.'" (Pref) The authors are on the staff of New York university. Bibliography. Index.

"Often times, attempts to combine textual and case material result in an unusable hodge-podge. In this book, however, the authors have been quite successful in combining the two types of material and developing a very usable and complete text. In fact, the only criticism which the reviewer has to offer is that the scope of the material is almost too comprehensive. If it be a fault, this is perhaps a happy one, since any person using the book has a wide choice of material from which to select and adapt to his needs and uses." F. P. Hall

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:1013 O '41 240w

"The selection is excellent, the editing reasonable, and the organization effective for reader, teacher or student. This is a first-rate compendium, if one wants to come vividly to grips with the problems themselves, to sense the contours of power that mark our society, witness the subtle ways in which the inarticulate premise can dominate and corrupt judgment, or feel the thrill of communion with the occasional great mind that has graced America's courts. I might add that a study of these cases can reassure the man who has lost confidence in the capacity of our economy to grow in what Charles Beard has called 'democratic humanism.'" J. R. Walsh

+ Survey G 30:532 O '41 500w

RAWSON, CLAYTON (STUART TOWNE, pseud). Death out of thin air. 280p $1 Coward-McCann

41-3687

"This book is divided into two acts: 'Death from the Past' and 'Death from the Unseen.' They are really separate stories about Don Diavolo, prestidigitateur and illusionist." N Y Times

RAWSON, CLAYTON—Continued

Reviewed by Marian Wiggan

Boston Transcript p2 Ja 25 '41 40w

"It is all good entertainment, and you don't have to believe it." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p14 Ja 19 '41 230w

Sat R of Lit 23:18 F 1 '41 40w

RAWSON, MRS MARION (NICHOLL). The antiquer's picture book; il. by the author. 96p $2.50 Dutton

917.3 Antiques—Pictorial works (W) 40-35487

The volume contains more than a thousand small sketches showing implements, utensils, tools, furniture, art work, outbuildings, etc., used by our ancestors in America and collected as "antiques" today. The drawings are arranged under the heads: household, farm, land, waterways, work, animals, vehicles, boats and fishing, domestic art. The text is limited to a word or brief phrase identifying (and sometimes locating) the object pictured.

"Mrs. Rawson set out 'to draw a dictionary'; that is almost what she has done; an index (which the book does not have) would be needed to make it really useful. But as it is, it is immensely entertaining, whether by its hog-pens, gravestones, gates, wells (these are particularly good), spectacles, fish traps, pellicks (see page 77), butter prints, or any of its groups of friendly old tools and gadgets."

+ Books p19 F 16 '41 150w

Reviewed by C. G. Beede

Christian Science Monitor p2 S 3 '41 140w

N Y Times p42 N 9 '41 150w

Pratt p13 autumn '41

Springf'd Republican p7e D 22 '40 230w

RAWSON, MRS MARION (NICHOLL). The old house picture book; il. by [the author]. 96p $2.50 Dutton

728.0973 Architecture, Colonial. Architecture, Domestic 41-13027

Several hundred line drawings of American colonial houses and their appurtenances, arranged in groups with descriptive headings. The localities range thru New England, New York, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania, and the South. Contents: Chimneys; Roofs; Windows; Doors; Stairs; Porches; House walls; Houses; Log houses; Barns; Outhouses; Mills; Earth-work houses; Shops—markets—taverns.

"It is a book to be opened anywhere with pleasure; and to be picked up again, soon or later, with assured enjoyment ahead." C. G. Beede

+ Christian Science Monitor p2 S 3 '41 140w

N Y Times p42 N 9 '41 150w

"Restoring an old house? Then 'The Old House Picture Book' is your cup of tea. . . The book is not indexed, but since the illustrations are grouped under chapter headings, a given bit of material is easily found. . . Mrs Rawson's book has charm and feeling and is none the less important because it offers an exciting fund of information for the beginning collector and 'antiquer' rather than for the scholar or serious student of early American life." F. T. Howe

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 24 '41 300w

Wls Lib Bul 37:152 O '41

RAYBURN, OTTO ERNEST. Ozark country. (American folkways ser) 352p $3 Duell

917.67 Ozark mountains (W) 41-52073

"From an association of twenty-five years with the hill folks of the Ozarks, Mr. Rayburn contributes to our knowledge of the people of these 'folds of little green hills with occasional peaks protruding from them.' We have the history of development, the picture of the pioneers and today's population, 'people nurtured in solitude and unspoiled by the workaday commercial world.' From fictional sketches and actual description, we gather information concerning dialects, customs, superstitions, recreations, arts and crafts, religious beliefs and observances, and medical practices." (Scientific Bk Club R) Index.

Booklist 38:176 Ja 15 '42

"His book has the virtue of being the dissection of a 'residential,' and if it lacks full objectivity at times, it more than makes up for it in warmth of personal interest." Paul Wellman

+ Books p2 D 21 '41 850w

"Humorous as well as tragic stories of yesterday and today, often told in the vernacular. Author evidently knows and loves that section, Readable Americana." E. H. Crowell

+ Library J 66:999 N 15 '41 60w

"The present reviewer doesn't for a moment believe that the Ozarks are as picturesque and as Arcadian as Mr. Rayburn says they are. A good part of the Arcadia is in Mr. Rayburn's head. But that is the way with most Arcadias, and the one Mr. Rayburn describes is a pleasant one to visit. It is hereby recommended for a brief tour that will take one's mind off the war." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p1 Ja 18 '42 1000w

Scientific Bk Club R 12:4 D '41 170w

RAYFORD, JULIAN LEE. Cottonmouth [il. by the author]. 400p $2.75 Scribner

41-3538

Story of a boy's growing up in Mobile, Alabama, during and after the World War years.

Atlantic Ap '41 130w

"Mr. Rayford knows Mobile. Also he knows how to write Southern children's dialect, which is no small feat. Some of his contractions may prove baffling to the uninitiated; but his colloquialisms are correct and appropriate and his dialect mastered completely. Cottonmouth is a true, natural and outstanding regional story." Lawrence Olson

+ Books p6 F 23 '41 700w

New Repub 104:414 Mr 24 '41 30w

"Where the author of this striking first novel will go with his fiction is difficult to guess because of the obviously autobiographical nature of his first attempt, but his is a fresh young voice in our national chorus, and one that deserves to be listened to; he has put a community into a book, which is no mean feat of itself." H. B.

+ N Y Times p24 Mr 2 '41 700w

"As an integrated novel 'Cottonmouth' is no great shakes. It is a loosely fashioned autobiography, a series of episodes and anecdotes strung out at random, and jumping back and forth in time according to the whim of the author's memory. . . In Mr. Rayford's praise it should be said that his Paul, his family of seven brothers, his mother, Nanny the cook, his friends and neighbors are attractive, likable people. And the young hero is presented as a refreshingly average boy. . . These things are good, but if 'Cottonmouth' were no more than that it would be just another novel about another American kid growing up in another typically American family. But, happily, Mr. Rayford loves the town from which he came and he draws it with an artist's sense of form and color." Eugene Armfield

+ Sat R of Lit 23:12 Mr 29 '41 490w

RAYMOND, LOUISE, ed. A child's book of prayers; il. by Masha. 36p $1.50 Random house

264.1 Children's prayers 41-21352

Selection of prayers for children, and a few poems about prayer, illustrated with full page pictures in color.

"The pages are large, the pictures on a large scale and in pale pastel tints, touched with gold. They are of tiny angels and children of angelic sweetness and wide between the eyes, which are apparently edged with mascara. This will be a popular book." M. L. Becker

Books p8 S 21 '41 90w

Churchman 155:4 D 15 '41 60w

"The selection is broad in its range, but is more intended for Protestants than Catholics." H. L. Binsse

Commonweal 35:112 N 21 '41 20w

Reviewed by Warren Chappell

Horn BK M 17:455 N '41 10w

"A distinguished choice made with understanding and taste." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 D 21 '41 200w

RAYMOND, LOUISE. The oldest story in the world; il. by Marie Stern. unp $1.50 Little

41-24296

Retelling of the story of creation, illustrated in color, showing plants, animals, fruits and flowers. For the very young.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p9 N 2 '41 80w

Christian Century 58:1412 N 12 '41 20w

"Lovely pictures in vivid colors by Marie Stern decorate each page and illustrate this old story so beautifully that the book will charm a wide range of readers as well as the children under ten for whom it is apparently intended. Picture-book size, board covers. Should be very useful." Alice Wetherell

+ Library J 66:1049 D 1 '41 60w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell

N Y Times p10 D 21 '41 80w

RAYMOND, M. The man who got even with God; the life of an American Trappist [Brother Joachim]. (Religion and culture ser) 170p $2 Bruce pub.

B or 92 Joachim, Brother 41-8658

"The man who got even with God was a Trappist monk, a lay brother, and here is his life written by another Trappist whose pen keeps you enthralled because he gives you the portrait, or, to be more accurate, a series of portraits of an American who strove for spiritual perfection." Commonweal

"We are not prepared to find [a Trappist monk's] knowledge so expertly applied, his principles garbed so gayly. We begin to wonder if [each of them] has the imagination of a poet, the vocabulary of a high-ranking journalist, the dexterity of a playwright." Joseph McSorley

+ Cath World 153:502 J1 '41 250w

"Too many biographers of holy men write puffy and pudgy books, heavy with unctuous misinterpretations. Father Raymond's volume is clean, lean, honest, intelligent—and affectionate. For the curious, those who have never been able to learn or understand what the cloistered life means—how a Trappist lives, what he does, and how and why—this short book will give all the answers. And for what reason? Because it spells the Truth truthfully." D. S. Rankin

+ Commonweal 34:281 J1 11 '41 500w

REA, MARGARET LUCILE PAINE. Compare these dead! 271p $2 Doubleday

42-1113

Detective story.

"It's plain to see that the author knows all about department stores. For backward readers or purely visual types there's a diagram showing the layout of the premises. X marks the exact spot where the first corpse landed kerplunk." Will Cuppy

Books p22 D 14 '41 120w

"There are so many curious incidents that it is difficult to guess which of them are significant and which are not. Had the plot been simplified just a little the story would have been much better. As it is, the complications make one's head swim." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p38 D 7 '41 190w

"Light and compact, in spite of its intricate plot."

+ New Yorker 17:108 N 29 '41 40w

"Liberal education in way stores snoop on rivals. Plot gets out of control at times. Finale exciting. Passable."

Sat R of Lit 24:24 N 22 '41 40w

REA, MARGARET LUCILE PAINE. Curtain for crime. 269p $2 Doubleday

41-5880

Detective story.

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p8 Ap 12 '41 30w

"The real detective work is done by a member of the regular police force who knows what to do with the various clues that are handed to him from time to time. The story is well worked out and is less confused than one would expect with so many characters involved." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p18 Ap 6 '41 160w

"Business and private affairs of store workers convincingly ventilated, and breezy characterizations brighten bleakly motivated and capably handled plot."

+ Sat R of Lit 23:20 Ap 12 '41 40w

Time 37:100 My 5 '41 20w

READ, JAMES MORGAN. Atrocity propaganda, 1914-1919; pub. for the Univ. of Louisville. 319p $3.50 Yale univ. press

940.488 European war, 1914-1918—Propaganda. European war, 1914-1918—Atrocities 41-24133

A documented analysis of the atrocity stories of all the belligerents and the part they played in the first World war. Partial contents: Motives and methods; Manufactured goods; French denunciation; Belgian deportations; English condemnation; Notorious cases. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by S. B. Barnes

Christian Century 59:17 Ja 7 '42 700w

"A good job, and makes interesting reading."

R. S. Alvarez

+ Library J 66:903 O 15 '41 100w

"Mr. Read has presented an excellent and comprehensive summary of the lines of approach adopted by all parties during the last world war." Eileen Holding

+ New Repub 105:868 D 22 '41 800w

REARDON, JOSEPH. The Cerro lobo. 256p $2 Phoenix

41-19649

Western story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p22 D 14 '41 60w

"A rapid yarn skillfully written." G. H. Harris

+ N Y Times p40 N 9 '41 190w

RECK, FRANKLIN MERING. Automobiles from start to finish. rev ed 100p il maps $2 Crowell

629.2 Automobiles (W) 41-51819

Revised edition of a photographic account of motor vehicles, which first appeared in 1935 (Book Review Digest, 1935). The present edition has an added chapter on automobiles in war.

Booklist 37:497 Je 15 '41

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p6 My 25 '41 140w

Reviewed by Josephine Smith

Library J 66:523 Je 1 '41 60w

RECK, FRANKLIN MERING, and RECK, MRS ANNA CLAIRE (YUNGCLAS). Power from start to finish. 154p $2 Crowell

620.9 Power (mechanics). Mechanical engineering (W) 41-51838

Illustrated outline of the discovery and development of the earth's fuels and the machines which they run—coal, oil, water power; and of the steam engine and electricity. For fifth and sixth grades. Index.

Booklist 37:551 J1 15 '41

"If anything just like this has already been done for children I have not seen it; at any rate, it could scarcely have been done better for beginners in the teens than now." M. L. Becker

+ Books p5 Je 29 '41 240w

"Any person over ten years old ought to be able to understand most of it, but there is a good deal in it that many intelligent adults do not know."

+ Christian Century 58:833 Je 25 '41 50w

Reviewed by Emily Hutson

Library J 66:621 J1 '41 140w

"By its clearly written text, well-printed page and suitable design this book deals comprehensively with mechanical power. An arresting cover will catch boys' eyes and lead them to the many excellent illustrations, consisting of old prints, modern photographs, diagrams and interpretive sketches." I. S.

+ N Y Times p7 N 2 '41 240w

Wis Lib Bul 37:152 O '41

REDDAWAY, WILLIAM FIDDIAN, ed. See Cambridge history of Poland

REDFIELD, ROBERT. The folk culture of Yucatan. 416p il $3.50 Univ. of Chicago press

917.26 Yucatan. Mayas 41-15380

Studies of four communities of various sizes in Yucatan. Two types of investigation were carried out; one in the folk-culture of Yucatan, and the other in the concepts and general ideas of the nature of society in this section of Central America. The investigation was under the auspices of the Carnegie Institute of Washington. Glossary, references, and index.

"Exemplary is Redfield's spirit of inquiry. Judicious doubt and a healthy skepticism pervade the study. At times it seems as though the author, perplexed in the face of alternative explanations, is begging the reader for assistance. Partisans of particularistic causes will be keenly disappointed in Redfield's failure to create mutually exclusive dichotomies where he can perceive only complementary points of view. . . The University of Chicago Press is to be commended for an attractive book. It is neatly printed, well indexed, and illustrated with remarkable camera portraits. . . Its usefulness is enhanced by a glossary of Spanish and Mayan terms, a bibliography, and supplementary notes. Welcome, too, is Redfield's return to the now almost obsolete practice of inserting chapter abstracts in the table of contents." Harry Alpert

+ Am Soc R 6:896 D '41 1450w

"This study of the customs of primitive and not so primitive peoples in Yucatan will very probably stand as a landmark, a point of reference, in social anthropology. It is not merely another penetrating and sympathetic picture of a people with customs unfamiliar to us. It is a systematic effort to bring the findings of a trained anthropologist in the field of Maya-Spanish culture to bear on the general problem of social and cultural change. . . In no sense a popularization, the book will probably be rated a difficult one by those who are not already familiar with Dr. Redfield's ideas. By others it will be rated as a welcome and convenient exposition of the illuminating and very usable theoretical system which was tentatively formulated in 1930 with the publication of Tepoztlan, and which has undergone so much development and enrichment since." E. H. Spicer

+ Ann Am Acad 219:201 Ja '42 700w

Booklist 38:34 O 1 '41

"Unfortunately, the comparative method and the double objective lead to a good deal of repetition and some dispersion of interest and no one community can be pictured with the roundness and depth and satisfying completeness of the author's earlier study of Tepoztlan. This deficiency may in part or in whole be made up by the special studies of each of the separate communities which are still to appear." B. D. Wolfe

Books p29 O 5 '41 650w

Christian Century 58:1473 N 26 '41 240w

Reviewed by Ralph Bates

Nation 153:259 S 20 '41 300w

"Dr. Redfield's book is a very admirable one. . . The portrait-studies . . . are altogether superb. This book, no less than Mr. Dame's lighter-toned volume, should go with every visitor to Yucatan. Books such as these two, different though they are from one another, will do much to lessen the prevailing ignorance among ourselves concerning the region and the folk described." P. A. Means

+ N Y Times p11 S 28 '41 700w

REED, PRENTISS B. Fire insurance underwriting. 380p $4 McGraw

368.1 Insurance, Fire 40-10176

"The book covers company organization, production of business, the writing and endorsing of policies, adjustment and payment of losses, re-insurance, selection, retention and distribution of offerings. There are also 50 pages of appendices containing, among other data, the text of the proposed revision of the New York Standard Fire Insurance Policy. Probably the most significant chapters in the book are the ones entitled 'Causes and Effects of Fire' and 'Class and Risk.'" (Management R) Index.

Reviewed by Alfred Manes

Ann Am Acad 213:223 Ja '41 350w

"The fire insurance fraternity has waited a long time for someone to do just what the author has done in this book. Now that the work is available, it should be widely read." C. S. Toole

+ Management R 30:112 Mr '41 500w

REED, THOMAS HARRISON. Municipal management. 665p maps $4 McGraw

352 Municipal government—U.S. 41-12894

Treatise on management of local functions in which the author "is concerned only incidentally with the subject matter of the various professional techniques employed in the service of local government and confines himself chiefly to the problems of administration apart from those relating to municipal housekeeping". . . The book is divided into five parts. The first is introductory; the second deals with Basic Administrative Relationships; the third with Financial Management; the fourth with Other Staff Activities; and the last with Management of Operating Services. The first hundred pages might be entitled 'Politics and Management.'" (Ann Am Acad) Selected references. Index.

"A discursive and stimulating treatise." H. G. Hodges

+ Ann Am Acad 218:221 N '41 800w

Booklist 38:107 D 1 '41

"Aspirants to, or occupiers of, the role of city manager, public works director, or even lesser administrative posts in local governments, will want this book on their reference shelf once they have seen it. Practical and concise, it covers every phase of public administration. . . The author, Thomas H. Reed, is a seasoned participant in municipal politics, an experienced city executive and a technical consultant to many local governments. Wise in the ways of public administration, he imparts this wisdom in the manner of a kindly counselor."

+ Eng N 127:75 Ag 28 '41 160w

REED, TRUMBULL. Little gold lamp. 315p
$1.50 Wilde

41-21722

The gold lamp is the emblem of an honor society, awarded by the California Scholarship Federation. This story is about a group of high school youngsters, six girls and eight boys, composing the staff of a high school paper in a California town. They work, and play, solve the mystery of the lost gold lamp pin, and get out their paper in good time. For high school boys and girls.

"There are other better-written books for young people; the chief value of this would be the ideals set forth, the setting, and its possibilities as remedial reading for older boys and girls or as an antidote for the western and love story rut. Read before purchase." Emily Hutson

Library J 66:1050 D 1 '41 120w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 28 '41 60w

REEDER, WARD GLEN. The fundamentals of public school administration. rev and enl ed 798p il maps $3.75 Macmillan

371.2 School administration and organization
41-6707

"Revision of a work published in 1930 under the same title, discussing, as in the former volume, the urgent and recurring problems encountered in the administration of a local school system, whether the system be rural or urban, small or large. A manual of theory and practice, chiefly for the superintendent and the board of education, emphasizing both the why and the how." (School & Society) Chapter bibliographies. Index.

Booklist 37:495 Je 15 '41

"One very praiseworthy change in the organization of the revised edition is the inclusion of the administration of safety education along with the administration of health. The inclusion of the administration of health in a basic book in administration has been accepted as standard practice for some time; and in light of the increasing importance of safety, as well as its immediate association with the community at large, inclusion of a treatment of the administration of safety education seems appropriate. The new chapter on pupil transportation is an excellent one and should prove extremely helpful in the formulation of sound and efficient programs for transporting pupils. The chapter on the administration of pupil guidance seems hardly adequate for the subject and scarcely reaches the level of the other new topics. . . The physical makeup of the book is far more attractive than that of the original edition. The vividness and the clarity of the illustrative material are evidence of its value to the text. The questions and the suggestions for discussion found at the end of each chapter are stimulating and sound.

The selected references which appear at the close of each chapter reflect discrimination and study. The author is to be congratulated on having made a good book considerably better." J. G. Fowlkes

+ — El School J 42:150 O '41 850w

School & Society 53:520 Ap 19 '41 60w

REES, JOHN LLEWELYN. See Rhys, J. L.

REES, ROSEMARY FRANCES. Sackcloth for Susan. 256p $2 Arcadia [7s 6d Chapman]

"Life in the sheep country of [New Zealand] is reflected with color and with what appears to be first-hand acquaintance in 'Sackcloth for Susan.' The heroine is a headstrong girl who knows what she wants and has the courage of her convictions. Her father tries to break her spirit, but she has just as much iron in her blood as he has. She runs away from home to be an actress and discovers that there is no glamour in one-night stands. When she falls in love with a man who has a grudge against her father she is able to settle the parental score with magnanimity and in true feminine fashion." Books

Booklist 38:160 Ja 1 '42

"The novel is written with warmth and quiet humor." Lisle Bell

+ Books p10 Jl 6 '41 110w

Reviewed by Harold Brighthouse

Manchester Guardian p3 My 2 '41 20w

"Miss Rees writes easily and amusingly and she introduces a refreshing breath of the lovely New Zealand country and its farming occupations into this original little love story."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p229 My 10 '41 80w

REESE, GUSTAVE. Music in the middle ages. 502p il $5 Norton

780.9 Music, Medieval 41-557

For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

"There are a good many gaps in our knowledge of medieval music. To fill these represents a gratifying task for the growing field of musicology in this country; toward this end Mr. Reese has given a most notable impetus." Erich Heritzmann

+ Am Hist R 46:972 Jl '41 290w

Booklist 37:321 Mr 15 '41

"Well known to musicians as the associate editor of 'The Musical Quarterly,' Gustave Reese has not tried to explore an original subject or to prove a pet theory. Instead he very impartially reports each side of the theories of others, and carefully annotates the facts on all known aspects of his subject. The result is a tightly compressed set of 500 pages—pages which cannot be read for casual enjoyment because of their intensive detail, but pages which should serve as a veritable Bible for students of medieval music." Leonard Ellinwood

+ Books p12 S 28 '41 410w

"As a writer and a scholar, Mr. Reese possesses a rare combination of qualities: complete knowledge of facts and materials pertaining to his subject, and the ability to present these facts in logical categories, free from a popularizing attitude that plagues the writings of even the best scholars. . . For all its wealth and well-sifted information, Mr. Reese's book is but an introduction to an immensely involved subject. The student who desires to explore further in medieval music will find in Mr. Reese's book an exhaustive bibliography, which lists not only the standard collections and major treatises in several languages, but also magazine articles, and papers read at the meetings of learned societies." Nicolas Slonimsky

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ap 5 '41 600w

REESE, GUSTAVE—Continued

"In this monumental work Mr. Reese . . . brings [a] double spirit to the whole of his wide range. There are chapters on the music of antiquity and of the Christian cultures of the East. The one on ancient Greek music deserves particular mention for the light it throws on as obscure and difficult a subject as the field of music affords. Especially valuable also is the chapter on the polyphony of the British Isles, as well as the sections descriptive of the musical instruments of antiquity and of the middle ages. It is certain that the present work will take its place among the books that cannot be dispensed with on any reference shelf, public or private, which pretends to completeness of information on musical history and appreciation." A. P. Bragers

+ Commonweal 33:450 F 21 '41 400w

"A work very badly needed and very well carried out." Dom Anselm Hughes, O.S.B.

+ N Y Times p29 Mr 2 '41 850w

"Mr. Reese's aim is eminently practical, but he never sacrifices the fruits of a precise scholarship in order to make the subject attractive to the tiro. The book is stiff reading even to those who come to it with a considerable background of previous knowledge. Its comprehensiveness denotes a severe compression, and the student or the teacher who really proposes to take the matter seriously will find that each chapter can be made the basis of a course of study which can be extended over a considerable period of time. Undoubtedly it should be regarded as a foundational text book in every university course, but it should also attract the attention of a wide circle of general readers."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p545 N 1 '41 800w

REEVES, MRS ELIZABETH. House for Emily.

309p $2.50 Farrar

41-1945

A simple, quiet story of an American wife and mother, who lived for her family, but without becoming completely absorbed to the exclusion of outside interests. Emily married young, only a few months out of college, and went to Richmond where John was a rising young lawyer. All the years when the children were growing up, John was planning the house for Emily; only a few months after it was built John died. One by one the four children found their places in life. The house was to be sold. But it had served its purpose; it was the family citadel; it had tided them over to complete adjustment to life.

"The basic theme of the sheltered wife and mother has itself no great novelty, to be sure; but there is compassion and subtlety in this story which Elizabeth Reeves has built upon that theme. 'A House for Emily' has the simplicity of few strokes, light but significant. Never was a domestic novel less 'over-furnished' than this one. . . The writing from start to finish is fresh and spare." John Patton

+ Books p10 Ap 6 '41 440w

"There's something strange about the pattern of this book. It kept me on my toes. It is a first novel of charm and capable technique, but it wasn't that. It is the history of a normal family who acted and were like human beings of their class and time." Margaret Widdemer

+ N Y Times p26 Ap 6 '41 650w

"A readable account of a family with a little too much mother."

New Yorker 17:86 Ap 12 '41 30w

"The story is tenuous, but Mrs. Reeves writes with some insight, and her people are not unreal. It is, however, difficult to become interested in a book which is essentially negative and which never becomes strongly definite or conclusive. There is, strictly speaking, never any conflict for the heroine. She is simply pushed out into life like a fledgling from the nest. The pattern is a shadow flung thinly over the stuff of the tale; it is not woven in, and cannot be clearly seen." Currie Cabot

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:7 Ag 16 '41 180w

REEVES, MRS ELIZABETH. Then again June.

300p $2.50 Farrar

41-22073

A triangle love affair, involving one dreamy young girl and two men, one of them a vague youth, the other a rising young business man. The girl's foster father, a gentle wanderer in the world of the past, has a hand in solving the tangle.

"The odd triangle is deftly handled, and the outcome is artistically and psychologically satisfying. Even Simon approves the way things work out, and that is very important to every one concerned, including the readers of this delicately told story. In his gentle and unobtrusive fashion, Simon is the real hero of the tale." George Conrad

+ Books p16 N 23 '41 280w

"The author has a style of writing which, one suspects from the uneven tenor of this book, flows or refuses to flow according to her mood. But she has cultivated an observant eye which gives life to her characterizations and color to her descriptions, and she has a feeling for the loneliness back of the personalities of people. All these qualities arouse one's interest in her." Margaret Donaldson

+ N Y Times p32 N 23 '41 650w

— Sat R of Lit 25:8 Ja 10 '42 220w

REEVES, ROBERT. No love lost.

282p $2 Holt

41-11502

Detective story.

"The solution doesn't matter much. It's the 'swift-paced action' that you will enjoy—or not." Kay Irvin

N Y Times p24 S 21 '41 190w

Sat R of Lit 24:18 S 20 '41 40w

Spring'd Republican p7e O 26 '41 130w

REGLI, ADOLPH C. Rubber's Goodyear; the story of a man's perseverance; il. by George Annand.

248p $2.50 Messner

B or 92 Goodyear, Charles—Juvenile literature, Rubber industry and trade 41-16131

"This is an account of a man's persistent belief in the possibility of vulcanizing rubber successfully. In the face of bankruptcy, ill health, prison and repeated failure, Charles Goodyear maintained his faith in his invention and in the utility of rubber. One of his court trials is famous because of the prosecution of the case by Daniel Webster. It is a dramatic account of what the author calls one of those 'neglected Americans,' and, in addition, is also a splendid account of an American industry." (Wis Lib Bul) For high school age. Bibliography.

Booklist 38:136 D 15 '41

"Recommended for junior and senior high school students." Emily Hutson

+ Library J 66:799 S 15 '41 140w

Wis Lib Bul 37:161 O '41

REID, CHARLES FREDERICK. Education in the territories and outlying possessions of the United States; with a foreword by I. L. Kandel.

593p $3.85 Teachers college

379.73 Education—U.S. U.S.—Territories 41-8345

"Outlining the history of American interest in Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, Virgin Islands, American Samoa, Guam and the Canal Zone this volume discusses the races, cultures and governments and the social, economic and political conditions prevailing in these territories and possessions. It points out how complex forces have influenced—directly and indirectly—the public and private school systems. A Ph.D. dissertation with a Foreword by I. L. Kandel." (School & Society) Bibliography. Indexes.

"A remarkably competent and comprehensive survey and analysis. The value of each chapter is enhanced by sections covering the historical background, population, social and economic organization, and government and political status of each of the territories and possessions."

+ Am Econ R 31:435 Je '41 80w

"Students of comparative education will read with interest and profit the latest contribution of Charles F. Reid. . . . On the whole the book is very readable. Pertinent findings and recommendations are given. One hundred and thirty-nine tables are included. However, the reader will regret that the book contains no maps for the seven areas under discussion."

E. K. Hillbrand

+ El School J 42:72 S '41 900w

School & Society 53:488 Ap 12 '41 70w

Social Studies 32:288 O '41 20w

REIK, THEODOR. From thirty years with Freud; tr. by Richard Winston. 241p $2.50 Farrar

131.3462 Freud, Sigmund. Psychoanalysis 40-35636

The first part of this book contains memories and reminiscences of Freud written by one who was for many years a friend and disciple. In addition the book contains a group of essays on some of Freud's writings, and a second group of essays on "diverse subjects" not directly dealing with Freud.

Reviewed by Lorine Pruette

Books p20 F 16 '41 800w

"The translator of the book did Reik a disservice. Reik is not as obscure as some awkward turns of phrase would suggest. One cannot call Dostoevski a 'poet' nor very well denote obscure phenomena as 'dark'; nor do such expressions as 'psychic perception' mean what Reik intends to say. As a document the book has interest, since it does reflect the psychological difficulties which the uprooted European scientists of today have to meet."

Gregory Zilboorg, M.D.

+ — Nation 152:416 Ap 5 '41 240w

New Yorker 16:91 N 30 '40 30w

Pratt p20 spring '41

"We owe Dr. Reik a debt for putting down in the first part of his book, written shortly after Professor Freud's death, those recollections, which were still warm, of Freud as a person, including a somewhat gossipy account of his last visit to Freud. Dr. Reik's memories of Freud are interesting as records, and may some day be of importance in a definitive study of Professor Freud as a man; no final assessment is attempted." B. D. Lewin, M.D.

+ Sat R of Lit 23:8 F 22 '41 500w

"In this series of letters, essays, and comments, Reik endeavors to convey something of his own intimate veneration of Freud to the lay reader. The book lacks Freud's simplicity, his courage and his modesty, but it breathes the same sincerity, honesty and scientific curiosity. What all of Freud's admirers will welcome most is that it sets forth sympathetically and accurately certain of Freud's ideas and attitudes." Karl Menninger

+ Survey G 30:310 My '41 350w

REILLY, MRS HELEN (KIERAN). Mourned on Sunday. 297p $2 Random house 41-5223

Detective story.

Booklist 37:388 Ap 15 '41

"As ever, McKee's performance is sure-fire and full of brilliant strokes as he solves two killings and uncovers a diabolical plot. Mrs. Reilly has given him plenty of elbow room. It's a Grade A offering." Will Cuppy

+ Books p13 Mr 16 '41 160w

Boston Transcript p3 Mr 29 '41 50w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p24 Mr 23 '41 160w

"A little stilted, but good enough if you are a Reilly devotee."

New Yorker 17:87 Mr 22 '41 30w

"Top-flight."

+ Sat R of Lit 23:20 Mr 15 '41 40w

REILLY, MRS HELEN (KIERAN). Three women in black. 271p $2 Random house 41-22074

Detective story.

Booklist 38:132 D 15 '41

"McKee's familiarity with magic gives him a head start on a case that brings out some of his smoothest licks. This concludes in a hullabaloo of high-pressure romance in plot and person. Suitable for Tom, Dick and Mary, or any one else in need of a swift mystery kick. Put it on your list." Will Cuppy

+ Books p26 O 26 '41 200w

"Into the fabric of this baffling murder mystery Helen Reilly has woven a love story which adds to the puzzlement without materially slowing down the narrative. The plotting and the workmanship are fully up to the standard that Mrs. Reilly has set for herself in her earlier books." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p18 O 26 '41 190w

"This is [Mrs] Reilly's best mystery and is recommended especially to the ladies."

+ New Yorker 17:92 O 25 '41 60w

"Detective skill of Center Street star, and associates Todhunter and Fernandez, fully revealed in highly-strung and scientifically elucidated tale. Top drawer."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:18 O 25 '41 40w

REIMANN, GUENTER. The myth of the total state; Europe's last bid for world rule; with an introd. critique by Max Lerner. 284p $2.75 Morrow

321.6 Totalitarianism. Economic policy. Imperialism. Germany—Nazi movement

41-15562

"In this résumé of economic events in Europe since the beginning of the century, the author suggests that the former German investing classes are hoping for a stable economy in Hitler's New Order. They won't get it, he says, because the Nazi methods of exploiting 'the colonial hinterland,' plus the demands of the military machine, literally eat up the available resources and call for continual fresh conquests. Includes a brief comparison of the Russian and German setups." New Yorker

"This is an immensely deep-furrowing analysis of the nature and the origins of the catastrophic monopoly state and totalitarian imperialism. Not being a journalistic broadside against the Nazi state, cheaply moralizing, but making strenuous demands on conscientious thought, the book is important for its social analysis and perspective. Having a due regard for the economics of power and its converse, it superbly analyzes both the old and the new aristocracies. . . . A great abstention from intellectual asceticism would have enabled the author to sketch the possible immediate future of the myth of the total state without nullifying his scientific ideal." Herman Hausheer

+ — Ann Am Acad 219:179 Ja '42 500w

Booklist 38:107 D 1 '41

"Mr. Reimann's book abounds in interesting and often brilliant epigrams, sudden flashes of insight and sharp observations. Some of its many new ideas are profound, all of them stimulating and provocative; it is for these that the book should be read. . . Unfortunately, Mr. Reimann often fails to see that his own new ideas contradict his central thesis. This reviewer suspects that Mr. Reimann has fallen victim to his own Marxism." P. F. Drucker

REIMANN, GUENTER—Continued

+ — Books p12 Ja 4 '42 600w

Christian Science Monitor p18 D 2 '41 550w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:373 Ja '42 40w

"This is a book for today, and for those who wish to think beyond tomorrow too. It is hard-headed; although the chapter on Russia seems to me not only an interruption of the analysis, but weak as well. Some wishful thinking creeps in at the end, and I question Reimann's confident belief that the rivalries of the German elite groups cannot be resolved in time. But such demurrers are minor to a study of arresting strength. If a great age in social analysis is in the making, Reimann's book will have an important place in it." J. R. Walsh

+ — New Repub 105:594 N 3 '41 1500w

"Shrewd 'introductory critique' by Max Lerner."

New Yorker 17:75 S 13 '41 100w

"[The] assumption that Hitlerism cannot unify the world and must destroy itself by virtue of economic imperatives and paradoxes beyond its control is not only dubious as fact but is dangerous as prophecy, for it promotes a false confidence in the future on the part of foes of the Nazis. Yet all who seek to comprehend the trends and forces of our time will read this work with profit. It is a useful corrective to Burnham's 'Managerial Revolution'. . . [Mr. Reimann's] chapters are more provocative than satisfying. These are merits as real as they are rare. One can only hope that he will carry this analysis further, subject it to more rigorous criticism and verification, and develop it into a sharper weapon of social prognosis for the intellectual arsenal of democracy." F. L. Schuman

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:17 O 11 '41 600w

REINER, ANNA, pseud. The coward heart [Eng title: Café du Dôme]; tr. from the German by Trevor and Phyllis Blewitt. 438p $2.50 Knopf [9s Hamilton, H]

41-11687

A story of political refugees leading hunted lives in Paris just before the war. As the story opens Nadia Schumacher is waiting for word of her husband, Peter, who is in a German concentration camp. Peter, mysteriously, gets out of Germany and reaches Paris but Nadia finds him changed and gradually as the months pass she becomes aware of the terrible truth. At the end she helps him to escape from Paris but refuses to go with him.

Reviewed by R. M. Gay
Atlantic S '41 200w

"So quickly have events moved since the writing of 'The Coward Heart' that already it is dated. No longer is Paris a sanctuary for the driven. And what bizarre creatures are today calling for drinks at the Dôme? But as a story of people strangled in a net of political dictatorship, it is an interesting contribution to the literature of a period. A refugee herself, Miss Reiner writes with unmistakable integrity." Rose Feld

+ — Books p3 Jl 20 '41 480w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 23 '41 500w

Reviewed by Margaret Winning
Library J 66:615 Jl '41 80w

Reviewed by Harold Brighouse
Manchester Guardian p3 Je 27 '41 150w

"It had to be more than a well-planned novel to carry off such an avalanche of tragic wretchedness, particularly such pitifully invertebrate villainy as Peter's. . . It had to be more than beautifully written and well translated. It had, in addition, so to blaze with essential truth that the pure passion which is its motive force would carry the reader on a tidal wave of strong emotion. It is—and it does—all this." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p7 Jl 20 '41 800w

"These people, having lost their way of life, are really dead, though the author tries very hard to endow some of them with hope and a future."

New Yorker 17:54 Jl 26 '41 60w

"It is unfortunate that Miss Reiner has chosen such a melodramatic story to make her book exciting when evidently she could have done without it. There is subtlety in her descriptions of life in Paris before the war; the characters who fill the background of her novel—the bohemians of yesterday in the cafés of Montparnasse, the refugees from Nazi Germany whose lives the author intimately knows—are drawn with sensitivity and have their share of human warmth. But this picture of delicate colors is somehow shattered by the melodramatic effects of the story," Klaus Lambrecht

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:14 Jl 26 '41 450w

Reviewed by John Hampson
Spec 167:20 Jl 4 '41 270w

"One hesitates to use superlatives. But this is fine writing, fine living and a challenge to the reader's own courage, to his sense of humane and spiritual values."

+ Springfield Republican p7e Jl 27 '41 750w

"The author enters with quick imaginative sympathy into the refugee state of mind, its restlessness, its alternations of hope and apathy, and seldom spills emotion unnecessarily. Yet 'Café du Dôme' live and revealing though it is, should have been a better novel. For one thing it is put together in too free and haphazard a fashion; the story tends to sprawl with irrelevancies of one sort or another, with fortuitous little dramas of the street or café and conventional Russian outpourings of soul. For another thing far too much of the Montparnasse of foreign fiction, a wilderness of Period-sodden anges cocottes and the like, is tacked on to the Montparnasse of refugee fact. And for a third thing the author rarely seems able to dissemble her love for the heroine of the story, the beautiful Nadia Schumacher."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p297 Je 21 '41 950w

REINER, MAX, pseud. See Caldwell, J. T.

RELIGIONS of democracy; Judaism, Catholicism, Protestantism in creed and life, by Louis Finkelstein, J. Elliot Ross and William Adams Brown. 250p $2 Devin-Adair

277.3 U.S.—Religion. Jews—Religion. Roman Catholic church. Protestantism

41-6146

"In [these] pages, without rancor, without underestimating the differences that distinguish their respective faiths, three authors,—Jewish, Catholic and Protestant—present a brief statement of the things in which they believe. Although not offered as such, these chapters are presumably supplementary to the good-will tour in which a rabbi, a priest and a minister, traveling under the auspices of the National Conference of Christians and Jews, undertook to explain away misunderstanding and eliminate prejudices which divide Americans of different religious groups from one another." Cath World

Reviewed by F. D. Cohalan
America 65:357 Jl 5 '41 370w
Booklist 37:431 My 15 '41

+ Cath World 153:119 Ap '41 1000w

Christian Century 58:364 Mr 12 '41 170w

"This is a discussion of how the three religions, Judaism, Catholicism and Protestantism get along so well together in this our America. Rabbi Finkelstein's is the best of the three essays, written exceedingly well. . . . Father Ross writes about Roman Catholicism in a manner that is remarkably free from scholasticism. . . . The last essay, on Protestantism, is the poorest of the lot." A. L. Byron-Curtiss

+ — Churchman 155:18 S 15 '41 230w
Cleveland Open Shelf p15 J1 '41

"There are many who are genuinely, and oftentimes rabidly, convinced that in the very tenets of some faith there is danger to the American system of government. Were 'The Religions of Democracy' to be read by people in that class, the book's publication would be an extraordinarily important event. It remains so nevertheless for the three proponents have lucidly and with mastery summarized not only what is the core of their coreligionists' religious beliefs and practices but their approach as well to life in all its aspects. It is refreshing, too, that none of the authors has overlooked the fact that he must deal to a certain extent with the ideal observance of religion, and each is frank in stating that even among his own group the sheep-goat division must be recognized." J. G. Brunini

+ Commonweal 33:576 Mr 28 '41 800w

"The volume is stimulating, informing and continuously readable. While planned for the general reader, a bibliography is included for those who desire to go deeper into the subject." Max Eisen

+ N Y Times p4 Je 1 '41 750w

Spring'd Republican p8 J1 15 '41 500w

REMARQUE, ERICH MARIA. Flotsam; tr. from the German by Denver Lindley. 436p $2.50 Little

(W) 41-51678

This new novel by the author of All Quiet on the Western Front (Book Review Digest, 1929), tells a story of three German refugees hounded by the police from one country to another in Europe.

"The minor characters are portrayed with the distinctness and also the vivacity, of Dickens, the major ones with the terrible intensity of Dostoevski. Singly, their stories scald the heart; together and cumulatively, they steel it anew against the monstrous concepts of racialism and nationalism that can maintain themselves only by the mass infliction of cruelties and horrors. It is to the solidarity of implacably steeled hearts that, in the end, Hitlerism will have to answer. Such a book as Flotsam can but speed the day of reckoning. In its pages all the disinterested compassion in the world is manufactured into a high explosive." Wilson Follett

+ Atlantic Je '41 300w

Booklist 37:388 Ap 15 '41

Bookmark 2:15 My '41

"If you want comfort from 'Flotsam' you will have to draw it from the spectacle of human fortitude in the face of hopelessness. Its shadows are too rarely relieved; the humor, the pathetic reprisals—as when Steiner swindles a Nazi—the moments of rest are matches lit on a stormy night. Sometimes Remarque is almost casual. He has watched all this for a long time and he seems to say, nothing can be stronger than the simple details. The result is a wintry starkness that drives some scenes home with the strength of chisel strokes but produces others that seem dry and static." Milton Rugoff

+ — Books p1 Ap 20 '41 1000w

"'Flotsam' is not a well integrated book, and some of the scenes are hardly relevant enough to warrant inclusion. . . . As a story, it cannot rank with 'Escape' in tight excitement. It is loosely constructed, the dialogue is a little flat (this may be a fault of translation). A mechanized war is not great heroic material either. . . . Yet there are two or three passages of tremendous and magnificent beauty." Olga Owens

+ — Boston Transcript p1 Ap 26 '41 850w

"The book's outstanding feature, aside from Mr. Remarque's marvelous command of words, is its total lack of sentimentality. The vivid writing and excellently drawn characters make lively and fascinating reading. The detail and authority of Mr. Remarque's writing show the story to be an accurate representation of reality." G. E. Shieler, Jr.

+ Churchman 155:19 My 1 '41 110w

"The character drawing is good; the story moves quickly and ends happily with Kern and his beloved escaping to Mexico." Emma Olcott

+ Library J 66:357 Ap 15 '41 50w

Reviewed by Wilfrid Gibson

Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 1 '41 130w

"In a story of this kind it is perhaps not easy to decide what is, and what is not, sentimentality or melodrama. The life of these people is charged with emotions and cluttered with events that we cannot judge in the light of normal experience, that indeed represent the breakdown of normal experience. Yet, granting all that, 'Flotsam' still seems fictional and unconvincing. It makes very good reading, and the plight of its characters comes through vividly enough. But the characters themselves seem conventionally conceived and sentimentally handled. For another thing, the reader is somehow kept more interested in what is happening than in whom it is happening to—a pretty dead give-away that Remarque has let his story count for more than his theme." Louis Kronenberger

+ — Nation 152:533 My 3 '41 360w

"'Flotsam' was serialized and made into a movie before its publication as a book. Perhaps this accounts for much of the melodrama; in fact, one has the feeling that Mr. Remarque might very well have written the great novel which the powerful and tragic theme suggests, had he not subjected himself to the rules of the screen." Klaus Lambrecht

+ — New Repub 104:768 Je 2 '41 420w

"There has been a spate of refugee literature which has been so far marked by defects rather than virtues, by lack of proportion and emotionalism more than anything else. Purged of the personal tone that made so many books on this subject as disagreeable as sympathy-cadging hard-luck stories, Flotsam stands up as a hard and vivid account of one of the most loathsome features of our time, the twentieth-century invention of something worse than slavery—a limbo for living people." Anthony West

+ New Statesman & Nation 22:116 Ag 2 '41 320w

"One wishes that Steiner's story had dominated the book, for, though it is barely silhouetted and though it is tragic in its outcome, it has a quality of powerful emotional conflict that is absent in Kern's story. . . . There is grandeur and a passion in these brief episodes that is worthy of Remarque at his best." Harold Strauss

+ — N Y Times p1 Ap 20 '41 950w

"Several beautiful and affecting chapters in Erich Maria Remarque's 'Flotsam' do not suffice to make it worthy of the author of 'All Quiet on the Western Front' and 'The Road Back.' I suppose it is one of those novels you should read for the good of your soul. There are certainly things in it to wring the most curmudgeonly heart. Yet, with all this, it seems less a novel about three-dimensional human beings than a series of scenes depicting the life of a nation." Clifton Fadiman

+ — New Yorker 17:82 Ap 26 '41 700w

Pratt p11 autumn '41

"That Remarque is a skillful and powerful writer has been demonstrated often, and in 'Flotsam' it is demonstrated again. Yet one reviewer cannot escape the conclusion that the parts of 'Flotsam,' or some of them, are greater than the whole. . . . Remarque has, I think, created a fictional pattern that exhibits more

REMARQUE, E. M.—Continued
artifice than art, and owes much to cinematic technique. . . Repetition, approaching monotony, dulls the reader's sensitivity, diminishes the intensity of his response on successive occasions. There can be no quarrel with the happy ending that is finally provided for the young couple, for life itself often provides happy endings. And Steiner's end is as fine and moving as it is inevitable. But one may suggest that the love story which figures so largely in 'Flotsam' would have been more convincing and more stirring if all fleshly elements had not been so zealously excluded from its telling." B. R. Redman

+ — Sat R of Lit 23:5 Ap 26 '41 900w

"The theme is too great for the writer; a Defoe, a Flaubert, a Dostoevsky would do it justice; it is for its documentary value rather than its narrative that one recommends it." John Hampson

Spec 167:114 Ag 1 '41 500w

"There are many passages of tenderness, a deep feeling for beauty and a sincere pity for these helpless wanderers, who have harmed no one, and only want a chance to live a peaceful life somewhere—to be left alone. The book may be called propaganda, as any book written today about the different phases of the war turmoil must be propaganda. But it is also a great book of drama, with no hysteria." M. D.

+ Springfield Republican p7e Ap 20 '41 1200w

"The theme of Flotsam is one of the most massive, intimate and terrible derangements of human living within human memory. Remarque, able as he is, is not fully equal to it; perhaps no human talent could be. Besides, Flotsam has some lyric flights that droop in mid-air; some touches of sentimental sentimentousness; some comedy too national quite to cross a border; one or two bits almost of cheapness. But Remarque, like Hemingway, has the rare ability to produce writing which is both a genuine work of art and popular; and to embody a generation. For that reason Flotsam is a deeply moving story that makes painfully clear, to readers who have forgotten or never understood, the real meaning of the words exile, emigré, refugee."

+ — Time 37:91 Ap 28 '41 550w

"The trimmings are a good deal better than the story, which yet is a document no one will wish to miss. There are numerous revealing episodes, of which the most harshly instructive introduces the refugee who uses his certificate (genuine) of discharge from a concentration camp in order to fleece other refugees. The last War is still very much with Remarque, but the power to register more than memory seems to have faded. Nevertheless, memory can bite deep, and its record holds the reader in spite of his critical reservations."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p345 Jl 19 '41 800w

"It isn't up to Mr. Remarque's standard, and its tragic theme even seems to have a kind of triviality, but I found it absorbing." Robert Littell

+ — Yale R n s 30:x summer '41 400w

REMINGTON, WOODBERN EDWIN. Cross winds of empire. 279p il map $3 Day

919.1 Malay archipelago. Philippine Islands. Eastern question (Far East). Japan—Foreign relations 41-9808

Colonel Remington discusses the political and racial situation in the Far East, particularly in regard to the Philippines, and argues against the granting of independence to the Islands.

Booklist 38:94 N 15 '41

"I do not know any professional scribe who has tried to convey through printer's ink, the color and tempo of life among the tropical Malay peoples around the South China Sea, and who has had any better success than Col.

Remington. . . Except as a faithful and honest background record, this is not an important political document. I'd like to say again, however, that as a check-up on fiery sunsets, foul fishing craft, gin-ridden beach combers, bare femininity, murder, piracy and smuggling, Japanese spy craft, sultans in silk stockings, cannibalism, trial marriage in the high jungle, head hunting and lowdown cock fighting, here is your restrained but sure authority." Rodney Gilbert

+ Books p4 Je 15 '41 1200w

Christian Science Monitor p10 Jl 26 '41 450w

Commonweal 34:404 Ag 15 '41 110w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:206 O '41 20w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross

Library J 66:519 Je 1 '41 130w

Reviewed by M. S. Stewart

Nation 153:57 Jl 19 '41 420w

"Colonel Remington is evidently a dual, if not a multiple personality. One part of him is sensitive, artistic, receptive to emotional impulse and quick to see human values. The other part is cool, analytical and restrained. 'Cross Winds of Empire' is the product of this duality. . . Because of the book's personal pattern [the author] has given a disproportionately large amount of space and emphasis to the Moro. He himself is the first to recognize this and he twice warns his readers to be on guard against forming an entire picture of the Philippines from this one high-lighted part of the whole. The other phase of the book, its analysis of economic and strategic problems, is very satisfying. It shows good condensation, clear-headedness and the ability to reach strong and definite conclusions. In its glimpse into the future it is imaginative but vigorous." R. A. Smith

+ — N Y Times p10 Je 29 '41 800w

"Much fresh material on the Philippines, and brilliantly written, though the author Kipling's somewhat on the subject of 'races.' 'Delilah' readers and lots of others will like this."

+ New Yorker 17:78 Je 14 '41 100w

"It is a fascinating story, well written and offering much of solid information on current trends as well as the long pre-historical background." T. A. Bisson

+ Sat R of Lit 24:7 Jl 12 '41 270w

"Colonel Remington traveled widely among the people of the China Sea and saw the brown, yellow, and white men at their daily tasks. . . He knows how much the forty years of American control has done for the Filipino. He hopes for a truly Malayan state that can be brought about only by the joint action of the British, Netherlands, and American governments. It is hardly necessary to urge the immediacy of this book, at this crucial time in our foreign affairs. Its arguments are logical and sensible. Its author is moved by reason, rather than sentimentality."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 12:3 Je '41 390w

RENICK, JAMES L., and RENICK, MRS MARION. David cheers the team; il. by Frederick Machetanz. 125p $1.50 Scribner (W) 41-14775

A factual story about basketball. David longed to become mascot of the high school basketball team, so the coach who lived next door took him in hand and taught him the game. Grades four to six.

Booklist 38:38 O 1 '41

"A book that the eight- to ten-year-old will read for himself and that fathers can enjoy reading aloud to younger boys." Maude Adams

+ Library J 66:736 S 1 '41 60w

"Having the experience of Ohio State's sports publicity department behind him, Mr. Renick is able to make the book absorbing and nontechnical."

+ Springfield Republican p7e O 19 '41 90w

RENIERS, PERCEVAL. Springs of Virginia. 301p pl $4 Univ. of N.C. press 917.55 Virginia—Social life and customs. Health resorts, watering places, etc. 41-20656

Vivid history of the medicinal springs of Virginia, from 1775 to 1900, from dirt roads and primitive shelters to the day of the automobile and palatial hotels. Illustrated with contemporary black and white drawings and seven water colors. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 38:111 D 1 '41

"A vivid portrayal of a great age which Mr. Reniers had made live again." R. Y. Williams
+ Books p6 O 19 '41 850w

"Those who enjoy reading of the triumphs of beaux and belles and of the gaieties of the good old days will find this historical engaging account highly satisfactory." A. M. Colt
+ Library J 66:792 S 15 '41 130w

Reviewed by James Orrick
Nation 153:647 D 20 '41 600w

"A century-long human comedy, which has serious and ironic and lusty—and even tragic—elements, like all good comedy. The author has staged the comedy well, spiced it with wit, salted it with homely phrases. His characters from real life are as vivid as if they had been invented to adorn a fiction." H. I. Brock
+ N Y Times p8 D 7 '41 1050w

REVEILLE, THOMAS, pseud. The spoil of Europe. 344p maps $2.75 Norton 330.943 Germany—Economic policy. World war, 1939—Germany (W) 41-51875

An exposition of the Nazi technique in the political and economic conquest of Europe. The book is in three parts: To ruin or to rule the state; Nazi strategy of political and social domination; The purse strings; the art of commandeering money and banking; The means of subsistence; the technique of Nazi economic conquest. Bibliography. Index.

"The volume unfortunately is not well documented. There are virtually no footnotes, and the brief source references for some of the chapters in an appendix are inadequate if one desires to trace any particular statement." E. C. Helmreich
Am Pol Sci R 35:1177 D '41 500w

"When Mr. Reveille believes the [London] Times and other similarly pessimistic reports, I think he is departing from the realm of reality. He also commits many errors by taking it for granted that German economic co-operation with the Netherlands, France, and Norway functions completely in favor of Germany. We know that this is not the case. . . Mr. Reveille's book, despite its above-mentioned faults, is probably the most valuable and complete analysis of the Nazi state in its economic manifestations, and everyone who wants to know the construction of this economic Leviathan must read this book." M. W. Fodor
+ Ann Am Acad 219:178 Ja '42 500w

"The author, whose identity is concealed because of his official position, obviously enjoyed access to an unusual amount of source material, and his picture of German methods, ranging from outright spoilation to the achievement of the same ends through currency and foreign trade manipulation, is extremely impressive because so well documented." W. H. Chamberlin
+ Atlantic O '41 290w

Booklist 38:8 S '41

"Behind the name of Thomas Reveille is apparently an anonymous European who has read closely and carefully the records, in most part German, of the conquest of Europe and its continuing plunder. Raymond Gram Swing vouches for his integrity in a foreword; the author's documentation of his comparative record of occupied countries is impressive in itself. His book is really a set of blueprints showing the original Nazi scheme of economic aggrandizement and its variations in application to each of the nations conquered by the German armies. There are no moral or emotional judgments made, explicit in its text but the record is enough." Joseph Barnes

+ Books p3 Ag 31 '41 190w

"Mr. Reveille's book, is written with such clarity as to make good reading without sacrificing attention to the great amount of documentary evidence so essential to a work of this kind." W. C. Kernan
+ Churchman 155:21 O 15 '41 300w
Cleveland Open Shelf p13 Jl '41

"This is one of the more important books to appear since the war began." R. G. Woolbert
+ Foreign Affairs 20:377 Ja '42 80w

"This book should be read by every American who is interested in what the Nazi system means to this country and the world." Douglas Miller
+ Nation 153:163 Ag 23 '41 1000w

"The book is the result of careful research in original sources, most of them German. It is an arsenal of facts indispensable to an understanding of totalitarian war, and of the peril to which we are still far from fully awake." R. M. Lovett
+ New Repub 105:378 S 22 '41 1150w

"Reveille's book is a veritable handbook for any specialist, though this does not mean that it is hard to digest. It contains chapters which read like fantastic novels." Milos Safranek
+ N Y Times p1 S 7 '41 1100w

"Mr. Reveille's book is more than scholarly; it is truly intelligent and will especially help every student of world problems." H. B. Kranz
+ Sat R of Lit 24:12 S 27 '41 500w
Springf'd Republican p10 N 26 '41 600w

REY, HANS AUGUSTO. Curious George [il. by the author]. [55p] $1.75 Houghton 41-16054

Colored picture book, with simple text, describing the adventures of a curious small monkey, and the difficulties he had in getting used to city life, before he went to live in the zoo.

Booklist 38:59 O 15 '41

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p26 N 2 '41 200w

Reviewed by Warren Chappell
Horn Bk M 17:453 N '41 10w

"Small children will wear the book out with affection for the story with its jolly bright pictures in the French manner." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk M 17:460 N '41 50w

"When George attempts to fly and to telephone the fire department, the results are really funny. The pictures express exactly the humor of the story, which is told in large clear type and primer-like sentences. Recommended." J. E. Wooster
+ Library J 66:736 S 1 '41 50w

"With its clear, bright colors, its simplicity that eliminates confusing details and the zestful activity of its hero, 'Curious George' is an ideal picture book for the 3-to-5-year-old." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p10 O 26 '41 360w

REYNOLDS, QUENTIN JAMES. A London diary. 304p $2 Random house
940.5342 World war, 1939—Great Britain. World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American (W) 41-51753

Diary kept by the author, an American foreign correspondent stationed in London during the blitzkrieg. The time covered is from October first to December first, 1940.

Booklist 37:489 Je 15 '41

REYNOLDS, Q. J.—Continued

"Quentin Reynolds's diary of two months in London last fall as 'Collier's' correspondent is packed with that bright, personal material which makes easy, interesting reading." Frank Kelley

+ Books p16 My 4 '41 400w

Reviewed by Carlton McNaught

Canadian Forum 21:124 J1 '41 110w

"The material is unexpurgated and the style is nonexistent and there is perhaps too much emphasis on 'I've never had so much fun in my life.' But there's good stuff in this 'uncensored' diary."

+ — N Y Times p12 My 11 '41 550w

New Yorker 17:87 My 3 '41 50w

"Among the two dozen American newspapermen who covered the blitz in London Quentin Reynolds was the 'story chaser,' a kind of O. Henry, seeking human interest material in a war-stricken city. He writes with wit and an immense sense of humor in the brisk style which has been enjoyed by the readers of Collier's and his first book, 'The Wounded Don't Cry.'" H. B. Kranz

+ Sat R of Lit 24:16 Je 21 '41 410w

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 8 '41 330w

Time 37:90 Ap 28 '41 20w

REYNOLDS, QUENTIN JAMES. The wounded don't cry. 253p $2.50 Dutton

940.548 World war, 1939—Personal narratives (W) 41-51517

The Collier's reporter witnesses the fall of Paris, experiences night bombings in London and pays his tribute to the British spirit under fire.

Booklist 37:268 F 15 '41

Bookmark 2:9 Mr '41

"I believe that it is the most appealing, the best written, the liveliest book that has yet appeared on those grim pages of European history. Unlike many other authors, Mr. Reynolds has not attempted to explain the great political events which happened in Europe in the spring and summer of 1940. From the beginning to the end of his short volume he has remained a 'reporter.'" Sonia Tomara

+ Books p3 Ja 26 '41 900w

"First-rate, on-the-minute pictorial reporting... It isn't the whole story of the war. It makes no attempt at statistical profundity. What Quentin Reynolds has seen, however, he makes you see as you read. And that is one kind of great reporting." Lewis Gannett

+ Boston Transcript p9 Ja 15 '41 650w

Reviewed by J. C. Skinner

Boston Transcript p1 Ja 25 '41 230w

Reviewed by John Brubaker

Commonweal 33:453 F 21 '41 450w

"You can read this book, and I think it's worth reading, in two hours' time. I don't know how long it took Quentin to write it; not long, I should say. It's distinctly a 'quickie,' not very informative, but highly entertaining and often moving... The section about France is not good... Nearly all the greater part of the book, the part about England, Ireland, the R.A.F. the little people in the miserable shelters and the steady folk in the country, is full of fine, tender feeling. In these chapters, he accomplishes a real public service by explaining what is in the minds and hearts of ordinary Englishmen and women." Eric Sevareid

+ — Current Hist & Forum 52:63 Mr '41 900w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 19:874 J1 '41 30w

"It is a journalist's book from start to finish, a book of flashes, sharp, racy, significant: one of the very good books of its kind... The best of his book is in its pictures from England—unconquered, undiscouraged, still laughing, not even tired."

+ N Y Times p12 Ja 26 '41 700w

"A swift-running eyewitness account, dramatic and enormously vivid, though the writing is just a touch on the Rover Boys side. The title seems rather unfortunate."

+ — New Yorker 16:80 Ja 18 '41 60w

Pratt p24 autumn '41

"The Wounded Don't Cry' is tremendously important." Linton Wells

+ Sat R of Lit 23:6 F 8 '41 800w

Reviewed by E. G. Hawke

Spec 166:506 My 9 '41 100w

"One purpose of the book is to set forth the brutality of the bombings in the invaded countries, where targets were made of slow-moving refugees on roads and bridges and of hospitals and undefended areas. Another purpose is to warn America of what may happen here if Britain is beaten. The book gives a sense of reality to this dreadfulness. The author is a master of vivid description without the use of many adjectives or high-sounding phrases. Short sentences, simple words, and the author's emotion and the reader's aroused imagination complete the story."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 Ja 29 '41 450w

Times [London] Lit Sup p147 Mr 29 '41 300w

Wis Lib Bul 37:53 Mr '41

RHEE, SYNGMAN. Japan inside out; the challenge of today. 202p $2 Revell

327.52 Japan—Foreign relations. Eastern question (Far East) 41-13733

"A Korean describes how Japan, step by step, invaded Korea, Manchukuo, China and Indo-China." (Cleveland Open Shelf) The author is the president of the provisional government of Korea in exile. He is said to have a big price on his head, and has not dared to return to his country for thirty years.

"While the book could hardly be said to be objective, it is well written and presents facts from the point of view of a leader of one of the smaller Asiatic nations whose unhappy situation must not be forgotten in a time when great events are occurring in the center of the stage of world history."

Christian Century 58:1513 D 3 '41 130w

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 J1 '41

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:386 Ja '42 20w

RHETT, ROBERT GOODWYN. Charleston; an epic of Carolina. 374p il map $5 Garrett

975.7 Charleston, South Carolina. South Carolina—History 41-1221

A history of Charleston from its founding in 1670 to the present. The author, descendant of an old South Carolina family, was a Charleston business man who served as mayor of the city from 1903 to 1911. Index.

Reviewed by J. H. Easterby

Am Hist R 47:430 Ja '42 170w

"Mr. Rhett's history of Charleston is the book of a patently honest man who wrote with no other purpose than to be accurate and fair. His style is clear, devoid of bombast, and almost austere in its freedom from flashy ornament—in short, very good. His pages are crowded with facts, but the narrative proceeds in admirable order, with no useless digressions and repetitions." G. W. Johnson

Books p3 J1 20 '41 800w

"Evidently this book has been a labor of love, but those who go to the city between the Ashley and the Cooper for its distinctive beauties will find more facts than flavor in Mr. Rhett's pages. The information which Mr. Rhett includes, however, has been missing from every other volume on Charleston—probably to the annoyance of the city's business men—and it is well to have this addition to the community's history so that we may possess a fully rounded story."

+ — N Y Times p20 F 23 '41 160w

"Being a general though not an exhaustive or detailed historical summary, the book may be commended as offering an easy way for those who admire Charleston in the present to learn some main facts about the development of Charleston in the past. The author is proud of his community's earlier culture, its celebrated gardens, its architectural treasures, and the outlying estates which in the past 20 years have found so many northern purchasers. He is proud, too, of its modern economic upbuilding." E. N. Jenckes

+ Springfield Republican p6 Mr 1 '41 800w

RHOADS, DOROTHY. Story of Chan Yuc; il. by Jean Charlot. [45p] $1.50 Doubleday

(W) 41-22673

"The true story of a baby brocket deer, born in a forest of Yucatan, as told by Dorothy Rhoads who took care of it at Chichen Itza and finally brought the rare little animal to the National Zoo in Washington." Horn Bk M

Reviewed by E. V. Wyatt

Cath World 154:373 D '41 30w

"Emerging from a welter of books dealing with nondescript animals both tame and wild, of children without character, initiative or environment, one is refreshed by Jean Charlot's lovely drawings for The Story of Chan Yuc. . . Jean Charlot must have fallen in love with this little deer who never grows up, for his drawings live in the memory and one returns to the book again and again. Always a good sign is this call of text or pictures to be looked at again." A. C. Moore

+ Horn Bk M 17:456 N '41 120w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk M 18:32 Ja '42 80w

"The story, especially, has simplicity and a childlike quality in the writing. The Jean Charlot illustrations are beautiful and often childlike, but in some instances they seem a bit sophisticated for the age for which the book is intended. The little animals, however, are always tenderly drawn, so that a child might wish to touch them." S. J. Johnson

+ — Library J 66:1049 D 1 '41 70w

Wis Lib Bul 37:204 D '41

RHODE, JOHN, pseud. See Street, C. J. C.

RHODE, WILLIAM. This business of carving; how—and why—to carve for the table. 125p il $2 Macmillan

642.6 Carving (meat, etc) 41-51983

Explicit directions, illustrated with simple line drawings, on how to carve meats, poultry, game and fish. Some hints on cooking methods are included. The first two chapters deal with utensils and pre-carving preparations.

Booklist 38:91 N 15 '41

"Helpful line drawings, together with the instructive text, ought to make a carver out of the most unpromising material." Sheila Hibben

+ Books p41 N 2 '41 80w

Christian Century 58:1340 O 29 '41 30w

J Home Econ 33:747 D '41 50w

Spring'd Republican p7e Ja 18 '42 360w

RHODES, HENRY TAYLOR FOWKES. Forensic chemistry. 214p il $5 Chemical pub. co. [12s 6d Chapman]

340.6 Chemistry, Legal 40-29260

"This small manual has for its objects, first to collect together information now widely diffused throughout criminological literature, and secondly, to outline the manner in which the practice of forensic chemistry is conducted in a forensic chemical laboratory. The book is divided into two parts. Part 1 deals with the application of chemical methods to the identification of the person, and Part 2 is related to the application of chemical methods to the proof of the corpus delicti." Nature

"This is a distinct and much needed contribution to the literature dealing with scientific methods of criminal identification. . . This is unquestionably a book which should be in every laboratory where scientific criminal examinations are to be made." J. H. Mathews

+ Am Chem Soc J 63:885 Mr '41 280w

Reviewed by J. Glaister

Nature 146:414 S 28 '40 360w

RHYS, ERNEST. Wales England wed; an autobiography. 295p il $3.50 Dutton [15s Dent]

B or 92

Autobiography of Ernest Rhys "who in the early years of this century suggested to J. M. Dent that what was wanted was a cheap and popular series of the world's best books. . . So in 1906 was born Everyman's Library. . . Today, as most people know, the series includes close on a thousand titles, and Mr. Rhys has throughout played the part of general editor. A conception so magnificently carried out naturally takes first place in one's reading of this volume, though the whole of Mr. Rhys's life is gaily and engagingly described. Youthful work as a coal-viewer in a Northumberland mine, the break-through into literature (apparently an easier matter in the nineties than in the overcrowded Grub Street of today), a very happy marriage, a growing circle of literary friendships—all much as one would expect, but told with considerable charm." (Spec) Index.

"The book is interwoven with so many names it cannot be left out of any literary history of the period. For these are not names only; they are people. . . The story still is of the makers and the makings of 'Everymans,' the blessed little books so long and so deeply loved. Their story goes to the present; any one may find here, as I do, acquaintances of youth in New York and in London and friends of today, all alive. It is the book of one who never had much money and has always been rich, one who can say at eighty: 'What more than these I asked of Life, I am content to have from Death.'" M. L. Becker

+ Books p2 F 9 '41 700w

Reviewed by Eric Forbes-Boyd

Christian Science Monitor p12 Je 29 '40 400w

"Mr. Rhys has recorded the vicissitudes of his literary career not only with a lively pen but also with the modesty and courage one would expect from a distinguished poet who had devoted most of his life to so noble an enterprise as the production of the incalculably valuable Everyman Library." Wilfrid Gibson

+ Manchester Guardian p7 Je 7 '40 190w

"Mr. Rhys's book is frank, kindly, well written and congenial. Mr. Rhys has had an interesting life and he reveals his personality as that of a comparative worldly failure, yet with achievements which would have made a far greater failure justified; a marriage full of understanding, a realism about himself and those around him, a refusal to become commercialised. One cannot read this book without being touched." Stephen Spender

+ New Statesman & Nation 19:777 Je 22 '40 150w

"His Autobiography—no man has earned a better right to write one—is full of interesting glimpses of men who were yet to become great. There is a bohemian texture in the narrative, which deals with days when there was a bohemia. Mr. Rhys knew Grub Street, its hardships and its struggles; but apparently it had compensations of which we hear little in our own more hard-boiled day. Men appear to be more interesting before they become prosperous; in Mr. Rhys's book genius in embryo is seen in a variety of specimens. . . . An autobiography rich with human flavor." John Cournos

RHYS, ERNEST—Continued

+ N Y Times p18 F 16 '41 900w

Pratt p6 D '41

"The loveliest chapters in the book tell the story of his marriage to Grace Little, the gallant daughter of an impoverished Irish squire; there is rare tenderness in the picture of their life in the beautiful Welsh country near Llangollen. Here is the modest autobiography of a man who knew what he wanted from life, caught it by snatches, missed it often, but in missing contrived to get and to give happiness from what he did manage to achieve." R. E. Roberts

+ Sat R of Lit 23:6 Mr 1 '41 600w

Spec 164:788 Je 7 '40 240w

"The sweetness of Mr. Rhys's story is not of the kind that cloy. The simplicity with which he conveys a sense of the perfect spirit of cooperation between himself and his wife, the poet Grace Rhys, is just right."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p245 My 18

RHYS, JOHN LLEWELYN. England is my village. 198p $2 Reynal [6s Faber]

41-51904

Collection of short stories, all of them concerned with aviation in some form, together with three excerpts from the author's novels: The Flying Shadow, and The World Owes Me a Living, introduced by a biographical sketch by Jane Oliver, widow of the flyer. Flight Lieutenant Rhys was killed in action on August 5, 1940.

Booklist 38:36 O 1 '41

"If some of the situations and much of the language becomes repetitious when all eleven stories are read at a stretch, the plots and characters display considerable variety. . . . This is a book which young people are also going to read with appreciation. It brings the helpless and bewildered citizen of any age closely in touch with those monosyllabic archangels who drive their strange chariots of metal through our daily horizons." Iris Barry

+ Books p3 Je 22 '41 500w

"The stories, or sketches, which make up this volume reveal the psychology of flight and of fighting in the air as only a sensitive person who was at, once a good pilot and a good writer could do it."

+ Christian Century 58:807 Je 18 '41 80w

Reviewed by Margaret Williamson

Christian Science Monitor p10 JI 19 '41 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 JI '41

"Sensitive, observant but essentially shallow, Rhys has still managed to give us the first fictional account of what it is like to serve in the R.A.F. The title story is the best, telling with accuracy if lack of emotional intensity what it is like to go on a bombing raid at night. The rather sentimental conception of death which mars the end is characteristic of all the stories. The reader must fetch the good parts out of a welter of sentiment." Harry Sylvester

+ Commonweal 34:259 JI 4 '41 350w

"There is no doubt that in him flying, which, like all arts, sets its servants apart from the world's understanding, would have found its first real interpreter in the English tongue. As a writer about flying he is good enough to be compared with Antoine de Saint-Exupéry. He has not Saint-Exupéry's serene felicity of phrase which makes his prose sink into the soothed mind like a sunset, but the two men's writings have the same lean stripped quality, the same tinge of remote sadness and acceptance, the same sense of separation from mankind, of devotion to a dear but fatal service." E. A. M.

+ Manchester Guardian p7 F 25 '41 260w

"Actually, only the title story and perhaps three others manage to stand by themselves as fiction; but his few characters are realized and their mettle is clear, and he might have run the title on his book: These Are the Young Men over England." Otis Ferguson

+ New Repub 105:197 Ag 11 '41 160w

"John Llewelyn Rhys probably did not possess much inventive faculty and would have been mediocre as a 'straight' novelist, but he was passionately interested in aviation and at the same time too sensitive to take its tragic side for granted. All that he wrote is full of the fascination of the air, but curiously enough this is mixed up with a kind of melancholy that goes beyond the premonition of death. . . . And there is another reason for the melancholy that pervades the whole book—the consciousness that an airman's active life, even if he is lucky enough not to be killed, is hardly longer than a boxer's. A very effective sketch at the beginning of the book shows a youthful hero of the last war reappearing twenty years on as a worthless red-faced drunkard. The description of a parachute descent is also a remarkable piece of writing. As books go nowadays, this is an exceptional book." George Orwell

+ New Statesman & Nation 21:191 F 22 '41 550w

Reviewed by F. T. Marsh

N Y Times p7 Je 29 '41 900w

"Ten crisp and moving short stories. . . . Sensitive, intense, and touched with a poetic mysticism that may remind you of Saint-Exupéry."

+ New Yorker 17:78 Je 21 '41 50w

"As a testament the book is moving, using this word quite literally, and it possesses also an oddly blind and dreamlike strain of poetry. If Rhys was not the Rupert Brooke of his generation—for Brooke was a writer, while Rhys was an airman who was learning to write—he responded at any rate to the same compulsion: to set down the spiritual life of those who fought gladly for their Village. Just how successfully he has done this it is not easy to say." N. L. Rothman

+ Sat R of Lit 24:10 Je 21 '41 420w

"There is nothing sophisticated in the stories told by the late Flight-Lieutenant J. Ll. Rhys. All the while you feel that Rhys was striving to express in writing what possibly can only be expressed in the act of flying, of flying, too, into action against an enemy, for England is My Village contains what were probably the first flying stories of this war. . . . Almost everything inessential has been cut away from the best of these stories till they are as clean in outline as a Spitfire." Bonamy Dobrée

+ Spec 166:184 F 14 '41 170w

"The love of country and women and life—all are here in hard, strong prose which never lapses into weak sentimentality. John Llewellyn Rhys knew 'emotion brittle with experience' and loved England. His knowledge and his love can be shared by those who read his little book with sympathy."

+ Spring'd Republican p7e Je 29 '41 300w

"These stories, marked as they are by the stress of war, are beautiful in their achievement of a difficult continuity. And yet an almost intolerable shadow lies on all of them. . . . But the truest story in this book is the sketch of his life by his wife, Jane Oliver, and in this there is no bitterness."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p53 F 1 '41 440w

RICCI, LEWIS ANSELM DA COSTA (BAR-TIMEUS, pseud). Action stations! with a pref. by William McFee. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 262p $2 Little

(W) 41-15453

Collection of short stories about the British navy in the present war. Some of them commemorate Dunkirk, and the capture of the Altmark; others describe the fleet in action.

There are several submarine stories, and one about a captain who played the cornet in a lifeboat to keep up the courage of his men. All of them stress the point of a fine morale under fire.

Booklist 38:36 O 1 '41

"Here is another fine book of action on the sea, like 'Two Survived,' to fill out the news blanks imposed by the censorship and help to make us aware of all the heroism and tragedy going on in the Battle of the Atlantic. Yet in literary honesty it must be said that 'Action Stations!' hasn't exactly escaped the censorship; it would be more proper to characterize it as part of the general plan. To call it British propaganda might be too harsh, for everything it tells is true and above board, while propaganda is popularly supposed to be a distortion of fact. Yet the stories in 'Action Stations!' are mostly fiction, and the net result is a little on the side of exaggeration and sentimentality." Lincoln Colcord

+ — Books p4 Ag 24 '41 800w

Christian Science Monitor p20 Ag 14 '41 650w

"Here with no trimmings is the Royal Navy in action in this war—fourteen stories of the 'fleet in being' done with comprehension, authenticity and sharp-cut atmospheric suspense. Many of the fourteen—and the best of them—are quick, deft, impression pieces of the mode of life in various branches of the service." H. A. Stevens

+ N Y Times p15 S 14 '41 1000w

"This navy that Captain Ricci celebrates so quietly will give you a feeling of comfort plus admiration."

+ New Yorker 17:78 S 6 '41 70w

"Bartimeus reports as of today the feelings and incidents in a navy at war. They are as fresh and interesting as any eye-witness's from the front, and perhaps more valuable as being an account from an unknown front. But it is his defect as well as his virtue to be a reporter. He has no more sense of fiction than William Saroyan, his stories are reportages merely, gelatinous in form, from which there may emerge a composite British naval character, but never any individual characters." Fletcher Pratt

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:20 S 13 '41 450w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 17 '41 550w

RICE, CRAIG (MRS LAWRENCE LIPTON). The right murder. 311p $2 Simon & Schuster

41-4718

Detective story.

"This one is stuffed with action, macabre fun and bright conversation, such as 'Send over a couple of quarts of rye, right away' and 'Three more of the same.'" Will Cuppy

Books p13 Mr 16 '41 120w

"This murder mystery isn't like any other you ever read. It is nonchalant, smooth and crazy."

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 19 '41 50w

Reviewed by Mort. Post

New Repub 104:674 My 12 '41 80w

"It is all very funny if you like that sort of fun." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p24 Mr 23 '41 200w

"Probably the talk is too tough for your old aunt."

New Yorker 17:87 Mr 22 '41 30w

"High alcoholic content, plus marital frascas of Justuses, Malone's really clever sleuthing, and hilariously exciting situations make this one hum. A-No. 1."

+ Sat R of Lit 23:18 Mr 22 '41 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 27 '41 260w

Time 37:104 Ap 7 '41 30w

RICE, CRAIG (MRS LAWRENCE LIPTON). Trial by fury. 305p $2 Simon & Schuster

41-21889

Detective story.

"This struck us as probably the best of the Jake Justus series. Fast, amusing, sufficiently sanguinary and expertly plotted." Will Cuppy

+ Books p28 N 16 '41 150w

"The book makes lively reading for those not easily shocked by bad language." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p32 N 30 '41 200w

"Exciting, amusing, and as hard as nails."

+ New Yorker 17:112 N 22 '41 60w

"Grade A."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:24 N 15 '41 40w

"Triumphantly rowdy and dexterously plotted."

+ Time 38:92 D 1 '41 60w

RICE, ELMER L. Flight to the west. 152p $2 Coward-McCann

812

41-4571

"Elmer Rice's contribution to the current [theatrical] season. . . The setting is a Clipper plane on the way from Europe to the United States, and its passengers are a young American couple, a German diplomat, an oil magnate, refugees, etc. The discussion is of democracy, the rights of man and nations; it is talk about important matters at this particular stage of the world's misfortunes." N Y Times

Dramatic criticism by Grenville Vernon

Commonweal 33:328 Ja 17 '41 370w

"Mr. Rice knows how to construct a play, and though this particular flight is somewhat slowed down at the beginning while the various characters define their roles and attitudes, it proceeds swiftly after that to a dénouement satisfactory in terms of the immediate situation. . . If I seem less stirred than I should be by the slice of life Mr. Rice holds up to view it is because the writing and the thinking never rise above the level of average antifascist commentary." Margaret Marshall

+ — Nation 152:53 Ja 11 '41 750w (Dramatic criticism)

Reviewed by Lewis Nichols

N Y Times p16 Ap 20 '41 80w

Pratt p16 spring '41

RICE, GRANTLAND. Only the brave, and other poems. 150p $1; de luxe ed $2 Barnes, A.S.

811

41-6476

Popular verse written by a well known writer on sports. Most of the poems were first published in his column The Spotlight. Index.

Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 6 '41 120w

Survey G 30:408 Jl '41 30w

RICE, OSCAR KNEFLER. Electronic structure and chemical binding; with special reference to inorganic chemistry. 511p il' $5 (33s) McGraw

541.2 Electrons. Valance (theoretical chemistry). Atoms. Chemistry, Inorganic

40-5200

"Adapted to the needs of first year graduate students who have a reasonably good knowledge of physical chemistry, though perhaps only a superficial acquaintance with individual atoms. Discussions of modern atomic theory, stated to be more or less elementary, include the wave theory of matter and quantization, the hydrogen atom, the properties of the elements in general, and chemical binding, all of which comprise about one-third of the book and lead up to more specialized considerations in the later chapters. There are problems at the chapter endings and a selected list of books. Dr. Rice, prominent in this field, is Associate Professor of Chemistry in the University of North Carolina." (N Y New Tech Bks) Indexes.

RICE, O. K.—Continued

"This textbook is well-conceived and very nicely written. It is more than that. It is the book that many students and many teachers have been silently begging for. . . The treatment is pitched for students of about the level of first year graduate work. The book is excellent." Edward Mack, Jr.

+ Am Chem Soc J 63:634 F '41 550w
N Y New Tech Bks 25:4 Ja '40

RICE, WILLIAM SELTZER. Block prints; how to make them. 68p il $2 Bruce pub.

761 Block printing (W) 41-51723

"This book was prepared in response to requests for practical instruction in the art of block printing from students in art schools and teachers in public schools and teachers' colleges." (Pref) Partial contents: Brief history of block printing; Selecting the block; Cutting the block; Color printing; Lettering suitable for block printing; Mating and framing block prints; Greeting cards—bookplates—labels—etc. Glossary. Useful reference books.

Booklist 37:404 My 1 '41

Boston Transcript pl Mr 1 '41 40w

Wis Lib Bul 37:72 Ap '41

RICH, EVERETT. William Allen White; the man from Emporia. 374p il $3 Farrar

B or 92 White, William Allen (W) 41-13358

Full length, comprehensive biography of the editor of the Emporia (Kansas) Gazette, written by a fellow townsman. Bibliography. Index.

"This excellent book can be expected to make William Allen White no new friends among his fellow countrymen of this generation, for the simple reason that all Americans with a smattering of awareness and good will are his friends already. But it will supply his old friends with much detailed information that they could never get for themselves by even the most laborious processes." Wilson Follett

+ Atlantic S '41 200w

Booklist 38:11 S '41

"If there is any guilt it must lie on the side of eulogy. It is plain that Mr. Rich has a vast admiration for Mr. White, although this is by no means a job of whitewashing or soft-soaping the Emporia editor; indeed, neither operation was called for. Moreover, this is not an 'approved' biography; the author says he showed the manuscript of only two chapters to Mr. White, and that the subject made no suggestion. Thus the study is at least as honest, and as complete, as any such project reasonably could be in the circumstances. The result is an absorbing account of a many-sided individual and an extraordinarily vigorous mind in action." Stanley Walker

+ Books p3 Ag 17 '41 1300w

"No one familiar with the ways and foibles of editors, famous or otherwise, would hazard a guess as to whether or not Mr. White actually posed for this charming and quite faithful word portrait. But in the book are paragraphs and even pages which bear the unmistakable stamp of authenticity. The story as a whole is definitely authentic." F. L. P.

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 S 22 '41 450w

"Mr. Rich's failure to interpret the shifts in White's career is one of the major weaknesses of his book. The man from Emporia is obviously something of a hero to him, and while this biography is no deliberate job of whitewashing, it is completely unrealistic in the all-important matter of motives. . . Both Mr. White and his biographer come off a good deal better when the political record of the one and the interpretative omissions of the other are left behind." Max Gissen

+ New Repub 105:560 O 27 '41 480w

Reviewed by Francis Brown

N Y Times pl Ag 17 '41 1400w

"The author, a fellow-Kansan, doesn't hesitate to take the starch out of his subject on occasion. Plain-spoken and folksy."

New Yorker 17:56 Ag 30 '41 30w

"This book is the life of an extraordinary and simple man shown convincingly against the background of the real American scene. The narrative is one which should be read by every newspaper man, because it is a good textbook in journalism. It is rich in United States history, for White came to be a figure in national councils, though he never accepted office. Most of all, Mr. Rich has told the unfolding of the mind and character of William Allen White. This reader is grateful that a job which deserved to be done has been done so well." C. McD. Puckette

+ Sat R of Lit 24:6 Ag 16 '41 700w

Reviewed by W. A. White

Sat R of Lit 24:16 S 20 '41 410w (Reprinted from Emporia Gazette)

Wis Lib Bul 37:177 N '41

RICHARDS, EDWARD AMES, and RUBIN, EDWARD B. How to select and direct the office staff. 179p $2.50 Harper

651.34 Office management. Employment management (W) 41-8373

Advice for the hiring executive or personnel manager, particularly adapted to small business firms. Partial contents: Preparing the job classification; Hiring typists; Hiring stenographers and dictaphone operators; Picking a secretary; Hiring clerical workers; Organizing the interview; How to pay office workers; Organizing office routine; Promotions; Discharging workers. Index.

Booklist 38:5 S '41

"There is good advice here for all of us who are charged with directing assistants." E. M. Fair

+ Library J 66:991 N 15 '41 130w

Management R 30:234 Je '41 180w

Wis Lib Bul 37:152 O '41

RICHARDSON, HAROLD WARD, and MAYO, ROBERT S. Practical tunnel driving. 436p il $5 McGraw

625.13 Tunneling 41-1445

"This practical work explains in detail the operations performed in all kinds of tunnel work under varying conditions. The chapters cover design, surveying, safety, shaft sinking, mucking, haulage, hoists and headframes, ventilation and dust control, water pumping, plant and utilities, soft ground, shield-driven tunnels, the plenum process, air locks, tunneling rock, drills and drilling, explosives, ground support in rock tunneling, concrete lining, tunnels in exceptional ground, pipe jacking, etc." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

"The book is very comprehensive with respect to modern tunnels built in this country; nothing is said about foreign tunnels. The book should be in the hands of all tunnel engineers as a source of ideas. Some of the detail descriptions are excellent. . . There is a tendency to generalize too much as to methods and what the authors call standard practice based on their own investigations, which may be irritating to readers who do not agree with them and who would be disposed to argue." R. H. Keays

+ Eng N 126:79 Mr 27 '41 480w

N Y New Tech Bks 26:29 Ap '41

RICHARDSON, JAMES WALLS. Problems of articulation between the units of secondary education. 192p $2.10 Teachers college

373 Education, Secondary. Students
40-29859

"An approach to the solution of the problems of articulating the administrative units of secondary-school systems is presented in [this] study, in which the author undertakes to analyze transition situations for the purpose of locating specific elements that hinder or help the uninterrupted and continuous progress of transferring pupils. The procedure, perfected in one secondary-school system in Pennsylvania and later extended to three additional systems in the same state, invited responses from transferring pupils and from their teachers to carefully prepared and statistically fortified questionnaires based on pre-transitional and post-transitional experiences. In addition, the parents of the pupils were asked to reply to a free-response letter of inquiry." El School J

Reviewed by J. B. Nelson
El School J 41:392 Ja '41 650w
School & Society 52:80 Ag 3 '40

RICHARDSON, MRS MYRA REED. Sheep wagon family; il. by Eloise Wilkin. 217p $2 McBride

41-23274

Story of the war between cattle herders and sheep herders back in Wyoming in 1822. A twelve-year-old girl, Cora Belle, is the heroine of this tale in which unfriendly cowboys, a forest fire, Indians, and a kidnapping are just a few of the troubles of the sheep wagon family.

Booklist 38:179 Ja 15 '42

"This is a reliable romance for ten-year-olds about an exciting period of Western history and with a heroine who can fight her own way against hard lines and hard luck, and deserves the praise she gets when the range troubles are resolved." M. L. Becker

+ Books p16 N 2 '41 210w

"Good frontier story, told in simple, readable style. Illustrated appropriately with quaint black-and-white drawings." Jessie Stanton & E. W. Steele

+ New Repub 105:837 D 15 '41 40w

RICHEY, PAUL HENRY MILLS. Fighter pilot. 178p il $2 Scribner [6s Batsford]

940.544 World war, 1939—Aerial operations.
World war, 1939—Personal narratives, English
41-22915

Personal record of an English aviator's experiences in France and in air battles over French territory, from September 8, 1939 to June 13, 1940.

"Since writing this stirring book Paul Richey has been promoted to squadron leader and placed in command of a crack squadron in the north of England. He holds the Distinguished Flying Cross." Joseph Driscoll

+ Books p35 N 23 '41 400w

Manchester Guardian p3 S 26 '41 400w

"Fighter Pilot is, I believe, the first book of its kind to be published in England and, at least as a study of temperament, is likely to remain one of the most interesting. Quite apart from the fact that no account of his adventures written by a serving officer can appear without submission to the Ministry concerned, and that the Air Ministry has a fine record of restraint and caution, I should feel no doubt that, both in detail and in general effect, the story told by this anonymous fighter pilot was absolutely authentic. . . 'Fighter Pilot's' transparency is part of the charm of his book. His feelings are strong, seldom complicated, expressed sometimes in a romantic but never in a pretentious style. The opening sections are slangy and chaotic; but, as the pace of events quickens, the method of the narrative gains in skill and vigour." Peter Quennell

+ New Statesman & Nation 22:347 O 11 '41 1050w

Reviewed by E. F. Allen
N Y Times p3 O 26 '41 400w

"No book published during this war gives a clearer picture of what air fighting is like. The danger, the hardship, the joyous companionship of squadron life on active service, the thrills of victory and the sadness of losses are all there."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p467 S 20 '41 750w

RICHMOND, SIR HERBERT WILLIAM. British strategy, military and economic: a historical review and its contemporary lessons. (Current problems ser) 157p $1.25 Macmillan [3s 6d Cambridge]

942 Strategy. Great Britain—History, Military
[A41-4045]

Traces the military strategy of the British thru nine wars from the time of Queen Elizabeth to the first World war. Index.

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:203 O '41 20w

"This is a remarkable little book. . . It is quite possible that some will find [it] dull. It looks dull; and the limitations of space, met by a pen that is not too dexterous, serve to crush out every lively touch that might have pointed the immense interest of the problem. In reading through the book one has a recurrent sense of having passed this way before, so persistent are the general lines of the problem that has confronted our leaders from one generation to another."

Spec 166:400 Ap 11 '41 430w

Reviewed by Francis Williamson
Survey G 30:482 S '41 160w

RIDDICK, FLOYD M. Congressional procedure. 387p $4 Chapman & Grimes

328.735 U.S. Congress—Rules and practice
41-15539

This book includes topical studies of the political organization of the House, duties of the Speaker and floor leader, standing committees and committees of the whole, non-legislative functions of Congress, special legislative days and the calendars, precedence of legislation and of motions, the discharge rule, Senate procedure contrasted to House. Selected bibliography. Index.

"Mr. Riddick has done a scholarly piece of work. The volume should be on the reference shelf of every teacher of government and student of the legislative process." E. L. French

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:983 O '41 550w

Christian Century 58:985 Ag 6 '41 40w

"Until the publication of this volume no up-to-date and integrated treatment of congressional procedures existed. The author has done a solid job in making available a reasonably compact manual which will be extremely useful to students of the legislative process. It will be carefully read by those who appreciate the significance of legislative efficiency in an era of sharp challenge to the role of representative assemblies, an era of increasing legislative subordination to executive influence." J. P. Horlacher

+ Social Studies 32:375 D '41 550w

"To have a House of Representatives is a pretty fine thing; to understand its political organization . . . helps a citizen get back of the headlines. The story is never dull: it pictures democracy at work." Leon Whipple

+ Survey G 30:481 S '41 240w

RIDER, JOHN FRANCIS. Vacuum tube voltmeters. 179p il $1.50 J. F. Rider, inc, 404 4th av, N.Y.

621.3743 Voltmeter. Vacuum tubes 41-51754

"The vacuum tube voltmeter—a combination of the vacuum tube and milliammeter—has developed into one of the most valuable aids to the engineer, service-man or research worker. Originally used for measuring high-frequency voltages, this instrument now measures r-f, a-f and d-c voltages and currents as well as resistance." School & Society

Booklist 37:441 My 15 '41

N Y New Tech Bks 26:41 Jl '41

School & Society 53:384 Mr 22 '41 30w

RIEGEL, ROBERT EDGAR, ed. An introduction to the social sciences. 2v ea $3.25 Appleton-Century

300 Social sciences 41-10349

"A mass of social science ingredients, presented by topics rather than by subjects, which can be highly recommended, both for the scope of its materials and for the manner in which they are presented. After the two introductory chapters on sociology, the early topics concern economic activity and the family. The survey of governmental functions comes near the end of the book 'because we feel that democratic government is the meeting place of the tremendous variety of forces which constitute modern society and consequently can be understood only as those forces are understood.' Reading lists are presented by topics rather than by chapters." (Ann Am Acad) Indexes.

Reviewed by Howard White

Am Pol Sci R 35:1022 O '41 280w

"The work stands out as the best of the recent crop of efforts to master the difficult task of 'introducing' the student to the whole field of social sciences. With their broad approach to their subject, their practical treatment of it, and their clear presentation of their material, Riegel and his associates have written a textbook which must be widely used." J. S. Roucek

+ Ann Am Acad 218:241 N '41 500w

"Those who wish to see the whole social picture here in the U. S. and to learn how it is being taught in one of our best colleges, will find these volumes crowded with factual information and stimulating. They undoubtedly constitute the best and most up-to-date work in this field." C. L. Willard, Jr.

+ Churchman 156:17 Ja 1 '42 300w

RIEHM, MRS HELEN. Still alive with Lucas. 280p $2.50 McBride [8s 6d Davies]

946.08 Spain—History—Civil war, 1936-1939 41-19536

Story of the experiences of two German refugees, Federico Lucas, a Jew, and his wife, "not Jewish." Caught in the Civil war in Spain, they had to give up their thriving cafe, and with great difficulty and hardships, managed to reach France.

"A special quality lifts [Mrs] Riehm's story above the level of general misery: It is her love of life, any life at all, even the kind of life which is composed of struggling against superhuman odds. The book is illumined not only by her feeling for her husband but also by her feeling for the people of Spain. It adds another irrefutable proof that the instinctive brotherhood of man outweighs and will outlast the present tidal wave of hate." Virgilia Sapieha

+ Books p4 S 21 '41 650w

"The vivid descriptions of the home for evacuated children and the terror of the final flight into France, with which the book closes, are brilliant and appalling pieces of writing, lightened with delicate touches. Because of certain passages, some readers may find it objectionable." M. J. Messler

+ Library J 66:731 S 1 '41 90w

"Vivid, racy, and alive, it is told in a peculiar staccato style that keeps the reader's attention rigidly focused on its little group of protagonists instead of attempting, as many novels have done, to dramatize the powerful cross-currents of the Spanish tragedy."

+ Nation 153:148 Ag 16 '41 50w

New Repub 105:709 N 24 '41 40w

"Mrs. Riehm overdoes her affection for her husband and her use of the historic present. Otherwise her slice of life has the attraction of vividness and simplicity and gives a feel of what it was like to be a civilian in the first engagement of this war." Thomas Smallbones

+ New Statesman & Nation 20:44 Ja 11 '41 70w

"Touching, dramatic, and serenely, almost cheerfully, written."

+ New Yorker 17:76 S 13 '41 30w

Pratt p13 D '41

Sat R of Lit 24:20 O 11 '41 200w

"It is impossible to give a connected account of this book, for it teems with confusion, and its style is therefore confused. The life which Polly and Lucas lived at this time, was disjointed, uncertain, never quite clear even to themselves. And the writer has not tried to do much more than put down experiences as she has remembered them, urged to do so by the English novelist, Richard Church. Nevertheless this record is compelling, dramatic, and a worth while contribution to the war literature of today." M. D.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e S 21 '41 480w

Times [London] Lit Sup p656 D 28 '40 800w

RIESENBERG, FELIX, 1913-. Full ahead! a career story of the American merchant marine. 276p $2 Dodd

(W) 41-19636

Jack Martin, a cadet in the American merchant marine, learns much about the details of that life during a voyage on a big United States liner. As the ship goes thru the Panama canal hints of espionage begin to threaten. Later a dangerous encounter in the Pacific shows the boy's fitness for the life he has been forced to choose. For boys in grades seven to nine.

Booklist 38:117 D 1 '41

Reviewed by E. V. Wyatt

Cath World 154:378 D '41 50w

"An excellent career story for boys of fourteen and up. I believe it has too much of the technical side to make it suitable for Children's Room collections, but it is certainly a book to be included in the older boys' and girls' library. The book combines both story and fact, and gives a very thrilling picture, and a true one also, of our merchant marine." R. W. Stewart

+ Library J 66:954 N 1 '41 150w

RIESS, CURT. Total espionage. 318p $2.75 Putnam

940.5485 World war, 1939—Secret service. Secret service—Germany (W)

"This book tells how the enormous espionage organization of the Third Reich was started, how it functioned, and what successes it had during the so-called peaceful Hitler period and the time of his bloodless victories to the present war. It shows how the famous French Secret Service, the Deuxième Bureau, was disposed of, how the British Secret Service was knocked out, and how Hitler's spy armies heaped success upon success everywhere in Europe, in Asia, in South America, and even in the United States." (Publisher's note) Chronology. Index.

Booklist 38:184 F 1 '42

"Mr. Riess's book is written in Sunday supplement style. It is easy to read. His information, by definition, cannot be checked for accuracy. The most dismal aspect of the book is the suggestion that Fritz Kuhn and Professor Haushofer may supplant Mata Hari for a generation of feature writers about espionage, and this is indeed gloomy." Joseph Barnes

Books p2 D 28 '41 400w

"From the available documents the average reader has run across, Mr. Riess checks with the facts: otherwise you accept him on his logic and on the logic of events. . . . More important, he does not write off the top of his head in the manner of the exposé, the journalist's adventure, the human microphone in the salon or under the bed. He knows the solid background and he makes good sense with it." Otis Ferguson

+ New Repub 106:58 Ja 12 '42 900w

"A most fascinating book. . . . Many books have been written on that subject, but none more thrilling, more colorful, or more revealing. Mr. Riess is not a historian but a reporter, analyst, and witty story teller. . . . The book is full of brilliantly told stories, of amusing and horrible tales. Many are new. Many have been heard before but here they are knitted together like clues in an exciting detective book." H. B. Kranz

+ Sat R of Lit 24:10 D 27 '41 800w

"All the documents discussed in the book, the author declares, have been inspected either by himself or a trusted collaborator. All scenes have been witnessed by at least one of those who reported directly to him. All facts, he continues, whether or not published before, have been checked and rechecked. . . . Mr Riess's sources, though they clarified for him some major mysteries and gave him a plentitude of inside information, are proved fallible in the closing words of his entertaining volume. The world, as has been so recently and tragically proved, can still be taken by surprise."

Springf'd Republican p7e D 14 '41 900w

"By its very nature such a book can be neither complete nor wholly reliable. But it is the fullest treatment of an absorbing and important subject so far in World War II. . . . Riess's story on Hess is improbable enough. So is much else in his book. So, not long ago, was Hitler."

+ Time 38:88 D 1 '41 1900w

RINEHART, MARY (ROBERTS) (MRS S. M. RINEHART). Familiar faces; stories of people you know. 310p $2.50 Farrar

(W) 41-10775

Contents: One hour of glory; The young visitor; The dog in the orchard; The philosopher's wife; One night in spring; The door that would not stay closed; The empire builders; Lily comes home at last; Dorothy dresses for dinner; Mr Caswell looks out the window; Mr Cohen takes a walk.

Booklist 38:96 N 15 '41

"Not all eleven of these stories are about matrimonial stresses and strains, but most of them are, and they are uniformly deft and discerning, whether the mood is merry, tender or terrifying." Lisle Bell

+ Books p6 JI 20 '41 550w

Cath World 154:251 N '41 240w

"At least one of the stories in 'Familiar Faces' is twenty-five years old. Another of them, in which a fifth column group attempts to take over a National Guard Armory, is newer than tomorrow's newspaper. They are alike in the expert and unobtrusive finish of their workmanship, in the freshness and conviction which Mrs. Rinehart puts into everything she does, and in nothing else at all. It would be difficult, perhaps impossible, to assemble from any other single source eleven short stories so various as these." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p7 JI 20 '41 500w

"Eleven short stories, told with Mrs. Rinehart's own gift for narrative. . . . They are clever, neatly constructed, mannerly, staunchly Republican, and very readable."

+ New Yorker 17:54 JI 26 '41 30w

"Mrs. Rinehart's gift for story-telling has matured through the years until she has become one of America's most talented writers. Only one of these stories, 'Dorothy Dresses for Dinner,' is tinged with her dislike of vain, reckless, and silly women. The rest are colored with her understanding of human weaknesses, and if she sometimes seems to twist stories to reach a happy conclusion . . . it is her own kindly nature that leads her to steer her characters into safe waters." H. S.

+ Sat R of Lit 24:18 JI 19 '41 200w

RIPPY, JAMES FRED. South America and hemisphere defense. 101p $1.50 La. state univ. press

980 U.S.—Relations (general) with Latin America. Latin America—Relations (general) with the U.S. South America—Politics. South America—Commerce

(W) 41-21812

"The book is made up of four lectures given at Louisiana State University, two of them dealing with South American history and politics, two with economics and finance. Replete with facts." Nation

Reviewed by J. E. Cross

Library J 66:840 O 1 '41 110w

"Admirably objective, it offers to the serious reader more reliable information than many more voluminous and pretentious books on the subject." Karl Loewenstein

+ Nation 154:44 Ja 10 '42 100w

RISK, THOMAS MARION. Principles and practices of teaching in secondary schools. 728p $3 Am bk.

371.3 Education—Experimental methods. Education, Secondary. Educational psychology 41-10367

"Designed primarily to serve as a textbook for students in training, this work is divided into five units: (1) Some Fundamental Problems of Teaching; (2) Learning Activities and the Attainment of Desired Outcomes; (3) The Organization of Courses of Instruction and Units; (4) Methods of Planning and Organizing Classroom Activities; (5) Stimulating and Directing Classroom Activities and Measuring Outcomes." (School & Society) Bibliographies. Index.

School & Society 54:96 Ag 9 '41 60w

"The book would not constitute a significant addition to a library that already has a careful selection of professional books in the field of secondary education. It is condensed and not too readable. Its main purpose would be, as the author apparently has intended, to serve as a textbook for students in training and particularly in a course dealing with methods of teaching in the secondary schools." E. C. Bolmeier

+ — School R 50:70 Ja '42 400w

ROBB, STEWART. Nostradamus on Napoleon, Hitler and the present crisis. 218p 1l $2 Scribner

133 Notredame, Michel de. Prophecies

"Removing the future tense from a quatrain by Nostradamus and presenting it to his twelve-year-old nephew as a historical puzzle instead of prophecy, Stewart Robb got back a neat solution in one hour. For necessary research, the youngster checked his clues with an encyclopedia. This experiment is cited by the author in support of his general argument: the prophecies are not obscure. Mr. Robb's analysis is 'interpretation by restric-

ROBB, STEWART—Continued
'distinguishing between fulfilled prophecies and those concerned with the future.'
Books

"In its illumination of the Napoleonic era and the present, the book is persuasive and scholarly."

+ Books p22 D 7 '41 100w

"It would be interesting to possess in English a complete translation of these rhymed predictions, which every one could then apply as he might choose. The present work may impress readers who are predisposed to accept the prophetic authority of the French doctor, but is scarcely adequate or convincing enough to overcome the objections of the skeptical." W. H. Chamberlin

+ — Christian Science Monitor p8 Ja 4 '42 1050w

"Whether or not one agrees with Mr Robb, there is much challenge and even more food for thought beneath the covers of his book."

+ Springfield Republican pfe D 28 '41 250w

ROBBINS, CHARLES. Nickel under your foot.
352p $2.50 Lippincott

41-6658

Story of a group of people gathered in a mountain camp at the command of a man whose wealth dominates their lives and ambitions and whose malign character causes the degeneration of most of those who come under his influence.

"If the texture of the book seems uneven and the characters to have been drawn in a curious mixture of styles, the novel has other qualities that make it notable as well as disturbing. The bold sketch of the rapacious plutocrat is effectively done: one is convinced that this man had the capacity to dominate others, to their own detriment, and his vagaries are observed as well as they are reported. The insane atmosphere of the summer camp is admirably conveyed and many of the scenes are poised nicely between humor, ridicule and downright unpleasantness. But it remains difficult to conceive of the novel as a whole except as dating from an earlier period, and this—by no means wholly a detriment—gives it a peculiar zest." Iris Barry

+ — Books p8 My 4 '41 700w

Reviewed by Margaret Clark

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 26 '41 340w

"Mr. Robbins is a member of the hard-boiled school and drives his narrative and dialogue with hard-hitting force. It is not recommended to those with squeamish taste. To them the Walpurgisnacht, Edition 1941, which Mr. Robbins presents may prove both distasteful and meaningless." Rose Feld

— N Y Times p24 Ap 27 '41 550w

ROBBINS, GEORGE W., and TILTON, LEON DEMING, eds. Los Angeles: preface to a master plan. (Pacific Southwest acad. of political and social science. Publication) 319p 11 maps $3; pa $2 Anderson & Ritchie

917.9494 Los Angeles 41-7260

"A critical and interpretive study of Los Angeles. Such problems as land use, housing, zoning, industrial growth, business decentralization, traffic and transportation are discussed by twenty-one authors. The book contains 80 photographs, 14 charts and maps, and 25 tables." Am Econ R

Am Econ R 31:383 Je '41 30w

"The authors of this volume admit what Dr. Walker asserts, that recent planning and zoning efforts have had but moderate success. Most of the problems still remain to be solved, and these essays successfully present the issues and propose interesting solutions. As such, they deserve to be read by every public planner; but the very fact that an unofficial group had to undertake this volume raises serious doubts as to the adequacy of the governmental planning machinery in the Los Angeles area. So far, it seems that Dr. Walker was right. At the same time, disturbing thoughts arise as to the capacity of any small research staff to master not only all the topics discussed in this volume, but also all the other subjects that need to be studied, and to relate all the findings in a comprehensive plan of constantly changing content for so large and restless a community." William Anderson

+ — Am Pol Sci R 35:563 Je '41 350w

Reviewed by Howard Woolston

Am Soc R 6:749 O '41 320w

Reviewed by H. F. Raup

Geog R 31:703 O '41 350w

ROBBINS, LIONEL CHARLES. The economic causes of war. 124p $1.35 Macmillan [5s Cape, J.]

330.19355 War—Economic aspects [40-11090]

"After criticizing (and discarding) the Marxian theory of imperialism, Professor Robbins tells what he regards as the true economic causes of war. He finds the anarchic political organization of the world to be the 'root disease of our civilization,' and concludes that national sovereignty in economic matters must be curbed and replaced by some sort of a federation." Foreign Affairs

"This little book should be widely read, for it provides a refreshing clarification of issues of great current interest, as well as a useful prolegomena to any discussion of reconstruction after the present war." P. T. Ellsworth

+ Am Econ R 31:649 S '41 300w

Reviewed by Quincy Wright

Am Pol Sci R 35:367 Ap '41 600w

Reviewed by F. A. Linville

Ann Am Acad 216:181 Jl '41 310w

Booklist 37:382 Ap 15 '41

"Such a book as this—slight as its author admits it to be, cursory as are both analysis and review of evidence—has an essential function to perform; it is a sketch, but a sketch in true perspective, free from distortions of special pleading, wishful thinking, and other stigmata of typical wartime writing." H. C.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 F 2 '40 490w

"A masterpiece of sound analysis and clear exposition, by a professor of economics at the University of London."

+ Foreign Affairs 18:565 Ap '40 60w

Management R 30:155 Ap '41 60w

"The chief British exponent of neo-classical economics writes in his usual lucid and suave way about the war. He carries on his long standing feud with Marxian theory, and rejects any basic connection between war and capitalist imperialism."

New Repub 104:125 Ja 27 '41 70w

"Professor Robbins is at all times a lucid, vigorous and stimulating writer, and his qualities show to special advantage where, as in the present case, he is restricted within the scope of a short essay. In this little book he covers a remarkably wide field, but the reader is not left with the feeling that he has been fobbed off with superficial generalities. For plainly much hard thinking and wide reading have gone to the preparation of this essay." C. W. Guillebaud

+ Spec 163:784 D 1 '39 950w

"The essay is of great topical interest because, if the author's theory be correct, some limitation of national sovereignty in economic affairs is necessary if peace is to endure, and this suggests that some system of federalism in Europe should form part of the war aims of the democratic Powers. The keynote of the essay is the phrase that 'we must federate or perish.'"

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p678 N 25 '39 650w

ROBERT, KARL, pseud. Hitler's counterfeit Reich; behind the scenes of Nazi economy; foreword by M. W. Fodor; introd. by Douglas Miller. 122p $1 Alliance bk.

330.943 Germany—Economic conditions. Germany—Nazi movement

"Dr. Karl Robert is the pseudonym of an economic expert who has only recently come to this country from Vienna. He has lived for years behind the scenes of Nazi economy. In this little book he has used his first-hand knowledge of how the Nazis work. . . . Dr. Robert's central thesis is that National Socialism has destroyed both the structure and the spirit of free enterprise and substituted only those self-controls recognized by all pirates. He sees the large capitalists suffering like the small business men. Commercial integrity and morale have both collapsed. Only the party bureaucracy, the army and the mumbo-jumbo of Hitler's race appeals, he says, support a facade of Nazi economy behind which there is nothing but worn-out machinery, an inflated currency and a tired and cynical people." Books

"A sincere and angry piece of pamphleteering. M. W. Fodor, in a foreword, vouches for the integrity of the author, and Douglas Miller, in an introduction, puts the solid weight of his authority behind the ideas in this book. They are all sound ideas and they are written here in sober but strong language." Joseph Barnes

+ Books p6 N 30 '41 480w

Reviewed by Thomas Reveille
Nation 154:72 Ja 17 '42 50w

"One of the best short analyses of Nazi economic life so far published. The 10 chapters are well organized, the style is clear and the author's contentions are illustrated by carefully selected episodes observed by him. Although these episodes are not documented, they fit in with the common knowledge of the wide reader." Philip Gamble

+ Spring'd Republican p7e D 28 '41 500w

ROBERTS, CECIL. A man arose. 17p $1 Macmillan

821 Churchill, Winston Leonard Spencer—Poetry 41-6869

A poem written in honor of Winston Churchill. On the occasion of the first reading of the poem over the radio, the introduction was made by Wendell Willkie whose speech is given as the Foreword here.

Christian Century 58:659 My 14 '41 40w

Reviewed by Austin Strong
Churchman 155:18 Je 1 '41 300w

Times [London] Lit Sup p315 Je 28 '41 150w

ROBERTS, MRS EDITH (KNEIPPLE). This marriage. 306p $2.50 Bobbs

41-3614

When Martin and Clare decided they could marry, Martin, unconventional and freedom loving, drew up a pre-marriage contract in which they promised each other freedom in marriage to live their own lives. To Clare, who loved Martin devotedly, it was an idle gesture; to Martin it was an opportunity to enjoy family life but to have other affairs as he wished. On this basis the marriage inevitably came in the end to grief and disaster.

"With sympathy equally divided between the two, Mrs. Roberts develops the growing tension between them. Her incidents are alive with the trivia of living. In total they build up the characters and the story. . . . The end is relentlessly logical." Rose Feld

+ Books p8 Mr 16 '41 550w

"There is no forced melodrama, nor the attempt to be original in style. Like Stendhal, the author prefers a 'commonplace phrase to an incorrect statement.' And yet her book is full of life and warmth, strongly dramatic through its very simplicity and forthright truthfulness. Not many marriages, we presume, are quite like Martin's and Clare's. Yet because of its implications, which reach far beyond the author's intentions, 'This Marriage' might have well been called 'Modern Marriage,' for it comes down to the very core of present-day problems." Marianne Hauser

+ N Y Times p6 Mr 16 '41 700w

ROBERTS, ELIZABETH MADOX. Not by strange gods. 244p $2.50 Viking

(W) 41-5114

Six love stories, all of them scened in backwoods Kentucky districts.

Bookmark 2:15 My '41

"All of [the stories] are told with that apparently artless simplicity which results only from the scrupulous and unerring selection of the essential and the washing away of all else. They have at once the innocence and wisdom of a ballad." Mary Ross

+ Books p3 Mr 23 '41 700w

Cath World 154:125 O '41 130w

"Through the entire volume there is apparent a tolerant yet delicate understanding of her neighbors' approach to living which supplies a solid foundation of humanity to the beauty of Miss Roberts's prose. In the author's too sudden death, American art is the loser, but I have a feeling that these posthumous stories possess a quality to quicken literary memory." E. V. R. Wyatt

+ Commonweal 33:627 Ap 11 '41 370w

"These stories run the gamut of human emotions and are filled with humor, deep feeling, and the poetry of everyday living that lifts them from the commonplace to the stature of real literature. A worth-while buy." I. M. Turner

+ Library J 66:220 Mr 1 '41 50w

"A half-dozen quiet, mellow stories about country people, told with a mixture of realistic detail and mystical exaltation decidedly Celtic in flavor. Even the dialogue has an Irish tang that might stem as well from Connemara as from Kentucky, and the people move in a suffused emotional twilight that satisfies the poetic sense but may disturb readers who like their earth earthy."

+ Nation 152:537 My 3 '41 60w

"If in some sense this Kentucky is unreal, it is nevertheless continually fresh and interesting, the language is sweet and strange, the people are warm, passionate, complicated. Although probably Miss Roberts reached her peak in her first book, all the qualities that made it original and appealing are in the last one. American literature would be inestimably poorer if Kentucky had never known her; and if she had never known her own peculiar Kentucky." Dorothy Van Doren

+ Nation 152:758 Je 28 '41 800w

Reviewed by Otis Ferguson

New Repub 104:410 Mr 24 '41 380w

"However bromidic it may sound, and however often repeated, it remains true that the work of Elizabeth Madox Roberts has a certain timeless quality which distinguishes it and sets it apart. This applies as much to the short stories contained in this volume as it does to the novels for which she is better known. Though she writes mostly of simple and earthy people, whose habitat is the South, one seldom thinks of Miss Roberts as a regionalist—or even wholly as a realist, in the usual sense of the term. Despite her humor, her homeliness, her felicitous ear for dialogue and her seeing eye for detail, there is something remote and a little legend-like in all of the stories and novels which have followed 'The Time of Man.'" E. H. Walton

+ N Y Times p6 Mr 23 '41 800w

"Elizabeth Madox Roberts' 'Not by Strange Gods' is her last book, and it appears shortly after the sad announcement of her all-too-

ROBERTS, E. M.—Continued

early death. Hers was a beautiful, broken talent. In "The Time of Man" it was major; even in "The Great Meadow" it showed evidence of continued power. Then something seemed to happen. Wittingly or unwittingly, Miss Roberts began to draw a veil between herself and the coarse-grained world we know. More and more inaccessible became her private universe, even to her greatest admirers. That inaccessibility is tragically marked in this collection of six short stories. At least two of them are baffling almost to the point of incomprehensibility. The four others, while clearer, seem to flow away from you as you read them; you are not drawn powerfully into them as you were into the very heart of "The Time of Man." Clifton Fadiman

+ — New Yorker 17:68 Mr 29 '41 390w
Pratt p11 autumn '41

Reviewed by G. G. Bates
Sat R of Lit 24:10 N 22 '41 330w

"Each story of the six is worth much re-reading. The volume is one to have in one's own library to pick up from time to time, when other more popular writing palls. It is a book to give absolute satisfaction for its style of writing, for its delicate probing into the depths of human feeling."

+ Springfield Republican p7e Mr 30 '41 700w

"As a woman Elizabeth Madox Roberts has her principal strength, her ultimate weakness. Her strength is an exquisite sensitiveness to the subtlest personal emotions, and to the quieter values of a well-executed prose. Her weakness is a sort of thin though sentient primness; a love of the archaic for its own sake."

+ — Time 37:100 Mr 17 '41 350w

ROBERTS, WALTER ADOLPHE. The pomegranate. 313p $2.50 Bobbs

41-39385

The scene of this story is an imaginary Latin American country, Caribbea; the time, 1916 and 1917. The action follows the events in the political career of a young liberal, Felipe de Somar, a career complicated by Felipe's experiences in love.

"'The Pomegranate' is a romantic and eventful story, and it also holds attention by its focus on Latin-American backgrounds of political complexity and personal character."

John Patton

+ Books p12 Mr 9 '41 440w

"This is a readable, right sort of yarn for the right sort of people. And be it added that Mr. W. Adolphe Roberts, the author of this novel, is also the author of 'The Caribbean,' a valuable chronicle of the land to the south of us, hence well informed on his background."

John Cournos

+ N Y Times p28 Mr 23 '41 700w

ROBERTS, WILLIAM HENRY. The problem of choice; an introduction to ethics. 417p $2.50 Ginn

170 Ethics

41-7008

A college textbook in ethics expounding the principle that the basis of ethics is the problem of choice. The book is in four parts: Part I: Psychological preliminaries; Part II: Historical review; Part III: Ethical theory; Part IV: Some present problems. Index.

"For a textbook in ethics, this is an excellent title, and the reading of this work will fairly reward one with the excellence anticipated from the title. The only fault is perhaps the attempt to cover too much territory." A. R. King

+ — Christian Century 58:1209 O 1 '41 650w

"Perhaps the outstanding feature of this work is its use of highly diverse, concrete, and often colorful material, much of which is interesting, but a great deal of which seems trivial or only of passing interest. . . The style and taste of the book are very uneven, and many of its statements are uncritical." J. S.

+ — J Philos 38:501 Ag 28 '41 250w

ROBERTSON, BEN. I saw England. 213p $2 Knopf

940.5342 World war, 1939—Great Britain.
World war, 1939—Personal narratives,
American (W) 41-5831

The author of this book is London correspondent for the New York paper PM. He first went to London in June, 1940, and stayed there until late in December when he returned to America on furlough. This book is made up of chapters based on notes made on the spot, eye-witness accounts of the Nazi bombings and the English reactions to Hitler's blitzkrieg.

Booklist 37:406 My 1 '41

"Ben Robertson, one of the finest reporters of his young generation, has turned in an enthralling account of the England he has seen at war. With a sensitive, conversational style, a passion for detail and a talent for anecdote he tells of Britain as he found it. . . London was Ben Robertson's headquarters, but all Britain was his source material. He did not repeat the mistake of so many others in staying too long at one time in the capital. . . He got out and traveled." Frank Kelley

+ Books p3 Ap 6 '41 700w

"An excellent piece of reporting." R. G. Woolbert

+ Foreign Affairs 19:874 Jl '41 10w

"On the whole, I Saw England is truthful, spontaneous and, needless to say, first-class journalism. Mr. Ben Robertson had a front seat. . . He did see rather more of things than we, living our lives and reading papers saw. Indeed, so vivid and sympathetic are his descriptions that one may easily take his account as covering everything. But it doesn't; the cross-section of London takes in a few at the top and a few more at the bottom; the middle-class hardly come under Mr. Robertson's eye except as queue-lines for buses. With this exception, he gives a good bird's-eye, and pecks nimbly for crumbs." G. W. Stonier

+ — New Statesman & Nation 22:190 Ag 23 '41 650w

"This is a stimulating, and, in some ways, inspiring book, one not to be missed." John Cournos

+ N Y Times p5 Ap 6 '41 500w

Reviewed by Cecil Roberts

Sat R of Lit 24:12 My 10 '41 180w

Springf'd Republican p12 Ap 24 '41 750w

"This is a book British people should read; it will encourage them to find themselves so heroic, so lovable, so entertaining; but much more than that—it will help to bridge the gulf between our two nations, which is so much wider than the Atlantic and even more easily navigable. Mr. Robertson began by being appalled, last June, on landing in England, at our absence of flurry and fluster. Now he understands us and likes us and we understand him and like him, and through him the America he represents, the America of 'Honest Abe' Lincoln, of Jefferson, and Jackson and Lee."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p403 Ag 23 '41 500w

Wis Lib Bul 37:138 Jl '41

ROBERTSON, FRANK CHESTER (FRANK CHESTER FIELD, pseud). The firebrand from Burnt Creek. 249p $2 Dutton [7s 6d Collins]

40-33107

Western story.

"This author wastes no time on sunsets and scenery. A woman screams on the first page, Don Fullmer rescues her from a brute on the second and we're off on a Western packed with action, as indicated by chapter headings ranging from 'A Day of Strain' to 'A Battle Between Titans' and 'Blood and Bullets.' Heroism, black-hearted villainy, secrets and love in a heady blend." Will Cuppy

+ Books p30 D 8 '40 50w

Boston Transcript p1 F 15 '41 20w

"As lively and snappy a tale as any yet produced by the experienced Frank C. Robertson, who is expert in this particular kind." G. W. Harris

+ N Y Times p34 Mr 23 '41 160w

ROBERTSON, FRANK CHESTER (FRANK CHESTER FIELD, pseud). Poison Valley [Eng title: Pilgrims of Poison Valley]. 256p $2 Dutton [7s 6d Collins]

41-5981

Western story.

Booklist 37:465 Je 1 '41

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p13 My 18 '41 90w

ROBERTSON, FRANK CHESTER (FRANK CHESTER FIELD, pseud). Snake river to hell. 254p $2 Dutton

41-10971

Western story.

Booklist 38:36 O 1 '41

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p8 Jl 13 '41 40w

Spring'd Republican p7e Jl 20 '41 50w

ROBINSON, GERTRUDE. Sons of liberty; il. by Woodi Ishmael. 248p $2 Dutton

(W) 41-10153

Story of two American patriots, both named David Hawes. The first David lived in the new territory of Maine in 1660, made friends with the Indians, helped his pioneering family in their labors, and was loyal to America in every way. The second David, grandson of the original David, lived in Boston in the days just before the Revolution, and carried on the family tradition of patriotism by helping Paul Revere. For readers of eleven to fourteen.

"This book is a welcome addition to Revolutionary stories to be read by children under twelve or told to younger ones." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 Ag 24 '41 290w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk M 17:292 Jl '41 100w

"A first-rate story of patriots, old and young; of venturesome youth; of the loyal friendship of certain Indian tribes. Exciting and alive, though boys may find disturbing the author's interspersing through the book bits of poetry and historical sketches. Appropriate illustrations by Woodi Ishmael. Recommended for ages eleven to fourteen." Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 66:620 Jl '41 120w

"The book is so vividly written that without any hint of preaching it may help restore the original meaning to the abused concept of patriotism."

+ New Yorker 17:143 D 6 '41 80w

"I like this book because it can teach children in the fourth, fifth, and sixth grades who are studying American history, to understand it better. The print is good and the pictures help children better to imagine what the people of those days looked like and some of their customs." Johnny

+ Spring'd Republican p7e Je 22 '41 340w

Wis Lib Bul 37:204 D '41

ROBINSON, GILMER G. Bait casting. (Barnes dollar sports lib) 66p il $1 Barnes, A.S.

799.12 Fishing

41-51617

A small book dealing with the technique of bait casting. Contents: Fundamentals of casting; The beginner's equipment; Tips on fishing; Bait; Fresh water game fish; The sport of bait casting and fishing. Index.

Booklist 37:326 Mr 15 '41

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '41

Spring'd Republican p7e Je 1 '41 130w

ROBINSON, HENRY WHEELER, ed. Bible in its ancient and English versions. 337p $3.75 (12s 6d; Oxford

220.4 Bible. Whole—History. Bible. Whole—Versions [41-5765]

"The aim of the book is to present the history of the Bible from its first origins and ancient versions down to the time of the Revised Version and afterwards." (Times [London] Lit Sup) "The history of the following versions are carefully traced by the following scholars: The Hebrew Bible by the editor; the Greek by W. F. Howard of Handsworth College, Birmingham; the Syriac by T. H. Robinson; the Latin by H. F. D. Sparks of Durham; the English versions by Sir Wm. A. Craigie and J. Isaacs of University of London, the latter also being responsible for the chapter on the Authorized version; the Revised versions and modern versions by Dr. Cadoux of Oxford." (Churchman)

"No single volume of its size contains more information concerning the texts, manuscripts and versions of the Old and New Testaments. . . The book is primarily for serious students, but it does not demand of the reader much previous technical knowledge."

+ Christian Century 58:259 F 19 '41 90w

"This book makes what might have been a dry study one of immense interest. Here is gathered into small compass facts which have been scattered on many shelves in our libraries, now made available to the general reader as well as to the specialist." G. F. Taylor

+ Churchman 155:18 Mr 15 '41 300w

Reviewed by James Moffatt

J Religion 21:463 O '41 1050w

"In its own way this is one of the most important books on the Bible which have lately been produced. This is not because the contributors have told us a great deal that is new, but because they have brought together, into comparatively small compass, a large quantity of material not readily accessible. Furthermore, the editor has gathered round him an excellent team of which each member can speak with the authority of an expert upon that branch of research which he has made peculiarly his own."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p28 Ja 18 '41 380w

ROBINSON, O. PRESTON. Retail personnel relations. 565p $5.35; to schools $4 Prentice-Hall

658.87 Employment management. Retail trade 40-33911

"The study of retail personnel relations is concerned with those problems of store operation which develop in the administration of human power. It deals with the problems involved in obtaining a suitable working force and in maintaining that force under circumstances mutually satisfactory to the employer and to the employee." (p. 1) Index.

ROBINSON, O. P.—Continued

"Personnel problems, procedures, and operations are covered in a thoroughgoing manner in this book, and the author has made a valuable contribution to the literature on re-tailing." M. D. Taylor

+ Ann Am Acad 213:232 Ja '41 800w

Reviewed by J. L. Shepard
Management R 29:418 N '40 440w

ROBINSON, THOMAS PENDLETON. Pete; il. by Morgan Dennis. 139p $2 Viking

(W) 41-3124

Pete, an engaging Airedale, and his master, Jack, were members of an understanding family. But the story is mainly about Pete, who "approved of a good time no matter who had it." His adventures with the gang of dogs, of which he was leader, make a lively story for boys of nine or older.

Booklist 37:445 My 15 '41

"A ten-year-old will leaf rapidly through these pictures, chuckling as he goes, before beginning on the story. Indeed, the pictures, which are of an airedale precisely like an airedale, make it impossible not to read the story." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 Ap 13 '41 360w

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 26 '41 150w

"The traits of [the] different natures [of the gang of dogs], their scrapes and escapades are described with a humorous twinkle on Mr. Robinson's part and are engagingly pictured by Morgan Dennis, preëminent for his drawings of dogs. This happy combination insures for the book a warm place in the heart of many dog lovers." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:103 Mr '41 80w

Reviewed by Miriam Snow

Library J 66:223 Mr 1 '41 80w

"Mr. Robinson's book seems not so much to tell a dog story as to give the reader an opportunity during the reading of its 139 pages, to possess a dog. No dog lover of any age should miss this engaging presentation of a thoroughly engaging dog and any one who has ever owned a dog will recognize its truth." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 Ap 20 '41 550w

"The author knows and appreciates his dogs without being sentimental about them and the illustrator draws them expertly."

+ New Yorker 17:88 My 24 '41 60w

Wis Lib Bul 37:159 O '41

ROBINSON, THOMAS PENDLETON, and ROBINSON, MRS ETHEL (FAY). Your own house; il. with more than 200 pen drawings. 183p $3 Viking

728 Architecture, Domestic. House decoration (W) 41-52048

Giving very little specific advice, the authors have attempted to be helpful to the layman in the formation of his own criteria of a successful house. The chapters are short, profusely illustrated with pencil drawings and deal with all the phases of the subject from choice of site, determination of style and roof lines, to lighting fixtures, fireplaces, and furniture. Index.

Booklist 38:154 Ja 1 '42

"Many young people will enjoy with their elders the fascinating drawings sprinkled through this book. They will take pleasure, too, in the informal but practical comment on building sites and chimneys, on doorways and furniture, all framed to make for more intelligent home building. One does not need, either, to be planning for a new house to draw wisdom from these witty and understanding pages. Such sensible advice and sound information in designing houses, whatever their type, should do much to encourage good taste in building and furnishing a house. Above all, the authors emphasize the importance of expressing one's own personality in making a home." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 18:35 Ja '42 110w

J Home Econ 34:51 Ja '42 90w

RODELL, MRS MARIE (FREID) (MARION RANDOLPH, pseud). Grim grow the lilacs. 247p $2 Holt

41-22669

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p31 N 23 '41 140w

"The excellence of this story lies as much in its deft characterization as in its skillful plotting." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p22 N 16 '41 240w

"Suspense holds up well, and sleuthing—what there is of it—is competently handled. Worth-while."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:24 N 8 '41 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 16 '41 120w

Time 33:92 D 1 '41 30w

RODGER, SARAH-ELIZABETH (MRS C. S. HENRY). Not with my heart. 273p $2 Doubleday

41-11803

A girl who thinks and says that marriage should be a matter of the head, not of the heart, almost loses her chance of happiness when she marries according to plan and finds out almost too late that the heart is important, too.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p8 Ag 10 '41 90w

"A rather touching and believable story of young people who marry too suddenly. . . The story is set in New York and on the eastern shore of Maryland, both obviously well known to Miss Rodger."

+ N Y Times p16 Ag 3 '41 200w

"A pleasant unimportant novel."

Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 20 '41 150w

RODGERS, MRS EDITH (COOPERRIDER). Discussion of holidays in the later middle ages. 147p $1.50 Columbia univ. press

394.26 Holidays 41-3851

"What was the attitude of medieval people to the innumerable church holidays, what the place they occupied in their scheme of life, how was the resultant leisure employed and what the economic consequences of said days? These are some of the questions answered by the author." (Commonweal) Bibliography. Index.

"Mrs. Rodgers has searched widely in all pertinent sources and has overlooked nothing of significance that might explain the attitude of medieval men toward their many days of leisure. . . The title of this study is not well chosen. It is too loose, too vague to describe just what the book aims to do. It is unfortunate that little attempt has been made to synthesize and to reach significant generalization. The catalogue of notes, so carefully gathered, is reflected too obviously on each page, where 'the many' obscure 'the one'. The quality of the exposition adds difficulties for the reader, for the writing is too often redundant and hence lacking in clarity and precision. . . The excellent bibliography of some 350 titles might be even more useful had a systematic rather than an alphabetical classification been adopted."

+ Am Hist R 46:974 Jl '41 210w

Commonweal 33:429 F 14 '41 50w

"The author, perhaps with advantage, keeps to a limited field of evidence and does not engage in broad interpretations of the larger religious, recreational, and economic implications of her problem. She is to be congratulated on a lucid and compressed presentation of the fundamental points of 'discussion' concerning holy days in the period chosen." J. T. McNeill

+ J Religion 21:488 O '41 430w

"Here is history for history's sake, carefully deduced from an impressive bibliography. As such it has intrinsic worth and as a study of the use of leisure it has contemporary significance." Grace Fox

+ Social Studies 32:234 My '41 240w

RODMAN, SELDEN. The airmen; a poem in four parts. 148p il $2 Random house

811 Aeronautics—Poetry 41-7346

A long narrative poem in which the author tells the stories and celebrates the achievements of airmen from Icarus to Lauro de Bosis, the Italian aviator-poet who sacrificed his life in battle against tyranny.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Drew

Atlantic O '41 250w

Booklist 38:6 S '41

"The Airmen" is a book excellently conceived and planned, admirable in structure and research detail, but weak in verse narrative and poetic impact. It is conceivable that the poetry of flight itself eludes and transcends even the most impassioned lyric expression. . . I do not think that Mr. Rodman—aware of the great technical difficulties his subject-matter presents—is under any illusion that what he has written is superior as poetry." Ruth Lechlitner

+ — Books p12 My 4 '41 500w

"The poem, in the last analysis, doesn't jell. It's the old college try, that's all. Mr. Rodman is an excellent eclectic, but he isn't a very good poet. He is readable, but readability is not necessarily the test of art. He is tolerably clever (or at least unique) at construction, but not clever enough to keep "The Airmen" from moving in jerks. The history of his subject is, unfortunately for him, as long and as difficult of comprehension as the air is of access. Its history is long, yes, and full of fine names, and yet one can't help feeling that a long poem on aviation is a little premature." Harry Brown

+ — New Repub 104:769 Je 2 '41 650w

"The poetry of aviation though not yet on the wing . . . is gaining in force and direction, as Mr. Rodman's long poetic chronicle shows. It is a serious poem, carefully planned and written, probably the most important to deal with the new life in the air. It avoids the rather frivolous balladry of William Rose Benét's 'With Wings as Eagles,' and incorporates something of Auden's symbolism of a new society in his 'Journal of an Airman,' and perhaps owes something to Muriel Rukeyser's revolutionary metaphysic in 'Theory of Flight.' . . Its present merit is not its own occasional flights of poetry, which are too occasional at the moment, but its sustained heroic enthusiasm which makes it a heroic poem, and its extraordinary resources of associated information which make it a most interesting and illuminating work." P. M. Jack

+ — N Y Times p8 J1 20 '41 950w

Reviewed by K. J. Shapiro

Poetry 58:264 Ag '41 600w

"The book as a whole has a sweeping power and intensity. The concept is moving in the extreme, and there are passages and lines which have great poetic dignity and beauty. It is epic in theme, and if, for some readers its treatment makes it fall short of a certain warmth of emotional appeal, that is not to say that it is not a fine and praiseworthy accomplishment." S. H. Hay

+ Sat R of Lit 23:13 Ap 26 '41 800w

ROE, VINGIE EVE (MRS R. C. LAWTON). Wild harvest. 243p $2 Mill

41-5224

Tale of homesteading in the days of the Oklahoma Rush. Pres and Thad Warren both fall in love with a lone woman homesteader, but one of them complicates the issue by getting mixed up with a woman bandit.

"A yarn crammed with action and frontier flavor." Lisle Bell

+ Books p24 Ap 6 '41 70w

"The story is a mixture of farming difficulties in new territory and Wild West excitement. It has train holdups and fields trampled by cattle, drinking and shooting, death and birth. There is a mystery about Pres which is kept up until the very end, the solution bringing peace to his mother and the girl who loved him." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p26 Mr 30 '41 120w

Wis Lib Bul 37:117 Je '41

ROEDIGER, VIRGINIA MORE. Ceremonial costumes of the Pueblo Indians; their evolution, fabrication, and significance in the prayer drama [40 color pl. from original drawings by the author; pref. by J. R. Allardyce Nicoll and introd. by Frederick Webb Hodge]. 251p $15 Univ. of Calif.

970.6391 Pueblo Indians. Indians of North America—Costume and adornment. Indians of North America—Drama 41-52754

"The main portion is given over to the study of these costumes as a whole and down to the last detail of texture, form and color, with forty plates (in color) by the author to supplement the narrative. But before this analysis begins, there is a concise, selective and exceedingly valuable chapter on the history of the Pueblo Indians, the location of their villages, the climate and the conquests that influenced these locations, the architecture and the social customs and ceremonials that have grown out of their place of living, their government, their religion and the collective organization of all of their enterprises." Theatre Arts

"Miss Roediger has made a lasting contribution to the written knowledge of the Pueblo Indians in this study." Lisle Bell

+ Books p29 O 5 '41 280w

"In his introduction to Miss Roediger's book, Mr. F. W. Hodge of the Southwest Museum says, 'No researcher among the Pueblo Indians will fail to give this volume his hearty commendation.' And the book merits this praise." Frederick Morton

+ Theatre Arts 25:851 N '41 400w

ROETHKE, THEODORE. Open house. 1td ed 70p $2 Knopf

811

41-51787

A first volume of poems by a young American poet, a professor at Pennsylvania State College. Many of the poems have been published previously in magazines. "The wholeness of 'Open House' demands comment. Mr. Roethke has built it with infinite patience in five sections. The first is personal pronoun; the second the out-of-doors; the third is premonition of darker things—death among them; the fourth is the purest of metaphysical wit, something very rare in our time; and the fifth contains still another side of this poet's nature, the human awareness of which he has become capable in his recent development." (Boston Transcript)

"Theodore Roethke is unlike most modern poets in the sense of inner security and certainty which his poems communicate. . . He knows 'The fortitude whereby true work is wrought.' This fortitude appears in his own craftsmanship. Whether he is writing light satire or descriptions of natural scenes, his poems have a controlled grace of movement, and his images the utmost precision; while in the expression of a kind of gnomic wisdom which is peculiar to him he attains an austerity of contemplation and a pared, spare strictness of language very unusual in poets of today." Elizabeth Drew

+ Atlantic Ag '41 140w

Booklist 37:461 Je 1 '41

ROETHKE, THEODORE—Continued

Bookmark 2:10 N '41

"Altogether 'Open House' is a very good first book and likely to be followed by better ones from this poet's pen. A section of light verse proves Mr. Roethke's versatility of technique; his serious poems have definite quality. It is a quality not easy to interpret; that of simplicity and accurate observation made poignant by correct use. Thus used and understood they may convey restrained pain, even horror, without self-pity." E. L. Walton

+ Books p4 Ag 10 '41 750w

Reviewed by John Holmes

+ Boston Transcript p9 Mr 24 '41 700w

Reviewed by Stephen Baldanza

Commonweal 34:188 Je 13 '41 330w

Reviewed by Rolfe Humphries

New Repub 105:62 Jl 14 '41 550w

"This is a good first book. The poet is to be congratulated on his wisdom in the severe selection of less than half a hundred poems, representing nine years' work. A slight unevenness shows growth from earlier to later, with promise of even greater expansion and development in this young poet slow to offer his finished work." Amy Bonner

+ N Y Times p9 O 5 '41 650w

"A young poet with a real sense of lyric style, a fine, bitter wit, and a feeling for the small and medium-sized as well as for the large doings in the world about him."

+ New Yorker 17:72 Mr 29 '41 30w

"The charges of obscurity and cacophony, favorite twin blasts from the double-barreled shotgun of conservative critics, cannot be effectively directed against Open House. Theodore Roethke's first volume of verse is the result of careful, methodical, and honest craftsmanship. Adverse judgment might be aroused, however, among the Panzerdivisionen of radical critics, but I feel that their attack would prove equally misdirected; all the poems in the book are lyrics, and a lyricist may, in even a streamlined age, be granted the prerogative of preferring a simple, traditional technique."

Louis Forster, Jr.

+ Poetry 58:222 Jl '41 950w

"Many people have the experience of feeling physically soiled and humiliated by life; some quickly put it out of their mind, others gloat narcissistically on its unimportant details; but both to remember and to transform the humiliation into something beautiful, as Mr. Roethke does, is rare. Every one of the lyrics in this book, whether serious or light, shares the same kind of ordered sensibility."

W. H. Auden

+ Sat R of Lit 23:30 Ap 5 '41 900w

Reviewed by J. L. Sweeney

Yale R n s 30:817 summer '41 190w

ROETHLISBERGER, FRITZ JULES. Management and morale. 194p $2 Harvard univ. press 658.3 Employment management. Efficiency, Industrial A41-4302

"[The] conclusions of this book stem from the same source material as formed the basis for the author's earlier and more exhaustive study (with Dickson) of 'Management and the Worker'—an elaborate record of the findings of their extended researches in human relations at the Hawthorne plant of the Western Electric Company. The gist of the matter has to do with the social nature of the self, including the worker's self, the importance of feeling and sentiment in human reactions, the value placed on the natural human groupings of those working together, the importance of confession or conversational outlets, the need for deft and sensitive supervisors, the fact of the rise of informal leaders among the workers themselves." Survey

Reviewed by Crane Brinton

Sat R of Lit 24:7 D 27 '41 1750w

"The volume has one blind spot from the point of view of today's inquiring managerial reader. Making much, as the author does, of the work of 'specialists whose fields involve cooperative phenomena,' it is extraordinary that one finds no mention of the labor union or of the problems surrounding negotiations with it. . . . Within the limits thus set, this is one of the most substantial offerings to management thinking in recent years. With such splendid perceptiveness and capacity to see problems in new perspectives, one could wish that the author might have the opportunity to continue his explorations in organizations where collective negotiation had influenced the characteristic patterns of collaborative behavior."

Orday Tead

+ — Survey 77:373 D '41 680w

ROGERS, AGNES (MRS FREDERICK LEWIS ALLEN). From man to machine; a pictorial history of invention. 160p il $2.50 Little 608 Inventions (W) 41-22601

History, mainly in photographs and old prints, of man's struggle thru the ages to adapt himself to his surroundings and to get the better of them. Includes brief text. Partial contents: Tools and machines; Food from the fields; More power to you; Travel by land; Travel by water; Skyways; The written word; The spoken word; Light; What things are made of.

Booklist 38:185 F 1 '42

"The text is economical, colloquial and direct. There is abundant evidence of careful research among primary sources. Miss Rogers has avoided the old myths. She has given proper credit to men like Joseph Henry, John Flitch and John Stevens, whose names are often forgotten or subordinated in popular invention histories. . . . The publisher has done a good job and has put a reasonable price on it. The book is easy to look at and easy to read. It belongs on the Christmas list for boys—aged 7 to 70." Roger Burlingame

+ Books p2 N 30 '41 480w

"Illustrated by an unusually resourceful and captivating collection of photographs and early prints." K. W. S.

+ New Yorker 17:147 D 6 '41 10w

"Well conceived but over-ambitious." Raymond Holden

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:9 N 8 '41 30w

Wis Lib Bul 37:199 D '41

ROGERS, BETTY (BLAKE) (MRS WILL ROGERS). Will Rogers; his wife's story. 312p il $2.75 Bobbs

B or 92 Rogers, Will

(W) 41-23581

Biography of Will Rogers, the Oklahoma cowboy whose kindly humor and personal charm made him a general favorite, both in the show business, and as a journalist. The story is told by his wife. Quotations from his sayings and writings are included, and many anecdotes are sprinkled thruout the book.

Booklist 38:176 Ja 15 '42

"The book, as might be expected, is non-critical and highly pro-Rogers, but that fact hardly detracts from its value. Virtually all the facts are here, and in satisfying detail." Stanley Walker

+ Books p24 N 16 '41 700w

"In serial form, several months ago, many read portions of this new book. By those who knew Will Rogers personally, as well as by those who knew him only as a writer or actor, the somewhat more intimate chapters in the book are enjoyed more because of the selected seasoning earlier provided as an appetizer." F. L. P.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 D 22 '41 550w

"Mrs. Rogers writes simply and, for a wife, quite sensibly about her husband's homely ways and the casual development of a uniquely American career. Well peppered with typical Rogers commentary."

+ New Repub 105:869 D 22 '41 50w

"Will Rogers is a living figure throughout this book; and his wife's part is notable for its wholesome self-effacement. . . . A study of Will Rogers's temperament, with its combination of energy and serenity, is another interesting feature of a lively and appealing book."
+ N Y Times p16 D 7 '41 490w

ROGERS, FREDERICK RAND, ed. Dance: a basic educational technique; a functional approach to the use of rhythmic and dance as prime methods of body development and control, and transformation of moral and social behavior. 351p pl $5; textbook ed $3.75 Macmillan

793.32 Dancing (W) 41-12867

A volume designed for teachers and educators wishing to promote the teaching of dancing in American schools. The book is a composite one made up of articles by various exponents of dancing, including Frederick Rand Rogers, Walter Terry, John Martin, Ruth St Denis, Louis Chailif, Martha Graham, Doris Humphrey, Ted Shawn, Grace L. Enders. The book is in three main parts dealing with (1) theory, (2) guides to teaching, (3) guides to practice. Part four contains biographical material on the authors, and a bibliography. Index.

Booklist 38:109 D 1 '41

School & Society 54:48 J1 19 '41 70w

"In all, these sum up to less than a well-thought out and well-organized textbook for college courses in dance; that awaits the crystallization of which this book is a sign and which it will help to promote." George Beiswanger

Theatre Arts 25:852 N '41 300w

ROGERS, MEYRIC REYNOLDS. Carl Milles; an interpretation of his work. 73p 163pl $15 Yale univ. press

735 Sculpture. Milles, Carl 40-27852

For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

"Mr. Rogers' magnificent book, with its highly intelligent text and its 163 full-page plates besides other incidental illustrations, makes a clearer presentation of Milles' ideas and objectives and of his techniques for their expression and attainment than can possibly be given by any brief statement about either the sculptor's or the interpreter's work. The interpreter furnishes biographical material, a survey of the development of Milles' style with an analysis of its sources, comments on his technique, and a catalogue of his works. This is all relevant and valuable, but only as introductory to the splendid pictures of the works themselves." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 58:321 Mr 5 '41 550w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Mr 15 '41 400w

"One of the most beautifully printed monographs on sculpture that have appeared in America: Its photographs lack the unity of style and brilliance of illumination that distinguished the recent Phaidon volumes on Michelangelo and Rodin, but they have been taken with sufficient care to exhibit the full range of Milles' inventions, technical methods, and the scope of his themes and motives. . . . It is unfortunate that so honest and hearty a craftsman, so scrupulous a designer, and so genuine a revivalist of the best elements in the archaistic tradition should be made to suffer by the comparisons and references entailed by Mr. Rogers's extravagant claims in this sumptuous but critically uninformed monograph." M. D. Zabel

+ Nation 152:329 Mr 22 '41 1000w

Times [London] Lit Sup p398 Ag 16 '41 500w

ROHMER, SAX, pseud. (ARTHUR SARS-FIELD WADE). The island of Fu Manchou. 299p $2 Doubleday

41-2439

Mystery story.

"The whole thing makes a Sax Rohmer riot, fully up to this author's standard in every respect. Look at some of the chapters: Padded Footsteps, The Shrivelled Head, A Green Hand, Drums in the Night." Will Cuppy
Books p20 F 23 '41 150w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggan

Boston Transcript p2 Mr 8 '41 30w

"Dr. Fu's inventiveness knows no end, and a succession of thrills follow on his way. Thriller de luxe."

+ Sat R of Lit 23:20 Mr 15 '41 20w

Times [London] Lit Sup p565 N 15 '41 60w

ROLLINS, RICHARD. I find treason; the story of an American anti-Nazi agent. 291p il $3 Morrow

351.74 Propaganda, German. Germans in the U.S. Fascism—U.S. Spies. Propaganda, Italian (W) 41-5179

In 1933 the author of this book became aware of the activities of Hitler's propaganda agents and at that time, almost alone, he started out to investigate such organizations as the Friends of Germany, the Silver Shirts, etc. This book, a record of his adventures and observations, deals in particular with such men as Fritz Kuhn, The Italian Castorina, Joe McWilliams, and others. Index.

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin
Atlantic My '41 100w

Booklist 37:402 My 1 '41

"It is clear that Rollins has been a very busy man for the last eight years. But his revelations are somewhat lacking in freshness and the element of excitement." W. A. Roberts

Books p14 Ap 27 '41 550w

Reviewed by Hans Kohn

Boston Transcript p1 Mr 22 '41 180w

Reviewed by Olga Owens

Boston Transcript p3 Mr 29 '41 210w

"A first-hand account that is rather interesting and in places exciting. Most of the basic information in it is already known by newspaper readers. Nevertheless, it is useful and timely, for it tells in a readable way of very dangerous activities. It purports to show that Nazi Germany, through official and unofficial agents, is carrying out a conspiracy against America." R. H. M.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 Mr 26 '41 330w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 19:876 J1 '41 20w

Reviewed by George Paige

New Repub 104:830 Je 16 '41 480w

"The story of Fritz Kuhn has more than a touch of the E. Phillips Oppenheim technique, what with its romantic details, including a fascinating woman informer, hidden microphones and the photostated check that resulted in Kuhn's conviction. Americans will better understand the well-organized and far-reaching propaganda machine of the Nazi party if they will read this book." E. F. Allen

+ N Y Times p32 Mr 23 '41 550w

"An intelligent, first-person account which seems to be thoroughly documented. You may have seen some of the material in the newspapers, but much of it is new."

+ New Yorker 17:86 Mr 22 '41 80w

"I Find Treason" seeks to be graphic and succeeds in making itself a lively narrative, which is something of a feat considering that much of its material merely develops detail on matters which have already been publicized.

ROLLINS, RICHARD—Continued.

The 65 pages devoted to its 'dossier' are selected from Mr Rollins's own file, and some of them are reproduced for the first time. They make an interesting collection."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 Ap 3 '41 1000w

ROLLINSON, JOHN K. Hoofprints of a cowboy and U.S. ranger; pony trails in Wyoming; ed. and arr. by E. A. Brininstool. 410p pl $3.50 Caxton printers

917.87 Frontier and pioneer life—Wyoming. Cowboys 41-7147

In the 1890's the author ran away from his New York state home and went out to Wyoming to become a cowboy. His reminiscences describe his years in Wyoming, when he was variously employed on ranches, did some trapping and hunting, and later became a forest ranger.

Booklist 37:513 J1 1 '41

"The book is a mine of authentic Western material and should prove invaluable to all those fictioneers who thrive by writing tales of the range. In fact, there are few books of the sort which can rival this one in the multiplicity of facts about the life of the cowboy. Moreover, these details are not presented coldly or in generalizations. The author never lost his boyish enthusiasm for the men and animals and country of the plains and mountains, and everything he tells us is glowing with this warm and very human feeling."

Stanley Vestal

+ Books p21 Mr 30 '41 390w

Wis Lib Bul 37:115 Je '41

ROMAINS, JULES, pseud. (LOUIS FARI-GOULE). Aftermath; tr. from the French by Gerard Hopkins. (Men of good will, v9) 463p $2.75 Knopf [10s 6d Davies]

(W)

This book forms the seventeenth and eighteenth (French) volumes of the immense novel, Men of Good Will. In the first part Quinette reappears, the bookseller with a mania for killing; the second part is devoted to the diary of Jallez, the young Parisian journalist settled at Nice for the winter to enjoy the "sweets of life." Index.

"As in the previous volumes, there is much memorable speculation and comment. One does not know whether to admire more the creativeness or the wisdom." R. M. G.

+ Atlantic Mr '41 240w

Booklist 37:270 F 15 '41

"Patiently and sensitively, with an understanding, no less extensive than intensive, of human nature and of the many milieus of a complex society, M. Romain's moves forward, with complete confidence, in his encyclopedic attempt at a psychological biography of twentieth-century France." Milton Rugoff

+ Books p5 F 2 '41 800w

Reviewed by D. L. Mann

Boston Transcript p1 F 8 '41 480w

"The book is crowded with pertinent and philosophical observations on politics, art, and literature. It will have a wide appeal." E. M. Olcott

+ Library J 66:32 Ja 1 '41 220w

"'The Aftermath' is anticlimax to 'Verdun,' a staggered pause in M. Romain's enormous commentary. And two criticisms must at once be made. Here is a picture of France delivered from war but delivered to doubt and, indeed, to decadence. It gives constant rise to the suspicion that the observations of Jallez are impurely contemporary, tainted by today's wisdom after the event. The second criticism is that the character-drawing is washy." Harold Brighouse

+ Manchester Guardian p6 D 13 '40 350w

Reviewed by Albert Guérard

Nation 152:160 F 8 '41 1000w

"The ninth volume of 'Men of Good Will' comes out almost on schedule. It is a volume very much like the others, except that it seems quieter and rather more pedestrian. Partly this may be the result of a deliberate plan, the author having decided that after the thunders of 'Verdun' it was time to give his readers a breathing space. But the plan either miscarried or was carried too far, and the breaths of relief are likely to end as yawns." Malcolm Cowley

New Repub 104:187 F 10 '41 900w

"It is easy to disparage M. Romain's enormous novel, and this has been done freely. Like a whale, Men of Good Will makes an excellent target: it is open to anyone to aim darts at large areas marked Undistinguished Style, Indiscriminate Taste, Shapeless Sprawl, and so on. But meanwhile the whale pursues its way unhindered, sending up jet after jet of imaginative spume over year after year of European history. . . M. Romain is the proud possessor of that rare thing, creative imagination, and his novel, with all its faults, simply teems with characters whose lives and thoughts are as real to us as those of people personally known. And what a gift for narrative! What a sense of humour!" Edward Sackville West

+ New Statesman & Nation 20:658 D 21 '40 1300w

Reviewed by Justin O'Brien

N Y Times p5 F 2 '41 1500w

"'Aftermath' is a letdown from the magnificences of his 'Verdun.' We might as well be fair, however, it is also a welcome relief after the dubious 'Seven Mysteries of Europe,' about which the less said the better. Part of 'Aftermath' is pretty dull, particularly its second volume, 'The Sweets of Life.'" Clifton Fadiman

New Yorker 16:64 F 8 '41 700w

Reviewed by Gilbert Highet

Sat R of Lit 23:5 F 8 '41 1000w

"The importance of the book lies in the fact that the men of good will are adult; they are pitifully groping but reassuringly experienced. We can think and feel with them, and at this moment they offer themselves to us as an earnest of the permanence of the real being of France. This work, with the philosophic thread running unobtrusively through it, is more than a mere picture of society; it is a symbol of life." Bonamy Dobrée

+ Spec 165:618 D 6 '40 280w

"'Aftermath' is a worthy addition to this great series, besides being, in itself, an authentic evocation of the immediate post-war years, the period of uneasy calm after the storm."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e F 16 '41 700w

Time 37:72 F 3 '41 750w

"As always, there is not a little to admire in the fastidious clarity of M. Romain's thought and in his powers of fertile and ironical invention, though where he may be leading us is still something of a mystery. 'Verdun' seems to have exhausted for the time being his sense of France's greatness."

Times [London] Lit Sup p615 D 7 '40 800w

Reviewed by Robert Littell

Yale R n s 30:xiv spring '41 40w

ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH. POPE, 1878-1903 (LEO XIII). Social wellsprings; fourteen epochal documents by Pope Leo XIII [ed] by Joseph Husslein. 284p $2.50 Bruce pub.

261 Sociology, Christian 41-1099

"Father Husslein has gathered fourteen of the more important social encyclicals of Pope Leo XIII into one volume. Thus we have Inscrutabili (on the evils of society), 'Quod Apostolici Muneris (on the socialists), Arcanum (on Christian Marriage), Diuturnum (civil government), Immortale Dei (on the Christian Constitution of States), Libertas Humana (on Human Liberty), Rerum Novarum (on the condition of labor), etc. The book contains an excellent index. Some of the encyclicals are now out of print." Commonweal

Cath World 152:763 Mr '41 250w
Commonweal 33:309 Ja 10 '41 70w

ROMOLI, MRS KATHLEEN. Colombia, gateway to South America. 364p il map $3.50 Doubleday

918.6 Colombia (W) 41-51852

The author describes Colombia as a land of contrasts, high mountains and hot lowlands, ultra-modern cities and wild primitive hinterlands, the "most real democracy" in South America and a land where sections are still to be found where the intruder may be shot on sight by bow-and-arrow Indians. Her book is a combination of keen observation on present conditions, personal anecdotes of travel, and history and tradition. Index.

Booklist 37:545 Jl 15 '41

"Mrs. Romoli's material on this fascinating country is often richer than the treatment. She sometimes lacks the ability to make her characters come to life, but she has seen Colombia thoroughly and adjudged it accurately and sympathetically. Her book is, to my knowledge, the most thorough interpretation of Colombia yet written in this generation." Hudson Strode
+ Books p5 Je 15 '41 1050w

Reviewed by Joseph McSorley
Cath World 153:753 S '41 1600w

"For restrained enthusiasm and a measure of popularized scholarship, Mrs. Romoli is recommended. Her pages flow easily and deposit a pleasant residue of useful information. Instead of viewing Colombia exclusively from the standpoint of what may be seen today, she spent enough time with colonial authors to deepen and flavor her text." R. H. S.
+ Christian Science Monitor p18 Ag 29 '41 420w

"The author has evidently traveled extensively throughout the country she so charmingly describes. She has managed to acquire a pretty thorough knowledge of its complex economic structure, with its diversified exports ranging from coffee and cotton to gold, emeralds and platinum. The style is simple, refreshing and clear, and the illustrations excellent." G. S.

+ Commonweal 34:284 Jl 11 '41 110w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:387 Ja '42 10w

Reviewed by A. M. Colt
Library J 66:462 My 15 '41 130w
Living Age 360:496 Jl '41 700w

"For anyone of non-political bent about to pay a short visit to the country, the book would be very serviceable. One feels a country of definite character in its pages. It gave me a modest pleasure, comparable, say, to that given by the music of Greig." Ralph Bates
+ Nation 153:121 Ag 9 '41 70w

"One among many admirable features of this book is that it is written with respectful affection coupled with deep understanding. In other words, it is a superb example of the growing comprehension among ourselves of the facts, the problems, the aspirations and the achievements of our co-partner neighbors in these glorious Americas of ours." F. A. Means
+ N Y Times p9 Je 22 '41 800w

"Well constructed and brilliantly written, this volume contains as keen and understanding an interpretation as has been written of an Hispanic American nation. Mrs. Romoli deftly blends essential import with equally essential triviality to reproduce not merely a nation but a people in its many moods." Emile Brugliere
+ Survey G 30:483 S '41 120w
Wis Lib Bul 37:138 Jl '41

RONALD, JAMES. She got what she asked for. 286p $2 Lippincott 41-22360

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p40 N 2 '41 120w

"Noteworthy for chief suspect's exciting hide-and-seek with cops, perceptive sleuthing by bar-keep, and surprise finish."
+ Sat R of Lit 24:19 N 29 '41 40w

RONALD, JAMES. This way out. 288p $2 Lippincott [8s 3d Rich]

41-12024

"A little middle-class English clerk murders his wife and then goes through a period of alternating terror and happiness." New Yorker

"Those who want unrelieved gloom in their murder tales might fancy this story of a middle-aged clerk's domestic sorrows, his attempt to snatch something better from life by violent means and so forth to a conclusion which one need not reveal." Will Cuppy
Books p17 Mr 30 '41 90w

Reviewed by E. R. Punshon
Manchester Guardian p3 F 9 '40 30w

Reviewed by Mort. Post
New Repub 104:478 Ap 7 '41 40w

"A tragic tale that no reader is likely to forget." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p24 Mr 30 '41 380w

"Well thought out, and beautifully written."
+ New Yorker 17:72 Mr 29 '41 20w

"Very well done."
+ Sat R of Lit 23:36 Ap 5 '41 40w
Times [London] Lit Sup p113 Mr 2 '40 40w

ROOS, KELLEY, pseud. of AUDREY KELLEY and WILLIAM ROOS. If the shroud fits. 274p $2 Dodd

41-18115

Detective story.

"Pleasing all-around entertainment. The background of commercial photography is most informative, the plot is just tricky enough and Haila is one of the likable lady narrators." Will Cuppy

+ Books p20 S 28 '41 160w

"If the Shroud Fits has so many good qualities that one regrets the necessity of pointing out that the final explanation is too long, as such explanations often are. This one is better than most because it contains a surprise revelation, in addition to Jeff's story of how he arrived at the solution." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p22 O 5 '41 220w

"Super-ebullience of animal spirits amongst all concerned and two quite unbelievable professional sleuths make otherwise reasonably interesting yarn irritating."

Sat R of Lit 24:36 O 18 '41 40w

ROOSEVELT, FRANKLIN DELANO. Public papers. See United States. President, 1933- (F. D. Roosevelt)

ROOSEVELT, NICHOLAS. Venezuela's place in the sun; modernizing a pioneering country. 88p il map $1 Round table

918.7 Venezuela (W) 41-51545

Brief handbook on Venezuela, containing travel information and material on foreign investments in that country, especially in the oil industry. Illustrated with many photographs.

Booklist 37:269 F 15 '41

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 19:885 Jl '41 10w

ROOSEVELT, THEODORE, 1858-1919. Theodore Roosevelt cyclopedia; ed. by Albert Bushnell Hart and Herbert R. Ferleger; foreword by William Allen White. 674p $6 Roosevelt memorial assn, 28 E. 20th st, N.Y.

308.1 U.S.—Politics and government 41-4125

"This publication contains a selected collection of Theodore Roosevelt's ideas and opinions on a wide variety of subjects as expressed in his speeches, personal letters, state papers and in book and magazine articles. . . The selections are arranged in alphabetical order under descriptive subject headings such as Abbey theatre; Africa—future of; Bird collecting; Cleveland, Grover; Dickens' characters; Farmer and laborer; Industrial arbitration, etc. The selections under each subject heading vary in number and in length." Subscription Bks Bul

"When the zeal of the encyclopedists is linked with the even greater zeal of the friends of Theodore Roosevelt, the result is bound to be outstanding. So it is with this extraordinary, possibly unique, new volume. . . Once more American students of public affairs owe an obligation to the Roosevelt Memorial Association for preserving the Roosevelt heritage which is America's." E. D. C.

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 D 27 '41 400w

"Theodore Roosevelt still remains to many persons the political idol and oracle whom they would most wish brought back to life and activity in the present crisis. For this reason there is special appropriateness in the publication by the Roosevelt Memorial association of the 'Theodore Roosevelt Cyclopedia.' . . But, if this book is a delight to those who worshiped Theodore Roosevelt, it also must tend to support some of his critics in their judgment of him. For it reveals him, as any collection of quotations must, in typically sweeping denunciations of those who disagreed with and opposed him and in whom, for that all-sufficient reason, he could see no good whatever."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 O 6 '41 550w

"The excerpts and quotations are well chosen and give the reader an excellent insight into Mr. Roosevelt's reactions to the problems of his day. . . The Theodore Roosevelt cyclopedia is recommended."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 12:44 J1 '41 490w

ROPER, MRS EDITH, and LEISER, CLARA. Skeleton of justice. 346p $3 Dutton

943.085 Justice, Administration of—Germany. Courts—Germany. Germany—Nazi movement 41-7409

"The perversion of law in the Nazi courts as it involves the Ministry of Justice, judges, state prosecutors, religious trials, political trials, juvenile crime, and so on. Mrs. Roper, a reporter who covered the Reich's courts from 1936 to 1939 for German newspapers, fooled the Nazis into allowing her to take her material out of the country." (New Yorker) No index.

Reviewed by Hans von Hentig

Am J Soc 47:497 N '41 600w

Reviewed by R. M. W. Kempner

Am Pol Sci R 35:1014 O '41 450w

Reviewed by Morris Ploscowe

Ann Am Acad 217:211 S '41 600w

Booklist 37:544 J1 15 '41

"Mrs. Roper's material is presented with a remarkable power of observation. Her deductions are logical and unemotional, her quotations always to the point. 'Skeleton of Justice' is an exactly written document which has the suspense of a thrilling novel." Mariarne Hauser

+ Books p2 My 18 '41 1000w

"This is an important and depressing book."

R. G. Woolbert

+ Foreign Affairs 20:201 O '41 60w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross

Library J 66:400 My 1 '41 130w

"The book should be of deep interest to students of law, to sitting judges and to editors and reporters. Although we in America are hardened to tales of Nazi depravity, this book digs into the sordid facts. Incidentally it shows how low the press has sunk in Germany, how helplessly editors and reporters wallow in a sea of putrescence." P. J. Watrous

+ Living Age 360:394 Je '41 190w

"A fascinating account of the changes in German judicial procedure since Hitler's assumption of power. . . This is not just another book about the horror inside Germany but an invaluable reference work for every antifascist." Milton Hindus

+ Nation 152:703 Je 14 '41 360w

"Luckily, this book is not, as the publishers would have it, 'one of the most amazing personal stories ever told.' We have had plenty of such stories, and their factual value has been deplorably small. This book does not need to be presented under false pretenses; as a sober and unemotional account of the perverted system of Nazi justice it is interesting enough in itself." Klaus Lambrecht

+ New Repub 105:227 Ag 18 '41 480w

"A perusal of this interesting volume, rich with minute data of court proceedings and back stage revelations, leads to the very natural conclusion that you cannot have one kind of justice abroad and another kind at home. . . Mrs. Roper presents in the pages of her book a whole gallery of fascinating portraits of Nazi judges who could not be matched except, possibly, by the judges in the Soviet courts in the early years of the Russian Revolution." John Cournos

+ N Y Times p4 My 18 '41 700w

"Readable, evidently authentic, and pretty well covers the subject."

+ New Yorker 17:95 My 17 '41 60w

"The book furnishes many other interesting details of a field of Nazi administration where precise information has been all too meagre in the past. Edith Roper was one of the very few newspaper correspondents permitted to attend trials and report court matters in Germany. She fortunately was able to remove her files out of the country and with the collaboration of Clara Leiser wrote the book under review. It is perhaps regrettable that Mrs. Roper did not have a more thorough working knowledge of judicial processes in general, and some technical understanding of legal concepts. Her critical evaluation of a number of court matters she witnessed suffers accordingly. Both layman and lawyer, however, will find in 'Skeleton of Justice' further factual basis for provocative thought concerning the Nazi tyranny which threatens the world." J. S. Zurkow

+ Yale Law J 51:192 N '41 650w

ROSE, DONALD FRANK. My own four walls; il. by Leon Rose. 277p $2 Doubleday

630.1 Country life 41-4447

In a series of essays the author describes an enjoyable task which he has spread out over twenty-two years—transforming a century-old farmhouse, near Philadelphia, into a home, and transforming its outbuildings into tenant houses. Gardening, going to auctions, being your own mason, and the assembling of a library are among the subjects which he discusses in humorous vein.

Booklist 37:438 My 15 '41

"In a score of cogent essays, Mr. Rose gives a complete picture of his personal adventures in homemaking, most of which testify to his preference for 'old-fashioned' ways of living. He maintains that 'leaning backward too far, a man can always sit down and think things over. Leaning forward too far, he is likely to fall on his nose.' In any case, he has found that living in a house a hundred years old has turned his preference into an irresistible compulsion." M. W. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 My 17 '41 500w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 J1 '41

"The style is charming, and the philosophy and humor are combined in just the right proportions. The book will be enjoyed most by those who have escaped from the city and those who are planning their escape." H. P. Bolman

+ Library J 66:177 F 15 '41 80w
+ N Y Times p17 My 25 '41 320w

ROSE, GRACE NORTON (MRS J. M. ROSE). Ports of the past; ill. by Jack Manley Rosé. 322p $2 Harcourt

(W) 41-51724

Nine short stories about New England sea history in various ports from 1625 to 1862. The stories are about Plymouth, 1625; Boston, 1636; Nantucket, 1720; Marblehead, 1742; Portsmouth, 1777; Salem, 1801; Gloucester, 1814; New Bedford, 1820; Edgartown, 1862. For boys and girls of eleven to thirteen.

Booklist 37:412 My 1 '41

"We need these stories more than some of us may realize. . . In each story a boy or a girl takes actual part, not necessarily heroic, but true to spirit of time and place. As each story has action, it will be read by ten or twelve year olds for pleasure, while the historic atmosphere it carries is likely to remain." M. L. Becker

+ Books p16 My 11 '41 270w

"If sea stories, well salted down to the last spar and halyard, full of fresh winds and singing sailors and surging seas, are being sought, this collection is definitely the answer." J. F. Carter

+ Library J 66:223 Mr 1 '41 70w

"The book is well written, and because of her affection for New England and her love of salt water the author has been able to re-create the atmosphere of these little seaport towns in the days of clipper ships and cargoes from China, which furnish the background for her tales. Jack Manley Rosé has drawn some fine ships and lively sea scenes in the spirit of the text." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 Ap 6 '41 250w

New Yorker 17:90 My 24 '41 60w

"Every story abounds in adventure and is replete with the salt-water phrases and the vernacular of the early settlers of New England. This gives it a tang of the sea and shows the ingenuity, bravery and skill of those used to battling with wind and tide and wave."

+ Spring'd Republican p7e Mr 16 '41 120w

ROSE, JACK MANLEY. Northeast from Boston [drawings and paintings] captions by Grace Norton Rosé. 17p 50 pl on 27 l. $3 Putnam

917.4 New England—Pictorial works 41-12183

Starting from Boston harbor, the American illustrator and his wife have worked their way up the Atlantic coast to Kittery, Maine. The drawings and the five colored reproductions from paintings convey the spirit of the old ports and buildings along the seacoast, including Boston, Marblehead, Salem, Gloucester, Cape Ann, Newburyport, Portsmouth, and Kittery. The prose explanations are by Mrs Rosé.

Books p14 S 21 '41 60w

"This picture book should draw many more 'outlanders' to these haunts, and remind New Englanders, besides, what beauties and traditions are their heritage."

+ Spring'd Republican p7e Jl 13 '41 120w

ROSEN, S. MCKEE, and ROSEN, LAURA. Technology and society; with an introductory chapter by William F. Ogburn. 474p il maps $4; text ed $3 Macmillan

309.173 U.S.—Social conditions. Machinery in industry. Technology—Social aspects 41-5062

"A consideration of the changes that machines and recent mechanical inventions have brought to life in the United States. Specific inventions are first discussed, and then in separate sections the authors consider the economic, social and political aspects of these inventions. Other topics considered are: the effect of centralization on a particular industry; the social effect of being sick in a hospital under mechanized conditions instead of at home; and the political weapon of 'a radio in every home.' (Management R) Index.

Reviewed by R. A. Clemen

Am Econ R 31:410 Je '41 300w

"Well selected tables, charts, and pictographs based on statistical data of recent vintage add to the value of the book. As a text for the student taking but a single course in social science, this book deserves serious consideration." J. D. Tomlinson

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:599 Je '41 300w

Reviewed by E. C. Lindeman

Ann Am Acad 216:191 Jl '41 410w

"The book probably covers a difficult subject as well as could be done in the limited space available. But when it comes to attempting to indicate what current trends appear to be significant in shaping future social developments, the author's findings are unconvincing in so far as they apply to the field of civil engineering and construction."

+ — Eng N 126:72 F 27 '41 100w

Reviewed by H. A. Larrabee

Ethics 51:486 Jl '41 320w

Management R 30:115 Mr '41 80w

Reviewed by I. A. Eckhauser

Social Studies 33:42 Ja '42 100w

ROSENFELD, HARRY NATHAN. Liability for school accidents; a manual for educational administrators and teachers; sponsored by the Center for safety educ. N.Y. univ. in cooperation with the N.Y. univ. School of law. 220p $2 Harper

371.7 Negligence, Legal responsibility. School management. Accident law 40-35300

"A handbook on student-compensation cases offered for a twofold purpose: (1) to provide school administrators and members of boards of education with legal advice, based on court cases and opinions of state legal and educational officials, on how to avoid costly lawsuits arising from school casualties; and (2) to set forth specific methods of school operation which would eliminate many of the accidents that now occur." (School & Society) Table of cases by states. Index.

"The work has been well done, within its defined limits, and the book should find wide use both among school people and among lawyers whose practices bring them into touch with school problems. Mr. Rosenfield's approach and style have been governed by the fact that he is largely addressing those who have not been trained in the law. . . Lawyers will doubtless find this material elementary but nonetheless helpful because of its clarity. . . From the practical educator's point of view, the last half of the book may be of more actual help than the portion devoted to the doctrines of liability, for school administrators and teachers are probably more keenly interested in preventing accidents than in the question of legal responsibility after unfortunate events have occurred. . . The book is appearing at a singularly appropriate time." J. F. Weltzin

+ Columbia Law R 41:1152 Je '41 750w

"The author has sometimes been unable to direct his work entirely to his lay audience, for the lawyer part of his dual nature has sometimes overcome the educator. The result is a series of sketchy and inadequate legal criticisms that might have been omitted without substantial loss." E. F.

— Harvard Law R 54:728 F '41 300w

School & Society 52:536 N 23 '40 70w

Reviewed by C. C. Crawford

School & Society 53:740 Je 7 '41 80w

ROSENFELD, H. N.—Continued

"This volume will be serviceable to school authorities generally because of the uncertainty and the confusion which exist as a result of the variability in the statutes of different states and the conflicting opinions of different courts in cases of record. The treatment and the style are such that the book can be read by the layman, and the numerous citations will be useful to administrative officers and legal advisers of all public schools." W. A. Eggert
+ School R 49:315 Ap '41 800w

Wis Lib Bul 37:89 My '41

ROSENQUIST, CARL MARTIN. Social problems. 519p $4; to schools $3 Prentice-Hall

300 Social problems 40-32484

After a brief discussion of the nature of social problems, the author, professor of sociology at the University of Texas, considers various problems in their social and historical settings. Partial contents: What is a social problem? American industrial society; The changing family; Divorce and separation; Family desertion and illegitimacy; Widowhood and child dependency; Problems of the unmarried; Remedies for family disorganization; The effects of change in rural areas; Ecological aspects of socio-economic maladjustment; Business cycles; Child labor; The employment of women; Relief and prevention of economic maladjustment; Physical defectiveness; Mental deficiency; Neuroses and psychoses; Juvenile delinquency; Crime. Chapter bibliographies. Index.

"In scope the book is rather ambitious. A variety of topics are covered; many of them, however, are discussed too briefly to be of any considerable value to the reader, though it is true that any attempt to make these discussions anything but brief would have resulted in materially increasing the size of the book. Undoubtedly, there is some virtue in being brief, but to cram, for example, the rather important subject of the treatment of juvenile delinquency into five pages renders that which is written a mere sketch." E. D. Monachesi
+ Ann Am Acad 214:244 Mr '41 360w

"Professor Rosenquist's volume should prove to be a challenging and highly useful text for students in sociology because, while thoughtfully written, it nevertheless maintains throughout an unusually lucid style. The selected bibliographies at the end of each chapter contribute to the value of the book." S. M. Strong
+ Ethics 51:481 Jl '41 700w

"Those looking for an acceptable theoretical framework upon which to organize materials and concepts in this field may be disappointed. But this is true with other comparable volumes with one or two possible exceptions. Doubtless this book will have numerous adoptions for introductory courses in social problems or social pathology. Its simplicity will be an important recommendation to many, although some may feel that we have already 'written down' too much to under-graduates." Gordon Blackwell
+ Social Forces 19:564 My '41 500w

"This book should be particularly valuable to busy people who need essential information quickly. Social workers who do not have access to libraries will find it an adequate and satisfactory reference. Well selected bibliographies are included. All students of social problems will enjoy as well as gain in understanding by reading this book, for it is well and interestingly written with a minimum of documentation." Josephine Strode
+ Survey 77:28 Ja '41 130w

ROSMAN, ALICE GRANT. Nine lives; a cat of London in peace and war; with drawings by Diana Thorne. (Minton, Balch bk) 239p $2 Putnam

636.88 Cats—Legends and stories. World war, 1939—Great Britain—London 41-21016

Reminiscences of a London cat, Samuel Penguin, written by a loving and understanding owner. Tells something about the work of NARFAC—National Air Raid Precautions for Animals.

Booklist 38:173 Ja 15 '42

"The book is a lively story of London under siege. There is plenty of disaster, but the kindness of people shines in it, the protective instinct that underlies keeping pets, the generosity of the poor to the poor. It has the air of surprise with which each Londoner awoke, every morning of the blitz; the pleasure and amazement that he was still alive. 'We began to wonder,' she says, 'if we too had nine lives.' This is a story of survival, both of human beings and of their friends in fur. Most of all, it is a story of how London survives." M. L. Becker

+ Books p18 D 7 '41 500w

"It is a straightforward tale full of humor and without the sentimental overtones that one fears from such a volume. Sam must have made good reading for English cat lovers and he will please American fanciers no less. Mrs. Rosman has written a light, entertaining book about war days without minimizing or falsifying the gravity of London's long siege." G. B.
+ Sat R of Lit 25:7 Ja 10 '42 200w

ROSS, CLAY CAMPBELL. Measurement in today's schools. 597p il $3.25 Prentice-Hall

371.26 Mental tests. Ability—Testing. Examinations 41-6389

A functional approach to the problems of pupil testing at all grade levels. The emphasis is on the intelligent use of testing tools, and the interpretation of findings by teachers and school administrators. Chapter bibliographies. Indexes.

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '41

School & Society 53:424 Mr 29 '41 40w

ROSS, EMMA JEWELL. Living where Jesus lived. 111p il map $1.50 Macmillan

915.69 Palestine—Description and travel 41-3012

"Informal account of travels and observations in Palestine, with special reference to the biblical events for which the land furnished the setting... The author lived in the Near East several years while working for the Y.W.C.A. Especially for young people." (Christian Century) Bibliography. Index.

Christian Century 58:154 Ja 29 '41 50w

"So many of our people who spend a month or more in Palestine have to write a book on the Holy Land. This one is no more conventional or amateurish than the average. Yet they do serve a useful purpose; for their very sincere impressions, though sketchy, will be read by many people who would not read the more scholarly books." A. L. B.-C.

Churchman 155:34 F 15 '41 60w

ROSS, JOHN ELLIOT. Cooperative plenty. 204p $2 Herder

334 Cooperation 41-18379

"Father Ross offers Cooperative Plenty as his answer to the question, 'How can the evils of monopolistic control, unfair distribution, widespread unemployment be cured without regimenting the people as a whole, or inflicting injustice upon any class or individual?'... Having indicted competitive, private-profit capitalism for its inability to balance production and consumption and for consequent recurring depression and unemployment, Father Ross suggests a remedy in the form of a program of production for consumption rather than for profit, in which the directors of production shall be the consumers themselves." Cath World

"Looking at the question from many sides, and even taking up the subject of religion and of education in cooperative economy, Father Ross has given us a well informed, highly intelligent and thoroughly objective study, and his book possesses a quite extraordinary interest." Joseph McSorley

+ Cath World 154:241 N '41 600w

"For many readers the volume might require a touch of perseverance, but 'Cooperative Plenty' is worth careful study." Edward Skillin, Jr.

+ — Commonweal 34:596 O 10 '41 130w

ROSS, MARGARET ISABEL. Gift for Ibn Diab; il. by Flora Nash DeMuth. 308p $2 Harper 41-21723

A combination of travel and mystery story for junior and senior high school boys. An American high school boy and an older cousin go to Arabia for a summer vacation, to meet the boy's archeologist father, and to deliver a pair of very special pigeons. Thru a series of misunderstandings the summer becomes one of adventure and excitement, and near tragedy, before the party returns to Jerusalem and safety.

"The picture of life among the Bedouins of northwest Arabia is interesting, the story is full of excitement and the dramatic drawings are finely executed." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 18:38 Ja '42 110w

"The adventure, possibly a little far-fetched, is thoroughly readable and strictly masculine in appeal. It should serve to introduce Gayneck, The Lance of Kanana, and With Lawrence in Arabia." Maude Adams

+ Library J 66:952 N 1 '41 120w

Wis Lib Bul 37:180 N '41

ROSS, MURRAY. Stars and strikes; unionization of Hollywood. 233p $2.75 Columbia univ. press

331.88 Trade unions. Moving picture industry. Actors and actresses 41-24783

The story of the development of unions not only among the carpenters and electricians but also among the actors and writers of Hollywood. Index.

Reviewed by Frank Fraser

Canadian Forum 21:314 Ja '42 650w

"Written from a wholly impartial viewpoint, the book is a valuable contribution to the history of labor relations, labor policies, and politics. The author is an instructor in economics at Brooklyn College. Recommended for large libraries." G. W. Hill

+ Library J 66:999 N 15 '41 130w

"The story of the unionization of Hollywood has been left to Murray Ross, who in 'Stars and Strikes' gives a rather boring account of this interesting topic. Not detailed enough to serve as a textbook or sensational enough to attract the casual reader, Mr. Ross's book is scrupulously unbiased to the point of inefficacy. Any history of the development of the unions in Hollywood which does not include an account of personal rivalries and ambitions, scandal, and even a degree of partisanship, is necessarily incomplete. . . Mr. Ross has assembled some interesting material; one can only wish that he had at the same time acquired some prejudices." Anthony Bower

+ Nation 153:582 D 6 '41 300w

"The book is well written, with excellent tables, and thoroughly explores the less glamorous side of Hollywood, that of making a living. Because Hollywood seems to have all the problems of labor and capital in concentrated form, this book should prove most valuable to students of labor problems." W. L. Perkins

+ Springf'd Republican p6 N 17 '41 850w

ROSS, MRS NANCY WILSON. Farthest reach; Oregon and Washington. 377p il $3.50 Knopf 979.5 Oregon—History. Washington (state) —History. Northwest, Pacific 41-20688

Informal history and description of the Northwestern states, Washington and Oregon. Partial contents: What is the Pacific Northwest? Historical background; Cow country; Pendleton round-up; Apple valleys; Grand Coulee dam: man's biggest job to date; Cities as symbols: Seattle, Portland, Spokane, Tacoma; River of the West; Tales, tall and small; Paul Bunyan's larder. Index.

Booklist 38:94 N 15 '41

"Two things struck this reviewer about 'Farthest Reach.' One is the profound lack of adequate indication of the region's most important industry, that of lumber. . . The other thing one gets from the book is a feeling that the author really was filled to overflowing with condescension when she wrote of her native land, after being away so long. . . An author's attitude toward his or her subject is his or hers alone. The realm of factual reporting is something else again; it belongs to the reader, and he has a right to complain if the reporting is inadequate. Such is specifically Miss Ross's reporting on the conditions of Seattle's press in relation to art, music and literature." Stewart Holbrook

— Books p29 N 16 '41 600w

"A delightful book. . . Highly recommended for adult and adolescent readers." H. P. Bolman

+ Library J 66:840 O 1 '41 110w

"Mrs. Ross's book on the Pacific Northwest fills a needed place in Western literature. She has worked hard to find the picturesque, to help us see the Northwest as the tourist used to see Europe; to write a fascinating, informative volume covering nearly 400 years and as many places and people. The important feeling of unity that strikes the reader is a tribute to the author's grasp of the intangibles of that vast inarticulate corner of our continent and to her ability to convey to the outsider her first objective; a feeling of the unique flavor of this particular part of America—Washington and Oregon." D. F. Gould

+ N Y Times p4 N 30 '41 1150w

"Any visitor to Washington and Oregon will do well to put a copy of 'Farthest Reach' in his suitcase. He will find it more useful than an atlas. It will tell him where to go, how to get there, what to see upon arriving, and whom to talk with about what he has seen. 'Farthest Reach' does what the WPA Guides set out to do, but in a more dramatic, more concise, and readable form." R. L. Neuberger

+ Sat R of Lit 24:20 N 1 '41 450w

"Mrs. Ross's humor, sensitivity to the ways of a people whose pioneer forefathers are not all dead yet, make Farthest Reach one of the best books written about the Northwest."

+ Time 38:102 D 8 '41 500w

ROSS, SINCLAIR. As for me and my house. 296p $2.50 Reynal 41-3337

Story of an unhappy marriage. The husband is an unsuccessful minister, who wanted to be a painter; the wife, who was a brilliant pianist before her marriage, endures poverty, neglect, and the dreariness of life in poor little towns, all because she hopes to help her husband. The story is told in diary form.

"Miss Ross does a good job of portraying a neurotic woman and a neurotic man—for neither of the Bentleys is mentally healthy. The action on the part of Mrs. Bentley which brings them together at the end is intended to be a generous one but fundamentally, it seems to this reviewer, to smack of the same hypocrisy which made Philip a failure as a minister." Rose Feld

+ — Books p14 F 23 '41 480w

ROSS, SINCLAIR—Continued

Reviewed by E. K. Brown

Canadian Forum 21:124 J1 '41 480w

"If the story is somewhat slow and thin in spots it is mostly because of the theme, which is hard to handle. All in all, it is a fine first novel, written with remarkable honesty, and often with strength." Marianne Hauser

+ N Y Times p25 Mr 2 '41 650w

"Some good things here, but the book is very gloomy."

New Yorker 17:84 F 22 '41 40w

"The novel is an emotional and subjective piece of writing, which is understandable considering the diary form which the author has given it. It is a style which is liable to become tedious when the narrative runs a bit thin."

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 9 '41 320w

ROSTEN, LEO CALVIN (LEONARD Q. ROSS, pseud). Hollywood; the movie colony; the movie makers. 436p $4 Harcourt

791.4 Moving pictures. Hollywood, California (W) 41-25392

"The present volume consists of two parts: the Movie Colony and the Movie Makers. The Movie Colony deals with the life, practices, and values of Hollywood. . . . The Movie Makers is concerned with the four major groups in Hollywood: movie producers, actors, directors, writers." (Pref) Index.

"An excellent chapter dissipates the illusion that the celluloid artists are political imbeciles; the film capital has traveled far since the early days when, according to Dorothy Parker, the only 'ism' in which it believed was plagiarism. The most fascinating portions of the book, however, are the two hundred pages devoted to 'putting Hollywood under the microscopes of social science.'" John Gassner

+ Atlantic Ja '42 320w

Booklist 38:152 Ja 1 '42

"The ardent fan will find it a storehouse of information regarding his gods and goddesses—their houses, salaries, expenditures, parties and ways of living. More thoughtful readers, pondering Mr. Rosten's statements, implications and judgments, will find that he has succeeded remarkably well in his attempt to make an extraordinary community comprehensible. . . . While relying heavily on facts and figures, he has not scorned anecdotes, and there he has shown wisdom, for an anecdote will sometimes reveal more of a community's ethos than will a statistical table." B. R. Redman

+ Books p4 D 7 '41 1000w

Christian Century 58:1513 D 3 '41 190w

"Its measurement, documentation, cogent insight and conclusions make it the best report on Hollywood to date. Even leaving the economics of movie making, censorship, the Hays Office and labor problems to a future volume, this book with last year's 'The Rise of the American Film' by Lewis Jacobs provides a complete background for an understanding of the American position in the important art of the cinema." F. T. Hartung

+ Commonweal 35:204 D 12 '41 1100w

"Nowhere in this book, which he devotes mainly to the aristocracy of the industry and its activities, is Mr. Rosten anything but a just critic. He has no axes to grind or vitriol to throw, and the industry as a whole is bound to find a great deal of useful information in the pages of this penetrating analysis. For the non-professional reader there is a mass of fascinating information." Anthony Bower

+ Nation 153:580 D 6 '41 480w

"As a body of reference, this volume is chiefly valuable for its generalizations. But as a philosophical reflection of the society which works at making films it stands as one of the few really cogent books in cinema literature. For Mr. Rosten has set and weighed the folks of Hollywood in the social scale, he has placed them in focus alongside the comparable strata of other days." Bosley Crowther

+ N Y Times p1 D 7 '41 1400w

"What Mr. Rosten calls 'the long arm of Hollywood' has apparently reached out toward his style, which seems unable to resist the infection of what might be termed the higher Goldwynism. His use of words exhibits what he would call a 'penchant' for the 'nouveau riche' in prose. He is fond of such quaint adjectives as 'colorific' and 'intricated' and of such nouns as 'publicization.' My guess is that Mr. Rosten believes that 'samurai' means aristocrats generally and 'shibboleth' means idol or superstition." Clifton Fadiman

New Yorker 17:101 N 29 '41 1250w

"In this first of several proposed books on Hollywood, growing out of an extensive three-year inspection of the colony and its inmates, Rosten portrays the power structure, the folkways and mores, the rewards and punishments in cash, frustration, and narcissism of the celluloids and their employees. In addition, his language and his anecdotes transmit the drama of the town to an extent most amazing in a book of such scientific respectability." A. M. Lee

+ Sat R of Lit 25:6 Ja 3 '42 650w

"The first solidly comprehensive study of that bright and industrious territory where motion pictures are made."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 7 '41 800w

Reviewed by H. R. Isaacs

Theatre Arts 26:66 Ja '42 850w

ROSTOVTSSEV, MIKHAIL IVANOVICH. Social and economic history of the Hellenistic world. 3v il $30 (£5 5s) Oxford

938.08 Greece—History. Greece—Social conditions. Greece—Economic conditions

[A41-4669]

"The author's understanding of the Hellenistic world, as delimited in his preface, is restricted to those parts of Europe, Asia, and North Africa which were deeply impregnated with the social ideas and firmly established in the economic forms which prevailed in the central Greek-Aegean area during the three centuries after Alexander's death. For intelligible presentation the economic and social trends of the three centuries have been broken down into three periods. . . . The first covers the half century after the death of Alexander. . . . The second period covers the sixty years from 280 B.C. to 221 B.C. These first two periods are presented in Volume I. The third period, to which the second volume of the work is devoted, covers the story of the hundred and ninety years following the accession of Philip the Fifth to the throne of Macedon and of Antiochus the Third to the rule of Asia." Yale R

"The greatest living historian in America, Rostovtzeff of Yale, has now written a magnificent history of the world which Alexander created. . . . A detailed criticism of the history would be a specialist article in itself. . . . It is sufficient to say here that it is a monument of scholarship; that its combination of breadth with precision can be equalled by very few historical works in English; and that it is distinguished by a notable caution in forming conclusions. . . . Scholars will no doubt find other matters to criticize. Rostovtzeff acknowledges that the period is full of disputable points. However, I can think of very few other living historians who command the detailed knowledge and the width of vision required for writing this great book." Gilbert Highet

+ N Y Times p3 Ja 4 '42 1450w

Times [London] Lit Sup p542 N 1 '41 2950w

"It is a work for scholars, largely conceived, well organized, and clearly written." W. L. Westermann

+ Yale R n s 31:403 winter '42 1700w

ROSTRON, RICHARD. The sorcerer's apprentice; il. by Frank Lieberman. [41p] $1.75 Morrow

41-12912

Retelling of a very old folktale, in which a lazy Swiss boy, apprenticed to a sorcerer, learned the trick of making a broom carry water for him, but not how to stop the resulting flood.

Booklist 38:117 D 1 '41

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p14 N 2 '41 70w

Reviewed by E. V. Wyatt
Cath World 154:374 D '41 130w

Reviewed by Warren Chappell
Horn Bk M 17:453 N '41 20w

"Delightful illustrations by Frank Lieberman show the steep-roofed houses of Switzerland and the curious chemical equipment in the sorcerer's laboratory. The text lacks the magical quality one expects in a story so well interpreted by Dukas' music. The Disney version will be more popular with children." J. E. Wooster

Library J 66:736 S 1 '41 140w

"The pictures are attractive in color and there is a superficial suggestion of a medieval town in the gabled roofs and the sorcerer's workshop, but the story as found here is modern in tone and slightly cheapened in the retelling. The feeling of magic close at hand, which is what has kept this tale alive for hundreds of years, is missing." A. T. Eaton
— + N Y Times p10 Ja 11 '42 200w

ROTHERS, HERBERT CHRISTOPHER. Electromagnetic devices. 561p il $6 Wiley

538.3 Electromagnets 41-5655

"This work is intended primarily as a textbook for graduate students in electrical engineering and as a reference book for engineers concerned with the development or design of new magnetic devices. A familiar knowledge of the subject matter generally taught in undergraduate courses in electrical engineering is assumed. The book is divided into two parts: the first eight chapters in which the fundamental background theory and methods applicable to all types of magnetic circuits and non-rotary electromagnetic devices are developed, and the last six chapters in which these principles are applied to the solution of a variety of problems. These solutions have been developed in general terms, and each is followed by the detailed numerical solution for a particular set of data." (Pref) Index.

N Y New Tech Bks 25:42 J1 '41

"In spite of omissions the book is especially welcome since it is the only comprehensive writing on the subject since Underhill's Magnets, published seventeen years ago. It is a valuable addition to the literature as a text for graduate students of electrical engineering and as a reference book for engineers and applied physicists who are professionally concerned with the design and operation of electromagnets. It appears at a time when good use may be made of it by many technical people recently starting work in this or related fields. There seems to be an unusual demand for the information that it supplies on account of the great activity in national defense projects which depend to a considerable extent on the operation of devices requiring remote control or electrical supervision." R. M. Bozorth
+ — R of Scientific Instruments 12:502 O '41 850w

ROTHENSTEIN, JOHN KNEWSTUB MAURICE. Life and death of Conder. 300p il $5 Dutton [18s Dent]

B or 92 Conder, Charles [39-16100]

Biography of an English artist, a painter of exquisite trifles, very much the vogue in Paris and London in the nineties, but now almost forgotten. "Conder," writes Mr Rothenstein,

"created an Arcadia peopled by dreamy, capricious figures who lead lives of luxurious idleness." The book contains illustrations of many of his paintings, a catalog of his lithographs, and a list of his paintings and drawings. Index.

"Charles Conder's life hardly affords ideal material for the biographer. After reading Dr. Rothenstein's book on him one is left with an impression of a charming but rather indeterminate young man, equally attached to alcohol and feminine society, who after an unsatisfactory attempt to earn a living in Australia gravitated naturally to Paris, and there led a brief butterfly existence." Eric Newton
Manchester Guardian p6 N 18 '38 390w

"This is a sensible book on an agreeable theme. The life of Conder was worth writing, partly because, though a feeble artist, an artist he was; partly because his vogue, which, as the author shows, was created by intelligent and sensitive people who liked his work for good reasons, needed explanation to a new generation; and partly because he was a figure in a set and setting about which it is always amusing to hear more. . . . Mr. John Rothenstein tells his story feelingly and well. . . . Those who care for that agreeable patch in time which is Anglo-American Paris in the 'nineties and artistic London in the reign of Edward VII will read this book with pleasure." Clive Bell

+ New Statesman & Nation 16:880 N 26 '38 700w

"Mr. Rothenstein has given us, for the first time, the life of a sadly neglected artist whose work might well be re-examined from our modern perspective. He has written with understanding and without evasion of a man who, though not of the company of the great masters, holds his own particular niche in the cathedral of art." Frances Winwar
+ N Y Times p4 Ja 19 '41 1100w

"The reader will find it hard to share Rothenstein's belief that Conder's work will some day, after wars and revolutions, be once more savored; and he will conclude that an even thinner volume would have done justice to the painter of silk fans and over-mantels for Cadogan Gardens." Oliver Larkin
— Sat R of Lit 23:12 F 8 '41 500w

"This book makes a notable advance upon the author's previous publications both by quitting well-trodden tracks for more original matter, and in the manner of its writing. The introductory chapter and critical parts generally show a balance of judgement welcome in the new Director of the British National Gallery, and as the son of Conder's most intimate associate and the friend of other survivors in his circle Mr. Rothenstein was peculiarly qualified to pick up the threads of his subject's career and to depict him as intimately as was possible at one remove from personal knowledge." D. S. MacColl
+ Spec 161:777 N 4 '38 1050w

"Not only does Mr. Rothenstein provide a very complete and well documented account of his subject's life and work, but he has much to tell us about his contemporaries, with many good anecdotes and character sketches. His criticism is always well informed and his book makes a valuable record of a picturesque period."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p798 D 17 '38 500w

ROUGE MONT, DENIS DE, and MURET, CHARLOTTE (TOUZALIN) (MME MAURICE MURET). The heart of Europe. 274p $2.50 Duell

342.494 Switzerland—Politics and government. Federal government 41-20984

A book on Switzerland, its history, government, people and culture, which is "neither a guide book nor a history," but an attempt to describe how "one people has managed to remain free and diverse yet united." (Pref) Index.

ROUEMONT, DENIS DE.—Continued

Booklist 38:184 F 1 '42

"The book is a product of 'federalism,' the joint work of a well known Swiss writer and an American woman long familiar with Switzerland. The duality is richly justified, for it brings together, in warm and appealing form, the knowledge and observation of two highly trained minds which see this immensely intricate little country from both the European and the American, the conservative and the liberal, even the masculine and the feminine viewpoint." Arthur Sweetser

+ Books p3 N 16 '41 1000w

Reviewed by C. G. Paulding
Commonweal 35:205 D 12 '41 550wReviewed by Felizia Seyd
Nation 153:406 O 25 '41 850w
New Yorker 17:99 O 18 '41 40wReviewed by Arnold Wolfers Yale R n s 31:401 winter '42 750wROUNDS, GLEN. Blind colt; il. by the author.
$2 Holiday

(W) 41-51997

"Uncle Torval and 10-year-old Whitey of 'Pay Dirt' [Book Review Digest, 1938] appear again, but the story is really that of the blue-gray colt, born blind, and his courageous little mustang mother. . . . Whitey's ingenuity, patience and determination to have the blue-gray colt for his 'Sunday horse' bring about a highly satisfactory ending to the story." N Y Times

Booklist 38:117 D 1 '41

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse
Commonweal 35:111 N 21 '41 20w

"A sympathetic and appealing story. For horse lovers from ten up." Marguerite Nahigian
+ Library J 66:952 N 1 '41 150w

Reviewed by Jessie Stanton & E. W. Steele
New Repub 105:837 D 15 '41 40w

"The Blind Colt,' Mr. Rounds's finest piece of writing, is an unforgettable animal portrait, drawn with understanding and a moving simplicity." A. T. E.

+ N Y Times p38 N 2 '41 280w

New Yorker 17:142 D 6 '41 60w

ROWAN, RICHARD WILMER. Terror in our time; the secret service of surprise attack. 438p maps $3 Longmans

940.5485 Secret service. World war, 1939—
Secret service. Terrorism (W) 41-51611

In a previous volume, The Story of Secret Service (Book Review Digest, 1937) Mr. Rowan traced the history of military and political espionage thru thirty centuries, concluding with the first World war. The present volume is a detailed account of the sensational methods developed by secret agents in the underground combat of modern times—propaganda, sabotage, blackmail, terrorism, fifth column activities and state police systems designed to undermine morale and prepare the way for the armed invasion of the blitzkrieg. Index.

"It is a timely warning to the Western Hemisphere against invading hosts of spies, conspirators, agitators, and saboteurs, many of whom are already within our gates. The book should be read. The warning must be heeded." F. O. Wilcox

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:389 Ap '41 390w

"A good many of the stories in the book rest mainly on hypothesis and conjecture; government secret-service agents are harder to catch and convict than Scarface Al Capones. But almost all the episodes make exciting reading, and Mr. Rowan possesses a vivid colorful style, even if he sometimes overworks the melodramatic element." W. H. C.

+ Atlantic Mr '41 180w

Booklist 37:319 Mr 15 '41

"This book goes pretty far in ascribing the recent triumphs of the oppressors to secret service preparation and the blunders of the European democracies to their failure to believe the reports of their own spies. But it is a valuable work. If widely read, it would alarm the American public in a useful manner. The spirit of truth is served, even if all the occurrences recorded as fact are as yet unsusceptible of proof." W. A. Roberts

+ Books p10 Ja 26 '41 600w

"Mr. Rowan is considered a leading expert on secret service, especially in its more sinister activities. He has previously written five books in this field."

+ Christian Century 58:124 Ja 22 '41 220w
Churchman 155:35 F 1 '41 60wReviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 19:871 Jl '41 10w

"While there is little that is new and has not already appeared in the press, the book will prove absorbing reading for 'detective and spy story fans.'" J. B. Fogg

+ Library J 66:31 Ja 1 '41 130w

"Engrossing material, intelligently handled."
+ New Yorker 16:80 Ja 18 '41 60w

"In addition to its more solid merits, 'Terror in Our Time' makes colorful and exciting reading for it deals with the timeless stuff out of which innumerable thrillers—usually less thrilling than the official facts—have been concocted. Some of the later chapters drag a bit because the author brings in shadowy affairs that were probably authentic episodes in the secret war but have never been completely unravelled. . . . These, however, are relatively trivial flaws in an interesting and readable book, and reveal at least a commendable desire to stick to the facts in a field where the facts themselves are often more lurid than fiction." Edmond Taylor

+ Sat R of Lit 23:19 F 1 '41 500w
Wis Lib Bul 37:71 Ap '41ROWE, ANNE. Curiosity killed a cat. 282p
$2 Morrow

41-7657

Detective story.

"Miss Rowe belongs to the foreboding school of bafflers and she always makes good on her promises of horror and mental agony. This is what you might call a hammock mystery, suitable for moments when you want to relax." Will Cuppy

Books p11 Je 8 '41 160w

"'Curiosity Killed a Cat' is, so far as we know, Anne Rowe's first mystery. If her publishers know a good thing when they see it (and we think they do), it will not be her last." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p13 Je 1 '41 200w

"Engagingly written, happily characterized, and sufficiently shivery family fracas type of yarn, with diverting mineralogical arabesques. Good."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:21 Je 21 '41 40w

RUBICAM, HARRY COGSWELL. Two-Spot, wolf dog of the Circle Y; il. by Frederick T. Chapman. 194p $1.75 Knopf

Dogs—Legends and stories (W) 41-11116

Stories of a mischievous dog, probably part wolf. Two-Spot was devoted to his master, foreman of the Circle Y ranch, but he could not resist fighting, and his activities in that line make up the bulk of this book for teen age readers.

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse
Commonweal 35:111 N 21 '41 10w

"Good outdoor atmosphere, friendliness, and zestful humor make it excellent reading aloud for older boys at camp or for scouts. Recommended for large libraries." J. E. Wooster

+ Library J 66:679 Ag '41 70w

RUCH, FLOYD LEON; MACKENZIE, GORDON NOTH; and MCCLEAN, MARGARET. People are important. 283p il $1.32 Scott

301.1584 Youth. Psychology. Conduct of life 41-27745

High school textbook on applied psychology, which aims to help high school students to make a successful adjustment to social living. Short bibliography. Index.

School & Society 54:396 N 1 '41 40w
Social Studies 33:46 Ja '42 30w

RUCK, BERTA (MRS GEORGE OLIVER). Fiancées are relatives. 235p $2 Dodd

41-10776

Romantic tale of the present war in which an English airman, imprisoned in Germany, and a red-haired English nurse, are deeply involved.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p10 J1 6 '41 170w

"Told in a hearty, scatterbrain fashion in the first person by an English county lady, the style of this story suits it very well. . . A good adventure story, and the nurse has a past with a touch of mystery and adventure, too." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p16 Ag 31 '41 140w

RUCK, BERTA (MRS GEORGE OLIVER). Jade earrings. 309p $2 Dodd

41-21735

Romance of a London singer, who is forced to give up her career. She goes as a land girl to a Welsh community, and there finds a more satisfying life.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p30 N 23 '41 120w

"Miss Ruck always gives her heroines plenty of spirit or something like it. And she never lets them nor her sentimental readers down." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p24 N 16 '41 190w

RUGG, HAROLD ORDWAY. Community and national life [2 bks] bk 1, Citizenship and civic affairs. (Man and his changing society. Rugg social science ser, junior high school course) 664p il maps $1.88 Ginn

917.3 U.S.—Civilization. U.S.—Social conditions. Citizenship 40-9572

"Although this is based on An Introduction to Problems of American Culture [Book Review Digest, 1932] the author says this is essentially a new book, treating especially the life of an individual in the community. For junior and senior high school." Booklist

Booklist 37:121 N 15 '40

Reviewed by David Snedden

School & Society 52:305 O 5 '40 330w

RUGG, HAROLD ORDWAY. That men may understand; an American in the long armistice. 355p $2.75 Doubleday.

307 Education—U.S. Social sciences—Study and teaching (W) 41-4839

"In the recent controversies and hysteria over un-American and subversive school texts, Dr. Rugg's Social Science series have been the chief scapegoats. Their author steps up to answer the charges and to explain and defend the theories of social democracy which find expression in the Rugg texts. He also points out that this hysteria is a recurring phenomenon from which, for a long period, this country has been free, but just now it is especially dangerous to democracy." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 37:383 Ap 15 '41

"Professor Rugg, author of the bulk of the social science textbooks used in the nation's public schools, is the bright particular devil of the protestants against these books. One need not be reminded of the heat they have turned on him in the last two years. Dr. Rugg's object in this volume is to demonstrate that the light generated is correspondingly feeble. For the purpose he has considered it necessary not only to counter-attack his assailants but to write an autobiography and an elaborate exposition of his political philosophy and of his philosophy of education. And he has done a pretty stirring and sufficient job, all in all, certainly so far as clearing himself of Communistic or other subversive leanings or intentions and of establishing himself instead in that rather fierce little group of progressive patriots known as 'frontier thinkers.'" W. M. Houghton

+ Books p13 Ap 20 '41 800w

"He, who was called by one zealot 'the ring-master of the fifth columnists in America,' aims to show here his genuinely democratic convictions. The resulting mixture of argument and narrative produces a somewhat scrappy, conglomerate volume, which does not, however, lack the virtues of earnestness and vigor." R. H. Phelps

+ — Boston Transcript p1 Ap 26 '41 430w

"Here are two books in one. That the two should have been telescoped into one is a misfortune, for neither book gains by the union. The first is the story of Dr. Rugg's classroom series in the social studies and the bitter opposition which his point of view has aroused. The second is a statement of Dr. Rugg's educational, political and social faith and his dream of the better day for America. Both books deserved to be written, the first as a matter of historical record, the second for the promulgation of fresh ideas. It is, however, unfortunate that they were not written separately." K. I. Brown

Christian Century 58:885 J1 9 '41 1000w

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '41

"Worth-while tract for the times." G. W. Hill

+ Library J 66:264 Mr 15 '41 70w

"Although most of what Dr. Rugg has to say has already been better said, his organization of the material in an integrated pattern is one of the most significant recent popular contributions to thought on educational problems." John Buchanan

+ — Living Age 360:295 My '41 550w

"As I pass from chapter to chapter of this meticulously detailed record of the author's vision on the road to Damascus . . . I find myself a victim of shifting moods. At times I am impatient, as when Dr. Rugg finds it necessary to tell of the exact place and moment when the vision occurred, or would persuade me to look upon Teachers College as a sort of Early Church. These are moments of boredom . . . and there are many other moments when I wish that the author might have flavored his dish with a soupçon of humility and a sprinkling of humor. But after-thought assures me that few great crusaders have found time to cultivate either ingredient. Surely, the conviction of many conservatives, seldom expressed but always felt, that 'any change is dangerous' has done more harm to our schools than to any other institution. Dr. Rugg has fought for progress with great skill and a not unrewarded persistence. He has thrived on punishment and, one suspects, might welcome even martyrdom if he could be given a chance afterward to write about it." Burges Johnson

Nation 152:563 My 10 '41 900w

Reviewed by Byron Dexter

New Repub 105:61 J1 14 '41 700w

Reviewed by G. N. Shuster

N Y Times p5 Ap 27 '41 1450w

RUGG, H. O.—Continued

"Not too easy reading but worth your while."

+ New Yorker 17:92 Ap 5 '41 40w

"That Men May Understand" is not a great book, but it is unquestionably significant. It is significant because it reveals clearly the existence of a great social struggle in America between social ideals; a struggle that must run its course, perhaps even in bitter revolt and blood, until one ideal or another wins out. This struggle penetrates into every corner in the land." Rubin Gotesky

+ Sat R of Lit 24:14 Je 7 '41 1200w

+ Springf'd Republican p10 Ap 16 '41 360w

"That Men May Understand" performs many public services. It gives the lie to Rugg's accusers. [His] credo completely disarms his attackers. He reveals their hysteria and their ill-conceived motives. He presents a case study in the somewhat heroic Englewood where virtue through the American way of free discussion is still enthroned. He shows how the academic head hunters have beat the bush off and on for the last quarter of a century. Then the author relates his own intellectual development by describing concurrent social and educational change, and in so doing turns a neat trick on those who still live in the memories of the late nineteenth century. . . "That Men May Understand" is a character study of the author which leaves him several leagues ahead of his persecutors." N. H. Dearborn

+ Survey G 30:310 My '41 550w

Wis Lib Bul 37:115 Je '41

RUHEMANN, M. The separation of gases. 283p
$5.75 (21s) Oxford

533 Gases. Thermodynamics 41-16424

"This book is confined to gas separation by liquefaction and subsequent fractionation with practically no mention of separation by inert solvent scrubbing, adsorption by activated solids, and other well-recognized methods. . . Since nearly all the literature references are to Russian or German sources, it is obvious that the author is unfamiliar with American practice. The production of oxygen and nitrogen by liquefaction of air is discussed at great length. Many minutiae of apparatus construction and operation will probably be of interest to students of this specialized field." News Edition

"The separation and purification of gases is one of the oldest of the chemist's endeavors, and innumerable scientific advances are related to this activity. Both chemical and physical methods have been employed, but the large-scale production of liquid air nearly fifty years ago marked the beginning of important commercial operation. The present volume is a very acceptable, if brief, presentation of the present status of gas separation methods centering on the three standard commercial processes for separating the constituents of the atmosphere." F. G. Keyes

+ Am Chem Soc J 63:3545 D '41 800w

"Much of the more recent data and statements of fact given in the book are derived from Russian sources, although a certain amount is culled from the United States. There is, however, often a lack of references to the source of information. This makes it very difficult to assess the value of such statements. In a scientific book of this character, it is not sufficient to say that in the U.S.S.R. such a plant is working at a certain efficiency, unless the figures are backed by reference to a detailed description of the plant in some journal of repute." H. W. Melville

Nature 147:464 Ap 19 '41 800w

N Y New Tech Bks 26:42 Jl '41

"This book is recommended only as a reference text for one interested in the details of air liquefaction." E. H. Smoker

News Edition 19:1166 O 25 '41 300w

RUMMEL, ADOLPH J., and VOGELSANG, LEWIS O. Practical air conditioning. 282p il
$2.75 Wiley

628.8 Air conditioning (W) 41-9289

"This practical work is written in simple and non-technical language, and is based on the experience gained through many years of consulting and advisory work with those connected with the industry. Much of the material was used for lecture courses and later expanded into booklets which were used as textbooks in vocational and technical schools. It covers essential fundamentals and definitions; the properties of air; the requirements for human comfort; all types of equipment, including automatic controls, available for meeting these requirements; proper methods of operation to produce desired results at a minimum of expense; and complete maintenance and servicing methods and schedules." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Booklist 37:542 Jl 15 '41

N Y New Tech Bks 26:36 Jl '41

RUSSELL, BERTRAND ARTHUR WILLIAM
RUSSELL, 3d earl. Inquiry into meaning and truth. 445p $3.75 Norton [12s 6d Allen, G]

121 Truth. Language and languages. Knowledge, Theory of. Meaning (psychology) 41-1280

For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

Booklist 37:286 Mr 1 '41

"He has much to say that is valuable and helps to clear up common fallacies of thought and language. Nevertheless his argument as a whole is unsatisfying and even confusing and seems to leave his conclusions, reasonable and moderate as they are in themselves, hanging in the air. The trouble appears to come from certain logical presuppositions that there are atomic facts of experience and atomic propositions to represent them, while all other propositions are constructed out of them by a process of composition. If the logical theory is implied in the statements quoted, then they are not so innocent as they look." A. D. R.

— + Manchester Guardian p7 Mr 4 '41 270w

"There is a great deal of philosophizing, in which must be included the epistemological labors of Mr. Russell, that is addressed to the resolution of phantom problems. This is not to say that this book is without value. In the resolution of his difficulties Mr. Russell ranges far afield and is forced to go into a number of questions on which he sheds valuable light. I take his criticism of the logical positivists, for instance, to be of real value. Nor is my criticism intended to belittle Mr. Russell's stature as a philosopher. For of him we know, whatever bigoted clergymen and stupid judges may think of his accomplishments, that he will be remembered in the history of philosophy as one of the most distinguished thinkers of our day. But the reasons for his preeminence and why it is questioned by bigots make up another story, and one which the reviewer has not been asked to tell." Eliseo Vivas

+ — Nation 152:275 Mr 8 '41 1150w

"His latest book differs not so much in its subject matter as in its style from anything that he has written before. It deals in a comprehensive, if unsystematic, way with the class of philosophical problems that are conventionally brought under the heading of the theory of knowledge. Many interesting questions are raised by it and ingenious answers suggested. But the argument as a whole suffers from a hesitancy and discursiveness which make it unexpectedly difficult to follow." A. J. Ayer

— + Nature 148:206 Ag 23 '41 1200w

"Russell does not say anything substantially different from what he has always believed, but his new work is very important for three reasons. The first reason is that this work is expressed in the more precise vocabulary invented by the logical positivists. Thus, he shows how the formidable vocabulary and technical apparatus of logical positivism can be more or less successfully used against it. Second, he has made his original position clearer by defending it polemically against logical positivism and instrumentalism. Third, he has helped to restore epistemology to its once honorable place among the philosophic disciplines. The problems he raises and seeks to answer so thoroughly are extremely difficult and worthy of analysis. The very importance of this book makes it necessary to emphasize one critical point. It seems that Russell misunderstands Dewey for one reason. Russell does not ask himself the question Dewey has asked himself: How does one determine whether the knowledge gleaned from any single observation is authentic?" Rubin Gotesky

+ — New Repub 104:608 Ap 28 '41 1450w

"This is a profound and difficult book." C. E. M. Joad

New Statesman & Nation 21:216 Mr 1 '41 1650w

Reviewed by H. J. Paton

Spec 166:150 F 7 '41 1000w

Spring'd Republican p7e Ap 6 '41 500w

Times [London] Lit Sup p40 Ja 25 '41 750w

RUSSELL, MRS CHARLOTTE (MURRAY). Dreadful reckoning. 276p $2 Doubleday

41-3914

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p13 Mr 16 '41 150w

"The manner in which Anson Peck unscrambles a difficult problem is complete proof that Charlotte Murray Russell is not tied to the apron strings of Jane Amanda Edwards. All this is not to say that we do not appreciate Jane Amanda. On the contrary, we hope to meet her again and soon." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p18 Ap 6 '41 300w

"Well worth while."

+ Sat R of Lit 23:20 Ap 12 '41 40w

RUSSELL, WILLIAM. Berlin embassy. 307p $2.50 Dutton

940,5343 World war, 1939—Germany. World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American. Germany—Social conditions (W) 41-20446

Diary of a young American passport clerk of the Berlin legation, which gives an anecdotal account of events in Germany from the invasion of Poland to the defeat of France.

Booklist 38:78 N 1 '41

"In a quiet, unpretentious way, this book will tell you something of what Germany looked like in the months immediately before and after the outbreak of war. There are no sensational disclosures here, and no very deep analysis. It suggests the letters home of the son of a friend of your family's, some one whose honesty you take for granted and to whom a lack of professional training is no reproach." Joseph Barnes

+ Books p3 O 19 '41 700w

"Nazi Germany is heavily burdened with profanity, indecency, and vulgarity. A book which shows life in Berlin as it is must inevitably portray some of this in its pages. The result is some words which may offend many readers. But Mr. Russell's use of such words is factual description." J. C. H.

Christian Science Monitor p20 O 25 '41 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p17 O '41

"Would interest younger readers than Ambassador Dodd's Diary does and adds much to the scene of Shirer's Berlin Diary." D. F. Lucas

+ Library J 66:840 O 1 '41 100w

New Repub 105:630 N 10 '41 40w

"A great deal of the material used is hackneyed and Mr. Russell contributes nothing to the sum total of our knowledge of Germans, but it is always interesting to read of the peculiarities of this race, and his comments are those of an average young American who is somewhat more aware of the onrush of danger than is the average young man at home. . . Mr. Russell is strongly anti-Nazi, but he is very sympathetic to the German people—as sympathetic as any writer since Nora Waln. He writes his book with a naivete and a deadly seriousness which faults are of youth and virtues of sincerity."

+ Spring'd Republican p6 O 14 '41 480w
Wis Lib Bul 37:200 D '41

RUSSELL, WILLIAM FLETCHER. The new Common sense. 170p $1.50 Macmillan

321.8 Democracy. U.S.—Politics and government 41-6903

"On January 10, 1776, there appeared a pamphlet entitled Common Sense which later was found to have been written by Thomas Paine. . . Common Sense took the position that there could be no collaboration or compromise with despotism. . . This book is one attempt [to produce] a modern Common Sense. [It] was written in much the same way that Thomas Paine wrote Common Sense and The Crisis. It has the same purpose, namely to awaken the American to his duties and recall to his mind his place in the procession of those that love mankind." Foreword

"The only really noteworthy thing about it is the nerve of its author in challenging comparison with Tom Paine. Apart from his ideas Tom Paine became famous because he possessed a style. This book only confirms the feeling that one has always had that, if a twentieth century Paine appears in America, it will not be on Morningside Heights." F. H. U.

— Canadian Forum 21:89 Je '41 140w

Christian Century 58:629 My 7 '41 160w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:379 Ja '42 30w

"Dr. Russell's book applies the spirit and challenge of Thomas Paine's pamphlet to the conditions of today. And in that spirit and challenge he emphasizes one stern fact. Democracy is the hard way, the civilized way that requires the full use of the mind and spirit of man. The way of despotism is the primitive natural way."

+ N Y Times p18 Ap 27 '41 490w

Spring'd Republican p7e Ag 17 '41 60w

RUSSELL, WILLIAM FLETCHER, and BRIGGS, THOMAS HENRY. Meaning of democracy. (Am. youth ser) 413p $1.48 Macmillan

321.8 Democracy

41-8719

"The chief raison d'être of this volume is the need of encouraging the study of democracy and its meaning,—a clarification of the fundamental principles and implications of democracy. In Part I it outlines the story of the development of democracy, indicating the strengths and weaknesses of the opposition and making clear the more important meanings that democracy has come to have. Part II presents in the form of a creed a set of detailed statements that in a comprehensive way define what democracy seems to mean to-day. Part III contains readings in democracy, chiefly as suggested in Part I." (School & Society) Part one, New Common sense has been previously published separately.

Booklist 38:2 S '41

School & Society 53:712 My 31 '41 130w

"This book has as its obvious purpose the promotion among our youth of a keener interest in democracy. The authors boldly attack this task in a pioneering effort to insert in the study program of our schools the direct study of democracy. Among the numerous good features of the book, the outstanding one is this pioneering purpose of the study of democracy directly in the school program. . . Fine as this book is two points may be singled out for criticism. In the first place repeated references to and odious comparisons of European 'isms' with democracy smacks of endeavoring to make democracy the lesser evil of two ways of living. . . A much more serious criticism may be directed to the expressions of the authors. That they wish to advance the understanding of democracy among American school children is beyond question. It may be questioned, however, whether the language of the text will be understandable to children." D. V. Smith

RUSSELL, W. F.—Continued

+ — Social Educ 5:470 O '41 450w
Social Studies 32:380 D '41 20w

RUTLEDGE, ARCHIBALD HAMILTON. Home by the river; il. with phot. by Noble Bretzman. 167p $3 Bobbs

917.57 Hampton plantation. Natural history —South Carolina (W) 41-4127

When he was thirteen the author left his plantation home in South Carolina and went to school in Charleston. After an absence of forty-four years, during which time he finished his education, and taught for many years in the North, he returned home to Hampton, in order to restore the house. He describes his experiences, and some of the historical background of the house and its builders, and devotes some chapters to the wild life in the surrounding country. Illustrations grouped at end of volume.

"This beautifully written short book is at the same time a beautifully made volume." Wilson Follett

+ Atlantic My '41 130w
Booklist 37:437 My 15 '41

"Of all the romantic South Carolina low-country plantations there is none more romantic than beautiful Hampton, home of Archibald Rutledge. . . As romantic as the lovely plantation is its owner, and in this new book, 'Home by the River,' Mr. Rutledge allows himself the luxury of giving his memories, his imagination and his sympathies full play. His affection for his ancestral home stands out in every line in this tribute to the land that offered a place of refuge to his French Huguenot forebears." C. M. Waring

+ Books p22 Ap 6 '41 280w
Boston Transcript p1 Ap 5 '41 80w

Reviewed by C. McD. Puckette
N Y Times p21 Ap 27 '41 320w
Wis Lib Bul 37:75 Ap '41

RYAN, JOHN AUGUSTINE. Social doctrine in action; a personal history. 297p $3 Harper

B or 92 Sociology, Christian 41-6305

Autobiography of a Catholic priest, a professor at the Catholic University of America, and widely known for his work for the cause of economic and social advancement. Index.

Reviewed by F. J. Bruno
Ann Am Acad 217:202 S '41 410w
Booklist 37:514 Jl 1 '41

"In a sense the present volume is largely an apology, providing answers to attacks made upon the author from many quarters. Necessarily he does not elaborate the episodes with which he deals; but he does employ a forthright style and uses plain, intelligible words. It was wise of him to tell his own story, for it records, in the chief actor's own words, many a situation in which personal testimony is immeasurably more satisfying than hearsay accounts." J. McS.

+ Cath World 153:380 Je '41 600w

"It is difficult to be critical of anything about Monsignor Ryan or his book. After all, even as it is, American labor owes him more than either he or it will ever realize. His scholarship, his courage and his sympathy have been the strong support and the continuing inspiration of all those who have labored with him in the vineyard of Christ the Worker. For the gift of himself we are all eternally grateful. And of course, no one who appreciates the measure of our debt to him will want to miss his book." J. C. Cort

+ Commonweal 34:112 My 23 '41 600w

"Social workers will find this book rich in inspiration: it is their own story, too. Those who are ignorant of the Catholic contribution will be informed; those unaware of how progress has been won will be challenged. His final statement of the meaning of the Christian ethics respecting the poor and our duty of compassion, sums up a noble creed and a life of service. We need this token book of a pioneer." Leon Whipple

+ Survey G 30:297 My '41 240w
Wis Lib Bul 37:115 Je '41

RYAN, JOHN AUGUSTINE, and BOLAND, FRANCIS JOSEPH. Catholic principles of politics. 366p $3 Macmillan

261.7 Church and state. State, The 40-31576

"This is a revised edition of The State and the Church by John A. Ryan and M. F. X. Millar (1922). It omits the three chapters contributed to the former book by Millar, but adds an important one by another Millar on 'The Organization of International Society' arguing against the unlimited sovereignty of separate nations, and retains the historic addresses by Archbishop Spaulding on 'Patriotism' (1899) and by Archbishop Ireland on 'Catholicism and Americanism' (1913). The passages most often quoted from the older book—the comments on Leo XIII's encyclical, 'The Christian Constitution of States'—are retained, though relegated to a less prominent position." Christian Century

Booklist 37:121 N 15 '40

"Here is a timely—one might almost say an authoritative—treatment of several social and political questions uppermost in the minds of thinking men at present. . . Designed for use as a college text, the book lends itself also to study by individuals or groups; and it is abundantly provided with references."

+ Cath World 152:507 Ja '41 300w

"Dr. Ryan is notably liberal in his views wherever the arrogant claims of the church are not involved."

Christian Century 58:328 Mr 5 '41 500w

Reviewed by Vergilius Ferm
Ethics 51:246 Ja '41 340w

Reviewed by W. A. Brown
J Religion 21:87 Ja '41 1200w

S

SACHS, CURT. The history of musical instruments. 505p il $5 Norton

781.91 Musical instruments (W) 41-559

"The scope of this book is all-embracing. Mr. Sachs begins with 'the primitive and prehistoric epoch.' He describes the early instruments in as much detail as possible: the rattles, stampers, slit-drums, other drums, bull-roarers, scrapers, flutes, trumpets, xylophones, ground harps, ground zithers, musical bows and jaws' harps or jews' harps, as they are better known under the usual misnomer. He tells of the ritual function and symbolism of some of these instruments, and he traces them in relation to the slowly emerging melodic impulse. . . In the second part [he] deals with antiquity, covering what is known of the instruments of Sumer and Babylonia, Egypt, Israel, Greece, Rome and Etruria, India, the Far East and the ancient civilizations of America, especially those of Mexico and Peru. . . The third part moves into the Middle Ages, tracing the descendants of the ancient instruments and the newcomers as they developed in the Far East, India, Southeast Asia, the Near East and Europe. The fourth part treats of the modern Occident." (N Y Times) Terminology, references, and index.

Booklist 37:267 F 15 '41

Bookmark 2:7 My '41

"Now Professor of Music at New York University, Curt Sachs gives the musical public of America the by no means inconsiderable fruits of his long studies. Although an erudite work the writing is clear, simple and informal throughout." Douglas Moore

+ Books p17 F 23 '41 650w

"If the book starts back in primordial eras, it comes down flush with the present, and even gives surmises of the future. It could hardly be expected to tell all about the violin, the piano, and the organ; but it gives the needful outlines. Early in time and late, the chapters have humanity and sentiment, as well as technical exactitude." W. P. T.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ja 18 '41 500w

"It would take no mean effort to master even a quarter of what is in the book, but it affords absorbing reading. Apart from the inherent interest in the subject for anyone musically inclined, the book is full of anthropological and historical detail which relate it to art and human life as a whole." Margaret Byard

+ Commonweal 33:449 F 21 '41 450w

"It is a history only in a limited sense, this latest, valuable book by the ethnologist and historian of music and the dance, who is considered the greatest of authorities on the musical instruments of primitive and ancient societies. . . If it is a book of reference, it is a thoroughly delightful one. Dr. Sachs is a manner of unicorn among musicologists. A sincere, enthusiastic scholar, he carries his immense learning lightly; he is something of a bel esprit. The tastefulness of style of the present book is almost a matter of wonder in view of the fact that it was written by him in English. He claims to have had the help of Emily Floyd Gardiner in preparing this first of his works cast in his adopted tongue. Yet this assistance could not have been great." Paul Rosenfeld

+ New Repub 104:125 Ja 27 '41 400w

"Curt Sachs has made his reputation as a distinguished musicologist before he was obliged to leave Nazi Germany for the free air of America. His new, imposing and masterly study of the history of musical instruments is the first book he has written in English. It is vivid proof of what this country has gained by opening its gates to scholars like Mr. Sachs. . . Much that is in this book should be absorbing to the layman, and a good many things might be too technical. For students of instrumental history, this should be the definitive reference book. For the casual reader it contains a mine of fascinating material, put together with scrupulous scholarship and with no little imagination." Howard Taubman

+ N Y Times p6 D 29 '40 1300w

SACKVILLE-WEST, VICTORIA MARY (MRS HAROLD GEORGE NICOLSON). Country notes in wartime. 85p $1 Doubleday [2s 6d Hogarth]

824 Country life. World war, 1939—Personal narratives, English (W) 41-6870

"Miss Sackville-West writes of her own scything and raking in the bright moonlight of one of the last nights of peace, of the first strangeness of blacked-out cottages as she makes her rounds as watchman in the Autumn darkness, of books she reads which have bestowed the new blessing of science on old country wisdom and the yeoman heart, and of the beauty of hoar frost and snow. . . These brief jottings cover the first year of the war. In a sense they are casual pages from a gardener's notebook through the program that follows the seasons in war as in peace." N Y Times

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 D '41

"Warmly recommended for the discerning reader." Esther Johnston

+ Library J 66:356 Ap 15 '41 30w

"Somehow this little volume awakened more nostalgia for England, and more admiration, than any of the others. That power it owes to its real beauty of style." Ralph Bates

+ Nation 152:673 Je 7 '41 60w

"Since these are the reflections of this author's mind it need not be pointed out that they are thoughtful, fastidious, and set in a cadenced simplicity of beautiful English prose. And to readers here they bring anew the sense of permanence that seems rooted in the life of the English countryside, even though the English country population is proportionately so small."

+ N Y Times p12 My 11 '41 360w

Time 37:104 My 19 '41 40w

"The notes from which the matter in this little book has been selected were originally contributed to a weekly review and their title implies an invitation to us still to regard them as topical journalism, even though gathered up between the lavender linen boards of a book. The author herself has made the selection, and its reception will depend chiefly on whether or not the reader will forgive the inevitable scrappy form of such a compilation for the sake of the indubitable charm of her style."

Times [London] Lit Sup p618 D 7 '40 440w

SADLEIR, MICHAEL. Fanny by gaslight. 458p $2.50 Appleton-Century [8s 6d Constable]

(W) 40-34074

Victorian period piece in which the London underworld of the 1870s comes to life. Fanny Hooper, a genteel little lady of seventy, living in a tiny French village, describes her early life to a young English publisher. The second part of the story purports to be narrated by the man whom Fanny really loved and cherished all her life, altho she refused to marry him.

Booklist 37:360 Ap 1 '41

"Mr. Sadleir has deliberately adopted the writing technique of the days in which Fanny lived and succeeds thereby in making her doubly real. Fanny is no modern rebellious spirit who found her life bitter or degrading; Fanny is a charming realist, grateful for whatever happiness she got and resigned to unhappiness. . . 'Fanny By Gaslight' is a rare adventure in the illicit love life of the 1870's. Mr. Sadleir makes it so by capturing the essence of the period both in the expression of its immorality and the integrity of his characters." Rose Feld

+ Books p4 F 2 '41 700w

"The story is as good as the best novels of Dickens' successors and moves more swiftly than most of them. The pitiful simplicity of the denouement is much better than the literary conventions of nineteenth century novel writing allowed. . . What makes the book so fascinating to belated Victorians are the descriptions of the London underworld and half-world, written with so light a touch and free of any trace of lubricity." M. E. Prim

+ Boston Transcript p1 F 1 '41 600w

"This novel, which has the advantage of an engagingly tolerant attitude to life, will be appreciated by many as a picture of London in what may be called the age of gaslight with all its implications." C. Marriott

+ Manchester Guardian p7 My 10 '40 200w

"The story is unrolled with so entire an absence of showmanship that it is only when we have finished it that we realize what a wealth of varied characterizations and what a plenitude of period data it contains. But, beyond anything, it is the story of a woman made for love; whose two years of perfect happiness, all fate allowed her, were enough to sweeten the rest of a long life rounded out in the country where to be 'Chère Amie,' as her tombstone had it, was no crime." J. S. Southron

SADLEIR, MICHAEL—Continued

+ N Y Times p22 F 2 '41 700w
New Yorker 16:55 F 1 '41 50w
Sat R of Lit 23:19 F 15 '41 170w

"Fanny was a sweet and innocuous character, whose story derives the mild degree of oddity and readableness which it possesses, not at all from human interest, for its characterisation is consistently automatic and unsurprising, but from the massing up of the period scene. Which gives the whole a mild flavour—but actually the helping is too large." Kate O'Brien

+— Spec 164:726 My 24 '40 900w

"Fanny's story is an interesting one; it has colour, tension, pathos; it excites continuous curiosity about what is to happen next, and is therefore the pleasantest sort of reading. Like other stories of an elaborate period character, however, it is somewhat artificial. . . Fanny herself, sensitive and tender and yet marvelously detached from the scenes of vice and exploitation of vice that have surrounded her since childhood, is less than completely credible. There is something, too, of Dion Boucicault melodrama in her unhappy fortune. . . Mr. Sadleir writes with ease and accomplishment and with an eye for eccentricities of character such as only Victorian London seems to have produced. His portrait of 'the Duke,' for instance, the genius of Hopwood's Hades, a high-principled impresario of the vicious and the depraved, carries complete conviction. And the lovely Lucy, who beats her luminous wings in the Gaiety chorus and a stockbroker's void, is truth incarnate."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p217 My 4 '40 800w

Reviewed by Robert Littell

Yale R n s 30:xii spring '41 160w

SAENGER, GERHART. Today's refugees, tomorrow's citizens; a story of Americanization; foreword by Eduard C. Lindeman. 286p il maps $3 Harper

325.73 Refugees, Political. U.S.—Foreign population (W) 41-10435

"As its title suggests this volume is a study of the typical modern refugee and his problem in becoming adjusted to life in America. In order to get the facts the author secured the assistance of some forty students from various New York schools including the School of Social Work and Columbia University where he is serving as director of research for a committee on social studies in the department of sociology. The result of the study is [an account] of a modern drama too little known to most Americans who see plenty of romance in the struggles of the early settlers to adjust themselves to the new conditions of life in this country but do not sense the modern counterpart of the same thing occasioned by Europe's return to barbarism under Hitler." (Churchman) Index.

Booklist 37:540 J1 15 '41

Bookmark 2:6 N '41

"The author, a refugee himself and a social worker before he came to America, approaches his subject with the ponderous pedestrian style characteristic of that profession, but the honesty and thoroughness of his treatise transcend its occasional dullness." Emmet Crozier

+— Books p11 J1 13 '41 850w

"The author himself is a refugee of distinction and has a wide knowledge of the question which he discusses. He also appreciates the ideals of America. So he is competent to introduce his comrades in misfortune. . . It is a test of America's democratic and Christian spirit that our Nation treat these terribly persecuted people with loving kindness. Let us hope this book will increase our kindness and diminish our impatience." R. H. M.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 Je 24 '41 550w

"A remarkably full and readable account. . . Dr. Saenger proves conclusively that he is, as Dr. E. C. Lindeman remarks in the introduction to the book, 'a trained social scientist and a man of great sensitiveness, particularly with respect to human relations.' But the book is not too specialized for the ordinary reader." H. S. Leiper

+ Churchman 155:18 J1 1 '41 330w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:380 Ja '42 20w

"An illuminating and exciting volume. . . The study shows the occupational distribution of various refugee and earlier immigrant groups with convincing statistics and understandable charts. . . Today's Refugees, Tomorrow's Citizens' seems destined to be for a long time the general handbook of the latest chapter of immigration. Americans and refugees alike will read it with great profit." Franz Hoellering

+ Nation 153:97 Ag 2 '41 650w

"[The author] looks at the refugee 'problem' with a broad and balanced view."

+ N Y Times p8 J1 6 '41 550w

"The study confines itself only to the German, and German-dominated groups, and is so successfully treated as a human document that layman and social scientist alike will find its pages well worth the reading. . . This is no wearying, statistical presentation but rather one that makes interesting reading because of its analysis. . . Dr. Saenger, however, strains at logic when he attempts to draw a parallel between former waves of immigration and the present one of which he writes." Harold Fields

+— Sat R of Lit 24:15 J1 5 '41 650w

Wis Lib Bul 37:151 O '41

SAINT-GAUDENS, HOMER SCHIFF. The American artist and his times. 332p pl $5 Dodd

759.1 Art—U.S. Artists, American (W) 41-51998

A history of American art from colonial days to the present, developed chiefly thru examination of the personalities of the artists. The author is director of the Department of Fine arts in the Carnegie Institute, Pittsburgh. Index.

Booklist 38:109 D 1 '41

"This book is entertaining as well as instructive. . . The latter part of the book, on present-day artists, leaves openings here and there for differences of opinion but, on the whole, Mr. Saint-Gaudens is persuasive in his appraisals. The new edition into which the book is sure to pass should correct one or two details." Royal Cortissoz

+— Books p4 N 23 '41 1000w

Commonweal 35:325 Ja 16 '42 40w

Reviewed by Rice Estes

Library J 66:903 O 15 '41 90w

"This wise, mellow and altogether charming book grew out of the Survey of American Painting, which, in lieu of the perforce relinquished 'International' was held in the galleries of Carnegie Institute in Pittsburgh in 1940." E. A. Jewell

+ N Y Times p9 N 16 '41 1200w

New Yorker 17:91 N 1 '41 30w

"Saint-Gaudens's book is engagingly informal; it has much of the vivid immediacy of autobiography, and is enlivened by flavorful reminiscences. . . Except for an admitted blind-spot for abstract painting ('I toss them off as mere moronic art bubbles'), Saint-Gaudens proves a seasoned, reasonable guide. If his account is neither comprehensive nor precisely patterned, it is because the first is physically impossible in one volume, and the second must await the sifting of time," Frank Caspers

+ Sat R of Lit 25:17 Ja 3 '42 650w

SAINT JEAN, ROBERT DE. France speaking; tr. from the original French by Anne Green. 335p $2.50 Dutton

940.5344 World war, 1939—France, France
—Politics and government (W) 41-8416

This is the day-by-day record, not so much concerned with events as with "encounters, reflections and memories," of a young French journalist who served in the Ministry of Information. The time covered is from October 9, 1939 to June 17, 1940. Index.

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin

Atlantic Je '41 280w

Booklist 37:544 J1 15 '41

Reviewed by Beach Conger

Books p2 Ap 27 '41 650w

Reviewed by Joseph McSorley

Cath World 154:115 O '41 180w

"[This] is the brilliant and thoughtful diary of a prominent French journalist who served in the Ministry of Information during the war. It is certainly very nearly the best of the many books which have been published on the fall of France. Its only rival in its field, I think, is André Maurois' 'The Tragedy of France.' M. de Saint Jean shares some of the qualities of M. Maurois—lucidity, wit, a sense of proportion, a freedom from political and party prejudice. But both in form and in substance his book is personal and distinctive." W. H. C.
+ Christian Science Monitor p18 My 3 '41 700w

"It is too bad that the title in English had to have the blazing ring of a radio announcement. 'Democracy, Butter and Cannons,' which was the French title, was in keeping with the general tone of the book, which is one of an attentive, very much aware, but unassuming observer. Robert de Saint Jean kept a diary from October 9, 1939 to June 17, 1940. It is the diary of a level-headed man whose subtle intelligence and clear judgment made it possible to meet the successive situations without prejudice and with an acuteness of outlook rarely found anywhere, in any country." C. H. Bishop

+ Commonweal 35:324 Ja 16 '42 290w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 19:874 J1 '41 60w

"Picturesque in style and excellently translated, it gives a valuable picture of the steps in the downfall of France. It has much of immediate importance to the United States." F. L. D. Goodrich

+ Library J 66:355 Ap 15 '41 100w

New Repub 104:737 My 26 '41 40w

"Although it is, of course, one man's report and judgment, its spirit and thought are fundamentally right. And to the value of frank contemporary notation it adds the brilliance of a questing intelligence illuminating many related points of event, character and thought." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p3 My 4 '41 1900w

"The author knew most of the important figures and reports what they had to say, but he was more interested in what the ordinary Frenchman was thinking. This reflective, often analytical narrative of the collapse of French society may remind you of Edmond Taylor's 'The Strategy of Terror.'"

+ New Yorker 17:87 Ap 26 '41 70w

"On the causes of the disaster, Robert de Saint-Jean agrees with André Morize and with all Frenchmen who do not make the defeat of their country an occasion for attacking their political opponents. Treason? No. Essentially lack of industrial preparation, lack of unity, lack of faith. All this was said before, but Robert de Saint-Jean says it with dispassionate wisdom and with a wealth of personal observations which help the reader to live again those dreadful days. If we find, in the younger generation, many minds of such honesty and intelligence, we shall not have to wait too long for the rebirth of France." André Maurois

+ Sat R of Lit 23:14 My 3 '41 550w

"This is far from being the work either of a superpatriot or of an apologist trying to explain away a defeat. Mr de Saint Jean loves his country. He dislikes and distrusts the Germans. But of the ranting invective, the bitterness so often found in books written during wartime, there is almost none. Instead, here a patriotic Frenchman takes his native land to task for its failures, in a melancholy but nonetheless frank and direct manner."

+ Spring'd Republican p8 My 6 '41 600w

Wis Lib Bul 37:154 O '41

ST JOHN, DARBY. The Westgate mystery. 275p $2 Random house

41-16600

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p17 Ag 24 '41 170w

"Mystery, suspense and excellent characterization combine to make this a notable first detective story by a new author who will, we trust, be heard from again." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p17 Ag 24 '41 240w

"Solution may not stand acid test but various tragedies, events leading up to same, and constant suspense make good reading."

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:16 S 6 '41 40w

SAIT, EDWARD MCCHESENEY, ed. See Masters of political thought

SALINAS, PEDRO. Truth of two, and other poems; trs. by Eleanor L. Turnbull; sels. from La voz a ti debida and Razón de amor, with Spanish originals. 289p $2.75 Johns Hopkins

861

41-344

Seventy-nine poems by a leading Spanish writer, now in exile in this country. Both Spanish originals and English translations are given. The author is at present a member of the faculty of Johns Hopkins university.

"The translator has made herself into transparent glass, and she lets this young fire fed from an ancient culture of flames shine through undistorted and singularly un-English in its loveliness. The fire, for all the English words, is Spanish fire. And yet not quite. One cannot keep from remembering how Crashaw said it was not Spanish but heaven that he spoke." R. P. T. Coffin

+ Books p25 Mr 23 '41 750w

"Offers an ideal opportunity for American readers to become acquainted with the work of one of Spain's most distinguished contemporary poets. . . The translations are models of fidelity to the original Castilian, a primary virtue. The poetry of Salinas is less difficult to put into English than the work of other Spanish poets of the present period, García Lorca, for example, because his language is relatively direct and simple. But to turn fine poetry in any language into fine poetry in another is hard enough at best, and Miss Turnbull has accomplished her task with striking success." Herschel Brickell

+ N Y Times p2 D 22 '40 600w

SAMPSON, GEORGE. The concise Cambridge history of English literature. 1094p $4.50 Macmillan [15s Cambridge]

820.9 English literature—History and criticism (W) 41-16353

A re-writing and digest of the fifteen volumes of the Cambridge history, which follows the same plan and brings the work up to date with a new chapter on the established writers of the twentieth century. Index.

SAMPSON, GEORGE—Continued

Booklist 38:77 N 1 '41

"The style is as easy as though the author had not been conscious of the necessity of strict compression. Criticisms and evaluations are not excluded; they are brief and meaningful, but not dogmatic. Such a history of literature is, of course, a book to be used rather than to be read once and laid aside."

+ Christian Century 53:1242 O 8 '41 190w

"Mr. Sampson's book is a masterpiece. It has knowledge, it has wit, it has shape and order, it has irony. It is, moreover, exceedingly modest. It purports to be little more than an abbreviated version of the larger Cambridge work. At least, that is the impression which a careless reader might derive from its title and preface. It differs from the parent work in not discussing matters 'relating to sources and foreign affiliations,' on the very reasonable ground that 'the reader must begin to know famous books themselves before he begins to acquire information about their supposed ancestry.' But it differs from the original History also in lightness of touch, and in trenchancy of phrase." Harold Hobson

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 S 6 '41 470w

"I find a readiness to reprimand, a tartness, and, when it comes to modern writers, a reprehensible hinting at personal matters, but I find no a priori respect. Wherefore this volume will not find on my shelves a place near those of Saintsbury, but will be put rather where the door hides it. On the shelves it will go, for a book which in one thousand pages covers the panorama of English literature from Beowulf to modern times may be called 'indispensable.' But Mr. Sampson makes the panorama strangely bleak." Trevor James

+ Life & Letters Today 30:236 S '41 550w

"There is no other history of English or any other literature so completely satisfying as this of Mr. Sampson's." H. B. C.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 S 2 '41 400w

"Mr. Sampson's opinions are his own, and his work has its own life and virtues. It is not a great history, it has no shaping critical idea, but then neither has it any philosophical solemnity such as mars the well-known and useful work by Legouis and Cazamian. It is fresh, lively, frequently witty." Lionel Trilling

+ Nation 153:546 N 29 '41 550w

"The Concise Cambridge History of English Literature appears under the aegis of a distinguished press, by which it is recommended as the summary of an authoritative if already antiquated work. There is a likelihood, therefore, that it will be bought for schools, where its views will command unquestioning respect. The greater part of it is accurate in its facts, and blameless in its judgments. It may on occasion be useful to writers when they need to discover a date. But it is hardly a book that I should care to see in the hands of any young person of either sex." Raymond Mortimer

+ New Statesman & Nation 22:88 J1 26 '41 1300w

New Yorker 17:79 S 27 '41 30w

"I have read all those volumes, and I reviewed most of them on their appearance, and, speaking from recollection only, I am staggered at the neatness of Mr. Sampson's miniature. As a work of reference, as a handbook for beginners this volume, in so far as it is an epitome, cannot be too highly praised. But the book is more than an epitome, and its fresh pages, lively as they often are, provocative, sensitive, a little too severe at moments, cannot be so thoroughly commended." R. E. Roberts

+ Sat R of Lit 24:6 O 11 '41 2600w

"It is a pity, indeed, that Mr. Sampson did not confine himself to history (thus producing an invaluable reference book), for as a critic he is seldom very happy, and when he reaches modern times he becomes hopelessly lost in a maze of minor writers. It needs a sharper discrimination between the imitative and the original talent than Mr. Sampson possesses to find a way through."

Spec 167:292 S 19 '41 250w

"For a man of Mr. Sampson's learning, it was easy to correct such mistakes as had escaped the constant revision of the volumes, and fairly easy to detect and strengthen the weak spots—a task which he performs with gentleness and discretion. And though the original writers were not cramped for space, it is a little disturbing, even chastening, to see how often Mr. Sampson can say in one sentence all that one or other of those admired men of letters spread over a paragraph. But the wonderful thing about this book is that, working over fourteen large volumes of miscellaneous contributions by more than one hundred different writers, the author (Mr. Sampson is distinctly the author, not merely the compiler, of the new book) has preserved all the marrow of the original and given it the stamp of his own powerful mind and decisive temper."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p398 Ag 16 '41 1150w

SAMPSON, RICHARD HENRY (RICHARD HULL, pseud). Beyond reasonable doubt. 251p $2 Messner

41-3424

Detective story.

"Polite and sufficiently exciting stuff in the king's English." Will Cuppy

+ Books p25 Mr 2 '41 150w

"This is a complete trial record, ending with a verdict of guilty. Nevertheless it has a surprise ending. Slow reading, but you'll like it." Marian Wiggin

+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 15 '41 20w

"Richard Hull knows the rules and plays by them, but he's no follower of formulas. His 'Beyond Reasonable Doubt' is tricky but fair. . . Here Mr. Hull pulls off his most remarkable feat: he satisfies the law and the reader both. Mr. Hull is one of the best at the detective-story game, with stuff as straight as a Notable British Trial and no fancy frills." Mort. Post

+ New Repub 104:673 My 12 '41 180w

"Richard Hull is an extremely ingenious writer—and something of an enfant terrible among authors of whodunit tales. . . If you don't like the end of this book you may take comfort in realizing that you've shared in a brilliant bit of grisly diversion." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p20 Mr 9 '41 290w

New Yorker 17:87 Mr 22 '41 30w

"Method should interest serious students of crime fiction. Fenby is painstaking detective, and ending has neatly ironic touch. For connoisseurs."

+ Sat R of Lit 23:22 Mr 1 '41 40w

SAN, KIM, pseud. Song of Ariran; the life story of a Korean rebel [ed. by Nym Wales]. 258p il map $2.75 Day

951.9 Korea—History. Japanese in Korea. Communism—Korea 41-23660

Biography of a Korean, Kim San, one of the three chief young leaders of the Korean revolutionary movement. He was born on a mountain top in a battle area, some thirty-six years ago, and his whole career has been a turbulent one. He told his story to Nym Wales (Mrs Edgar Snow) in the summer of 1937, when he was hoping soon to join the anti-Japanese imperialism army in Manchuria, and asked that the book be withheld from publication for at least two years. At the present his whereabouts are unknown. Glossary. Index.

Booklist 38:187 F 1 '42

"Kim San's story is a good one, except for the windy passages in which he airs his philosophy and which Miss Wales might well have deleted. I doubt if he will stir much sympathy in the bosom of the average American reader. Most indeed will vote him a daft, conceited, murderous little prig. But his story will probably serve the useful purpose of informing many that the little publicized Korean revolution, with 800,000 sturdy pioneers in Manchuria and Siberia behind it, is very much alive and is a problem that Japan will have to reckon with if she undertakes another expedition into Siberia over Korean and Manchurian lines of communication." Rodney Gilbert
Books p4 N 16 '41 1450w

"Absorbing personal story."
+ N Y Times p9 N 30 '41 480w

"Kim San's biography is a unique human document. It is much more than a mere record of events, although he has crowded the experiences of several life-times into the space of three decades. It is also a revealing account, often painfully intimate, of the mental processes and heart-searchings of a Korean patriot, revolutionary, and exile." T. A. Bisson

+ Sat R of Lit 24:14 N 1 '41 450w

SANBORN, RUTH BURR. These are my people. 306p $2.50 Crowell

41-23969

A young Southern physician, Dr Wingfield Chevron, torn between the wealthy patients his fiancée brought him, and the sturdy back country people, who really loved him, is the chief character. A fatal accident, an inquest, and Dr Wing learned his real friends and his ultimate goal.

"Miss Sanborn, who now lives in North Carolina, writes appealingly of countrypeople whose traditions stem directly from the early English settlers and generations of independent pioneers. The setting gives freshness to a story whose end is foreordained from the beginning. And, though on sober afterthought it seems unfair to have the virtues and the vices allocated so unerringly to the country-people and the townspeople, respectively, one likes Heather McQuarren and her clan so much the better that the story moves smoothly and pleasantly along to their victory." Mary Ross
+ Books p10 O 12 '41 440w

Christian Century 58:1243 O 8 '41 20w

"Good novel for the average reader who needs to be entertained. Excellent description, characters well drawn, and story absorbing... Recommended." S. E. Sherman

+ Library J 66:731 S 1 '41 70w

"'These Are My People,' without cutting very far below the surface at any point, is sleekly finished and readable. Miss Sanborn is a practiced writer of magazine fiction and she has spared none of her highly polished arts—from a photographic eye for domestic interiors to a deft mastery of light dialogue—to make her first novel a pleasant and ornamental job." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p18 O 12 '41 650w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 23 '41 170w
Wis Lib Bul 37:178 N '41

SANCHEZ, GEORGE ISIDORE. Forgotten people; a study of New Mexicans. 98p il $2 Univ. of N. Mex. press

978.9 Spaniards in New Mexico, Taos county, New Mexico 40-28636

"After the first Spanish settlers of New Mexico were killed or driven out by the Pueblo Rebellion of 1680, the Indians of the country had it to themselves for thirteen years. Then came the reconquest by De Vargas, and the establishment of settlements which still exist. And now there are three groups of people in New Mexico: the Indians; the descendants of the original Spanish settlers and later immigrants from Mexico; the English-speaking Americans, sometimes called 'Anglos.' There are 270,000 of these descendants of the Spanish settlers in New Mexico today, and their lot is hard. . . Dr. Sanchez's study concentrates on Taos County. . . During the past few years various state and federal agencies have done much to help the New Mexican solve his land and educational problems. But much more needs to be done." Survey

Booklist 37:239 F 1 '41

Reviewed by Alden Stevens
Survey 77:341 N '41 450w

SANDERSON, IVAN TERRANCE. Living treasure; with thirty-two il. by the author. 290p map $3.50 Viking

591.97 Zoology—West Indies. Zoology—Yucatan. Zoology—British Honduras. Animals, Habits and behavior of (W) 41-51755

The British zoologist, author of Caribbean Treasure (Book Review Digest, 1939) describes a scientific expedition to the West Indies and Central America on behalf of the British museum. Their prime search was for a rare tick which lives only in the left ear of a certain species of bats, but they encountered also monkeys, deer, Haitian wild horses, and other fauna, all of which he discusses in detail. Index.

Booklist 37:433 My 15 '41

Bookmark 2:6 My '41

"Natural history in the tropics is an inexhaustible source of romance of the quieter sort, and Mr. Sanderson is one of its most gifted exponents. He is a keen observer who writes with an infectious enthusiasm and who also draws uncommonly well. The thirty-two illustrations in this volume are alone worth more than the price of the book. . . A must for nature lovers." W. A. Roberts

+ Books p6 Ap 20 '41 460w

"Especially recommended is the account of the air-conditioned colonies of parasol ants, the only animals apart from man that have developed the practice of agriculture. Unhappily, the author betrays recurrent symptoms of having been infected by the whimsy bug, a widespread pest to which British travelers appear particularly susceptible."

+ Commonweal 34:165 Je 6 '41 210w

"Beautifully illustrated, witty, and scientifically accurate. . . His play-by-play report of the activities of the Atta ant hill in British Honduras is fascinating reading. This description of the amusing adventures and scientific enthusiasms of Sanderson's party will claim the interest of young people as well as their more sophisticated elders." D. F. Lucas

+ Library J 66:219 Mr 1 '41 120w

"It's an exciting book about snakes, wild horses, crocodiles and dozens of other less conspicuous animals, written with gusto and scientific passion."

+ New Repub 104:737 My 26 '41 50w

"Those who enjoy the informal adventures of naturalists, with just enough of the salt of science to keep them from spoiling, have possibly discovered two previous books by Mr. Sanderson, 'Animal Treasure,' and 'Caribbean Treasure.' The recipe is about the same in this one, except that the author has apparently been told by scientific critics that he has not been scientific enough, and has, therefore, added several pinches more of salt. This book is more serious than the other two. It contains more ideas and not quite so much fun. The reader will learn more, and perhaps think more, about the meaning of wild life in the areas visited." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p4 Ap 20 '41 1200w

"In this book, Mr. Sanderson reveals more about the serious purposes underlying his work, particularly the determination by precise methods of the complex relationship between animal life and its changing environment and the investigation of the diseases of wild ani-

SANDERSON, I. T.—Continued
imals, who are by no means as healthy as innocent nature-lovers might suppose. As in his other books, Mr. Sanderson provides his own illustrations, thirty-two drawings that combine exactness of detail with a warm feeling for the vivid life of the subject." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 17:82 Ap 12 '41 600w

"[The author] seems to feel that he must be at pains to persuade his readers that, while he works in dead earnest, he has, nevertheless, as healthy a scorn for the 'pomposities' of science and exploration as he supposes they must have. So he cuts short his simple and utterly absorbing scientific expositions with self-conscious apologies and frivolous expressions of contempt that are really not necessary at all. . . . This is a small reservation, but it is worth mentioning since we may, by now, hope that these books will continue in a long series. About the many drawings of small animals with which Mr. Sanderson has illustrated his narrative there can be no reservations at all. They give the impression of being precisely right, of fitting themselves perfectly to the spirit and content of his text. They reveal, equally with the text, the peculiar keenness and originality, the warmth and humor, that invariably distinguish his observations." L. J. Halle, Jr.

+ — Sat R of Lit 23:15 Ap 26 '41 650w

Springf'd Republican p12 My 22 '41 100w

Wis Lib Bul 37:90 My '41

SANDYS, E. V. Beowulf. See Beowulf

SANDYS, E. V. Story of Peer Gynt; retold [adapted from Ibsen's drama] il. by Fritz Eichenberg. 115p $2 Crowell

41-27327

Adaptation of the famous Norse legend of Peer Gynt for young readers. Includes several of Edward Grieg's musical scores from the Peer Gynt suite.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p6 Ja 18 '42 180w

"What a good story it is!" E. V. Wyatt

+ Cath World 154:374 D '41 140w

"A clever adaptation."

+ Christian Century 58:1381 N 5 '41 10w

"The adaptation is a tactful and conscientious version, but it has nothing of the tenderness, beauty, or quality of the original. Resumés of the story now available are adequate for intelligent listening to Grieg's music; it would seem wise to leave Ibsen's poem with its adult theme for later discovery. Drawings by Fritz Eichenberg and music for five familiar selections are included. Recommended for large collections." J. I. Sauer

+ — Library 66:1049 D 1 '41 100w

SARETT, LEW R. Collected poems; with a foreword by Carl Sandburg. 383p $3 Holt 811

(W) 41-15750

"A collection that represents the work of 30 years. The themes from native and Indian life are filled with a woodsman's familiarity with the outdoors and with Indian lore. A chronology of the poems and explanatory notes on the Indian poems are appended." (Booklist) Indexes.

Booklist 38:49 O 15 '41

"A knowledgeable poet of the woods, this American who has been forest ranger and wilderness guide as well as college professor and platform lecturer. The low of the bull moose and the bleat of fawns 'wedged warm against the bellies of their drowsy does' are the tones from which his tunes evolve. His nature lore countenances no guesswork. . .

Many will welcome this collection of the works of Mr. Sarett, whose poems have been appearing in separate volumes from time to time, over a period of years." Pearl Strachan
+ Christian Science Monitor p10 O 18 '41 550w

"It is a testimony to Mr. Sarett's poetry that it achieved the popularity it did during the post-war decades, precisely when 'romantic' poetry of this kind was least in demand because of the interest in hollow men and waste lands. A great deal of the force of his poetry derives from what the Greeks would have called his ethos, those attributes of his personal character which are constantly revealed in the qualities of his diction, style, thought, and the like. . . . These personal attributes, combined with a high grade of technical excellence and craftsmanship, make The Collected Poems of Lew Sarett a valuable collection of the writings of a brilliant and original contemporary American poet." Leo Shapiro

+ Poetry 59:154 D '41 1300w

Springf'd Republican p6 Ja 22 '42 500w

Wis Lib Bul 37:153 O '41

SARGEANT, HENRY ANTHONY, and WELLS, GEOFFREY HARRY (GEOFFREY WEST, pseud). Grand strategy 246p $2 Crowell

355.01 War. Strategy. Economic policy 41-24419

"Mr. Sargeant, a research scientist at Cambridge university and authority on poison gas, is now working on a full length study of grand strategy from ancient to modern times. Mr West is a regular contributor to leading English political and literary periodicals. It is obvious that the present book is merely an outline of the more comprehensive work to follow. . . . While the subject is based of necessity on the evolution and development of military strategy it goes far beyond that in scope. Grand strategy deals with the connections between war and the society or civilization in which war occurs." Springf'd Republican

"'Grand Strategy' is an undauntedly speculative book and it raises as many questions as it answers. But its underlying ideas are impressive and in particular it gives expression convincingly to a concept of war that, if it is absorbed, may have a decisive bearing on the future." H. N. Doughty, Jr.

Books p3 Ja 25 '42 1400w

"It will be seen that the theme of 'Grand Strategy' is a vital one. It may happen that one may completely reject a technique of social analysis utilized by an author, and may also believe that the author has made poor use of it, and yet recognize the value of a book. . . . The reviewer, having adopted the viewpoint of the authors, and having profited greatly, confesses that he has found unsatisfactory their treatment of a rich theme. Nowhere is this inadequacy more striking than in the final chapters. Here one has a right to expect the authors to sum up with clarity, decision and usefulness. They do not, though their general argument is sound and liberal. Nevertheless, their book has the merit of leading the average reader to bolder conclusions." Ralph Bates

+ — New Repub 105:865 D 22 '41 1350w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 14 '41 1000w

SARGENT, DANIEL. All the day long; James Anthony Walsh, cofounder of Maryknoll. 259p il $2.50 Longmans

B or 92 Walsh, James Anthony, bp.

41-26029

Biography of this Roman Catholic priest and bishop, who was co-founder of Maryknoll, the institution which trains Catholic missionaries for work in the Far East.

Booklist 38:188 F 1 '42

Reviewed by Michael Williams

Commonweal 35:176 D 5 '41 850w

Springf'd Republican p14 N 20 '41 220w

SARGENT, DANIEL. Christopher Columbus. (Science and culture ser) 214p $2.50 Bruce pub.

B or 92 Columbus, Christopher 41-9424

An "analysis and depiction" of the life and times of Christopher Columbus. "Sargent's descriptive prowess is demonstrated in his pictures of Portugal, the last stronghold of chivalry; Genoa, cynical and world weary; Spain, conqueror of Is'am and thirster after gold." (Commonweal)

"This book is a treasure. It is both literature and analysis, and in both departments is masterly. The reading of it is an experience, moving and elevating. As portraiture, too, it is masterly." C. W. Thompson

+ Cath World 153:632 Ag '41 500w

"One of the Catholic best. The biographical study, for it is more a study than a mere recitation of chronological facts, is written in the simple and direct style that is Sargent's and deserves credit chiefly for the fact that it does not lengthily repeat the broader outlines of Columbus's life—we all know them anyhow—but intelligently fills in the gaps with details little familiar but of great importance in the making of Columbus the man and Columbus the adventurer." W. M. Callahan

+ Commonweal 34:328 J1 25 '41 800w

SARGENT, PORTER EDWARD. What makes lives. 224p $1.50 Sargent 370 Education

Reprint of the introduction to the author's annual, Handbook of Private Schools. It is a discussion on the whole educational machine, both public and private schools, colleges and other educational foundations, and their effects upon personality. Includes some comments on propaganda and educational control.

"This little book is packed with pungent criticism and constructive suggestion about the educational process. Mr. Sargent is undoubtedly the best informed person in the United States about private schools. The fact that many of these schools advertise in his book does not affect the free flow of his comments upon them."

+ Christian Century 57:798 Je 19 '40 160w

"Like much else coming from 11 Beacon Street these days, [this is] full of fire."

Social Studies 32:138 Mr '41 60w

SAROYAN, WILLIAM. My name is Aram; il. by Don Freeman. 220p $2.50 Harcourt [7s 6d Faber]

(W) 40-34075

For descriptive note see annual for 1940.

Bookmark 2:14 Mr '41

Cath World 153:252 My '41 250w

"The life was real, but the incidents are probably mostly imaginary, and all the better for that, and the supporting cast of subsidiary characters is marvelous. In the sophisticated simplicity of these stories Saroyan is at his best."

+ Christian Century 58:291 F 26 '41 50w

"In My Name is Aram, a collection of fanciful stories about the author and his relatives, Mr. Saroyan's showy virtuosity mellows to the gently whimsical self-deprecation which is the characteristic humour of the deracinated and the oppressed. The writing is extremely lively, the stories are daintily compounded of pity and wit and a lyrical absurdity. Mr. Saroyan is undoubtedly a little master of this kind of confectionery, which I can best describe as a blend of Tristram Shandy and Gerhardt's The Polyglots." Desmond Hawkins

+ New Statesman & Nation 21:306 Mr 22 '41 150w

"If Aram is artless, that is the last word to apply to Mr. Saroyan himself; he is both artistic and artful. Someone soon will have to make an analysis of his very personal style, for though one might say of it that it is in the Hemingway tradition, there is something added—or is it taken away? For the art is most definitely one of subtraction, of shearing away the trimmings; it becomes an art of inarticulateness, where the silences say more than the words, a method brilliantly illustrated in this book by the story The Poor and Burning Arab." Bonamy Dobrée

+ Spec 166:354 Mr 28 '41 340w

"The mystery of life! The strangeness of all things and creatures! In the last resort it is the mystic's delight in creation that moves Mr. Saroyan to communicate his shining little fancies in syllables of heartfelt wonder."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p137 Mr 22 '41 950w

Wis Lib Bul 37:36 F '41

"A great deal of fun has been poked at Mr. Saroyan and some of it he has justly invited by joyously and unashamedly placing himself at the centre of the universe. A great deal of what he has written has been rhapsodic proof of his freedom from an internal censor. . . But in My Name Is Aram he has freed himself of vagueness and excess baggage, and joins the handful of American short-story writers whose gifts are adequate to that difficult form." Robert Littell

+ Yale R n s 30:viii spring '41 360w

SAROYAN, WILLIAM. Three plays [second series]. 275p $3 Harcourt

812

(W) 41-22847

The three plays are: The Beautiful People, Sweeney in the Trees, and Across the Board on Tomorrow Morning. "The message of each play comes from the world—which the writer regards as the only and therefore the best place known to man. The comedy, tragedy, absurdity and nobility of these plays come from people—whom the writer regards as beautiful." (Author's note)

Booklist 38:128 D 15 '41

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton

Books p27 N 16 '41 180w

"Saroyan's groove is full of surprises, most (but not all) of which come off effectively. Some are so grotesque that one feels sure he never expected them to work but put them in because it seemed a pity to suppress a fantastic idea that happened to occur to him. He has sounded a fresh and lively note in the theater."

+ Christian Century 58:1380 N 5 '41 300w

"William Saroyan's plays are suited to the theater; they are also suited to perusal in the quiet of the study. They are literary as well as theatrical productions. This is the reason that they stand head and shoulders above the plays of any American dramatist who has appeared in the last decade. This fact is emphasized by the publication of three more of his plays, or rather by two of them, for 'Sweeney in the Trees' quite baffled me in its reading. But 'The Beautiful People' only increased and broadened the delight I experienced on seeing it in the theater." Grenville Vernon

+ Commonweal 35:203 D 12 '41 300w

"Called formless, Saroyan has a fine understanding of story values, and this delightful San Francisco family might readily go into our literary folklore along with the characters in his earlier dramas. . . Recommended for general purchase." George Freedley

+ Library J 66:840 O 1 '41 100w

"The Beautiful People' is the flimsiest bit of whimsy I have read since that masterpiece of the coy blandishment, 'Dear Brutus.' The newspaper reviews I came across of the stage production occurred in one opinion, namely, that Mr. Saroyan violated almost all the laws of the orthodox theater. . . . The trouble is that Mr. Saroyan writes too much. Therefore the internal pressure of each work progressively declines, until in such a play as 'The Beautiful People' there is nothing much present except an attractive title and some passages of flighty dialogue." George Barker

SAROYAN, WILLIAM—Continued
 — Nation 153:459 N 8 '41 600w

SARSFIELD, EDWIN. The black fox walks.
 (Atlantic monthly press bk) 321p $2.50 Little 41-4021

A tale of Ireland in the days of the "Trouble," in which the central character is Philip O'Caheer, who served the cause as an "outside man," hiding his activities under the guise of a trucking business.

Booklist 37:410 My 1 '41

"This story gives as vivid a picture of those times as has come to my attention, and gives it in terms of exceedingly human and convincing individuals, sometimes admirable and sometimes not, but almost always likable. It is a fast-moving and colorful story, not easily laid down until it is ended, and when the end is reached it will be an impervious reader who, whether or not he approves of the Irish or their cause, fails to be stirred by what happened in Rathreeley." Mary Ross
 + Books p12 Ap 6 '41 550w

"Put together in a more than casual Irish fashion with dialogue of the rollickin'-roarin'-randy-O variety. . . . Yet for all its curious mixture of modern naturalism with old-fashioned Ouida-like romance, this reviewer enjoyed the book, but some of his pleasure in it sprang from effects which had not been consciously striven for by the writer." Horace Reynolds

+ — N Y Times p26 Ap 6 '41 600w

SASS, HERBERT RAVENEL. Emperor Brims.
 312p $2.50 Doubleday

(W) 41-982

The central episode of this historical romance of South Carolina in colonial times is the uprising of the Indians under Brims of Coweta, head of the Creek confederacy, against the colonists.

"The story is well-written, the characters alive, and the descriptions of life, especially among that very superior tribe, the Cherokees, instructive." R. M. G.

+ Atlantic Ap '41 170w

Booklist 37:360 Ap 1 '41

"It's an exciting and adroitly sustained drama, crammed with moments guaranteed to send shivers to any reader's scalp." Lisle Bell
 + Books p8 Ja 26 '41 480w

New Repub 104:286 F 24 '41 50w

"Emperor Brims" is an agreeable book to read, but it will be forgotten because of its lack of originality, one fears, far more quickly than the real importance of its theme would indicate." Herschel Brickell

+ — N Y Times p7 Ja 26 '41 600w

"Highly colored costume piece, rather too prettified but full of action."

+ New Yorker 16:71 Ja 25 '41 50w

Reviewed by Robert Littell

Yale R n s 30:xiv spring '41 20w

SASSOON, SIEGFRIED. Rhymed ruminations.
 56p $1.50 Viking [5s Faber]

821

(W) [A41-1457]

"Most of these poems were privately printed a year ago, and their title suggests the mood of contemplative retirement which pervades the volume as a whole. Only in the concluding lines of one of them, entitled 'Silver Jubilee Celebration,' does the ironic note sound with which Mr. Sassoon challenged complacency during the last war." Times [London] Lit Sup

Booklist 37:435 My 15 '41

"I suspect there will be some to resent the fact that the revel of 1916 is not present here and some who will squirm a little at the poetic addresses, however patently sincere, to the poet's own small son. But one is overhearing, here, the quiet tones of a spirit musical and grave, who evokes the England of the lyric countryside, who speaks out of an unbiting disillusion of the perennial things, things seen, things hoped for and things loved, and he is a poet who knows his own terms and the sources and circumference of his own temper." Irwin Edman

+ Books p14 My 25 '41 550w

Reviewed by John Holmes

Boston Transcript p9 Ap 14 '41 230w

"These poems were written during, and they reflect and make clear, the confusion of those miserable years before the collapse of France, when Britain was still wretchedly hoping to save the world at a limited cost. Perhaps that temper has not yet entirely vanished from the democracies, but it is no longer to be found in Britain, and the new, more valiant resolution of this nation rings like a trumpet through Mr. Sassoon's final verses." Harold Hobson

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 D 28 '40 120w

"Good poetry without bitterness from wartime England." F. A. Boyle

+ Library J 66:178 F 15 '41 30w

Manchester Guardian p7 D 3 '40 300w

"The English manner and the English scene stick out of Mr. Sassoon's poetry. But . . . the shy, wealthy, slightly embarrassed, attractive, problematic figure of Mr. Sassoon coughs obtrusively in the centre of every one of Mr. Sassoon's poems. It must be admitted that this insistent self-portrait seems to be there very much against Mr. Sassoon's own wishes, but there he always is, telling us that he likes nothing but quietness and solitude and the best music, that he has constructed since the war, in short, a wonderful shell around himself to protect him from the world: a shell pearled with music, painting, reading, landscape, parenthood, money." Stephen Spender
 + — New Statesman & Nation 20:568 D 7 '40 500w

"Rather startlingly gentle, sentimental verse, about the war and other matters."

New Yorker 17:92 Ap 5 '41 30w

Reviewed by K. J. Shapiro

Poetry 58:100 My '41 380w

"Brief though the book is and confined in its locale, it ranges widely in tone and spirit. The first few poems have the accent of Thomas Hardy, whom Sassoon has always admired; the last few recall Rupert Brooke, Sassoon's romantic opposite. . . . Not even Sassoon's most consistent admirers would insist that this volume increases his poetic stature. But it can be claimed that it rounds out the portrait of the man." Louis Untermeyer

+ — Sat R of Lit 23:7 My 3 '41 300w

Reviewed by Richard Church

Spec 165:508 N 15 '40 500w

Times [London] Lit Sup p558 N 2 '40 800w

Reviewed by J. L. Sweeney

Yale R n s 30:818 summer '41 220w

SATTGAST, CHARLES RICHARD. The administration of college and university endowments. 125p $1.85 Teachers college

378.31 Endowments. Colleges and universities—Finance. Investments 41-3283

"Analyzes the pressing problem confronting the endowed colleges and universities today, and presents fundamental principles necessary for the proper administration and investment of funds. The material was secured from 45 American institutions selected to provide a representative sample, covering their portfolios for the years 1929, 1933, and 1936." (Am Econ R) Bibliography.

"Highly interesting and timely contribution. In view of all the uncertainties it is gratifying to have the problems presented clearly and thoroughly. The book should carry its important message to a wider audience of financial trustees." R. S. Gorski

+ Am Econ R 31:159 Mr '41 500w

"Dr. Sattgast's volume is clearly and concisely written, is well printed and contains a useful bibliography. It is valuable for study or reference by all persons who are concerned with the responsibility which it discusses." Lloyd Morey

+ School & Society 53:59 Ja 11 '41 1200w

SATURDAY EVENING POST (periodical).
Post stories of 1940. (v6) 391p $2.50 Little

(37-27266)

Contents: Blacksmith's boy—Heel and toe, by E. W. O'Brien; The sunflower kid, by Brendan Gill; I'm going home, by A. M. Swift; A present for Babe, by R. R. Annett; On leave, by Stuart Cloete; You're as old as you feel, by Richard Sherman; No visitors, by S. V. Benét; Second wind, by Talbert Josselyn; Once an artilleryman, by Clements Ripley; Mister Ears, by Eddy Orcutt; I got a name, by Zachary Gold; Cape Horn pilot, by Jacland Marmur; Big operator, by M. B. Cockrell; Here, birdie, birdie, birdie, by Joel Sayre; Shut up, dear, by F. L. Smith; A man's mother, by G. H. Carroll; Stagecoach from Eden, by M. G. Chute; Journey by moonlight, by Burnham Carter; The lady was a flop, by Borden Chase; Bald Eagle Jiggins, by T. H. Raddall; North of Terschelling, by Alec Hudson.

Booklist 37:440 My 15 '41

"If you prefer that a collection of short stories be dished up with a lot of editorial garnish, you will have to look elsewhere than in 'Post Stories of 1940.' For here is a compilation based on the simple and quite reasonable assumption that a book of twenty-one good stories, by twenty-one contributors to 'The Saturday Evening Post,' justifies itself and needs no embroidery." Lisle Bell

+ Books p8 My 18 '41 400w

"This is again a collection of very readable short stories. If prizes were to be given, Stephen Vincent Benét probably would again be top man, as he so often is in the prize contests." Robert van Gelder

+ N Y Times p6 My 18 '41 360w

SAULNIER, RAYMOND JOSEPH. Industrial banking companies and their credit practices. (Financial research program. Studies in consumer instalment financing) 192p $2 Nat. bur. of economic research

332.31 Banks and banking—U.S. Credit. Loans 41-3861

Factual study of the Morris Plan and other industrial banking companies as agencies of consumer instalment credit. Contents: Nature and scope of industrial lending; Legal status; Financial structure; Services and charges; Operating methods and collection experience; Credit risk; Income, expenses, profits; Competitive and cooperative relations; List of industrial loan laws. The study was "undertaken in conjunction with the investigation of consumer instalment finance, inaugurated in 1938 by the National Bureau of Economic Research as the initial phase of a board program of financial research under grants from the Association of Reserve City Bankers and the Rockefeller Foundation." (Pref) Index.

Reviewed by C. O. Fisher

Am Econ R 31:422 Je '41 170w

Reviewed by J. H. Cover

Ann Am Acad 216:204 Jl '41 230w

"Dr. Saulnier has created an institutional picture that is detailed in content yet characterized by the perspective of an outside observer."

+ Management R 29:420 N '40 30w

SAUNDERS, CARLETON M. Promotion or failure for the elementary school pupil? 77p $1.25 Teachers college

371.28 School grading and promotions 41-9071

"A gathering of the important educational research and literature on the topic of pupil non-promotion in order to analyze and evaluate the purposes and causes ascribed to a policy or practice of failing pupils in the elementary school. If the elementary school adequately cares for the individual needs of its pupils, there should be no excuse for non-promotion." (School & Society) Bibliography.

"The book is readable, is accurately documented, and presents several pages of a carefully selected bibliography. Classroom teachers and administrative officers will find it profitable to read this study on the causes of nonpromotion." W. J. Hamilton

+ El School J 42:71 S '41 600w

School & Society 53:520 Ap 19 '41 40w

Reviewed by Ethel Kavin

Survey 77:277 S '41 380w

SAURAT, DENIS. Regeneration [a doctrine for true Frenchmen] with a letter from General de Gaulle. 64p $1 Dutton [pa 1s Dent]

301 Sociology, Christian. Civilization

41-12371

"[A] short disquisition on the nature of man and society, in which the author outlines his plan for a neo-Catholic state founded on the authority of a 'chief' and the guarantee of economic security for all its members. Anti-Nazi, anti-Communist, anti-democratic (with reservations), and done in a style reminiscent of the French medieval philosophers." New Yorker

Reviewed by C. W. Thompson

Cath World 154:117 O '41 290w

"Into this small volume of 64 pages the author has managed to compress seventeen thoughtful essays, all on subjects of immediate importance. In such brief space they are, necessarily, suggestive rather than completed discussion." Clifton Macon

+ Churchman 155:18 S 15 '41 250w

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '41

"A profoundly thoughtful thesis presented with the skill of a genuine scholar. Should be widely read at this time." L. R. Etzkorn

+ Library J 66:614 Jl '41 70w

"Denis Saurat, a native of Toulouse, is a well-known French scholar who has written books on Milton and Blake and is now Professor of French Language and Literature in the University of London. His unblinking attempt to find a right mean between the extremes of nihilism and tyranny will probably arouse some criticism as tending toward authoritarian perils. To this reviewer it seems vulnerable rather as a counsel of perfection, both in the attainment of so fine a balance and in its acceptance: 'the little less, and what worlds away.' But General de Gaulle is right in his prefatory letter: no one can read this book 'without finding in it a thousand grains of thought to make him think for himself.'"

+ N Y Times p4 Jl 13 '41 500w

New Yorker 17:72 Jl 12 '41 70w

SAURAT, DENIS—Continued

"Denis Saurat, a Frenchman residing in England, professor at the University of London and a literary critic, is the author of 'Regeneration' which may not be the least worth-while book in the present day output, but which comes close to being so." F. T. Steele

— Springf'd Republican p6 S 8 '41 950w
Times [London] Lit Sup p514 O 12 '40 900w

SAVAGE, ALMA. Smoozie; il. by Charles Keller; maps by Le Roy Appleton. 69p $1.50 Sheed

Reindeer—Legends and stories 41-19432

Smoozie is an Alaskan reindeer fawn. The story is of his adventures as a pet of a little Eskimo boy, and as a hunted creature during the months when he was separated from the herd.

"The animals talk to each other, but not to humans; besides, they talk as animal-loving children fully believe they do, not out of character. The type is forest green, the pictures tree-bark brown, and these colors are used in end-paper maps of the herd's journey. Miss Savage made friends with this fawn in Alaska." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 O 12 '41 240w

"Smoozie is the story of an Alaskan reindeer fawn, whom Miss Savage met in person during a visit to Alaska. She writes naturally and ingratiatingly about him and his family and their adventures on the way up the Yukon and back again to the Holy Cross Mission and safety." E. V. Wyatt

+ Cath World 154:373 D '41 90w

"Unusually detailed and authentic, though the notion that reindeer conceive it their duty to supply men with themselves for meat seems a little wild. Excellent natural history, in general. Recommended." H. L. Binsse

+ — Commonweal 35:111 N 21 '41 50w

SAWYER, RUTH (MRS A. C. DURAND). The least one; il. by Leo Politi. 89p $2 Viking

(W) 41-21884

The story of a little Mexican boy, Paco, and his tragic grief over the loss of his pet burro, "the least one" in his father's pack train. The boy's faith in the ability of St Francis to return his beloved burro is finally rewarded.

Booklist 38:100 N 15 '41

"The tenderness is tightened with humor; the treatment is that of a story teller convinced against his will—a manner likely to convince in reporting miracles. The pictures have the same subatiric quality: they see the funny side." M. L. Becker

+ Books p11 N 2 '41 240w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse

Commonweal 35:112 N 21 '41 10w

"Paco is a touching little figure in his grief for the 'talking friend,' to whom he could tell all his secrets. Even more touching is Paco's faith in San Francisco, who loved all animals and could be trusted to bless a boy's pet. The happy outcome of his trust brings a satisfying conclusion to this moving story of Mexican family life." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:370 S '41 70w

Reviewed by A. C. Moore

Horn Bk M 17:456 N '41 80w

"An appealing little story, told in the author's most fascinating manner. The book is attractive in appearance, with pictures in soft grays and browns by Leo Politi to carry out the Mexican atmosphere." Alice Wetherell

+ Library J 66:1050 D 1 '41 70w

"This saint's tale from modern Mexico is nearly perfect of its kind, at once literary and humar. in its writing, humorous and reverent in its pictures. There is humor, too, in the story of how small Paco's beloved burro met an untimely end and became a stuffed donkey, a prop for a photographer. Even the grimmest realist among the book's young readers will be thankful for the final miracle that is proof the good San Francisco is still the patron saint of animals."

+ New Yorker 17:142 D 6 '41 80w

"Has unusual quality and flavor." K. U. Wise

+ Sat R of Lit 24:5 N 8 '41 40w

SAWYER, RUTH (MRS A. C. DURAND). The long Christmas; il. by Valenti Angelo. 200p $2.50 Viking

Christmas stories

(W) 41-51959

Retelling of thirteen stories and legends for the Christmas season, one for each day between Christmas eve and Epiphany. A carol or hymn is given for each story. The legends, which are from many lands—Ireland, Brittany, Spain, the Isle of Man, the Tyrol—"give more accounting of the inner vision of Christmas and less of the outer substances."

Booklist 38:100 N 15 '41

"It will be a permanent addition to holiday equipment of schools and libraries. . . This is a collection of religious stories, in the sense that they are all about people to whom religion was real. They are not controversial; the book is meant for peace on earth—and the style is vigorous as well as graceful." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 N 16 '41 240w

"Most of [the stories are] intensely Christian in feeling, and all beautifully told. The last story, involving a King's desecration of the Mass, will shock some readers, and will be severely criticized by many Catholics, yet it teaches a proper lesson." H. L. Binsse

+ — Commonweal 35:110 N 21 '41 40w

"One of the most beautiful books of this or any other season. In interpretive drawings and decorations of rare simplicity and spiritual significance Valenti Angelo has given a unity to the whole book in complete harmony with the author's intention. . . It is, in short, such a Christmas book as we have not had before and I feel quite sure it has been more than the thirty years a-growing." A. C. Moore

+ Horn Bk M 17:456 N '41 180w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk M 17:459 N '41 90w

"Thirteen beautiful stories, one for each day of the 'Long Christmas,' are in this collection. Some are old and some new; some have humor and some pathos; but all are told with a sure touch and are brimming over with the true spirit of the first Christmas." D. M. MacDonald

+ Library J 66:1050 D 1 '41 80w

"Some of the stories are humorous, some are touching, all have strength and distinction and nearly all will be new to most readers. This is a book that will last a life time, for the truth and charm of these legends and the grace with which Ruth Sawyer has retold them, stand out more clearly with each re-reading. There is a timeless quality in the reverent beauty of Valenti Angelo's drawings. A book for the story teller, a book for family reading and one that not only boys and girls from ten on but their elders will want to own." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 N 16 '41 300w

New Yorker 17:148 D 6 '41 20w

"Unusual and distinctive." K. U. Wise

+ Sat R of Lit 24:5 N 8 '41 40w

SAXBY, CHARLES. Out of it all. 253p $2 Dutton

41-10972

After a Hollywood personal appearance, a young film star completely vanishes. In the midst of foreign agents, kidnappers, and robbers, Jim and his girl companion have some hair-raising experiences, but he manages to save the heiress and win his sweetheart.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p9 J1 20 '41 70w

"A swift and seething tale of melodramatic adventure," Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p19 Ag 3 '41 200w

"Fast, furious, and fantastic melodrama."

Sat R of Lit 24:15 J1 5 '41 40w

Spring'd Republican p7e Ag 3 '41 230w

SAXTON, MARK. The broken circle. 301p $2.50

Farrar

41-19650

Psychological mystery and adventure story.

"A slow starter, this novel succeeds when action takes precedence over romance. The love affair between Allen Reval and the wife of his dying brother is not wholly convincing, but, when purely external and unconnected shooting begins, you have a good action story. As such it repays reading." R. E. Danielson

+ Atlantic D '41 40w

"Mark Saxton, who wrote a very compelling mystery story called 'Danger Road' [Book Review Digest, 1939] makes rather slow work of getting into the swing of 'The Broken Circle.' But once he gets his plot sufficiently wound up to release the spring, events get going and the novel develops satisfactory velocity and a deal of centrifugal force." F. H. Bullock

+ Books p20 O 26 '41 480w

"In a narrative of adventure and action there is not, as a rule, much verisimilitude of speech or action, but credibility here is not strained at all. The full human drama that is part of the struggle to change one's mental outlook is validly presented. The clash between Allen and Bardin is cleverly stressed and convincing. All in all, the book adds to an exciting whole." George Froede

+ N Y Times p20 N 16 '41 420w

SAYERS, DOROTHY LEIGH (MRS ATHERTON FLEMING). Begin here; a statement of faith. 156p $2 Harcourt [6s; 2s 6d Gollancz]

301 Civilization. World war, 1939—Influence and results 41-51788

"A brief but closely reasoned analysis less of the causes of the war than of the opportunities of reconstruction, national and international, that may be reasonably expected to grow out of it. The main theme of the argument is the necessity of preparing now for the problems with which Europe will be faced when the work of destruction ceases and the work of construction begins. We are warned against any attempt to assess the nature of the problem that lies ahead of us in the light of past events as we cannot recapitulate the conditions that gave rise to them." Hibbert J

Booklist 37:458 Je 1 '41

Bookmark 2:7 N '41

Reviewed by Susan Ertz

Books p11 My 4 '41 440w

Christian Century 58:659 My 14 '41 110w

Christian Science Monitor p20 S 18 '41 500w

"Humbly, Dorothy Sayers disclaims the role of prophet or expert, but her vigorous judgment holds a fairness of mind, a definite social vision and an undoubted eloquence that speaks in sincerity and truth. A war book worth reading." L. L. R.

+ Churchman 155:35 Je 1 '41 70w

Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '41

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:378 Ja '42 10w

"This book, written by an author who has established herself in public opinion in a wider range of literary composition than is common with most writers, has a significant message for the times in which we live." R. F. Rynd

+ Hibbert J 39:213 Ja '41 1450w

"Clear, concise language." G. E. Brown

+ Library J 66:304 Ap 1 '41 90w

"Her suggestions do not go far and her whole essay is little more than a stimulating sketch of the situation in which we find ourselves. But it is a spur to faith and works, and to self-knowledge too." H. I. A. Fausset

+ Manchester Guardian p3 F 2 '40 300w

"One can quarrel with some of her historical judgments, notably that on the doctrine of natural rights; and one can regret that she has chosen for some of her short and lucid chapters mottoes from long-winded and thorny writers, but no one can deny that her fresh and forthright sermon is worth the closest study, simply as a piece of pointed reflection and quite aside from the clear-eyed statement of faith that it makes." Jacques Barzun

+ Nation 152:561 My 10 '41 700w

Nature 145:815 My 25 '40 280w

New Repub 105:166 Ag 4 '41 40w

"If her theme seems abstruse, Miss Sayers's development of it is concrete, stimulating and full of trenchant comment. She examines the Treaty of Versailles and its errors, points to the fundamental identity between the Russian and German despotisms, looks at Fifth Column methods and aids, writes with lucid soundness of that too-little-emphasized fact of modern history, the decentralization of the British Empire. Written for her fellow-countrymen during the first year of the war, this book has something to say to all of us, here and now."

+ N Y Times p8 My 18 '41 550w

"There is nothing mystical about Miss Sayers, though there is something very religious. The New Aesthetics, who have fallen in love with the wave of the future as the old ones fell in love with incense and medieval Latin, will get little comfort from her." Clifton Fadiman

New Yorker 17:85 My 3 '41 250w

"In steering her way through the political and social controversies of our time Miss Sayers seems to me to show a great deal of sound sense." Edwyn Bevan

+ Spect 164:187 F 9 '40 1550w

Spring'd Republican p12 My 15 '41 480w

"This author's opinions have a ring of wisdom and maturity which most of the specialists lack. Her book abounds in what seem to this reviewer sober and sound judgments formulated against a background of historical knowledge and touched with exceptional insight." F. E. Johnson

+ Survey 77:371 D '41 900w

Times [London] Lit Sup p48 Ja 27 '40 650w

Wis Lib Bul 37:114 Je '41

SAYERS, MRS FRANCES (CLARKE). Tag-along Tooloo; il. by Helen Sewell. 87p $1.50

Viking

(W) 41-18716

Five-year-old Talluluh lived in Texas, and was sometimes in the way when she wanted to follow her older sister Ann and Ann's friends, so she was called Tag-along Tooloo. This gay little story tells how little Tag-along finally outgrew her nickname.

Booklist 38:59 O 15 '41

"Tooloo [is] one of those original children. at once solid and airy, who keep their relatives guessing, do no harm and enjoy themselves vastly. Her adventures are told expertly and with affection, and she will long be loved by little children." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 N 2 '41 210w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p10 N 24 '41 210w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse

Commonweal 35:112 N 21 '41 10w

"A fresh and amusing story for little girls, happily illustrated." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:371 S '41 80w

SAYERS, FRANCES—Continued

Reviewed by Warren Chappell

Horn Bk M 17:455 N '41 10w

"A delightful story of a little girl, reminiscent of the author's own early childhood in Texas." Elizabeth Babcock

+ Library J 66:953 N 1 '41 90w

"Security and kindness are what the world lacks today, and at a time when cruelty and confusion impinge on even the young child's domain we are fortunate to be able to put into children's hands a story with the serenity, the friendliness and kindly atmosphere of 'Tag-Along Tootoo.'" A. T. E.

+ N Y Times p7 N 2 '41 200w

"The fresh air of Texas and the fresh spirit of very real little girls permeate this simple story. . . Well written, well illustrated."

+ New Yorker 17:141 D 6 '41 60w

"Pleasant." Zoë Durrell

+ Sat R of Lit 24:16 N 8 '41 20w

SCHABER, WILL. Thinker versus junker; with an epilogue by Thomas Mann; tr. of the German originals by Evan B. Davis. 282p $2.50 F. Ungar, 103 Park av, N.Y.

943 Germany—Politics and government. National characteristics, German 41-11379

"Here is a collection of speeches, aphorisms, essays and letters written by the best of German minds from the reign of Frederick the Great down to Nazism. Philosophers, politicians, historians and poets, frustrated or prosecuted by their country, raise their voices in defense of freedom and human rights. The book begins with a letter by Lessing about 'the most enslaved country' and ends with Thomas Mann's unforgettable Christmas message to the German people." Books

Reviewed by Marianne Hauser

Books p19 S 14 '41 600w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:382 Ja '42 20w

Reviewed by Golo Mann

Nation 153:315 O 4 '41 170w

"Those who want to know the true historical background of Nazi Germany will find this brilliant collection of speeches, letters and statements from the time of Frederick the Great to Thomas Mann indispensable."

+ New Repub 105:351 S 22 '41 60w

SCHACHNER, NATHAN. By the dim lamps. 578p $2.75 Stokes

(W) 41-4412

A historical novel of New Orleans and Louisiana during the Civil war and Reconstruction days.

Booklist 37:360 Ap 1 '41

"Mr. Schachner's novel is hugely conceived and sympathetically and carefully written. The book should acquire a large audience." Lawrence Olson

+ Books p4 Mr 2 '41 800w

Reviewed by G. K. Smart

Boston Transcript p2 Mr 22 '41 300w

Commonweal 34:92 My 16 '41 180w

"Although lacking the glamour of Gone With the Wind, it nevertheless holds the reader's interest and rings true. Recommended." G. W. Hill

+ Library J 65:923 N 1 '40 120w

"This is a moderately successful attempt by a distinguished historian and biographer to do for Louisiana, especially the New Orleans area, what Margaret Mitchell did for the Atlanta district in Gone With the Wind. It is an excellent example of how much can be done in fiction with research as the basis, but it lacks two of the qualities that made Miss Mitchell's record-breaker the most popular novel of modern times—its rousing narrative quality and the sharpness of its characterization." Herschel Brickell

+ — N Y Times p24 Mr 2 '41 850w

"Mr. Schachner has written a lively book about a violent time. He does not go very deeply into either human hearts or history but he does make satisfying excitement, credible adventure, good story. And almost all of it would be magnificent in technicolor." Jonathan Daniels

+ — Sat R of Lit 23:11 Mr 15 '41 700w

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 9 '41 850w

Wis Lib Bul 37:56 Mr '41

SCHACHT, ALEXANDER. Clowning through baseball; grammar and adjectives by Murray Goodman; foreword by John Kieran; il. by Willard Mullin. (Barnes dollar sports lib) 189p $1 Barnes, A.S.

B or 92 Baseball

41-51756

The author, who has been dubbed the "clown prince of baseball," in this witty autobiography gives a picture of the last thirty-five years of big league baseball. Glimpses of many of the important figures of the baseball world are mingled with stories of his life with professional teams.

Booklist 37:438 My 15 '41

"We still prefer this funster in person, but for rain-check days this may do."

Boston Transcript p1 Ap 19 '41 60w

Wis Lib Bul 37:115 Je '41

SCHAPERA, ISAAC. Married life in an African tribe; with an introd. by Bronislaw Malinowski. 364p il $3 Sheridan [15s Faber]

572.9681 Ethnology—Bechuanaland. Society, Primitive. Marriage. Family 41-25909

"[This] is an account of marriage and the family in the Kgatla of the Bechuanaland Protectorate, and describes vividly and suggestively the transformation of the old tribal culture and traditional domestic institutions under the impact of Western civilization." (Manchester Guardian) Index.

"This is a packed, informative and curiously uneven book. Two-thirds of it is devoted to a pedestrian and conventional discussion of the sociology of a South African tribe under conditions of cultural change. These sections are competent, adequate and relatively unilluminating, except to those who have not already encountered a good deal of literature of the effects of government and mission on the delicately equilibrated life of a native people. . . Scattered through the conventional descriptions of the sociology of native life are a large number of word-for-word excerpts from native love letters, letters from parents to children, dictated confidences about the trials of the first experiences of physical love. These are perhaps the frankest, most physiological and unabashed statements about sex relations which have ever been culled from native life to present to a popular audience." Margaret Mead

Books p32 N 23 '41 550w

"A valuable contribution to the study of changing African life."

+ Manchester Guardian p7 Je 24 '40 150w

Reviewed by Beryl De Zoete

New Statesman & Nation 20:264 S 14 '40 500w

"While this work should be of value to the professional anthropologist, it is primarily written for the layman. Prof Schapera is an alert and intelligent observer for the most part, and his gift for describing customs and changing mores is fully proved in this lively and revealing piece of research."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 N 11 '41 800w

"A clever and well-trained observer, he does not seem very sympathetic to the people he describes; and one feels that as a doctor gets a one-sided view of the health of humanity, so this anthropologist had confided in him only the sorrows of the jealous and unhappy members of the community."

Times [London] Lit Sup p384 Ag 10 '40
220w

SCHECHTER, ABEL ALAN, and ANTHONY, EDWARD. I live on air; with 64 reproductions of photographs. 583p $3.75 Stokes 621.384193 Radio broadcasting

(W) 41-51725

Mr Schechter is director of news and special events for NBC. In this book he tells of his early adventures in collecting news for radio commentators during the days when a feud existed between radio and newspaper men. There are also descriptions of special broadcasts and their build-ups, as well as stunt broadcasts. Photographs grouped at end of volume.

Booklist 37:404 My 1 '41

"With the thoroughness of a radio program planner of exceptional ability Abe Schechter has laid his groundwork and prepared his material with emphasis on meticulous detail. Then, instead of whittling the whole thing down to size as he would have had to do if he had been filling in a spot on a network schedule, he and his collaborator, Edward Anthony, crammed everything into the book except the vice-president in charge of guest relations. As a result the reader may find himself skipping over episodes and anecdotes that are neither vital nor entertaining to get at the meatier portions." H. T. Rowe

Books p24 Ap 6 '41 440w

Reviewed by H. A. Wooster
Library J 66:178 F 15 '41 30w

"It is a scattered and hectic account, racy and enthusiastic and laid out on the carefree principle that when one good story reminds the teller of another it should be told at once, even if it properly belongs in another chapter." H. A. Stevens

+ N Y Times p14 Mr 2 '41 900w

"Mr. Schechter and his co-author have an agreeable talent for story-telling, and a racy style marked by a fondness for homespun American idiom. They write from the inside with all the data at their disposal. The result is a readable, in parts highly entertaining volume on a subject that so far has not been adequately covered. Anyone interested in news coverage in general or radio in particular might do well to have a copy of 'I Live on Air' on his desk." C. J. Rolo

+ Sat R of Lit 23:14 Ap 26 '41 320w

Wis Lib Bul 37:90 My '41

SCHEE, ORAN FAVELLE (KIM SCHEE). Cantina; il. by Carl Critz. 178p $1.75 Coward-McCann

41-5676

Witty, slightly risqué stories, about Mexicans in love and in liquor, as reported by an American, who sits in a cafe and plies the natives with tequila in order to hear their stories.

Booklist 37:410 My 1 '41

"If Mr. Schee's attitude is somewhat superficial, as humorist chiefly, toward his Mexican friends, it is almost snobbish toward the uninitiated tourists. Perhaps he has his reasons. Tourists are often ridiculous to old-timers in a strange country. . . . Given in small doses, as he would be if read in 'The New Yorker,' Mr. Schee is clever and entertaining; taken in large doses he is decidedly repetitive, the painter of the picturesque and funny, nothing more." E. L. Walton

+ — Books p10 Mr 23 '41 360w

"'Cantina' is a collection of short stories, amusing and very Mexican. . . . The striking illustrations are black and white drawings by Carl Critz. . . . They are simple, direct and effective, with a serio-comic angle that suits well Mr. Schee's style." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p6 Mr 30 '41 480w

"Knowing the town of which Mr. Schee writes, I happen to know that his stories are in large part literally true. More important, they all could have happened, ought to have happened. And many of the illustrations, by Carl Critz, are also delightful." H. J. Muller

+ Sat R of Lit 23:10 Mr 29 '41 440w

SCHERF, MARGARET. The case of the kippered corpse. 249p $2 Putnam

41-12278

Detective story.

"Wisecracking is the order of the day, and there is so much of it that it grows a bit monotonous. However, there are those who like that sort of thing, and they are welcome to it." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p17 Ag 10 '41 130w

"Fast, tough story, with plenty of dead people."

New Yorker 17:56 Ag 30 '41 40w

Sat R of Lit 24:16 Ag 16 '41 40w

SCHERMAN, HARRY. Last best hope of earth; a philosophy for the war. 43p 75c Random house

940.531 World war, 1939-. World war, 1939
—U.S. 41-51999

This attempt to formulate a philosophy concerning this war is based on the assumption that the underlying question between the United States and Germany is: "Is an advanced political unification of human society to be imposed by armed force or achieved by a meeting of minds? Is it to be maintained 'for a thousand years' as a military world-state, in a new global Pax Roman run from Berlin as a center, or by some means of peaceable and equitable collaboration among the diverse peoples of the Earth?"

Christian Century 58:1579 D 17 '41 280w

"Clearly, seriously argued."

+ New Yorker 17:111 N 15 '41 50w

"Mr. Scherman presents in this brief essay a 'philosophy for the war' which so far as it goes, is pretty nearly irrefutable. Skeptical readers may feel that it does not go as far as he seems to think; and that the solution he offers, while it may be what the world needs, is not what the world is going to get for some time to come, so that we might as well reconcile ourselves to having to make the best of something less satisfactory. But at any rate one facet of the current cosmic complex is here lucidly and cogently set forth." Elmer Davis

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:9 N 29 '41 1800w

Reviewed by E. C. Lindeman

Survey G 31:37 Ja '42 100w

SCHERMAN, HARRY. Will we have inflation? Including The real danger in our gold. 171p $1 Simon & Schuster

332.4 Currency question—U.S. Gold 41-6892

"Short-term inflation, the author thinks, can be avoided by blocking any increase in 'our existing money supply,' but long-term inflation which might be caused by a failure of government credit can, he believes, be prevented only by restoring gold to circulation and by limiting the rise of the public debt. Besides the title essay, the book includes 'The Real Danger in Our Gold,' a pamphlet published

SCHERMAN, HARRY—Continued
last year [Book Review Digest, 1940]. All the material is an expansion of the author's Saturday Evening Post articles." New Yorker

Reviewed by C. N. Stabler
Books p5 Ag 10 '41 1250w
Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:200 O '41 20w

Reviewed by E. V. Bell
N Y Times p5 Je 29 '41 350w
New Yorker 17:91 My 10 '41 100w

"In giving a lucid explanation of an important economic document, Mr. Scherman has also accomplished the difficult feat of making perfectly clear to the layman the meaning of such esoteric phrases as 'wage lag', 'sterilization of gold', 'excess reserves', 'bank credit currency', etc." R. T. Ely
+ Sat R of Lit 24:7 My 17 '41 1250w

Reviewed by Walter Lederer
Survey G 30:440 Ag '41 500w

SCHEVILL, FERDINAND, and others. Foundations of a more stable world order. See Laves, W. H. C., ed.

SCHILPP, PAUL ARTHUR, ed. The philosophy of George Santayana. (Library of living philosophers, v2) 698p il $4 Northwestern univ.

191.9 Santayana, George 41-2307

"Following volume I on the Philosophy of John Dewey [Book Review Digest, 1939] this is a symposium of critical evaluations of Santayana's philosophy by 18 of his contemporaries." (Booklist) Contents: Santayana's autobiography; Descriptive and critical essays on the philosophy of George Santayana; The philosopher replies. George Santayana: Apologia pro mente sua; Bibliography of the writings of George Santayana: (to October 1940) compiled by Shohig Terzian. Index to the Santayana bibliography. General index.

Booklist 37:381 Ap 15 '41

Reviewed by Albert Guerard
Books p2 J1 6 '41 1550w

"Professor Schilpp's editorial work has been done with great care and competence."
+ Christian Century 58:89 Ja 15 '41 110w

"The present volume may not be the final word on the philosophy of Santayana, but it is a most authoritative exposition and criticism of that philosophy, and no interpretation of Santayana's work can henceforth compel attention if it fails to come to terms with the arguments and counter-arguments here presented."
W. H. Werkmeister

+ Ethics 51:361 Ap '41 2500w

Pratt p6 D '41

"The volume represents a treasury of infinite riches to those who appreciate the importance of Santayana as a living force in American letters." Robert Bierstedt

+ Sat R of Lit 23:11 Ja 25 '41 550w

School & Society 53:32 Ja 4 '41 20w

SCHLESINGER, ARTHUR MEIER. Political and social growth of the American people, 1865-1940; new ed. of Political and social growth of the United States, 1852-1933. 3d ed 783p il maps $3.25 Macmillan

973 U.S.—History. U.S.—Politics and government (W) 41-51546

"The present volume seeks without sentimentality or cynicism to trace the course of United States history from the close of the Civil War through the presidential election of 1940. . . The lapse of seven years since the second edition of this work has afforded an opportunity to expand somewhat on the earlier treatment, continue the narrative to the present and revise certain judgments in the light of later evidence." (Foreword) The text is extended thru the 1940 presidential campaign.

For former edition see Book Review Digest, 1934. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:273 F 15 '41

Reviewed by W. M. Gibson
New Eng Q 14:592 S '41 420w

Reviewed by R. B. Holtman
Social Educ 5:622 D '41 600w
Social Studies 32:144 Mr '41 10w

SCHLEY, STURGES MASON. Dr Toby finds murder. 278p $2 Random house 41-19314

Detective story.

"As in his earlier mystery, 'Who'd Shoot a Genius?' the characters have a curious habit of grinning, chuckling and laughing outright at something which may or may not be just around the corner, or perhaps entirely within themselves. After giving this matter due thought and consideration, we believe the works of this author would be more effective if he'd cut that out." Will Cuppy
Books p20 S 28 '41 170w

"Even though the story fails to be completely convincing, it has action and mystery enough to satisfy the most exacting devourer of crime fiction." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p33 S 28 '41 160w

"Drug addicts, diabetics, glossy mobsters and other highly colored folks enliven feverish and lushly-scened opus that doesn't quite come off. Average."
Sat R of Lit 24:36 O 18 '41 50w

Springf'd Republican p7e S 28 '41 200w

SCHLYTTER, LESLIE EVAN. Tall brothers.
449p $2.75 Appleton-Century 41-24630

A novel dealing with life in a Wisconsin lumber town during the first twenty-five years of the twentieth century. The central theme is the contrast in attitudes between two rapacious, unscrupulous lumber men and a Swedish couple who have come to the wilderness to build there for the future.

"A novel of vigor and emotional depth."
Lisle Bell

+ Books p22 D 7 '41 240w

"Beyond the larger theme—of which the author is conscious and completely master—the novel has almost no pattern at all. Events and incidents follow each other, characters appear and disappear again, with something of the tumbled inconsequence we recognize in life itself. It is an extraordinary effect, this apparent absence of selection, and one few povelists could have handled with impunity.
Mr. Schlytter does it almost triumphantly.
There is a vitality in his writing which sweeps the reader along in spite of all barriers, a kind of unstrained and effortless realism which is immensely convincing." Margaret Wallace
+ N Y Times p22 D 7 '41 750w

New Yorker 17:134 D 6 '41 70w

SCHMECKEBIER, LAURENCE FREDERICK.
Congressional apportionment. (Inst. for gov. research. Studies in administration) 233p
$2.50 Brookings

328.3345 U.S. Congress. Representative government and representation 41-3146

"After definition of terms, the author presents detailed descriptions of the five modern methods of apportionment, all mathematically consistent: major fractions, equal proportions, harmonic mean, smallest divisors, and greatest divisors. Each discussion is accompanied by algebraic proof of the correctness of the method." (Am Pol Sci R) Partial contents: Factors and definitions; Modern methods of apportionment; Relative merits of the several modern methods; Discarded methods of apportionment; The counting of aliens; History of apportionment; Apportionment within the states; Priority lists based on 1930 census; Priority lists based on 1940 census. No index.

"In the growing body of scientific literature about the Congress of the United States, there has been no single source for the information presented in Mr. Schmeckebier's book. The volume is a welcome addition to monograph materials, and it is much to be hoped that the data here recorded will stimulate further congressional and state activity in improving policies of apportionment and districting. . . Mr. Schmeckebier has written a book of standard and permanent reference value. There are evidences that it was produced under pressure of time, yet in fairness it must be borne in mind that the volume was by design completed before important political decisions early in 1941. The combination of scholarly and political considerations is much to be commended." F. L. Burdette

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:561 Je '41 750w

"Apportionment literature always flourishes in census years, but serious students of American government will long be indebted to Dr. Schmeckebier for having brought together, so completely and so competently, between the covers of one volume, the essential information regarding a problem so difficult, yet so important in the functioning of representative government." W. B. Graves

+ Ann Am Acad 216:201 JI '41 600w

SCHMIDT, CARL THEODORE. American farmers in the world crisis. 345p $3 Oxford 338.1 Agriculture—U.S. Agricultural administration—U.S. Agriculture—Economic aspects (W) 41-2877

"In this dispassionate analysis of current agricultural enterprise, the author explains the social and economic problems of the American farmer and their effect on the whole nation. He discusses the many aspects of commercial farming, government services to agriculture, successive phases of A.A.A., farmer credit, soil conservation, the impact of technology on farm labor, and the effect of the present war on the export of staple crops. He points out that there is need for a more rational, cheaper marketing system for farm products and that agricultural production must be held in check until further outlets are provided for farm labor and commodities." (Library J) Selected bibliography. Index.

Am Econ R 31:390 Je '41 30w

Reviewed by C. C. Zimmerman
Ann Am Acad 215:219 My '41 700w

Booklist 37:432 My 15 '41

Reviewed by Louis Hacker
Books p18 Ap 6 '41 1100w

"The book does not satisfy one, any more than the prospects of the American farmer do. But the farm problem is a huge complex of problems, and this book is designed as a limited descriptive analysis of the condition as it recently has been. It is a good book for what it does; this final feeling of dissatisfaction may not be inappropriate. Incidentally, Secretary Wallace appears in the book as head of a tremendous work; as clearly second after Roosevelt in the New Deal." Philip Burnham

Commonweal 33:520 Mr 14 '41 1600w

"The best general exposition of the American farm problem as it has developed in recent years—that in brief describes this new book by Dr. Schmidt. It is thoroughly informative, clear in presentation, and alive to all aspects of one of the most urgent questions in our national life." Alvin Adey

+ Current Hist S '41 550w

"A sound and readable treatise on the American agricultural problem." R. G. Woolbert
+ Foreign Affairs 20:200 O '41 20w

"Judged superficially on the basis of the first chapter and the cartoons, this book would, in my opinion, deserve a place in the wastepaper basket; but, judged on the basis of the author's sincere and solid work in the body of the book, it ranks high in the field of current literature relating to agriculture and progressive legislation. . . In spite of its faults, this is a useful book which should be read by businessmen, labor leaders, and thoughtful workmen as well as by farm leaders and thoughtful farmers." H. C. Taylor

+ J Pol Econ 49:615 Ag '41 650w

"While his emphasis is on the relation between agricultural policy and general welfare, statements are carefully documented and the treatment is detailed and somewhat statistical. Its reader appeal lies somewhere between a Public Affairs pamphlet and a Brookings institution study." A. G. Higgins

Library J 66:139 F 1 '41 160w

SCHMIEDELER, EDGAR. The sacred bond; happiness with holiness in family life; with foreword by Paul C. Schulte. 128p $1.35 Kenedy

173.1 Marriage 40-33655

"This book is a series of eight carefully prepared sermons on Matrimony. In an attractive manner Father Schmiedeler calls for holy fathers and mothers, holy families who will build the Christian foundations in the Social Order. . . The family should engage wherever possible in some program of working, playing and praying together in their own little unit. . . The traditional views of the Church, her marriage laws regarding the prime social institution are here handily brought together." America

Reviewed by J. C. Rawe

America 164:388 Ja 11 '41 240w

Cath World 153:123 Ap '41 30w

SCHNITTKIND, HENRY THOMAS (HENRY THOMAS, pseud), and SCHNITTKIND, DANA ARNOLD (DANA LEE THOMAS, pseud). Living biographies of famous rulers; il. by Gordon Ross. 310p $1.98 Garden City pub. co.

923.1 Kings and rulers 40-34530

"Twenty 'important kings, conquerors and dictators' fill the list of this book's dramatis personae, and the authors candidly—and conservatively—point out that 'more than half' of them have been 'geniuses of evil rather than doers of good.' (N Y Times) Contents: King Solomon; Asoka; Julius Caesar; Augustus; Constantine; Charlemagne; Kublai Khan; Henry VIII; Queen Elizabeth; Montezuma; Ivan the Terrible; Catherine the Great; Louis XIV; Frederick the Great; Napoleon; Queen Victoria; Kaiser Wilhelm; Stalin; Mussolini; Hitler.

"It should possibly be remarked at once that this collection of 'Living Biographies of Famous Rulers' is of less varied interest than its predecessor, the 'Living Biographies of Great Painters.' Even though most of them point the same moral, however, they make, in sum, a readable book."

+ N Y Times p31 N 17 '40 550w

"The authors are not hero worshippers, in fact, they take an unseemly delight in tearing down the halos placed on the brows of some persons by historians seeking to make all that is past glorious in retrospect. The biographies are popularly but not flippantly written."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e F 23 '41 550w

SCHNITTKIND, HENRY THOMAS (HENRY THOMAS, pseud), and SCHNITTKIND, DANA ARNOLD (DANA LEE THOMAS, pseud). Living biographies of great philosophers; il. by Gordon Ross. de luxe ed 335p $1.98 Garden City pub. co.

921 Philosophers 41-3760

Collection of short biographical sketches on the lives of famous philosophers. Contents: Plato (including Socrates); Aristotle; Epicurus; Marcus Aurelius; Aquinas; Francis Bacon; Descartes; Spinoza; Locke; Hume; Voltaire; Kant; Hegel; Schopenhauer; Emerson; Spencer; Nietzsche; William James; Bergson; Santayana.

"The story of the philosophers makes surprisingly easy reading on a complicated subject. If the reader wants to brush up on the history of the great philosophical concepts of the human race, this should prove a useful book for that purpose. Philosophy is not an easy subject, nor a subject for every student, but here is an opportunity for a bowing acquaintance with many of the world's greatest thinkers." Lorine Pruette

+ Books p14 My 4 '41 500w

"Readable, 'inspiration' and very superficial."

Commonweal 33:501 Mr 7 '41 20w

SCHNITTKIND, HENRY THOMAS (HENRY THOMAS, pseud), and SCHNITTKIND, DANA ARNOLD (DANA LEE THOMAS, pseud). Living biographies of great poets; il. by Gordon Ross. de luxe ed 307p $1.98 Garden City pub. co.

928.2 Poets, English. Poets, American 41-11406

Short biographical sketches of twenty poets: Dante, Chaucer, Villon, Milton, Pope, Burns, Wordsworth, Coleridge, Byron, Shelley, Keats, Browning, Tennyson, Swinburne, Bryant, Poe, Longfellow, Whittier, Whitman and Kipling.

"The biographies, written in a style, sometimes undeveloped, sometimes simpering, offer little more than an encyclopaedia. The impression that this is a 'hack' job is all too frequent, for certainly there is little original character analysis." J. G. B.

— Commonweal 34:308 Jl 18 '41 160w

"Falls short of the standard set by the first book of this series; and one gathers the impression that the sketches have been less carefully done. . . . Biographies which are to bring the world's great poets into human acquaintance must be very much better than these."

— N Y Times p12 Jl 20 '41 360w

SCHNITTKIND, HENRY THOMAS (HENRY THOMAS, pseud), and SCHNITTKIND, DANA ARNOLD (DANA LEE THOMAS, pseud). Living biographies of great scientists; il. by Gordon Ross. de luxe ed 314p $1.98 Garden City pub. co.

925 Scientists 41-25185

Biographical sketches of twenty scientists well-known to history. Contents: Archimedes (including Euclid); Roger Bacon; Copernicus; Galileo; Newton; Lavoisier; Dalton; Humboldt; Faraday; Darwin; Huxley; Agassiz; Mendel; Pasteur; Kelvin; Haeckel; Steinmetz; Marie Curie; Banting; Einstein. Portraits are included, and opposite each is a listing of that scientist's outstanding work.

"A score of eminent men of science, ancient and modern, are presented in sketches which are pruned but never perfunctory, with the essential facts well digested and crisply disclosed. There is admirable balance between the scientific and the biographical detail, and the emphasis on the humanitarian value of each man's contribution makes the volume, in the best sense, inspirational."

+ Books p16 D 14 '41 80w

"This series, which began excellently, declined from its high level in the sentimentality and carelessness that marred the book on the great poets. It seems not unlikely that the work as a whole would be better done if the succession of the volumes were less rapid. But by and large the biographies of the scientists are more crisply written than those of the poets were."

+ N Y Times p39 N 23 '41 550w

SCHOBERLIN, MELVIN. From candles to footlights; a biography of the Pike's Peak theatre, 1859-1876; with a pref. by Barrett H. Clark. 322p pl $3.75 Old West pub. co. 406 15th st, Denver

792.09783 Theater—Colorado 41-12800

A history of the theatre in Colorado during its territorial days, from 1859 to 1876. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton

Books p18 S 28 '41 350w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 16 '41 50w

"Mr. Schoberlin's book will be welcome to everyone who has had his curiosity aroused by that ghost theatre, and others like it which still remain in the deserted mining cities of the west."

+ Theatre Arts 25:852 N '41 310w

SCHOENCHEN, GUSTAV G. The activity school; a basic philosophy for teachers [foreword by Paul R. Radosavljevich]. 359p $2.50 Longmans

370.1 Education—Philosophy. Burger, Eduard 40-33687

"A summary and interpretation of the theory of the activity school, as set forth by an Austrian student of education theory, Eduard Burger (1872-1938), especially in his 'Arbeitspädagogik,' 1914 (revised and enlarged second edition, 1923). A biographical sketch of Burger is included as an appendix." (School & Society) Bibliography. Index.

"Persons interested in educational theory and practice, as well as those interested in more general aspects of social philosophy, can gain much from their points of agreement and of disagreement with Schoenchen's book." H. H. Punke

+ El School J 41:470 F '41 850w

School & Society 52:208 S 14 '40 40w

"The question will arise in the minds of some readers whether the author has not stated his own views as to what education should be and called these the 'activity school.' The volume does not live up to its sub-title: 'A Basic Philosophy for Teachers,' seeing that it provides only a set of proposed theoretical and practical principles of education but no world-view. In eclectic fashion it draws from all but makes no choice between the Protestantism of Comenius, the Naturalism of Rousseau, the Realism of Herbert and the Idealism of Froebel as real basic philosophies. The style of this work is analytic and clear without being literary." H. H. Horne

School & Society 54:419 N 8 '41 900w

SCHOLASTIC (periodical). Here we are; ed. by Ernestine Taggard; with an introd. by Dorothy Canfield Fisher. 404p $2.50 McBride

Short stories—Collections (W) 41-23705

Collection of twenty stories illustrating American life, selected from the files of Scholastic magazine. Contents: Split cherry tree, by Jesse Stuart; Clothe the naked, by Dorothy Parker; After the ball, by Sally Benson; A tooth for Paul Revere, by S. V. Benét; Fumble, by Katharine Brush; Prelude, by Albert Halper; Young man Axelrod, by Sinclair Lewis; Sixteen, by Maureen Daly; Without words, by Elliott Merrick; A mother in Mannville, by M.

K. Rawlings; Rope, by K. A. Porter; The heyday of the blood, by D. C. Fisher; The chrysanthemums, by John Steinbeck; Romance, by William Saroyan; Eight-oared crew, by Harry Sylvester; A start in life, by Ruth Suckow; A student in economics, by George Milburn; I can't breathe, by Ring Lardner; One with Shakespeare, by Martha Foley; Strawberry ice cream soda, by Irwin Shaw.

Booklist 38:136 D 15 '41

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk M 17:463 N '41 50w

"Twenty of the best stories that have appeared in Scholastic Magazine during the past twenty years, selected for their readability, their high literary quality, and their particular relation to the lives of modern young people." Claire Nolte

+ Library J 66:1050 D 1 '41 70w

Reviewed by Otis Ferguson

New Repub 105:626 N 10 '41 200w

"This is an important event in publishing for young people, based as it is on recognition of the fact that many readers of high school age are already reaching out toward contemporary adult fiction. . . A collection which opens up new horizons in literature and new understanding of life to youth." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p6 N 2 '41 320w

"Twenty excellent stories. . . A necessity."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:15 D 6 '41 30w

"To say that this is a book for young people is not to imply that it is 'safely' sentimental, sterilized of any suggestion that this democratic land is not perfection, censored of all that is drab or bitter. The authors have generally realized that the young people of these days, while romantic and imaginative, cannot be isolated from realities and are prepared to read even of the 'blood and dust and darkness' of Dorothy Parker's 'Clothe the Naked.' The book itself presents best evidence of the high average intelligence of the young moderns, not alone in the fact that these are the stories which received best response from Scholastic readers, but in the inclusion of 'Sixteen,' written by Maureen Daly when she was just that age."

+ Spring'd Republican p7e N 9 '41 300w

SCHOONMAKER, FRANK, and MARVEL, TOM. American wines; il. by Julian Brazelton. 312p $2.50 Duell

663.2 Wine and wine making (W) 41-11283

A descriptive guide to the wines which America is producing today. Contents: Wine hokum; California—a general survey; The vine in California; California vineyard districts; California grape varieties; Eastern vineyards and wines; Native grape varieties; American fortified wines; Buying American wines; Wine and legislation; Cooking with wine. Index.

Booklist 38:30 O 1 '41

"The book teems with facts, admirably marshaled, and it is well written. A must for all who like wines for drinking or cooking."

+ Books p8 J1 27 '41 170w

"Messrs. Schoonmaker and Marvel have dealt with their admirable subject in full and clear detail. Districts, kinds of grapes, varieties of wine, are carefully examined, first in California and then in the rest of the country. Statistics are plain and not too numerous. A chapter on legislation and a chapter on wine cookery bring the book to an end after an excellent chapter on wine buying. Mr. Schoonmaker and Mr. Marvel have done well by the present, and given firm encouragement to a good future for our native light wines."

+ N Y Times p10 J 29 '41 500w

"An absolutely first-rate book on a subject that will become more and more important in the near future."

+ New Yorker 17:63 Je 28 '41 40w

Pratt p15 D '41

Reviewed by R. E. Roberts

Sat R of Lit 24:14 J1 12 '41 800w

SCHORER, MARK. The hermit place. 313p $2.50 Random house

41-7653

Psychological novel in which is traced the story of two sisters, each in love with a mysterious aviator. Much of the action of the novel takes place in the year after his accidental death, when the consequences of his love making, or lack of it, become apparent in the lives of the two women.

"Perhaps there are no new plots in fiction, but Mark Schorer, in this new novel, 'The Hermit Place,' comes very close to creating one. Analyzed singly, there is nothing essentially unprecedented in the situation he develops; added together there is much that is dramatically startling. The result is a book that is profoundly moving both as a story and as a psychological study. It is a book that cannot be read with the upper surfaces of the mind only; it demands and holds the attention of the deeper cells of the brain." Rose Feld

+ Books p4 Je 8 '41 600w

"A situation with plenty of possibilities, and Mr. Schorer realizes them all, in a thoughtful and consistently impelling style."

+ New Repub 105:30 J1 7 '41 50w

"This novel has the psychological compactness of a model short story. Its plot, highly intellectual and dramatically tense, might have come from the pen of Henry James. It derives its weight, rhythm and color from one brilliant central idea around which the story rotates in narrow circles. The idea is extravagant and as hot as a flame; the circles around it are neat, drawn deliberately and sparingly with great care. In other words, 'The Hermit Place' is a curious, bewitching mixture of passion and geometry." Marianne Hauser

+ N Y Times p12 Je 8 '41 700w

"Well written, frank, and intelligent. For those who like their fiction serious-minded rather than pretty."

+ New Yorker 17:78 Je 14 '41 50w

"In this absorbing and uneven book, full of dissonances, of moments of preciosity and of sometimes almost amateurish dialogue, there is a central core that is curiously fascinating. 'The Hermit Place' is a novel of the inner life and it possesses the kind of psychological subtlety that gave the literature of the twenties a quality that one misses in most novels of today. It is not lacking in action; on the contrary, as in the real world, action is shaped and forced by conflicts that begin in the secret minds of the characters." Currie Cabot

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:7 Je 7 '41 420w

SCHUCHERT, CHARLES, and LE VENE, CLARA MAE. O. C. Marsh, pioneer in paleontology. 541p il map $5 Yale univ. press [22s 6d Oxford]

B or 92 Marsh, Othniel Charles. Paleontology 40-14583

For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

Reviewed by G. R. Wieland

Books p12 Mr 16 '41 1000w

"The biography is scholarly and well documented but withal eminently readable." A. S. Romer

+ J Geol 49:221 F '41 1050w

"No one was better qualified to write the life of America's pioneer paleontologist than the authors of this volume. Mr. Schuchert, third incumbent of the Yale professorship first held by Othniel Charles Marsh, was personally acquainted with him; and Clara M. LeVene, librarian in the Peabody Museum, knows thoroughly the materials of paleontology. . . Marsh's career affords abundant material for a biographical venture, but his life and works

SCHUCHERT, CHARLES—Continued
also constitute a vital link in the history of American thought. The authors make skillful use of the biographical material; to present his role in American thought is not a part of their intention." B. J. Loewenberg

+ New Eng Q 14:179 Mr '41 550w

SCHULBERG, BUDD WILSON. What makes Sammy run? 303p $2.50 Random house

41-5578

Portrait of a volatile, cruel, grasping little live wire, Sammy Glick, whose ambition to get to the top of the heap is finally realized in Hollywood. He begins as copy boy in a New York newspaper office, and by means of cheating, double crossing his friends, and behaving like a heel generally, he finally gets what he wants.

"Although it is a novel of hard surface, in which nobody speaks without wise-cracking, it is not hard-boiled. Under the satire there is a sound sense of values, and not a little pity." R. M. Gay

+ Atlantic My '41 200w

"Sammy's story is a first novel by a young screen writer who, I understand, practically grew up in the motion-picture community and took his job there directly upon graduation from college. His name, however, has already been bruited about in literary circles as a talented and promising writer. These adjectives he deserves. Probably Mr. Schulberg should go far away from Hollywood and remain away for a long time. But we hope that he eventually returns to it in another novel." F. T. Marsh

Books p2 Mr 30 '41 1050w

"What Makes Sammy Run? is a first novel and if you look very carefully you can find some of the stigmata of a first novel. But it would be very peyayune to put emphasis on the occasional labored writing, uneven characterization and repetitiousness when the whole book adds up to one of the most readable and thoughtfully planned stories in a long time." Eleanor Godfrey

+ Canadian Forum 21:60 My '41 490w

"Rumor now hath it that this book is being banned in certain places, that city fathers are objecting to its frankness, its 1941 reality. Full well may they deplore its crudeness and shocking immorality, but they cannot disregard its factual evidence. Recently I met one of the brighter movie stars and I asked him what film people thought of the novel. He whispered his reply: 'All Hollywood is reading the Schulberg book and admitting its truth—behind closed doors.'" P. T. Hartung

Commonweal 34:163 Je 6 '41 550w

"This is a squalid story, relieved by an ironic humour which illuminates with a lurid intensity the incredibilities of that hectic existence which in the Cloud Cuckoo Land of Hollywood passes for life." Wilfrid Gibson

+ Manchester Guardian p3 D 19 '41 130w

"This is Mr. Schulberg's first novel, and he is more concerned with saying what he sees and feels than with how he says it, and that is as it should be. The book is uneven; the first part is badly written and developed; there is too much of the paltry patois of small-story sophistication and typewriter chatter. One finds a paucity of expression, and the snappy conversation is at times oh so nugatory. But each of these charges is controverted as one turns the pages, and it is a pleasure to watch the author write through and past what really is his 'first novel' to find his own form and content." H. P. Lazarus

+ Nation 152:477 Ap 19 '41 600w

"Budd Schulberg is one of the very few to approach Hollywood with understanding and grim tolerance, and his writing has clean workmanship. . . It is not one of the most dramatic novels, partly because of this serious analysis and single purpose; but partly because the actual evolution of the character is less believable than the character himself. . . On the whole 'What Makes Sammy Run?' elbows out most of the trash that has been piling up since this crazy capital of a special world became a thing to write and wonder about." Otis Ferguson

+ New Repub 104:442 Mr 31 '41 850w

"This novel is brilliantly effective because it is completely of this time, expressing the beliefs and hopes that begin to stand out in this period, marked in it by the threat of complex defeat. . . The book carries on its jacket the recommendations of the author of 'This Side of Paradise,' and of the author of 'Appointment in Samarra.' It does not come up to either of those first novels, yet it is unquestionably one of the most interesting and promising first novels to appear in several years." Robert van Gelder

+ N Y Times p6 Mr 30 '41 650w

"This is a clever and pointed picture of a man who wanted money and power and got them at the expense of his friends, but it is at the same time a rather terrifying though often diverting description of dog-eat-dog life on the motion-picture lots in Hollywood."

New Yorker 17:69 Mr 29 '41 100w

"This Hollywood novel is straight from the 'tough' school of 'I Can Get It for You Wholesale' and 'Pal Joey.' It is not quite as remorseless as the first title and it does not have O'Hara's humor but it has qualities of its own sufficient to make one cry frantically for the Flit, long before the skillful climax comes off." P. S.

Sat R of Lit 23:20 Mr 29 '41 200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p5 Ja 3 '42 300w

SCHULTE, PAUL. The flying priest over the Arctic; a story of everlasting ice and of everlasting love. 267p il map $2.75 Harper
277.1 Missions—Arctic regions. Roman Catholic church—Missions, Eskimos, Aeronautics—Flights 41-493

For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

"Inside information about a little known and enterprising people is found in several interesting chapters on Eskimo life and customs, but it is only fair to warn the squeamish that the 'Arctic menu' is even worse than might have been expected! There are sixteen pages of photographs taken by Father Schulte and reproduced in a fine blue photogravure that conjures up the authentic atmosphere of the Land of Midnight Sun; and end-papers comprise an explanatory map of the Hudson Bay district. Lovers of adventure in conditions which challenge courage, hardihood and endurance, will find this book entrancing whether or not they sympathize with the religious motives of the men involved in it." Paula Kurth

+ America 64:525 F 15 '41 420w

Reviewed by H. A. Innis

Canadian Hist R 22:189 Je '41 250w

Cath World 153:255 My '41 240w

Wis Lib Bul 37:75 Ap '41

SCHULZ, CECILIA L. Your career in nursing. (Whittlesey house publication) 205p il $2 McGraw

610.73 Nurses and nursing (W) 41-7126

Vocational study for prospective nurses. Information includes material on nursing schools, personal qualifications, different kinds of nursing, and a series of questions and answers about the profession. Index.

Booklist 37:460 Je 1 '41

"Both readable and well-informed."

+ J Home Econ 33:486 S '41 20w

SCHUMAN, FREDERICK LEWIS. International politics; the western state system in transition. 3d ed 733p maps $4 McGraw

940.5 World politics. International law and relations. State, The. Nationalism and nationality. Imperialism 41-9315

"A revised edition, partly rewritten, with re-evaluations, giving major emphasis to the present war and to analysis of the diplomacy of aggression, appeasement, and war." (Booklist) For second edition see Book Review Digest, 1937. Index.

"This edition retains all the fire, interest, and food for thought of its predecessor. It is indispensable to teachers of international affairs, although Schuman warns that its value as a guide to the future will persist 'only if the legions of Fascist totalitarianism are vanquished.'" V. A. O'Rourke

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:1019 O '41 400w
Booklist 37:550 J1 15 '41

SCHUMAN, FREDERICK LEWIS. Night over Europe; the diplomacy of nemesis, 1939-1940. 619p $3.50 Knopf

940.532 World war, 1939—Diplomatic history. Europe—Politics (W) 41-51547

Continues the study of world diplomatic events, begun in the author's two volumes: The Nazi Dictatorship, and Europe on the Eve (Book Review Digest, 1935 and 1939). "He believes there is a strong trend toward world unification and that the Fascist powers will bring this about in their own way unless the democracies unite with Russia to stop them. As an alternative, he envisages a war which will involve every nation on earth." (New Yorker) Index.

"With unwavering loyalty to this theme Professor Schuman carries on in Night over Europe the work begun by him in The Nazi Dictatorship and Europe on the Eve. He appears to have studied the source material with admirable diligence. He has organized the complicated story well. He tells the story vividly, passionately at times, with a pleasant aptitude for drama and imagery. All aroused by the life-and-death issues of current world developments must thank him for the energy and courage with which he has struck a still white-hot iron." D. C. Poole

+ Am Hist R 47:339 Ja '42 550w

Reviewed by Clyde Eagleton

Am Pol Sci R 35:578 Je '41 900w

"This is a fine book, dealing with an extremely difficult and controversial subject. . . Professor Schuman's book is probably one of the most valuable contributions to the history of the last two years, explaining clearly and with authority the causes which led to this second world catastrophe." M. W. Fodor

+ Ann Am Acad 218:198 N '41 400w

"Professor Schuman is gravely concerned over the possibility that the 'Fascist Caesars' may win the war, and recommends an immediate military alliance between Great Britain, the United States, and the Soviet Union. In this connection he is perhaps inclined to overrate Soviet military power and to underrate Stalin's aversion to an understanding with the democracies. Both as contemporary history and as an ardent tract for the times, however, Professor Schuman's work is of high topical value and permanent significance." W. H. C.

+ Atlantic Mr '41 240w

Booklist 37:268 F 15 '41

Bookmark 2:9 My '41

"Few authorities on international affairs are better equipped than Professor Schuman to explain why the lights went out in Europe during these fateful years. Indeed, it would be almost impossible to find a scholar who combines such a rare combination of talents. In one mood he is the academic historian, patient, objective, analytical. In another he is a romantic dramatist sketching the background of a cosmic tragedy. The result is often disconcerting, occasionally confusing, but never dull, and this work must rank, for the present at least, as one of the most thorough and readable accounts of the debacle which engulfed the democracies." Geoffrey Bruun

+ Books p3 Ja 19 '41 1250w

"Professor Schuman's book combines a most profound and careful analysis of the diplomatic history of the last two years, with a lesson drawn from events which offers a guide out of the chaos to a new order. Through the revealing light which Professor Schuman's incisive mind sheds on many episodes of the confused story of the last two years, and through the skillful inclusion of the texts of many documents, his book will be invaluable for the student; through his great art of narrative and his sense of pathos and drama in history, his book will carry the interest of the general reader across its 600 pages without flagging in the slightest." Hans Kohn

+ Boston Transcript p1 F 1 '41 600w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 19 '41 700w

"The story is not a pretty one at best, and Professor Schuman's own pessimism as to the perfectability of man and the vitality of Western civilization does not make it any prettier. But whether or not his despair is justified, his book contains the most complete chronicle yet prepared of the immediate background and the early phases of the war."

Foreign Affairs 19:677 Ap '41 90w

"Schuman's brilliantly written and scholarly review of recent history is climaxed by a passionate 'last chance' appeal to America to enter the lists against the forces of darkness which now threaten to engulf the world." R. H. McDonough

+ Library J 66:32 Ja 1 '41 200w

"In this remarkable book Professor Schuman unfolds with rare eloquence and penetration the tragedy of the last two years, tragedy from the point of view of the survival of the liberties of all democratic peoples. . . There is night not only over Europe, but over the world; Professor Schuman has written the great epic of that night; his eyes are so fascinated by the darkness, which he describes in a masterly way, that he does not see the dawn which he himself has helped to bring about." Hans Kohn

+ Nation 152:300 Mr 15 '41 1450w

"As a historical narrative [the book] is scholarly and extremely effective. . . Through hatred of fascism, Schuman has fallen into the error of exaggerating its effectiveness, and hence exaggerating the difficulty of defeating it. If democracy can triumph only by immediately applying all the measures he advocates, then I am afraid that democracy will go down to ruin, for that imposing list of conditions is more than it could possibly meet during the next year or the next decade." Malcolm Cowley

+ New Repub 104:153 F 3 '41 1600w

Reviewed by M. T. Florinsky

— N Y Times p4 Ja 26 '41 1200w

Discussion by the author

N Y Times p2 F 9 '41 1000w

"Readable and heavily documented."

+ New Yorker 16:72 Ja 25 '41 90w

"The story is so recent that it is far from complete, and Professor Schuman, expert technician though he has become, is obliged to leave us on a vast unresolved chord. Even so, the book is a valuable précis of the course of events in world diplomacy from Munich to the present month, arranging events and documents, speeches and negotiations and catastrophes, in the order of their time and logic, the whole thing scholarly in a high degree without being, thank God, the least bit impartial. It has obvious weaknesses, to my way of thinking, perhaps inherent in the form of the work. . . To the scholar his narrative style will always seem unsuited to the material; to less scholarly readers the careful documentation and the array of dates may seem an unfriendly palisade to be scaled dangerously, if at all." Vincent Sheean

SCHUMAN, F. L.—Continued

+ — Sat R of Lit 23:7 F 1 '41 1250w

"Prof Schuman 'ventures to believe that no fuller or more accurate analysis will be possible for many years to come.' Such a prophecy, of course, can be neither proved nor disproved in advance. At least Prof Schuman's book, in so far as it is a diplomatic narrative (and much of it is that), is the most comprehensive synthesis of documents now available. Its interpretation could be more dispassionate."

Spring'd Republican p7e Ja 26 '41 1150w

"Professor Schuman's passionate account of the diplomatic events leading up to the second World War is as complete as it can reasonably be expected to be, given the scarcity of source materials so far available on the history of the fateful years 1939-40. It could hardly be more brilliant, anyhow. But the mastership displayed by the author in marshalling and presenting the facts cannot remove the doubt whether it be already feasible to interpret in more than a highly tentative way the assumptions which lay behind the policy of appeasement." Erich Hula

+ — Survey G 30:404 J1 '41 330w

SCHUMANN, CHARLES HENRY. Technical drafting; a text and reference book on graphics. 793p il $3.50 Harper

744 Mechanical drawing 40-35326

"Intended as a textbook for engineering drafting and as a reference for practicing engineers and architects, Professor Schumann's work should also find favor with the serious adult who needs to pick up the essentials of drafting entirely on his own. Part I, Elements of Engineering Drafting, includes particularly lucid chapters on equipment and materials, lettering, geometrical constructions, engineering drawings, dimensioning, pictorial drawing, perspective, and technical sketching. Part II, Professional Drafting, embraces practical chapters in the fields of mechanical, civil, mining, chemical, and electrical engineering with a most generous section on welding and sufficient treatment of industrial layouts and topographical drafting." (Chem & Chem Eng N) Index.

Reviewed by D. S. Davis

+ Chem & Chem Eng N 19:227 F 25 '41 320w

"A thoroughly workman-like job has been done on the book. The material included, its preparation and its presentation will undoubtedly result in success for the author's aim to produce a volume which would be a comprehensive textbook as well as a professional reference book."

+ Chem & Met Eng 48:133 Ja '41 250w

Eng N 125:77 N 21 '40 140w

N Y New Tech Bks 26:21 Ap '41

Wis Lib Bul 37:52 Mr '41

SCHUMANN, MARY (KANENGEISER) (MRS MEREDITH HAYES). My blood and my treasure. 439p $2.50 Dial press

Perry, Oliver Hazard—Fiction 41-6659

A historical novel built around the struggle for Detroit in the War of 1812. The hero is a young American soldier, the heroine a girl half French, half Indian who is pledged to further the cause of the Indian Tecumseh.

"Although she draws upon every aspect of America's second war, she stretches it out so that no part of it, with the exception of Commodore Perry's triumph over the British fleet on Lake Erie, emerges as a very vivid slice of history. This is unfortunate, for the fictional ingredient of 'My Blood and My Treasure' is so weak and thin that there is little left. . . Nevertheless, 'My Blood and My Treasure' is an agreeable way of renewing acquaintance with the war that Americans know least about, and for the scenes with Perry on Lake Erie it is worth putting up with Rufus Hazard." A. B. Tourtelot

+ — Books p8 My 4 '41 440w

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 O '41

"With ingenuity that does as much credit to her heart as to her imagination, Mrs. Schumann avoids the bitter alternatives of a situation where love and duty conflict. Though this avoidance weakens the story dramatically, one is loath to criticize an author's humanity toward romantic lovers." Drake de Kay

+ — N Y Times p23 My 4 '41 550w

New Yorker 17:87 My 3 '41 60w

SCHUMPETER, ELIZABETH BOODY, ed. Industrialization of Japan and Manchukuo, 1930-1940; population, raw materials and industry; contributors: G. C. Allen [and others], (Bur. of int. research, Harvard univ. and Radcliffe college. Publications) 944p $7.50 Macmillan

330.952 Japan—Economic conditions. Japan —Industries and resources. Japan—Population. Manchuria—Industries and resources 40-35446

"A monumental work on population, raw materials and industry which offers instruction on nearly all the current problems of the Pacific and Japan's imperialism and modernization. Some divergence in emphasis and opinions, but a realistic and honest account of what is coming to be called a totalitarian state. A second volume is planned on financial problems." (Social Studies) Glossary. Index.

"Professor Penrose has written a very careful and convincing analysis of population developments between 1920 and 1936, choosing the former year as that in which the first adequate census material became available and the latter apparently as the latest year for which material was available when he wrote. His analysis is a model of precise definition, analytical skill and clear concise statement." J. B. Condliffe

+ Am Econ R 31:126 Mr '41 1350w

"This is a highly important book, yet one which is apt to prove misleading unless used with care. It is important because several authorities have collaborated in weighty and invaluable studies of Japan's economic progress before the outbreak of war in 1937. . . The book as a whole tends nevertheless to be misleading if one takes it for what it is announced to be—an up-to-date appraisal of Japan's strength and weakness. Although these studies of prewar Japan were apparently written several years ago, they appeared late in 1940, largely unrevised and in the present tense." W. W. Lockwood

+ — Ann Am Acad 215:183 My '41 650w

Foreign Affairs 19:688 Ap '41 40w

Reviewed by J. E. Orchard

Pacific Affairs 14:240 Je '41 3350w

Social Studies 32:46 Ja '41 40w

"In these tense days when so much of the writing on foreign countries takes the form of heated opinions of all dimensions hurled back and forth in endless debates, it is refreshing to find a book with a coolly detached point of view, in which the authors are content to allow facts to speak for themselves. . . All of the studies are thoroughly annotated and are well supported by tables and charts. Not only do they show careful and painstaking scholarship but they make it clear that Japanese agencies of many sorts collaborated in providing the basic information which was needed." J. H. Shoemaker

+ Yale R n s 30:845 summer '41 1100w

SCHURZ, WILLIAM LYTLE. Latin America. 378p map $3.75 Dutton

918 Latin America

(W) 41-19149

A "descriptive survey" in which the author has endeavored to consider Latin America as a unit, taking up in successive sections the land, history, people, government, economy, international relations, and way of life. The author has taught Latin American history at the University of Michigan and has served as a governmental adviser in regard to Latin American affairs. Glossary. Index.

Booklist 38:176 Ja 15 '42

"This is a solid book, suited only to those who really plan to discover Latin America. Such will find it rarely exciting. Mr Schurz never bothers to make his opening sentences or paragraphs interesting. He never plays to the gallery. But page after page, his recital and analysis will carry the reader on by their sound reasoning and their excellent writing." Hubert Herring

+ Books p4 N 30 '41 1000w

"It is not a 'travel book,' nor is it meant for those who want a simple introduction to these countries. It is an advanced text, by a commercial attaché-expert, and its use will be limited somewhat to the larger libraries." R. S. Alvarez

+ Library J 66:792 S 15 '41 120w

"As I read this book of Schurz's, I am moved to nominate him to a post where he may help to train our future diplomats. Here is a man who can impart affection, untouched by romanticism; who can explain villains, neither condoning nor belaboring; who can see the present churning life of the twenty Latin American republics in the light of centuries of struggle. These are among the gifts without which a diplomat is impotent." Hubert Herring

+ New Repub 106:89 Ja 19 '42 2400w

"It is perhaps a pity that a man of Mr. Schurz's wide knowledge and understanding should elect to keep his own apparently liberal and informed point of view so much in the background. While he is to be commended for such restraint in these days, when everyone who has taken a Caribbean cruise is a self-constituted authority on Latin American affairs, his opinions would unquestionably be worth listening to. But Mr. Schurz simply set down all the information he considered useful, and then stopped abruptly, with no attempt to sum up, or to draw any conclusions. There is, however, only one real criticism to be made of Mr. Schurz's book, and I set it down with regret, for it is difficult to have to report that a book so excellent is at the same time so dull." Katherine Rodell

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:16 N 1 '41 310w

Springf'd Republican p8 O 29 '41 650w

SCHWARTZ, DELMORE. Shenandoah [a verse play]. 28p $1; pa 35c New directions 812 41-28270

"A dramatic poem . . . in prose as well as verse, but its whole effect is poetical. An infant in a Jewish home in the Bronx is to be named and circumcised. There are the living dramatic personae, and there is a ghostly projection who is the man the child is to become. This figure is a kind of chorus and speaks about birth, death, names, the world, the Jewish destiny in its past, present and future. Shenandoah, picked for the most trivial reason by the mother, is the name bestowed on the child." N Y Times

"It has been obvious for some time that Mr. Schwartz writes too much and with too little self-criticism. He airs a not too well assimilated education, a knowledge of the work of many other poets and philosophers but no authentic view of his own. His forms are many but imitative. . . . One might wish that the kind of pseudo-intellectualism current in his work and the work of some of his young contemporaries might give way to clarity of idea and authenticity of feeling." E. L. Milton

Books p33 N 23 '41 500w

"The theme is a subtle one and is worked out with ironic humor and considerable profundity. Delmore Schwartz has been able to get dramatic tenseness and emotion into his striking material, the significance of a name, of names. . . . This is the old-fashioned blank verse, but used in the half-satirical way that Shaw used it in 'Cashel Byron' it is appropriate to the part humorous, part philosophical, part tragical matter of 'Shenandoah.'" M. M. Colum

+ N Y Times p5 N 30 '41 290w

"Its faults derive from the author's failure to see what effects his subject demands, and even a certain blindness toward what his material really is. . . . Sometimes the juxtaposition of the young, sophisticated observer and the scene observed succeeds. But Schwartz has not yet learned the true rôle of the poet, which is to have no rôle. The poet is the least showy of men. He is the builder only, and has no place on the finished scene. That is what youth must learn, and partly through experiment, as here." Louise Bogan

+ — New Yorker 17:105 N 29 '41 340w

SCHWARZ, SANFORD. Research in international economics by federal agencies. 357p $1.75 Columbia univ. press [8s 6d Oxford] 330.72 Economic conditions—Study and teaching. Research. U.S.—Executive departments 41-8592

"This convenient handbook devotes 150 pages to brief description of the various agencies of the federal government engaged in economic research; 135 pages to a survey of recent government research projects in the three fields of structure of national economy, structures of international economic organization and international economic relations; and 45 pages to a finding list of government publications. . . . The title of the book is misleading, since the coverage is much broader than research activities directly concerned with international economics." (Am Econ R) Index.

Am Econ R 31:642 S '41 130w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:376 Ja '42 30w

"Mr. Sanford Schwarz has contributed a thoughtful and highly useful book." B. B. Wallace

+ J Pol Econ 49:948 D '41 460w

SCOGGINS, CHARLES ELBERT. Lost road. 302p map $2.50 Doubleday 41-2091

Adventure story of four people who found themselves stranded in an impenetrable jungle—the dread Matto Grosso of Brazil.

"The chances are you will read it breathlessly to the end just to see if you are going to escape alive. . . . Despite its Tarzan trimmings, 'Lost Road' is not naive. Mr. Scoggins's touch is sophisticated, and his style has a glint of humor." Lisle Bell

+ Books p18 F 9 '41 320w

"Mr. Scoggins writes well until he begins to hump along like mad to get the book done; and his interest is not only in the fascinating plot he unravels, but in Mayan lore and wilderness psychology. 'Lost Road' is Grade A adventure." O. O.

Boston Transcript p1 Mr 8 '41 120w

"A romantic thriller, crammed with archaeological and anthropological speculations on the country in which so many of his stories have been placed." J. E. Cross

+ Library J 66:140 F 1 '41 80w

"'Lost Road' is a movie rather than a novel, and an entertaining movie at that, with airplanes, Indians, Peruvian gold mines, love interest and a happy ending. . . . Truly an adventure story, with all the hokum imaginable, yet told so unpretentiously and skillfully that one can take the hokum, and even like it." Marianne Hauser

+ N Y Times p7 F 9 '41 460w

SCOTT, CLELAND. Lions on trust. 317p il $3
Macmillan [12s 6d Joseph, M]
599.74428 Lions (W) [A 40-3377]

The author, a farmer in Kenya Territory, has hunted lions both for sport and in protection of his farm, and he has also kept lions as pets. This book relates his experiences both as hunter and observer of big cats. Many pages are devoted to the habits and behavior of Romeo and Juliet, brother and sister cubs who are also the subjects of most of the many photographs which illustrate the volume.

Booklist 37:321 Mr 15 '41

Reviewed by H. M. Shaw

Books p23 Ap 6 '41 550w

"Out of his experiences Mr. Cleland Scott has produced a book of vivid interest, with a good deal of shrewd comment on other subjects than the behaviour of lions. His observations on some of the 'sportsmen' to whom he has ministered and on animal photographers of a certain type are caustic. So also are his reflections, not, it is to be feared, wholly undeserved, on the slackness of both the Imperial and the colonial Governments about the wild-life conservation to which they are pledged." H. G. M.

+ Manchester Guardian p2 S 6 '40 250w

"This fascinating story can be warmly recommended to all who are interested in African wild life, whether or not they feel an impulse to follow the example of Mr. Cleland Scott in choosing lions as pets." David Seth-Smith

+ Spec 165:274 S 13 '40 600w

"We should be grateful to Mr. Scott for allowing us to experience vicariously the thrills and adventures that he has undergone. Here is a book that will many times momentarily halt the breath of the ordinary fearful human being—the man, in fact, who prefers to take his lions on trust."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p438 S 7 '40 430w

SCOTT, ERNEST FINDLAY. The nature of the early church. 245p $2 Scribner

260 Church history—Primitive and early church. Sociology, Christian (W) 41-15290

"[A] study of the early church, its gospel, its worship, its ethics. . . Dr. Scott believes that Christianity was from the beginning identified with the community, and that it was not organized by Jesus or deliberately by anyone else, but is a unique society, born spontaneously out of the ecstatic experience of the friends of Jesus." (Churchman) Index.

Bookmark 2:5 N '41

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 58:1274 O 15 '41 850w

"This is an important book, a provocative study." W. L. Caswell

+ Churchman 155:17 N 1 '41 400w

"Although it is primarily an essay in historical interpretation, no small part of the great interest and importance of Professor Scott's latest book consists in the light it throws upon two matters of contemporary concern and relevance: first, the nature of the church and, second, the meaning and value of the ethical teaching of Jesus. . . Needless to say, the mature scholarship of Professor Scott is manifest on every page of this volume. It is one of the most interesting and valuable of his many important books." John Knox

+ J Religion 22:107 Ja '42 900w

SCOTT, EVELYN (MRS JOHN METCALFE) (ERNEST SOUZA, pseud). The shadow of the hawk. 494p $2.75 Scribner

41-7659

A character study of two people, a boy and his mother, and the effect on them of the unjust imprisonment of the husband and father.

"The story is pathos, rather than tragedy, because the odds are so uneven. Whether or not one accepts Miss Scott's views of the forces of self-interest arrayed against [Angus and his mother]—I, myself, can't accept it wholly—one cannot doubt the sincerity of her portrayal of the helplessness of little men of good will." Mary Ross

+ — Books p4 My 4 '41 600w

"Unfortunately, Miss Scott has not contented herself with drawing a portrait of a bewildered, sensitive boy cast adrift by the most cruel of circumstances. Indeed, she has complicated her story—and wholly distorted its tone—by the introduction of a group of characters who belong to farce or burlesque. . . Presumably her intention is satiric—and a criticism of society is implied—but the net result is most distressing. Indeed she involves herself in such a labyrinth that the final point and outcome of the story are anything but clear." E. H. Walton

+ — N Y Times p6 Ap 27 '41 800w

"I have a dismayed feeling that I am missing something in 'The Shadow of the Hawk' palpable to more perceptive readers. Is this one of those imposing Dreiserian studies of the effect of society upon character? Is it a lower-middle-class satire, Dickens without humor? Does it purport to say trenchant things about justice and prison reform? All or any of these are possibilities. My respect for Miss Scott's talents leads me to believe the possibilities exist. They just don't seem to exist for me, that's all." Clifton Fadiman

+ — New Yorker 17:82 Ap 26 '41 400w

"It is best to read this novel in purely receptive mood, from page to page, without trying to plumb Miss Scott's motives. For if you decide too soon just what she is doing, you will find almost at once that she has steered away from this to quite another course. And you will find, too, that whatever her plan, it is always exciting and original writing. . . The early study of Angus seems pointless, since even if he had not been marred by the first ten years of his life, he would have been anyhow by the second. The book, however, is a provocative work, always expressive of its writer's vigor and originality." N. L. Rothman

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:12 Je 14 '41 270w

Spring'd Republican p7e Je 1 '41 210w

SCOTT, LOUISE HOLLISTER. Income management for women. 298p $3 Harper

332.024 Investments, Finance, Personal (W) 40-27860

"This book is written to acquaint women with many of the procedures in regard to the satisfying use of money. It is the outgrowth of a course [given] at Finch Junior College." (Pref) The book is in four parts: Planning your expenditures; Your money and banking; Safeguarding your future; Your dealings in securities. Index.

Booklist 37:212 Ja 15 '41

J Home Econ 33:115 F '41 40w

Pratt p14 spring '41

"Throughout the book the practical advice and the social approach to spending provide most useful material. It is an interesting indication of how fast we are moving to note how out of date is the chapter on money, a chapter, however, which is not vital to the group for which the book is intended. In all such books one might wish for a bit more emphasis upon the responsibilities of the consumer in helping to shape our economic organization and upon the value for each person of a real life goal and of a determination to work toward it, using budget planning as one tool." C. G. Woodhouse

+ — Survey 77:101 Mr '41 400w

Wis Lib Bul 37:51 Mr '41

SCOTT, MARTIN JEROME. Jesus as men saw him. 224p $2 Kenedy

232 Jesus Christ—Person and offices 41-621

"Father Scott's book is a Jesuit life of Jesus, but it aims to depict him as he appeared to the men of his day and does not dwell upon speculation about his personality. Yet it takes for granted the validity of orthodox Catholic opinion." Books

"Mankind's experience of the Incarnate Word has been interpreted in its theological import with a solidity and accuracy that will delight the scholar and a fluid clarity that will hold the attention of all." L. J. McGinley
+ America 64:444 Ja 25 '41 240w

"Father Scott portrays a God-man fully worthy of Roman Catholic devotion." S. J. Case

+ Books p12 Ja 19 '41 200w

Cath World 152:764 Mr '41 120w

SCOTT, MRS WINIFRED MARY (WATSON) (PAMELA WYNNE, pseud). The splendor of love. 285p $2 Kinsey [8s Collins]

41-5982

Pretty young Bettina Benrose was discontented with her dull life in a London suburb so when her father won a lottery she took an early opportunity to seek adventures abroad. Her travels brought her as governess to an Indian prince's palace and there the adventures grew almost too terrifying before a satisfactory ending is reached.

"Never a parsimonious spinner of plot, Miss Wynne has turned out one of her best romantic mysteries in 'Splendor of Love.' Lots of sinister characters, white and Asiatic." Lisle Bell
+ Books p29 My 11 '41 120w

"It is all pretty fantastic, but probably not more so than many real Indian incidents, and it makes good adventure reading." Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p24 Ap 20 '41 160w

SCOTT-MONCRIEFF, ANN (MRS GEORGE SCOTT-MONCRIEFF). Auntie Robbo. 224p $2 Viking

(W) 41-13505

Auntie Robbo, aged eighty-one but still hale and hearty, lived near Edinburgh with her congenial eleven-year-old great-grandnephew, Hector. All was peace and contentment until Hector's stepmother appeared, with some idea of clapping Hector into school and Auntie Robbo into an institution. But Auntie was hard to catch, and she and Hector, and three other children annexed en route, spent a happy summer escaping across Scotland and onto a haunted island, until at last the enemy was routed.

Booklist 38:59 O 15 '41

"What a good time the writer had doing it," is the inevitable reaction to this lively story. From start to finish it moves right along with an irresponsible happy-go-lucky dash. . . The serio-comic situations take place in joyous outdoor settings of Scottish rain and sunshine, evidently beloved by Ann Scott-Moncrieff, who was born and raised on the Orkneys. It all makes capital fun for the reader who enjoys unconventional doings." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:371 S '41 120w

"A hilarious yarn for any age that does not take itself too seriously. . . The wind off the heather is in this tale and the wildly original yet salty recklessness of the Scot who has abandoned caution." E. J. Gray
+ Horn Bk M 17:480 N '41 80w

"Here is a modern story with all the pleasant unmorality of fairy tales—gay, witty, humorous, delightfully written, and so utterly preposterous that no child will be deceived by it, any more than he is by the circus. For any child over ten." J. L. Sauer
+ Library J 66:736 S 1 '41 150w

"It is a book agreeably devoid of moral tone and one in which things happen just about as children wish they would in real life."

+ New Yorker 17:144 D 6 '41 60w

Reviewed by Zoë Durrell

Sat R of Lit 24:16 N 8 '41 20w

SEABROOK, WILLIAM BUEHLER. Doctor Wood; modern wizard of the laboratory. 335p il $3.75 Harcourt

B or 92 Wood, Robert Williams

(W) 41-25186

Biography of an outstanding American physicist, for many years a professor at Johns Hopkins. The author interlards the story of Dr Wood's achievements with many lively anecdotes of Dr Wood's pranks and his unconventional behavior. Bibliography.

"Dr. Wood's important scientific work is briefly but adequately sketched, not in relation to science itself or to the progress of the world, but always in relation to its author. It is excellent factual material for the psychologist who will some day study the scientific mind as a source of our changing civilization. Finally, research workers and all who live by ideas should study 'Doctor Wood' as a veritable fountain of youth. Students of physics will appreciate the prodigious list of not less than 263 original scientific papers published by Mr. Wood in the years from 1899 to 1941, which serves as appendix." Gerald Wendt
+ Books p30 N 30 '41 440w

"Seabrook, habituated to writing about wild men, seems to feel that his present subject belongs in the series."

Christian Century 58:1443 N 19 '41 70w

Reviewed by T. O'C. Sloan, III

Commonweal 35:271 Ja 2 '42 600w

"A biography of an important scientist, no matter how eccentric he may be, should be more than a frolic. I don't suppose there is any harm in plaintively begging for rather more information about Dr. Wood as physicist and rather less about Dr. Wood as the Wizard of Oz." Clifton Fadiman

New Yorker 17:108 N 15 '41 450w

Reviewed by M. S. Ulrich

Sat R of Lit 25:19 Ja 17 '42 600w

"Mr Seabrook has interpreted his subject with skill and understanding." G. B. M.
+ Springfd Republican D 19 '41 600w

"This informal biography, in which from time to time the author and the subject wrangle in footnotes, is an entertaining picture of a career and an individual 'as American,' in Mr. Seabrook's words, 'as a hickory tree.'" Mary Ross

+ Survey G 30:703 D '41 240w

SEAGLE, WILLIAM. The quest for law. 456p $5 Knopf

340 Law—History and criticism

(W) 41-12667

"Cultural history of the law in action, traced through what Mr. Seagle regards as its three major institutional phases: primitive, archaic, and mature law." (New Yorker) The author, a New York lawyer, was law editor of The Encyclopedia of the Social Sciences, senior attorney for the Petroleum labor policy board, and served as a trial examiner for the National labor relations board from 1937 to 1940. Index.

Booklist 38:74 N 1 '41

"In an age of surveys it is surprising that the publication of a truly valuable introduction to the law has been so long postponed. . . Mr. Seagle is to be commended for his confidence in the intelligence of the general reader, and for his belief that lawyers are capable of sustained interest in their professional traditions. He is even more to be congratulated for his discovery of a form in which the story of the law can effectively be told." M. D. Howe

SEAGLE, WILLIAM—Continued

+ Books p2 S 21 '41 550w

Reviewed by Edwin Borchard
Nation 153:486 N 15 '41 700w

"Evidently authoritative, fertile in ideas, and engrossingly written, if you don't mind a little thinking now and then."
+ New Yorker 17:110 S 20 '41 30w

"The Quest for Law' is not, in the circulating-library sense of the word, easy. The extent of Mr. Seagle's scholarship is staggering, and the book is rich in valories of allusiveness. I venture to suggest, however, that its appeal will be wide, for Mr. Seagle has not gone to the other extreme and done a gaseous dissertation. He has preserved, throughout, the good manners of a likeable essayist, with the result that 'The Quest for Law' is both enormously informative and exceedingly readable." J. R. Parker
+ Sat R of Lit 24:16 S 6 '41 700w

Reviewed by M. R. Konvitz
-Yale Law J 51:526 Ja '42 1050w

SEARLE, ROBERT WYCKOFF. Author of liberty. 147p $1; pa 60c Missionary educ. movement

321.8 Democracy. U.S.—Politics and government. Christianity and politics 41-8062

Series of stories, some from real life, some fictional, all of them dealing with the topics of religion and democracy, and designed to be used as starting points for discussion groups. The author is the general secretary of the greater New York Federation of churches.

Christian Century 58:594 Ap 30 '41 50w

"Told in simple language which would adapt them to young people's classes. They would serve well to awaken those who are brought up delicately to understand something of the social problems which surround them." H. J. S.

+ Churchman 155:34 Je 15 '41 50w

Reviewed by J. C. Bennett
J Religion 22:121 Ja '42 180w

SEATON, GEORGE W. What to see and do in the South; how to get the most out of your trip. 416p il map $3 Prentice-Hall 917.5 South—Description and travel (W) 41-21806

A guidebook designed chiefly for motorists covering points of interest and routes thruout the southeastern states from Virginia to Florida and eastern Louisiana north again to Kentucky and West Virginia. There is a selected list of hotels and an index. Map on end papers.

Booklist 38:111 D 1 '41

"For the armchair motorist, the book makes pleasing reading. For to nearly every item of importance the author brings some amusing or arresting bit of information—sometimes only a well turned phrase—which, take the book as a whole, lifts it out of the ordinary Baedeker class. The photographic illustrations are good, and there should be a lot more of them. People who are not acquainted with hotel accommodations in the South will find the author's 'Selected List of Hotels' valuable."

+ Books p26 N 23 '41 220w

Correction by the editor
Books p37 N 30 '41 40w

SEATON, GEORGE W. What to see and do in Washington; how to get the most out of your trip to the nation's capital. 103p il map $1.25 Prentice-Hall

917.53 Washington, D.C.—Description (W) 41-1768

Short guidebook to Washington, D.C. Contents: The Capitol; Near the Capitol; Around the White House; Along the mall; Mount Vernon; Arlington national cemetery; Churches and universities; Some old houses; Some parks, and other scattered things; Where to stay, play, eat, and buy things; A few statistics and a little history. Index.

Booklist 37:291 Mr 1 '41

Books p12 Mr 16 '41 120w

SE BOYAR, GERALD EDWIN. Handbook of the Bible. 247p $1.25 Crofts

220.3 Bible. Whole—Handbooks, manuals, etc. Bible in literature—Bibliography 40-29539

"Not a guide to the reading or understanding of the Bible, but an alphabetically arranged manual to clarify biblical allusions in literature and art. The bibliographies under many of the headings mention books, pictures and music." Christian Century

Christian Century 57:1586 D 18 '40 30w

"As a time-saver alone it is of inestimable value." J. Van Z.

+ Churchman 155:35 F 1 '41 40w

School & Society 52:600 D 7 '40 10w
Wis Lib Bul 37:29 F '41

SEELEY, MRS MABEL. The Chuckling Fingers. 294p $2 Doubleday

(W) 41-18053

Mystery story.

Booklist 38:53 O 15 '41

"This department may not always pick a winner at first glance, but it knows a trend when it sees one. Not to labor the figure, increasing mobs of grim-faced customers have been converging upon Mabel Seeley's books, with intent to peruse, ever since she came out with the first one a couple of seasons ago. . . 'The Chuckling Fingers' strikes us as easily the best of her output." Will Cuppy

+ Books p16 S 7 '41 280w

"The Chuckling Fingers' has a bang-up character-plot, but is so clotted with palpitations and jitters that you get smothered trying to fight your way to the solution." Mort. Post
+ New Repub 105:598 N 3 '41 50w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p12 S 7 '41 210w

"Recommended as [Mrs] Seeley's best novel since 'The Listening House.'"

+ New Yorker 17:76 S 13 '41 40w

"Author of 'Whispering Cup' scores again with highly emotional and shivery yarn of vengeance murders in lumber magnate's family. First rate."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:18 S 20 '41 40w

"Equals earlier Seeley stories (Crying Sisters, etc.) in craftsmanship, characterization, unflagging interest."

+ Time 38:100 O 6 '41 40w

SEIDENSPINNER, CLARENCE. Form and freedom in worship. (Minister's professional lib) 186p $2 Willett

264 Public worship. Liturgies 41-2386

"A book on the subject of the conduct of congregational worship within the so-called 'free' Protestant churches. . . After a description of the present confused and amorphous state of public worship within the nonliturgical churches, Mr. Seidenspinner devotes three chapters to the traditional forms for celebrating the church year, the Lord's Supper, and morning and evening prayer. He then turns to 'Christian Worship for the New Day,' discussing liturgical 'form' and 'materials,' the sermon as an integral part of liturgy, and the uses which can be effectively and appropriately made of the Christian year. The final chapter of the book is devoted to the relation of architecture to worship." J Religion

"Having argued with the author about one or two details, I beg to add that this is a thoroughly useful and practical book on worship and that any minister or devout layman will find the study of it richly rewarding." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 58:290 F 26 '41 950w

"The positive contributions of this book far outweigh its imperfections, and it is a pleasure to see the problems of public worship met with so much insight. We hope that Dr. Seidenspinner will continue to write in this field, and we venture to suggest that he meet with groups of clergymen from different communions in a joint effort to provide better and better forms." J. W. Suter, Jr.

+ Churchman 155:17 Ap 15 '41 500w

Reviewed by W. R. McNutt

Crozer Q 18:272 Jl '41 290w

"The discussion is marked by appreciation of the best in the past and by restraint and fine feeling in the proposing of new materials. The chapter on the sermon is more illuminating than most books on that subject. . . This book does not say the final word on its subject, as its author would be the first to agree. My major criticism is that it lays too little emphasis upon penitence. The art of the liturgist is an exceedingly complicated and difficult art. . . But Mr. Seidenspinner evidently has a sound appreciation of liturgy as an art and is himself a genuine artist." John Knox

+ J Religion 21:207 Ap '41 480w

SEIFERT, ELIZABETH (MRS JOHN GASPAROTTI). Bright scalpel. 352p $2.50 Dodd

41-21786

After two years as a medical missionary in war-time China, young Jim Wyatt comes back to his home town to recover his lost health and to take his place as a small town doctor. But in the peace and tranquillity of America he finds problems that need solving, problems involving medical honesty and the relationships between rich and poor. Finally two girls of widely differing environments compete for his affections and loyalty.

"Behind this story of a young doctor who is held to his ideals by the love of a clear-eyed, straight-thinking girl, one sees mirrored the smugness, the bigotry and, at times, the kindness of a complacent little town. The minor characters are drawn with loving skill. Miss Lydia is a delight, and so is the rector. Even Bob, the shady young doctor, has an attractive definitiveness that is lacking in Jim. There is an uncertainty about him that leaves one vaguely dissatisfied. Perhaps it is because in the end neither the author nor the reader has arrived at a real conclusion. One does not feel at all sure that Jim will be content with Maywood when he returns from the war." Page Cooper

+ Books p12 N 16 '41 550w

Reviewed by J. C. Cort

Commonweal 35:301 Ja 9 '42 260w

Reviewed by E. S. Brown

Library J 66:904 O 15 '41 70w

"Readers who enjoyed the author's prize-winner, 'Young Doctor Galahad,' should like her new one." Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p34 N 2 '41 190w

Spring'd Republican p7e N 23 '41 180w

SEIFERT, SHIRLEY. Waters of the wilderness. 523p maps $2.75 Lippincott

Clark, George Rogers—Fiction (W) 41-15454

Historical novel covering the years 1778 to 1780 when the lands between the Ohio and the Mississippi rivers were being won from the British. During that time George Rogers Clark and his ragged little army took the forts at Kaskaskia and Vincennes, and protected them from the Indians. The central theme of the book is the love of Clark, the red-haired frontiersman, for the beautiful Teresa de Leyba, the sister of the Spanish royal governor at St Louis.

"I think this is a praiseworthy story within and beneath the romantic trappings and tender sentiment which give it color and emotional appeal. The reviewer must, however, record his critical dissent from the style, manner and taste in historical story writing which lead male writers, of the kind, to fall in love with their heroines, and female writers to mother their heroes; and so both, to make a puppet show of history. . . But accepting the manner, we have here a romance with tenderness, color and excitement. And a good puppet show is infinitely superior to a bad drama of either stage or screen." F. T. Marsh

+ Books p2 S 14 '41 700w

"Well told, fast moving, dramatic." A. L. Graham

+ Library J 66:669 Ag '41 80w

"Under their brocades and buckskins Miss Seifert's people are deeply and fallibly human. She has made an ardent and touching love story of an episode which has been often enough, in other novels, merely stirring military action. Probably no novelist yet has provided us with so essentially truthful a portrait of George Rogers Clark himself. He emerges here, since we see much of him through Teresa de Leyba's eyes, a little more than life size. It is a tribute to the quality of Shirley Seifert's writing—and, perhaps, to the memory of Clark's own deeds—that this seems in 'Waters of the Wilderness' entirely proper." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p6 Ag 31 '41 800w

Wis Lib Bul 37:202 D '41

SELBY, JOHN. Island in the corn. 404p $2.75 Farrar

41-12279

Beginning with a picture of the life of a well-to-do family in the Middlewest in the eighties, this story concerns the events of a dozen years or more, when the Trace fortune gradually declined and the family finally came to their last resting place—a small Missouri village—an island in the corn.

Booklist 38:81 N 1 '41

"It is a big, generous piled-up story which no review can detail adequately, almost old-fashioned in its subjectivity, full of thoughtful detail and unaffected writing. If Mr. Selby lacks any desire to fashion a fine-textured prose he does possess a very special genius for recreating the image of the past." Louis Paul

+ Books p5 Ag 24 '41 1200w

New Repub 105:630 N 10 '41 50w

"'Island in the Corn' is a story as American as the optimism, the ranging imagination, the lavishness which infuse it. John Selby knows what the Eighteen Eighties were like in the Midwestern United States—obviously knows it by family tradition, if he is too young to remember that extravagant decade from experience." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p7 Ag 24 '41 750w

New Yorker 17:77 S 6 '41 40w

"The financial decline and human stabilization of a comparatively great American family of the Midwest during the years between 1880 and 1892 is the general theme of this fat, rich book. It should be said at once for the benefit of those whom either the dates or 'Midwest' might prejudice, that both the locale and the period are highly subordinate to some stories of American people which might have been set anywhere in any time of the country's history." Phil Stong

+ Sat R of Lit 24:10 Ag 23 '41 700w

Wis Lib Bul 37:178 N '41

SELDEN, SAMUEL. The stage in action; il. by Wautell Selden [and other illustrations]. 324p $2.75 Crofts

792 Theater. Acting (W) 41-1313

A manual for actors, directors and students. "The purpose of this book is to provide a broader understanding of the problems involved in effective dramatic performance by looking at them from a fresh viewpoint. Special attention is directed to the practical relationships between acting and directing and two other creative forms: dancing and music. In connection with directing, some comparisons are also made with the graphic arts." (Pref) Index.

SELDEN, SAMUEL—Continued

Booklist 37:289 Mr 1 '41

"The author brings to his aid a wide range of source material, not disdaining to notice even the contributions of psychology to an understanding of the theatre. The book is a call to the imagination and a challenge to deft and ingenious craftsmanship. There is a carefully selected and interesting bibliography." George Beiswanger

+ Theatre Arts 25:249 Mr '41 600w

SELLARS, ELEANORE KELLY. Murder a la mode. 250p $2 Dodd

41-18617

Detective story.

"Miss Sellars writes heartily and doesn't spare the clichés in word, thought or deed. She is out for puzzle interest and her work should serve a worthy purpose in that bracket. Lively, dressy and sufficiently enigmatic." Will Cuppy

Books p20 S 28 '41 160w

"Most readers will find the plot far too complicated for enjoyable reading. For some reason which we are unable to fathom, this story has been awarded the Red Badge Prize for the best mystery-detective story." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p22 O 5 '41 190w

"Full of synthetic smartness, but may please ladies who hope a department store is more than just a place to buy nylons."

New Yorker 17:88 O 4 '41 40w

Sat R of Lit 24:21 O 4 '41 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e O 19 '41 180w

"Slightly windy but cleverly constructed tale."

+ — Time 38:100 O 6 '41 30w

SENSE, ELEANORA. America's nutrition primer; what to eat and why. 95p il $1 Barrows

612.39 Nutrition (W) 41-51960

"The book is designed to serve as a guide for women who have not the time to study nutrition in its technical aspects," Dr. E. V. McCollum of the Johns Hopkins University writes in his introduction to it. It is written from the point of view of the housewife, with the last third of the book used for recipes and rules for retaining the greatest possible nutritive value of foods." (J Home Econ) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 38:91 N 15 '41

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 D '41

J Home Econ 34:53 Ja '42 70w

SEREDY, KATE. A tree for Peter; il. by [the author]. 102p $2 Viking

(W) 41-22370

The story of a small lonely boy, living in a shantytown, who outgrew his fears and shyness thru the teachings of a simple tramp. And the reformation of the shantytown began with the present of a bright new red shovel.

Booklist 38:117 D 1 '41

"The deep feeling that underlies all Miss Seredy's best work, and is indeed the quality that provides its power, makes a story whose elements have often appeared in fiction something new to children and long to be remembered by those to whom this year it will come at Christmas. . . The world is in trouble, the whole book seems to say, but not in hopeless trouble; there is an old security on which we can lay hold, a dream of beauty that can bring order out of chaos." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 N 9 '41 320w

"A candidate for the 1941 Newbery award should certainly be Kate Seredy's utterly charming A Tree for Peter which we should like to put under every Christmas tree, not only for its very appealing story, but for its very beautiful pictures. Miss Seredy's is a rare art with a spiritual, ennobling quality that will find ready response in her young readers and will help to make them intolerant of the cheap and tawdry." E. V. Wyatt

+ Cath World 154:373 D '41 90w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse
Commonweal 35:112 N 21 '41 10w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk M 17:370 S '41 70w

"Many a reader will find this story sentimental as they find Hans Christian Andersen's The Little Match Girl sentimental, but to me it is sound at the core. The author-illustrator has known extreme poverty at first hand and she has realized childhood's relation to it in terms of her own which ring true to my personal relationship with children in similar circumstances." A. C. Moore

+ Horn Bk M 17:458 N '41 100w

"A modern miracle tale, told with sincerity and rare understanding. The many lovely sepia illustrations by the author-artist add greatly to the charm of the story. For the thoughtful child from nine to twelve." Claire Nolte

+ Library J 66:1096 D 15 '41 90w

"The pictures on nearly every page make us feel that we know not only the two Peters, but all the men, women and children of Shantytown. Because the artist-author has felt deeply and sincerely in making this book, both the text and the lovely drawings have a moving quality for the reader. For children 9 to 12, and a book for parents and children to enjoy together at Christmas time." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 N 30 '41 300w

SERRAGE, JANE. Seraphine went walking; il. by Clement Hurd. 33p $1.50 Dutton

41-9386

Picture-story book for very young readers. It is about a little brown donkey who was bored with the home pasture, and went looking for adventure. It was not so interesting after all, and Seraphine was glad to come home at night to her friends at the farm.

"Clement Hurd's amusing pictures are in the bright, clear colors small children should have, and always love when they get them." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 J1 6 '41 190w

Reviewed by J. E. Wooster
Library J 66:678 Ag '41 80w

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 29 '41 70w

SETON, ANYA (MRS HAMILTON CHASE). My Theodosia. 423p $2.50 Houghton

Alston, Mrs Theodosia (Burr)—Fiction.
Burr, Aaron—Fiction (W) 41-3688

Novel based on the romantic life of Aaron Burr's much-loved daughter, Theodosia. Beginning with the party given in New York on her seventeenth birthday, the book covers the twelve years which elapsed from that time to her mysterious death.

Booklist 37:388 Ap 15 '41

"Theodosia's story is an interesting one and readers will be grateful to Miss Seton for telling it. Theodosia emerges as a real if not completely sympathetic character. This, however, is not the fault of the author but is the result, rather, of the integrity of her portrayal." Rose Feld

+ — Books p10 Mr 23 '41 700w

Reviewed by E. B. Gulick

Boston Transcript p2 Mr 29 '41 360w

"This is the author's first novel and will appeal to the average reader. It is recommended for purchase." M. E. Clark

+ Library J 66:220 Mr 1 '41 40w

"Anya Seton's book is workmanlike and interesting. Her portraits of Burr and Theodosia are alike vivid and credible, and boor though he is, she contrives to arouse some pity for Alston. . . The study of Lewis is less successful, but his is necessarily a rather awkward part. The narrative is well sustained, and provides as background an entertaining account of the manners, the ways of living and traveling and entertaining followed during the early years of the nineteenth century." L. M. Field

+ N Y Times p7 Mr 16 '41 850w

New Yorker 17:86 Mr 15 '41 60w

Wis Lib Bul 37:93 My '41

SETON, GRAHAM, pseud. See Hutchison, G. S.

SETTON, KENNETH MEYER. Christian attitude towards the emperor in the fourth century; especially as shown in addresses to the emperor. 239p $2.75 Columbia univ. press 261.7 Church and state in Rome. Roman emperors. Fathers of the church 41-13567

"The present study seeks to depict the patristic attitude towards the person and office of the Roman Emperor in the fourth century. Particular attention is paid to letters, speeches, panegyrics, and the like, which were addressed directly to the Emperor. . . The language employed by the Fathers in these addresses is described and analyzed where it contributes to an understanding of the place of the Emperor in Christian thought of the century in which Christianity achieved official victory over the religions which had been its rivals in the Empire. Titles of address to the Emperor are listed in full and discussed; the usage of one Father is compared to or contrasted with that of another." (Introd) Index.

Reviewed by M. L. W. Laistner

Am Hist R 47:405 Ja '42 230w

"It is a rather interesting story for one who has the patience to pursue a reliable piece of scholarly research based upon minute examination of the original sources of information. While the findings are not especially novel, they are nonetheless enlightening for one who may not be already familiar with the evolution of the political, religious and social forces that went into the making of present-day Roman Catholic way of thinking." S. J. Case
+ Christian Century 58:1372 N 5 '41 420w

New Repub 105:230 Ag 18 '41 60w

"Dr. Setton's book is an extremely scholarly, extremely dull analysis of the attitude of the Church fathers towards the emperor. . . In the opinion of the reviewer this work would have been increased in interest and not lessened in value if the author had been less detailed and had summarized his conclusions in a short article instead of dragging them out through an entire volume." J. L. LaMonte
Social Studies 33:42 Ja '42 170w

SEWELL, HELEN. Peggy and the pup. unpub $1.25 Oxford (W)

Picture story book about Peggy, a little girl who loved to play dress up, and her pup Molly, who joined in the games. Santa Claus seemed to be more than they could manage, because they had no reindeer, until Molly settled that difficulty. For seven-year-olds.

Booklist 38:136 D 15 '41

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p7 D 28 '41 190w

"It is mostly pictures, deft and clear in line and color, but tells a cunning little story at the same time." E. V. Wyatt

+ Cath World 154:372 D '41 30w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse

Commonweal 35:111 N 21 '41 20w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk M 17:460 N '41 40w

"An original and humorous book, delightfully illustrated in color and black and white." Marian Herr

+ Library J 66:847 O 1 '41 60w

"An especially good sense of fun inspired these drawings of the dog. The book is fresh and satisfying, even in the simplicity of its brief easy text. Some of the pictures are printed in two colors. All of them have interest for children up to 7 years. A square book, not large, immediately appealing." I. S.

+ N Y Times p39 N 2 '41 120w

Reviewed by Amy Loveman

Sat R of Lit 24:6 N 8 '41 30w

SEYFERT, ELLA MAIE. Carlotta; il. by Lucille Wallower. 126p $2 Crowell

40-34277

Lively story of the adventures of an Italian-American family, composed of a father, mother, and two children. The father ran a gas station; the mother, helped by the children, sold eggs and vegetables from a roadside stand. They all dreamed of owning a red truck, so they could carry their vegetables to market, and all their efforts were in that direction.

Christian Century 57:1483 N 27 '40 10w

"Both boys and girls of eight to ten will enjoy this story of a loyal Italian-American family. The illustrations by Lucille Wallower are full of action and interest. Not a 'must have' title, but a good addition to libraries in Italian communities." J. E. Stromdahl

+ Library J 65:1092 D 15 '40 40w

"There is something gay and lively about this Italian family which will be enjoyed by boys and girls 8 to 10, and especially in Italian communities." Wis

+ Wis Lib Bul 37:58 Mr '41

SEYMOUR, BEATRICE KEAN (STAPLETON) (MRS. W. K. SEYMOUR). Fool of time. 346p $2.50 Macmillan [9s Heinemann]

41-9968

In 1937, at the age of thirty-four, Carin Surrey returns to England after eight years in America. She has left an eager suitor behind her and her reasons for making the trip are obscure—to the family of her sister whom she is visiting and even to herself. Eventually, however, Carin and her wise and loving sister realize why Carin has returned and Carin, at least, is happy to know that she can go back to America with a whole heart.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p6 Je 15 '41 440w

Christian Century 58:865 Jl 2 '41 40w

"A well-written, pleasant story but not sufficiently outstanding to overcome the handicap of being definitely dated. No popular demand may be anticipated." G. W. Hill

Library J 66:520 Je 1 '41 70w

"The story is a good one, handled with subtlety and irony. Carin is perhaps too undaunted, Simon too heavily exactitudinarian for conscience' sake, but this book with its enforced happy ending after its penetrating scrutiny of family and personal relations lives well up to Carin's definition of what a novel ought to be." Harold Brighouse

+ Manchester Guardian p6 D 13 '40 260w

"This would make a pleasantly macabre satire in the hands of Mr. Wyndham Lewis or some other Spilsbury of the Western Morgue. Mrs. Seymour prefers to swallow it whole.

SEYMOUR, B. K.—Continued

Her characters are barely distinguishable from the lay-figures of the advertisement columns, the monstrous cinema faces, the hints on allure, the million languishing Lydias of Rohmance, the smart equipment and the right clothes, the intimations of a lovelorn ecstasy and the long sad underworld of depression." Desmond Hawkins

— New Statesman & Nation 21:114 F 1 '41 500w

"Mrs. Seymour's apparent simplicity of style and manner hides a purposeful subtlety that enables her to unfold a story of intricate characterization in a bizarre setting without the strain and with quiet inevitableness." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p7 Je 8 '41 800w

New Yorker 17:77 Je 7 '41 30w

"Here, perhaps, is one of the last of those English novels where life moves in a charmed and appointed groove. It is as though Mrs. Seymour had wanted to write about this life, just once more, a melody in counterpoint against the threatening—and always louder—drum-beats of war. Also she seems to wish to reassert that 'the concern of the novelist is with human beings.' Her story, thoughtfully calculated, worked out with infinite care, is bent to this end." Currie Cabot

+ Sat R of Lit 24:10 Je 14 '41 330w

"The theme is well carried out, even though the manner is a little diffuse; but in this book again it is the children who are really interesting. . . . They are permanent—the frustrated Dallas, the groping Dora, and the eager small boy. But it is the way the people live, the things they think important, which gives us the sense of a way of living which has disappeared for ever. None of them, indeed, have thought important enough the things that really do matter, and though they are charming, they are not very vivid. We recognise them as acquaintances, but acquaintances they remain; they are not realities added to our experience of life." Bonamy Dobrée

Spec 165:684 D 20 '40 240w

"It is a competent enough piece of work, with lively and entertaining touches of character, though chattier and more unselective than other novels by Miss Beatrice Kean Seymour."

Times [London] Lit Sup p615 D 7 '40 330w

SEYMOUR, MRS FLORA WARREN (SMITH).
Indian agents of the old frontier. 402p il $3.50 Appleton-Century

970.5 Indians of North America—Government relations. West—History 41-12500

The author feels that in moving pictures and popular novels, the tendency has been to slander the character and work of the Indian agent during the period since the Civil war. Her book, in a series of chapters partly historical, partly analytical, attempts to present these government employees in their true light. Index.

"Among those who know the American Indian, any book on that subject by Flora Warren Seymour commands immediate attention. . . . She is qualified by her legal training and experience to understand the relation of the Indian to the officials. . . 'Indian Agents of the Old Frontier' ranks among the best books on the relation of the Indian and the government." Stanley Vestal

+ Books p13 Ag 31 '41 280w

"Mrs. Seymour is a thorough expert both in Indian history and in the problems which are the present legacy of earlier mismanagement. Her book discusses many episodes, some fairly familiar, like the troubles with the Sioux and the Apaches, others less generally known. It is a valuable addition to the literature of the old west."

+ Christian Century 58:886 Jl 9 '41 120w
Christian Science Monitor p22 S 6 '41 500w

Sat R of Lit 24:17 Jl 19 '41 200w

"'Indian Agents of the Old Frontier' is an interesting and important piece of work, based upon careful research, and, moreover, thoroughly readable from beginning to end. It is fully illustrated, for the most part with original photographs by George Steele Seymour." E. G. Eastman

+ Springf'd Republican p10 Ag 21 '41 750w

Wis Lib Bul 37:154 O '41

SEYMOUR, GEORGE DUDLEY. Documentary life of Nathan Hale. 627p il $5 priv ptd D. L. Jacobus, box 3032, Westville station, New Haven, Conn.

B or 92 Hale, Nathan 41-17206

"Mr. Seymour, who has devoted his life to the collection of Hale material, has written a book which does not purport to be a biography, but a collection of documents bearing directly or indirectly on the career of his hero, together with a potpourri of verses, essays and pictures designed to illustrate his life." Books

Reviewed by H. S. Commager
Books p18 S 14 '41 700w

"My pleasure in reading a history or biography is usually in direct proportion to the amount of original documentary material that the volume contains. It is, therefore, not surprising that I have found this 'Documentary Life of Nathan Hale' not only exceptionally valuable from a scholarly standpoint but very interesting." Bernhard Knollenberg

+ Sat R of Lit 24:12 O 25 '41 800w

Reviewed by W. M. Daniels
Springf'd Republican p14 N 14 '41 1300w

SFORZA, CARLO, conte. Fifty years of war and diplomacy in the Balkans; Pashich and the union of the Yugoslavs; tr. by J. G. Clemenceau Le Clercq. 195p $2.75 Columbia univ. press

B or 92 Pašič, Nicholas. Yugoslavia—History. Serbia—History. Eastern question (Balkan) 40-29462

A biography and a study of the career of a Serbian statesman who devoted his life to the emancipation and unification of the peoples who made up Yugoslavia at the close of the World war. Chronological table. Index.

"The thesis is not at all new, but it is well presented, although one wishes, from the academic point of view, that it had been buttressed with more documentary material and with at least some bibliography. Since the whole approach stresses not only the personality of Pashich but also that of the author, the subjective approach can hardly be evaluated without utilizing a subjective evaluation. In this respect, it seems to the reviewer, Sforza has given us a very readable, personal and useful series of historical canvases of the history of the Balkans." J. S. Roucek

+ Am Hist R 46:696 Ap '41 180w

"It is but fair to say that Count Sforza is a well-known anti-Fascist statesman and the only Italian nobleman, so far as can be ascertained, who appreciates the virtues as well as the vices of the peoples dwelling in Southeastern Europe. Like Mazzini, his illustrious countryman, Sforza believes in the feasibility of a union of Balkan States. He has made a valuable contribution to a realistic understanding of Balkan diplomacy." T. I. Geshkoff

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:162 F '41 950w

"Obviously writing without any mass of documentary materials at his disposal, Count Sforza has not attempted to produce a 'definitive' account of the long life and involved career of Nicholas Pashich; that difficult task may have to wait many years for its fulfillment. In the meantime, Sforza has re-created the savor of Pashich's world and the workings of his mind. He has done this with a subtle and accurate sense of the dramatic background of the Yugo-slav struggle for national self-realization, yet without overlooking the mundane and unheroic ambitions which were inevitably intertwined with the movement." P. E. Mosely

+ Ann Am Acad 215:204 My '41 320w

Foreign Affairs 19:685 Ap '41 50w

Living Age 360:197 Ap '41 230w

"Even more interesting than his vivid historical picture of post-war Yugoslavia is the author's explanation of the events that preceded the war... Count Sforza's lively style, animated by Latin esprit, makes his book delightful reading even for those who know as little of 'those faraway countries' as the late Neville Chamberlain did." Rustem Vambery

+ Nation 151:662 D 28 '40 600w

"Count Sforza draws on a vast treasure of personal experiences and intimate knowledge of Balkan ways. To the historian this book will clear up many doubtful points, and the layman can read it almost as the background of contemporary events. Count Sforza writes with urbanity and feeling combined with a strong critical sense. The translation of J. G. Clemenceau Le Clercq is more than adequate. But the reader must be on his guard about some dates and names which are rather badly scrambled, and the name of Austrian Foreign Minister Count Aehrenthal, one of the principal characters, is consistently misspelled." Emil Lengyel

+ N Y Times p20 Mr 16 '41 1000w

Reviewed by S. B. Fay

Pol Sci Q 56:472 S '41 450w

Pratt p5 D '41

Times [London] Lit Sup p2 Ja 3 '42 850w

SFORZA, CARLO, conte. The totalitarian war and after. 120p $1.25 Univ. of Chicago press 940.52 Europe—Politics. World war, 1939-41-20104

In this series of lectures first delivered in a midwestern American college, Count Sforza, Italian statesman now in exile, sets forth his recollections of men and policies in Europe between two great wars. Partial contents: How an Italian looks at Europe; Did democracy fail in France? Why democracy failed in Germany; Illusions and delusions of the British and French "upper classes"; Vichy men before Vichy; The Russian enigma; The Wilson experiment and the task of tomorrow. Index of names.

Booklist 38:129 D 15 '41

Christian Century 58:1213 O 1 '41 50w

"Count Sforza's English is pleasantly his own. He writes in a bright, epigrammatic style, full of flashes of irony and eminently quotable." H. J. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p20 N 29 '41 550w

"Count Sforza is not only a great Italian; he is one of the wisest statesmen Europe has given the world."

+ Commonweal 34:619 O 17 '41 80w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:374 Ja '42 30w

"Any attempt to consider this war and its causes in 117 pages is bound to be scrappy and superficial. The strongly antifascist viewpoint lends an interest; otherwise the subject matter is very similar to Romain's Seven Mysteries of Europe, less egotistical and more analytic, but still not important." L. M. Kinloch

Library J 66:793 S 15 '41 80w

"This is a small but important book. Count Sforza was at one time Italy's Foreign Minister. He is an implacable foe of fascism and nazism and all that savors thereof, and he is wise in the ways of underground European politics. At the same time he is a philosopher with a very human outlook. Within this small volume he has managed to pack an astonishing amount of revealing data, shrewd observation and epigrammatic wisdom. In addition, the book's superior binding, typography and printing should commend itself to the bibliophile." Lawrence Fernsworth

+ N Y Times p3 O 26 '41 1250w

Reviewed by E. C. Lindeman

Survey G 31:37 Ja '42 70w

SHACKELFORD, SHELBY (MRS RICHARD THRELKELD COX). Electric eel calling [with ill. by the author]. 255p $3 Scribner 918.1 Brazil—Description and travel. Electric eel 41-51726

The author, an artist, accompanied her husband, a physicist, and another research worker, on an expedition to Brazil to study the habits and behavior of the electric eel. Her book is in part a non-technical record of the expedition's work, in part an account of her own adventures and her observations on the life and customs of the people. The book contains many illustrations made by the author.

Booklist 37:487 Je 15 '41

"Excellent good taste has been shown in not writing down to an imaginary, too-popular audience. We thus have a triad of diction—a running narrative of the trip, impressions of tropical color and patterns through an artist's eye, and thirdly, a clear, serious presentation of research upon the electric organs and manifestations of this remarkable eel." William Beebe

+ Books p4 My 4 '41 600w

"Delightful book. The text is richly decorated with somewhat exotic illustrations, which seem to echo the narrative, like bursts of native music."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 19 '41 130w

"Even among great numbers of books about South America originality may be anticipated in one which focuses on the electric eel. And to this promised originality 'Electric Eel Calling' also adds variety and considerable charm... Much of the beguiling quality of Miss Shackelford's book is in her freshness of response, whether to scene, to personality, to ancient tale or to the movement of present life."

+ N Y Times p5 Ap 27 '41 600w

"It is unusual to find a book as charming and observant of man and nature resulting from a scientific expedition. But it is for the observations of an intelligent and sympathetic woman, about the men and the multitudinous creatures on the land, in the waters and the air of the steaming tropics, that this book should be read. The tropics wove a spell about [Miss Shackelford] which she is able to communicate to the reader. Pleasantly illustrated by the author."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:21 My 17 '41 180w

"A lively book, authentic in regard to its science, different because written by a person sensitive not only to color and form but also to people and environment. While the research on the electric eel forms the thread of the narrative and is interesting in itself, [the author's] sympathetic reaction to Brazilian life and her vivid drawings of its buildings, people, animals, and flowers, many with a subtle symbolism, make an unusually attractive and compelling story."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 12:3 My '41 390w
Springf'd Republican p12 Ap 18 '41 600w

Wis Lib Bul 37:138 Jl '41

SHAKESPEARE, WILLIAM. The ages of man; the standard Shakespeare anthology; with index and notes; arr. by George Rylands. [358p] $2.50 Doubleday [7s 6d Heinemann] 822.33 41-6269

Extracts from Shakespeare's works, arranged according to the three ages of man: youth, manhood, and age. Has been previously published in England and Canada, but this is the first American edition. Index and notes.

Booklist 37:488 Je 15 '41

SHAKESPEARE, WILLIAM—Continued

"This anthology becomes the mirror of manners and morals of Shakespeare's time—his criticism of life. It is a splendid book, intended primarily for the everyday reader, but the student will recognize its immense value, too, as a reminder of certain words or phrases dimly remembered." E. L. Tinker
+ N Y Times p15 Je 1 '41 850w

"Built up from familiar and unfamiliar passages by an editor with modern critical insight and faultless taste. An invaluable book, which should freshen everyone's appreciation of Shakespeare's genius."
+ New Yorker 17:88 Ap 26 '41 30w
Pratt p17 autumn '41

SHANE, SUSANNAH. Lady in lilac. 250p $2
Dodd 41-6232
Mystery story.

"Here, we dare say, is as pulpy an item as has been offered to the carriage trade in quite some time." Will Cuppy
— Books p20 Ap 20 '41 90w

"As the story proceeds the situation grows more and more involved until one begins to suspect that virtually all the characters have guilty knowledge of the crimes that have been committed. The denouement is satisfactory enough to the two principal actors in the drama, though the reader may find it rather difficult to swallow." Isaac Anderson
— + N Y Times p23 Ap 20 '41 160w

New Yorker 17:91 Ap 19 '41 50w

"Taking for granted certain situations that strain credibility, story's zest, suspense, and melodramatic moments put it across. Palpitating."

Sat R of Lit 23:20 Ap 26 '41 40w
Springf'd Republican p7e My 25 '41 180w

SHANN, MRS RENEE. War wife. (Carlton house publication) 305p $2 Random house 41-22670

A young RAF pilot and his pretty young bride of a few hours were staying at a resort hotel when a bomb falling separated them. Robin Darrell lost all memory of the two weeks preceding that explosion, and when he and Valerie again met there was no recognition in his eyes. So Valerie must try once more to win his love and this time she has to fight for it with another girl.

"If you accept Mrs. Shann's tall premise the rest is easy; but she has written other books we like better." Lisle Bell
Books p30 N 23 '41 80w

"It is an interesting story for those who like to see trickery and selfishness punished and young lovers thwarted and reunited." Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p34 N 2 '41 230w

SHARP, MARGERY. Three companion pieces; il. by Anna Zinkeisen. 3v in 1 269p $2.50 Little

(W) 41-23676

"Three longish short stories written in an elegant, eighteenth-century style. One is about a French ballet dancer and a noblehearted young English baronet who insists on marrying her, one tells of a rather touching romance at sea, one describes an imposing Albanian murderess." New Yorker

"The charm of the book is in the skillful creation of 'aesthetic distance,' the delicate, sustained irony of the writing, and the quiet wit. The illustrations of Anna Zinkeisen match the text perfectly in their skill and spirit." Elizabeth Drew

+ Atlantic Ja '42 150w

Booklist 38:159 Ja 1 '42

"It is in the third tale that the author gets most firmly into her naughty stride... This is a downright wicked story, and most enjoyable, not least because of its little jabs and pokes at English morals and manners. And merely to run one's eyes along Miss Sharp's lines provides a special pleasure akin to that afforded by an examination of the finest embroidery, or dressed Mexican fleas, or anything very fine and small and clean-cut." Iris Barry

+ Books p2 N 23 '41 400w

"There is a fine porcelain quality about these three stories which makes them fit neatly into a single volume of delicate but telling wit... All three stories are delightful, but the Tigress is the flashing gem of the group. The illustrations are prettily and humorously in tune with the text." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p7 N 23 '41 550w

"Light and amusing, though perhaps too mannered."

+ — New Yorker 17:110 N 22 '41 50w

SHATTUCK, LEROY ALTUS. Municipal indebtedness; a study of the debt-to-property ratio. 145p pa $1.25 Johns Hopkins

352.1 Debts, Public. Municipal finance 41-292

"The most common method of limiting municipal indebtedness is to fix the legal maximum debt at a certain percentage of the assessed or taxable value of property. After examining the development of this debt limitation device, and giving more specific attention to its application in the state of New Jersey, the author concludes that the debt-to-property ratio is not entirely successful. Its failure has been due primarily to fluctuating valuations, the exclusion of 'overlying' debt, and many exemptions from the primary limit. Failure to limit special assessment debt was especially disastrous. The solution proposed is 'some sort of administrative control' by the state, combined with some 'mechanical regulator' which might be a modified form of the debt-to-property ratio." Am Pol Sci R

Reviewed by C. P. Huse

Am Econ R 31:184 Mr '41 250w

"The book seems fresh and is well written. Several new ideas are contributed. The author understood his problem. Footnotes reveal extensive legal research. Certainly the monograph is a valuable contribution in a field where too little literature exists." C. H. Chatters

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:150 F '41 420w

Reviewed by H. R. Enslow

Ann Am Acad 216:202 JI '41 270w

"The good descriptive and illustrative material in this study unfortunately is not matched by inferences of a high order. An exposition in detail of the faults of present debt limits might well have been followed by specific conclusions as to feasible substitutes and modifications. The author contents himself with a rather hasty survey of various proposals, condensed into thirteen pages and significantly entitled 'Trends in Debt Control.' Such proposals as different limits for municipalities of varying sizes, a percentage limit on exempted debt, the use of legal investment laws as debt regulators, over-all limits, and state administrative regulation might have been subjected to more critical analysis. If a half, or a third at least, of its pages had been so devoted, this monograph would have been of greater scientific importance. Such an effort, even though the results might not have been conclusive in all cases, would have been more useful in advancing knowledge about proper debt limits than the forty pages devoted to an historical treatment. This duplicates work already satisfactorily done in earlier doctoral dissertations." A. M. Hillhouse

+ — J Pol Econ 49:952 D '41 500w

SHATTUCK, RICHARD. The snark was a boojum. 248p $2 Morrow

41-6048

Mystery story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p17 Ap 13 '41 250w

"Just as goofy and just as much fun as 'The Wedding Guest Sat on a Stone' was," Marian Wiggin

+ Boston Transcript p8 Ap 12 '41 50w

"The book is a sure cure for the blues." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p20 Ap 13 '41 150w

"Improperly snickersome throughout. Murder is quite incidental, but hilarious improprieties should amuse readers with taste of Boccacian revelry."

Sat R of Lit 23:20 Ap 12 '41 40w

SHAW, CHARLES GREEN. Guess book; a young Guess what I am? quiz book, with simple clues in words and pictures; painted by [the author]. [48p] $1 Scott, W. R.

41-12541

Riddle book for three-to-five-year-old children. The riddles are given in the form of colored pictures.

Reviewed by E. V. Wyatt

Cath World 154:372 D '41 50w

"It would be useful in kindergartens and primary grades. Publishers claim the Scott children's books are tested for children's reactions. There are no margins for illustrations and outside paper hinge will wear quickly. Price seems high for such a binding. Recommended for limited purchase." Emily Hutson

+ — Library J 66:909 O 15 '41 60w

SHAW, GEORGE BERNARD. Six plays; with prefaces. 745p $3.75 Dodd

(W)

Contents: The Doctor's Dilemma; Pygmalion; Major Barbara; Heartbreak House; Captain Brassbound's Conversion; Man of Destiny.

Booklist 38:57 O 15 '41

Books p21 S 14 '41 70w

SHAW, HARRY LEE, and BEMENT, DOUGLAS, eds. Reading the short story. 394p $1.25 Harper

808.3 Short story. Short stories—Collections 41-51727

"[This book] has two purposes: first, to acquaint [the student] with the elementary principles on which every good story is based; and, second, to provide a representative group of contemporary stories for critical analysis." (To the student) Among the contributors are Sherwood Anderson, Wilbur Daniel Steele, Mary Ellen Chase, Thomas Boyd, Robert E. Sherwood, Katherine Mansfield, John Galsworthy, and Stephen Vincent Benét.

Booklist 37:405 My 1 '41

Wis Lib Bul 37:56 Mr '41

SHAY, FRANK. The best men are cooks. 281p $2.50 Coward-McCann

641.5 Cookery (W) 41-15321

A cookbook which brings together "those distinctive dishes that may be served as tributes to honest and robust appetites"—no fruit salads, dainty sandwiches, fussy desserts, but rather the kind of thing men take pride in turning out Thursday night or Sunday morning. Index.

Booklist 38:5 S '41

"The author is obviously endowed with a sound instinct for cooking and possesses a fine sense of combining flavors, but there are certain fundamental principles of the kitchen, such as, for instance, the slow, slow cooking of flour and butter necessary to bring a sauce or stew to perfection, which he would do well to learn from a cook (maybe even a woman cook) with a finer technique than his own." Sheila Hibben

Books p41 N 2 '41 230w

"Written by a gourmet cheerfully indifferent to problems of nutrition and mildly patronizing in his comments about the cookery of 'the little woman,' this book is amusing in style—and incidentally presents excellent recipes for the more distinctive dishes of the United States."

J Home Econ 33:669 N '41 110w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 31 '41 500w

Wis Lib Bul 37:174 N '41

SHEA, MRS NANCY B. The army wife. 298p $2.50 Harper

355.12 U.S.—Army—Military life. Home economics 41-15085

A book on army etiquette and home management for the young woman marrying into the Service. Partial contents: Engagements: the "Kaydet girl" at West Point; The military wedding; Business of the army household; Army children; Service in Washington; Illness and army hospitalization; Death and military funerals; Foreign service; Etiquette for civilians visiting on the army post; Camp followers of the U.S. army. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 38:2 S '41

Books p24 O 5 '41 240w

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 O '41

Wis Lib Bul 37:174 N '41

SHEAHAN, HENRY BESTON (HENRY BESTON, pseud). The tree that ran away; il. by Fritz Eichenberg. 70p $1 Macmillan

(W) 41-5505

A pine tree, inspired by tales of the beauties of the other side of the hill, set out to do a little reconnoitering. The tree had no end of lively adventures before deciding that its own hilltop was the best place after all, and came home, bearing gifts.

Booklist 37:496 Je 15 '41

"The tale is demure and graceful; the drawings never fail in humorous understanding of the text." M. L. Becker

+ Books p10 My 11 '41 250w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '41

"It is humorous, and many young readers will enjoy it very much, though children who do not understand and enjoy fantasy will not care for it. Amusing pictures and in general an attractive little book for the third or fourth grade reader. Also a very usable item for a humorous addition to the story hour program." A. L. Shea

+ Library J 66:402 My 1 '41 140w

"A spontaneous fantasy with the logic of true nonsense and a contagious gayety. The author whose 'Five Bears and Miranda' delights the 7 to 10 year olds, has provided another bit of genuine, kindly fun that children will take to their hearts and that grown-ups will enjoy with them. Fritz Eichenberg's amazing pictures add to the hilarity of the tale. Excellent for the story hour." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 My 18 '41 360w

SHEARING, JOSEPH, pseud. Crime of Laura Sarelle [Eng title: Laura Sarelle]. 309p $2 Smith & Durrell [8s 6d Hutchinson]

41-8081

Mystery story of England in 1840, in which a Warwickshire country house is the scene of the reenactment of a crime committed sixty years before the opening of this story.

"Those who want a good workout of the more perilous emotions will do well to read Mr. Shearing's impressive tale of love, death and doom, complete with what may be a family curse and hints of a ghost in the offing. Better give your borderland states plenty of elbow room in order to be ready for the author's truly devilish conclusion. Join the Shearing cult and meet one of the most malevolent females in song or story." Will Cuppy

SHEARING, J., pseud.—Continued
+ Books p13 My 4 '41 200w

"The story itself is admirably handled; the opening sentences strike its keynote, but the sense of brooding horror is developed and built up, the mystery revealed little by little until at last past and present meet and mingle in a gruesome and dramatic climax. . . Smoothly and logically developed, full-bodied and blood-curdling; this tale of 'The Crime of Laura Sarelle' is a horror-thriller of the most sinister and horror-thrilling kind." L. M. Field
+ N Y Times p14 My 18 '41 650w

"There are many adjectives to describe this book, adjectives that apply to all of Mr. Shearing's books: evil, sinister, ghostly, strange, baleful, terrible, relentless, sinister, and malevolent. But these words seem pallid. . . Mr. Shearing is a painstaking researcher, a superb writer, a careful technician, and a master of horror. There is no one else quite like him." Sally Benson
+ New Yorker 17:88 My 10 '41 800w

"I would take Sally Benson's word for it that the sinister novels of Joseph Shearing are generally 'tops.' Anyone who writes as well as does Mrs. Benson should know. I think, however, that 'The Crime of Laura Sarelle' must be one of Mr. Shearing's less remarkable efforts. . . It is obvious that Mr. Shearing is an author with a keen sense of the dramatic, not to say the melodramatic, and one of those crime writers you should keep within reach on your reserve shelf. Some day this reviewer hopes to read his best books." W. R. Benét
Sat R of Lit 24:20 Je 14 '41 600w

"It is not an escape into a fantastic world, it does not illuminate the human mind or explain a series of actions to make us understand ourselves better, nor does it reveal society to itself. Any or all of these things a novel may do, but this book does none of them. Yet Mr. Shearing has the knack of telling a story; he gives his people just enough life to make them tolerable marionettes, and he provides a certain amount of fleeting excitement. But the book disappears as soon as one has read it, leaving behind no sense of exhilaration, thought, or brooding." Bonamy Dobree
+ Spec 166:21 Ja 3 '41 150w

"The plot is boldly conceived, but the central character does not succeed in holding the story together. As perhaps is fitting for a tale that labels itself 'of the borderland of the mind,' the atmosphere of the book is more convincing than are the characters that move through its pages."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p653 D 28 '40 270w

SHEARING, JOSEPH, pseud. The golden violet.
321p $2 Smith & Durrell [7s 6d; 3s 6d Heinemann]

41-18901

"Angelica Cowley, the heroine, aged twenty-seven, circa 1860, wrote romances for the ladies' journals of the day. . . She was an orphan, rather plain [when] she married one Thomas Thicknesse, a horrid middle-aged widower with ginger whiskers and designs on her money. She knew nothing whatever about love, but when she went with her husband to his estates in Jamaica and met a handsome fellow in a church, she learned plenty." Books

Booklist 38:131 D 15 '41

"This department finds the book well worth perusing, though plush, and herewith recommends it to all who would tread one of the more fragrant and decidedly different byways of criminous letters. Every one may not go crazy about it, yet all must realize that it's a most impressive thing of its kind and one of the novelties of the season." Will Cuppy

+ Books p17 S 21 '41 440w

Reviewed by Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p30 S 28 '41 480w

"As always, Mr. Shearing manages to weave a thread of terror and bloodshed through his precise dialogue and the niceties of Victorian civilization. Should chill your blood, all right."

+ New Yorker 17:80 S 27 '41 80w

"Shearing is, to this reviewer's mind, the best serious writer of high romance now publishing, and this book is quite as good as, if not a shade better than, 'The Crime of Laura Sarelle,' 'Aunt Beardie,' 'The Spider in the Cup,' and 'Blanche Fury.'" Phil Stong
+ Sat R of Lit 24:7 S 20 '41 600w

SHEEAN, VINCENT. Bird of the wilderness.
322p $2.50 Random house

(W) 41-16491

Bill Owen, whose German, Welsh, and American heritage, brings him into repeated conflict with his German uncle, is the hero. This study of Bill's character development thru his seventeenth year takes place in a small Illinois town, at the time of the first European war. A high school English teacher who attempts to guide Bill's wandering ideas on literature, brings trouble instead, and the book closes with the boy on his way to enlist in the army.

Booklist 38:81 N 1 '41

"'Bird of the Wilderness' is a deceptively simple story of places and persons one might have known and, for the most part, events one has or might have experienced. And, because of the insight and wholeness with which the story of the boy's widening and deepening experience has been grasped, it has beauty and excitement." Mary Ross

+ Books p3 Ag 24 '41 1150w

"Despite several factual improbabilities, its vivid reporting and human interest will deservedly command for Bird of the Wilderness a wide reading."

+ Christian Century 58:1113 S 10 '41 240w

"One of the strongest indications of his growing artistry is the skill with which he unfolds the tragic story of Bill Owen solely from the simple and intense outlook of that 17-year-old victim of fate. . . The story is so real that many a reader will be held by it far into the night. It would be unkind to outline the narrative here. There are, however, two adverse criticisms to be made. Fate is too cruel to Bill Owen, whose most courageous deeds lead to persecution, whose willingness to jump into the breach even for a casual friend has the direst consequences for him. . . The other fault, if such it is, is the way the book ends, virtually in mid-air. The reader will finish the last page burning with curiosity as to what eventually happens to Bill Owen. How long will it take Mr. Sheean and his publishers to bring forth the sequel to this impressive book?" Edward Skillin, Jr.

+ Commonweal 34:427 Ag 22 '41 350w

Reviewed by L. M. Kinloch

Library J 66:669 Ag '41 80w

"'Bird of the Wilderness' is an advance over Mr. Sheean's bloodless former novels, for here both theme and material are native to the author. But that is about as much as can be said for it. Mr. Sheean has still to write a life-breathing novel worthy of himself." Charles Neider

+ New Repub 105:347 S 15 '41 480w

"'Bird of the Wilderness' will be remembered . . . essentially for its sensitive portrait of a sensitive boy, for the secondary portraits of his mother, his father, his school-teacher, and for the recapture of the feeling of a small town a quarter of a century ago."

+ N Y Times p4 Ag 24 '41 1100w

"'Bird of the Wilderness' [isn't] unredem-ably bad; it's just that there's no special reason for writing or reading it... I can't figure out why the magnificently talented Mr. Sheean wrote this book, unless it was to purge himself of some bothering memory of his youth. Such purges, however, should be confined to a personal diary. They are not the stuff of which adult novels are made." Clifton Fadiman

— New Yorker 17:65 Ag 23 '41 250w

"Definitely too much scenery, inaccurately described, amusing people, no story to speak of, a great deal of self-consciousness in writing, and a few poetic bits that are worth their weight in radium." Paul Starrett

— + Sat R of Lit 24:11 Ag 23 '41 500w

"The spirit of youth is eternal, and one feels that there is, in each small town high school the world over, at least one boy like Bill: ambitious, loyal, honest even with himself, trying to solve his own and the world's problems. His decisions may not be the same as Bill's but he will make his way, somehow, guided by heart and mind. I rather hope 'Bird of the Wilderness' will not be considered too alien a description of the adolescent spirit." El. C.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 24 '41 900w

SHEED, FRANCIS JOSEPH. Sidelights on the Catholic revival. 192p $1.25 Sheed

804 Roman Catholic literature. Books—Reviews 40-35667

Over seventy short essays which appeared originally in the Sheed & Ward house organ at various times during the last twelve years. Appended is a collection of very brief biographical notes. Index.

Cath World 153:122 Ap '41 60w

"There are few blurbs which would bear reprinting, but all of these are well worth preservation in permanent form. Mr. Sheed, though his style is very much his own, reminds one of Chesterton in his humor, insight and freshness of approach to ancient problems."

+ Commonweal 33:212 D 13 '40 70w

Times [London] Lit Sup p423 Ag 30 '41 50w

SHEEN, FULTON JOHN. A declaration of dependence. 140p $1.75 Bruce pub.

248 War and religion. World war, 1939—Religious aspects. World war, 1939—Roman Catholic church 41-21350

"The war and the problems that produced it and arise from it are the theme of the eleven essays in Monsignor Sheen's latest book. The materialism and irrationality that paganize much that passes for idealism among us are particularly the objects of the author's critical attention, communism, nazism, progressivism." Commonweal

"As is to be expected in a book of essays, the quality is uneven. 'The Revolutionary Tempo,' which introduces the essays is elliptical and as confusing as the penultimate essay, 'A Declaration of Dependence,' is enlightening and excellent." J. P. Monaghan

+ — Commonweal 35:77 N 7 '41 300w

Springf'd Republican p10 N 6 '41 600w

SHELLY, PERCY VAN DYKE. Living Chaucer. 331p $3 Univ. of Pa. press [14s Oxford] 821 Chaucer, Geoffrey 40-34151

An analysis and re-evaluation of the work of Chaucer. "In the making of this book on Chaucer I have confined myself to a consideration of his poetry and have said little or nothing about the man or his life or his times. So much has been written in the past twenty-five or fifty years on the facts of his life and on the chronology, texts, and sources of his works that there is perhaps some danger of our losing sight of his significance as a poet, and I have therefore felt that a book which should stress his poetry and dwell upon Chaucer as an artist rather than as a subject for scholarly research or as an historian and illustrator of his age might not be unwelcome. I have written of certain aspects of his poetry that have interested me and I have had in mind the general reader and lover of poetry more than the specialist." (Pref) Index.

"Bringing poetry alive that has faded out of men's experience and interest is a task demanding not only a scholar but a zealot and a hobbyist as well; and nobody fitter for such an undertaking could be found than [the] author of 'The Living Chaucer.'" + Christian Science Monitor p11 S 6 '41 300w

"Written for general reader and lover of poetry, this book will inspire its readers with the author's sturdy delight, the pleasures he finds in Chaucer's living art... For brilliant interest the chapter on 'Trollus and Criseyde' is recommended."

+ Commonweal 33:131 N 22 '40 90w

"Although erudite, Professor Shelly is not one of those specialists who kill by carefulness. In a style urbane and adequate at its worst and, at its best, easy and felicitous, he discusses Chaucer's superb characterizations, his humor, his unflinching gusto ('The heartiest of English poets'), his concreteness, his love of nature, his tender humanity, his joy, his level-headed simplicity and bird-chorusing sweetness." Virginia Moore

+ Poetry 59:226 Ja '42 1000w

SHELTON, ALFRED COOPER. Newfoundland, our north door neighbor; il. with phot. by the author. 116p $3.50 Dutton

917.18 Newfoundland (W) 41-10347

Newfoundland, the oldest British colony to the north of the United States, is an island of about 43,000 square miles, with a 4,000 mile coast line. This combination of full-page photographs and simple text shows the ruggedness of the country, its main industry—fishing—in all its phases, and its forests, but devotes little space to the inhabitants.

Booklist 37:545 Jl 15 '41

Books p2 Jl 13 '41 230w

"[The book] is timely, and does much to dispel the popular impression that Newfoundland is a barren subarctic land of snow and ice."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Je 22 '41 440w

SHEPARD, ESTHER (MRS C. E. SHEP-HARD). Paul Bunyan; il. by Rockwell Kent. new ed 233p $2.50 Harcourt

(W) 41-51876

"This is a reprinting of a title first published in Seattle in 1924. The improvement has been in format; the present publishers have given the book a larger page, clear well-leaded type, good margins, and dull paper. Twenty-two full-page illustrations and many smaller drawings by Rockwell Kent make this a distinguished book... The text is intended for the more mature reader and is told in the vernacular of the lumberjacks by one who claimed to have worked with the hero. Many more incidents are included than in Ida V. Turney's Paul Bunyan, the Work Giant; this book may well supplement Paul Bunyan and His Great Blue Ox, by Wadsworth. Suitable for junior and senior high school." Library J

Booklist 38:18 S '41

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p8 N 16 '41 30w

"Paul Bunyan has all the marks of a genuine piece of folklore. He had no discoverable creator. He is a focus for tall tales about the lumberjacks of the north woods. As literary material he belongs to anybody who can use him. The author shows that she has the ability to do that; and one would of course know in advance that Rockwell Kent is the predestined illustrator of these gargantuan episodes."

SHEPARD, ESTHER—Continued

+ Christian Century 58:1178 S 24 '41 60w

"The splendid pictures by Rockwell Kent give the book special distinction." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:373 S '41 80w

Reviewed by E. A. Groves

Library J 66:736 S 1 '41 140w

"The writing is simple and easygoing, and doesn't intrude on the stories. Rockwell Kent does a good job, but nothing smaller than a mural can catch the strength and size of Bunyan."

New Repub 105:382 S 22 '41 50w

New Yorker 17:148 D 6 '41 30w

Reviewed by Phil Stong

Sat R of Lit 24:10 N 8 '41 20w

Spring'd Republican p7e S 28 '41 150w

SHERBON, MRS FLORENCE (BROWN).

Child; his origin, development, and care. 2d ed 755p il $3.50 McGraw

612.6 Children—Care and hygiene. Child study. Growth. Pregnancy 41-16107

"A thoroughgoing revision done in the light of the author's own teaching experience and the seven intervening years of scientific research by others. The first chapters of the new book make for college students a more interesting approach to the subject than did the earlier text. The pages of definitions ending each chapter will also prove helpful." (J Home Econ) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1934. Chapter bibliographies; indexes.

Booklist 38:57 O 15 '41

J Home Econ 33:745 D '41 50w

SHERIDAN, MRS LISA. Princess Elizabeth and Princess Margaret Rose at home; phot. by Studio Lisa; pub. by authority of Her Majesty, the Queen [Eng title: Our princesses at home]. [39p] $1 Dutton [2s 6d Murray, J]

B or 92 Elizabeth, princess of Great Britain. Margaret Rose, princess of Great Britain 41-5205

Photographs of the two young English princesses, Elizabeth and Margaret Rose, showing them at their work, study and play. Each picture has a short explanatory paragraph.

Boston Transcript p2 Mr 22 '41 50w

Christian Science Monitor p9 Mr 31 '41 250w

Spring'd Republican p7e Ap 6 '41 180w

SHERMAN, MANDEL. Basic problems of behavior. 440p $3 Longmans

616.8 Psychology. Psychology, Pathological 41-10648

"Planned not only for reference reading but also for a systematic course, this volume is elaborated from the author's 'Mental Hygiene and Education,' [Book Review Digest, 1934]. The aim of this work is to present the clinical, experimental, psychological and psychiatric data of a number of basic problems of behavior. Included is an extensive bibliography as well as a helpful index." School & Society

School & Society 53:744 Je 7 '41 60w

Reviewed by Arden Frandsen

School R 49:790 D '41 1450w

SHERMAN, RAY WESLEY. I believe in America; an American manifesto. 180p $1.50 Piest

917.3 U.S.—Civilization. U.S.—Economic conditions 40-33440

"Ten short chapters constitute this American Manifesto. The thesis of the book is that Americans, particularly the poor in spirit and in pocket, should have faith in the future of America. This faith the author predicates from America's past accomplishments and from the possibilities inherent in our present wants. Briefly the author makes it clear he is talking about wants, not needs. He names among the wants: gasless engines, fabricated houses, unfabricated clothes, staticless radio, lightless illuminators and, most of all, laborless knowledge. . . In satisfying these wants Mr. Sherman believes, America will produce her most prosperous age." Commonweal

"This rhapsody of Sherman's America reads like McKinley's campaign speeches. The thesis is an anachronism and a snare for the patriotic unthoughtful. The chapters are developed from half truths: depressions always end; America always goes higher; communism won't work. No chapter identifies itself satisfactorily with even an elementary knowledge of the facts involved." J. P. Monaghan

— Commonweal 33:379 Ja 31 '41 340w

School & Society 52:536 N 23 '40 10w

Spring'd Republican p7e Je 29 '41 80w

SHERINGTON, SIR CHARLES SCOTT. Man on his nature. 414p il $3.75 Macmillan [21s Cambridge]

577 Man. Life (biology). Mind and body 41-5413

This book contains the author's Gifford lectures delivered at Edinburgh 1937-1938. The author, a notable biologist, writes in philosophical terms of man's nature, purpose and probable future. Contents: Nature and tradition; The natural and superstition; Life in little; The wisdom of the body; Earth's reshuffling; A whole presupposed of its parts; The brain and its work; The organ of liaison; Brain collaborates with psyche; Earth's alchemy; Two ways of one mind; Conflict with nature. Index.

Booklist 37:460 Je 1 '41

Books p17 Ag 24 '41 360w

Reviewed by J. M. Kater

Commonweal 34:522 S 19 '41 260w

"The name Sherrington at once suggests 'integrative action of the nervous system.' One of the masters in the field of physiology, we must expect something remarkable when he sums up the results of a life-time of study on the relation of brain and mind. Yet seldom have the Gifford Lectures on natural theology contained outwardly less natural theology than this series. For the full meaning one must read between the lines. The style is peculiar yet not displeasing—one critic has called it slightly archaic. Occasionally a verb gets omitted. Often it is only in retrospect that one sees the course of the thought. Even Kant gets quoted occasionally, usually something odd that he said, and not the big things." H. T. Costello

J Philos 38:359 Je 19 '41 1300w

"An important and fascinating book, though one that is not altogether easy reading." A. D. Ritchie

+ Manchester Guardian p7 D 17 '40 800w

Reviewed by A. D. Ritchie

Nature 147:127 F 1 '41 1400w

"In Augustus John's portrait of Sherrington the hands are an unforgettable symbol of dexterity guided by intellect. The eyes, with their wary, sidelong glance, tell of a mind unblinkered, keen as a scalpel, yet not blind to mystery. In this book not only intelligence and long experience in neurological research but also general cultural interest are brought to bear on the problem of man's nature. . . The temper of this book varies between cold scrutiny and a restrained fervour, compounded of wonder at the physical subtlety of man's body and realisation of the achievement and promise of his mentality. The style, though almost 'literary,' and to a contemporary ear faintly archaic, bears no taint of affectation, and rises sometimes to luminous imagery." Olaf Stapledon

+ New Statesman & Nation 20:685 D 28 '40 1050w

Reviewed by W. M. Malisoff
N Y Times p18 J1 27 '41 1150w

"The concepts of man's nature here presented run the entire gamut in time and belief from the sixteenth century philosopher-physician, Fernel, to the most modern and mechanistically inclined biologist of today. Illumined by the distinguished author's brilliant analysis, the evolution of those concepts becomes a matter of vital significance. The reader finds his sympathies aroused and his emotions stirred by the mental and spiritual conflicts that characterize the age-long search for a thoroughly consistent philosophy of life."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 12:4 Mr '41 300w

"Sir Charles Sherrington's book is in a class by itself. It is that of an old man wise and fearless, from whom life has taken away illusions, but left no cynicism, and to whom physiology has given freedom from sentimentality without destroying sympathy. There are few who have not much to learn from it." Joseph Needham

+ Spec 165:703 D 27 '40 1350w

Times [London] Lit Sup p87 F 22 '41 2300w

SHIPMAN, NATALIE (MRS GURDON WORCESTER), and WORCESTER, GURDON. Way of the heart, 256p $2 Greystone

41-15920

Judith Hunter, and her much older husband, Hal, and his friend Tom, were an exceptionally congenial threesome. They rode and hunted the Connecticut hills, visited and talked far into the night, sometimes at the Hunters', sometimes at Tom's. Their happy, quiet existence, was definitely disrupted when Tom married an aggressive rich young go getter, and it was only after tragedy that peace was once more achieved. The time is the present.

"A problem novel of merit with a slant on Nazi propaganda as an added angle of interest." Lisle Bell

+ Books p9 Ag 31 '41 160w

"The book makes an afternoon of pleasant and not taxing reading." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p16 Ag 31 '41 120w

"This is more than a 'newspeg' story. It is told sensitively, tenderly about real-seeming persons."

+ Spring'd Republican p7e Ag 24 '41 180w

SHIRER, WILLIAM LAWRENCE. Berlin diary; the journal of a foreign correspondent, 1934-1941. 626p $3 Knopf

940.5343 World war, 1939—Germany. World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American. Europe—Politics. Germany—Politics and government (W) 41-9746

The first entry in the book is January 11, 1934, when the author, an American journalist, was vacationing in Spain; the last is December 13, 1940, written on board the ship which was bringing him back to America. Between those two dates he describes his experiences in Germany before the war broke out, and during its first year and a half, during which time he reported Nazi activities for Hearst's Universal News Service, and broadcast reports for CBS. Index.

"He makes mistakes and admits them. But if you identify yourself unhesitatingly with Shirer, it is because he is conscientious and right-minded. Finally—and this, I think, will make the Diary live—he is a man of letters: he writes with the power and beauty, with the anger and pity, that come straight from the incandescent movements he lived through. He doesn't deal in venom. He lets the evidence speak, and his stark quotation of the German headlines is one of his most skillful strokes. If we are ever to succeed in breaking down national barriers and in making our common sense felt through Europe, it will be because of Americans like Shirer." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic S '41 500w

Booklist 37:512 J1 1 '41

Bookmark 2:11 N '41

"The most important and the most exciting book written out of Germany since long before the war began. This is, first of all, an absorbing book. Most of it reads like the scenario of a partly forgotten but important nightmare, written down with footnotes. . . . As a book, it is a careful, thoughtful document. Since we know a good deal about English morale and opinions and disagreements and literally nothing about their German counterparts, it is unique as a source book for an understanding of the political and psychological aspects of this war." Joseph Barnes

+ Books p1 Je 22 '41 1400w

"Everyone should be glad of this opportunity to share in the extraordinary experiences of the author. Judicious readers will be wary about accepting his implications and deductions, but that does not deprive the book of its deservedly high rating as a vivid picture deftly drawn."

+ Cath World 154:126 O '41 150w

"Mr. Shirer's book starts slowly. For the first 200 pages, comments on major events in the early Hitler years are interesting rather than revealing. But when the war finally breaks out, the diary form is often expanded into full-bodied reporting, with many choice portions in addition to those chapters earlier published in magazine form. The book lays invaluable groundwork for the two others to follow, and these latter should now be awaited impatiently." S. R. D.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 Je 30 '41 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '41

"Though praised by all the reviews I have seen, I seriously question its quality. I myself lived in Germany till the fall of 1935, and I left there a lot of friends and unsolved problems. Reading Berlin Diary, 1934-1941, I am of course eager to learn how the Berlin atmosphere has changed since the days of my farewell, how the attitude of people like my friends changed, what new books have been written, what problems are discussed among students and plain folk, how religious life is going on and what subversive thoughts are in the mind of the younger generation. I am sorry to report that on all such questions you will find no answers in the 600 pages of 'Berlin Diary.' These things are not in the headlines. And Mr. Shirer is just the typical newspaperman, whose interests are restricted to his profession. I admit he is an excellent reporter, but his book seems to me rather sterile." Max Fischer

— Commonweal 34:352 Ag 1 '41 750w

"One of the most illuminating and readable books that have come out of the war." R. G. Woolbert

+ Foreign Affairs 20:196 O '41 130w

"Mr. Shirer's diary, for all its 'episodic and diffuse entries, in many parts gives the reader a more graphic picture of events in Germany before and during the war than other more formal and documented studies, both by historians and by other newspaper correspondents. The fact that the author wrote many of these notes in haste, and had to keep them well hidden or smuggle them out of the Nazi Reich, gives the entire book a nervous style which, aside from Mr. Shirer's subject matter, is highly effective in itself." L. M.

+ Living Age 360:593 Ag '41 600w

Reviewed by C. A. Lambert

Manchester Guardian p3 O 14 '41 700w

SHIRER, W. L.—Continued.

"The profound moral indignation of this book is the thing one first remembers in sitting down to review it. Mr. Shirer, because he has seen Nazism at close quarters, is angry and scornful. No brooding over political tactics and no querulous speculations about the worth of democracy. Nazism is a macabre indecency. It is good to read such a book." Ralph Bates
+ Nation 153:55 J1 19 '41 1000w

"It is one of the most interesting war books that I have read: the first full record of war-time life in Germany." Malcolm Cowley
+ New Repub 104:893 Je 30 '41 1100w

"Mr. Shirer's book leaves no room for doubt that nihilism is powerfully entrenched. No reader will come away encouraged to think that in a few weeks the Berliners will revolt or the Field Marshals run out of batons or oil. He tells the plain truth to the extent that he has known and seen it, even as his newspaper confreres have long since told it. The strength of Hitler lies in the fact that he was incorrectly diagnosed by astute simpletons who forgot that history belongs to the realist. Because Mr. Shirer has been on the side of the angels from the beginning of this struggle the story he has to tell can be recommended with down-right enthusiasm not because it is perfect or complete but because it presents with honesty and firmness truth that must be known now if he and the rest of us are to survive." G. N. Shuster
+ N Y Times p1 Je 22 '41 1400w

"A book of unusual interest and timeliness. We have had reports from Germany by the score, but none, I think, covering so long a period, none so fresh, so realistic, so (in the best sense) reportorial. No matter how carefully you have followed the news, no matter how large a proportion of Shirer's notes appears merely recapitulative, you will find 'Berlin Diary' compelling reading." Clifton Fadiman
+ New Yorker 17:74 Je 21 '41 1400w
Pratt p24 autumn '41

"This is the best book on Germany in many years, and it will be as many more before a better one can be written. Shirer, who has lived in Germany from 1934 until this winter, knows the Nazis better than any other American, and is gifted with an eye for significant detail. The first half of the book, a highly readable account of the prelude to catastrophe, has in part been covered by other observers, but never better than here. But the last three hundred pages bring to America completely fresh material. . . . It is packed with keen observation on new facts. I have yet to find anyone who picked the book up who was able to put it down unfinished. . . . 'Berlin Diary' is the most important non-fiction book of the season; probably of the year." W. L. White
+ Sat R of Lit 24:5 Je 28 '41 500w
+ Scientific Bk Club R 12:2 J1 '41 490w

"The hackneyed description, 'the best book yet written on the war,' must be reserved for reviewers who have read every book written on the war. I have not (and doubt whether anyone else has), but I shall be surprised if Berlin Diary does not outdo every other war-book in popularity. . . . I have never met Mr. Shirer, but a man cannot publish a diary kept regularly over a period of six years and not reveal himself. The revelation here is unreservedly attractive. As you read, your confidence in Mr. Shirer's eye for the essential, soundness of judgment, and fairness even to characters he dislikes most increases. The result of those qualities is a book of engrossing interest and solid value which will inevitably be in abnormal demand." Wilson Harris
+ Spec 167:335 O 3 '41 1200w

"A most readable and informing volume. It is, as the title indicates, in diary form, although some of the entries were written after the dates assigned them. This was because some of the original notes were lost and others burned to avoid risk of Gestapo discovery and because some were not written at all, but imprinted on memory for recording at a safer time. The bulk of Mr Shirer's notes and copies of all his broadcasts before they were censored, were smuggled out, and he has done what patchwork was necessary with such skill that there is no apparent lapse of that contemporary spirit which makes this diary such a moving and convincing document."

+ Spring'd Republican p7e Je 22 '41 1300w

"We are grateful for this unique distillation of the experience of an ace reporter, of sound sense and good will who had the disciplined courage to endure a regime he hated so that he could fulfil his professional duty of getting to the American people over the air all the news he could send." Leon Whipple
+ Survey G 30:480 S '41 480w

Time 37:92 Je 23 '41 1500w

"The 'Berlin Diary' is so sound and so illuminating that it should be read by every American. . . . In no book that I know of will open-minded Americans get a better idea of Hitler and the Nazis, of what they have done and what they aim to do; in no book will they find more convincing reasons for believing that the United States can best defend its peace and safety by giving all aid, and not merely all aid short of war, to Great Britain in freeing Europe from German domination." Carl Becker
+ Time 38:103 O 27 '41 1200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p490 O 4 '41 1300w

Wis Lib Bul 37:153 O '41

"The book is a great book because, dealing with great events, it is the honest report of a man of fine intelligence, complete integrity, and a deep but controlled passion for truth, justice, and humane dealing among men and nations." Carl Becker
+ Yale R n s 31:173 autumn '41 1650w

SHOLOKHOV, MIKHAIL ALEKSANDRO-VICH. The Don flows home to the sea; tr. from the Russian by Stephen Garry. 777p $3.50 Knopf [9s 6d Putnam]

(W) 41-5117
"A vast and stirring tale of the Don Cossacks immediately following the Russian Revolution, this is a continuation of And Quiet Flows the Don [Book Review Digest, 1934] although it is in itself a complete novel." Library J

"At the age of thirty-six, Sholokhov stands in the foremost rank of the European writers of our time. It is a pleasant duty for a reviewer to signal the arrival of a classic into the fold of literature." Milton Hindus
+ Books p3 Ag 3 '41 1550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 O '41
"The style is somewhat slow and at times heavy, as most Russian novels are, but the author handles the plot well and holds the reader's interest to the end. The book will appeal to the serious adult reader." Emma Olcott
+ Library J 66:220 Mr 1 '41 60w

"It is far too long and sometimes moves at a snail's pace through military encounters and more military encounters; too many pages are devoted to descriptions of nature, vivid and moving though they often are. But the innumerable characters live and breathe, and the Don country becomes familiar territory. It is a tale of misfortunes multiplied, yet a broad and earthy humor and the hearty Cossack gaiety break continuously over the grim surface. At the end the Cossack, with his intense individualism, his passionate love of the land, and his primitive pride, stands revealed." Margaret Marshall
+ Nation 153:144 Ag 16 '41 850w

"Apparently 'The Silent Don' is the greatest of all the novels that have been written about the Russian revolution; and I say 'apparently' for the one reason that it is hard to tell just how good the book may be in the original. Stephen Garry's translation is by no means the worst that I have read during the past few years; at least he has a feeling for English prose. But to judge from sections of the novel that appeared in International Literature, it is far from being complete; and it is full of meaningless expressions and misunderstandings of the Russian text. Not for a single page does it let you forget that it is being translated from a very foreign language."

Malcolm Cowley

+ — New Repub 105:225 Ag 18 '41 1500w

"Even in a few passages where his narrative is unnecessarily long or where an exacting critic may discern other minor flaws, Sholokov continues masterfully to hold the reader's attention, which, perhaps, is the best proof of the 'genuineness' of his work. Withal, one closes the book with the feeling that few novels of such substantial merit have come in these years out of the Soviet Union—and even not out of it alone. At present, when a great new tragedy is being enacted in Russia's expanses, these pages, somehow, acquire added timeliness and impressiveness." Alexander Nazarov

+ N Y Times p3 Ag 3 '41 1400w

"It's an intensely readable book, pretty well organized, and well written in a slightly old-fashioned way, and the author doesn't seem to be at all worried about toeing the Communist line. The translation is clear and competent, though sometimes almost too British-middle-class for the material." Vincent McHugh

+ — New Yorker 17:56 Ag 9 '41 750w
Pratt p11 spring '41

"The human stream in Sholokhov's Don is very shallow. It does not carry a single person or idea worth remembering. And yet, oddly enough, its realism is unquestionable. The interminable bloody encounters do convey a sense of actuality and, the numerous people who participate in the struggle are undeniably genuine. But the whole performance is in a minor key." Manya Gordon

Sat R of Lit 24:5 Ag 9 '41 900w

"Let those who cared for the earlier movements of the quiet Don pursue its enormous journey here in this new great volume. Mr. Stephen Garry is a good, because an easy, persuasive, translator, and Mikhail Sholokhov is as sentimentally Red and correct as his admirers expect him to be; the novel is enormous, and its insistence on the dominance of man's physical and sentimental parts is as unremitting as if we were still in 1930, and had not in fact embraced the tragedy we liked to play with then. Yet I find it impossible to believe that the population of this island, which has so superbly girded itself at the eleventh hour, to destroy the epic, non-intellectual rot which is this book's inspiration, will be able to read it at this time." Kate O'Brien

— Spec 165:398 O 18 '40 600w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 3 '41 600w
Time 38:72 Ag 4 '41 650w

"The Don Flows Home to the Sea, as Mr. Garry entitles the volume, despite its unselectiveness and the unvaried coarse strength of its 'Tolstoyan' realism, is in many ways a firmer and more mature piece of work than the earlier part of 'The Quiet Don.' Sholokhov is still specially concerned with the affairs of the Cossacks of the Don country. But the senseless tragedy of the fratricidal strife of Cossack and Cossack during nearly three years of murder and devastation has plainly sharpened imagination in him, and something of the primitive chaos and cruelty of Russian history as a whole, is now apparent in the story."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p505 O 5 '40 900w

"This new volume seems raw, brutal, panoramic—a cavalry novel, all hooves and sabres and violent deaths. Gradually, if one perseveres—and the first fifty pages or so are confusing—there comes through it a savage, great-hearted poetry; a sweep and swirl and nakedness that are magnificent." Robert Littell

+ Yale R n s 31:x autumn '41 500w

SHORE, JULIAN. Rattle his bones. 315p $2
Morrow

Detective story.

41-15456

"This might be relished by Erle Stanley Gardner fans, though it hasn't the smoothness of plot they might demand." Will Cuppy

Books p17 S 21 '41 80w

"What makes this tale readable is its un-resting movement, its hard-boiled quick thinking and its cleverness of amusingly varied talk. This last is always lively, whether the investigator Millner is chatting with the phony English butler, the American-born Japanese chauffeur, or even such a minor figure as the too, too precious secretary." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p18 O 26 '41 160w

"Shrewdly built plot and good characterizations."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:20 S 27 '41 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e S 14 '41 240w

SHORE, MAXINE, and OBLINGER, M. M. Hero of Darien; the story of Vasco Nuñez de Balboa [il. by Avery Johnson]. 263p $2
Longmans

Balboa, Vasco Núñez de—Juvenile literature
(W) 41-51899

Biography of Balboa, from the time he set forth from Spain in 1500, to his death. The book is written in fictionalized form, and is intended for readers of twelve to sixteen. Bibliography.

Booklist 38:38 O 1 '41

"The life story of Balboa has not, so far, reached the general reading public in a continuous narrative, though the long list of authorities cited in this book shows how much of it has been put into print. That this work is offered to the older teens should not keep it from adult reading, from reading courses concerned with American history and from schools." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 Ag 24 '41 210w

"This book is interesting and informative for these times, covering as it does historical events and characters of interest to all Americans, and dealing with many of the problems that are troubling the world today." F. B. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 D 11 '41 120w

"His story is an exciting one, convincingly told." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:467 N '41 100w

"A story brimming with action and red-blooded adventure. A map would have added greatly to the book's interest, especially as the authors have often used the old place-names. For young people twelve to sixteen." Florence O'Gara

+ Library J 66:737 S 1 '41 110w

"Keeping close to historical records these two authors have drawn a vivid and convincing picture of a great man and the most appealing personality among the sixteenth century Spanish explorers and adventurers." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p9 Ag 31 '41 400w

Reviewed by Allan Nevins

Sat R of Lit 24:3 N 8 '41 20w

Social Studies 33:48 Ja '42 10w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 3 '41 180w

SHORT, LUKE. Dead freight for Piute. 275p
$2 Doubleday

40-36104

Western story.

"Mr. Short's work is smoothly contrived, is crammed with action and has that likable quality." Will Cuppy

+ Books p10 Ja 5 '41 100w

"This stirring tale is decidedly the best of the four Western novels (each totally different in scene, setting and plot) that have come to us from the versatile Luke Short. He has gained steadily in power and has rapidly forged ahead to a place among the leaders in the crowded field of Western fiction." G. W. Harris

SHORT, LUKE—Continued

+ N Y Times p24 F 9 '41 240w

SHOTWELL, JAMES THOMSON, ed. Governments of continental Europe. 1092p maps $4.50 Macmillan

342.4 Europe—Politics 40-32309

"Within [this] volume may be found comprehensive discussions of the governments of France, Germany, Italy, and the Soviet Union. At the same time space is found for shorter and less complete accounts of the structure and problems of government in Switzerland, Scandinavia, and the Low Countries. . . In general the organization of each of the parts of the book follows somewhat the same plan. A survey of the constitutional and political history of the state under consideration is followed by descriptions of central and local governments. The principles, structural features, and current techniques of the political parties are examined and an attempt is made in each case to show the relationship between party and state. Recent political, economic, social, educational, racial, and imperialistic problems, with attempted solutions, are reviewed with varying degrees of thoroughness." (Social Educ) Index.

"The volume will be welcomed as a textbook for advanced classes. It is hardly appropriate for beginners, because it assumes the reader's familiarity with typical organs of government, and the significance of changes in one organ or of the abolition of another. Those who possess such a background will read it with profit, and will return to it again and again for reference. Outside university walls, all who seriously wish to understand the type of state which is menacing Western civilization today—government of the masters, for the masters, by the masters—are advised to read this book." M. E. Oatman

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:153 F '41 1200w

Booklist 37:213 Ja 15 '41

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 19:878 Jl '41 50w

Reviewed by J. A. Storing
Social Educ 5:232 Mr '41 900w

SHOWMAN, RICHARD K., and JUDSON, LYMAN SPICER, comps. The Monroe doctrine and the growth of western hemisphere solidarity [ed. by Lyman S. Judson]. (Reference shelf) 302p $1.25 Wilson, H.W.

327.73 Monroe doctrine (W) 41-6648

"A volume in the familiar and trustworthy 'Reference Shelf' series, furnishing historical and statistical material and a wide selection of opinions concerning the relations between the United States and the other Americas." Christian Century

Booklist 37:441 My 15 '41

Christian Century 58:532 Ap 16 '41 20w

Reviewed by E. L. Tinker
N Y Times p24 Ag 24 '41 550w

SHRIBER, MRS IONE (SANDBERG). Family affair. 305p $2 Farrar

Detective story. 41-19315

"Trust Mrs. Shriber to turn out an ingenious puzzle full of secrets, cross-purposes, direct action, a satisfactory final wallop and smooth detecting by Lieutenant Grady." Will Cuppy

+ Books p30 O 5 '41 120w

"Mrs. Shriber has again demonstrated her ability to tell a well-knit and completely logical detective story. No lover of this type of fiction will lay the book down once he has started to read it." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p24 O 12 '41 200w

"Reason for two murders rather paradoxical but people are ably drawn, sleuthing logical, and suspense runs high throughout. Acceptable."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:36 O 18 '41 40w

SHRIBER, MRS IONE (SANDBERG). Murder well done. 307p $2 Farrar

(W) 41-8359

Detective story.

"This is gripping in spots in spite of the somewhat goofy wordage." Will Cuppy

+ Books p11 Je 8 '41 160w

"Mrs. Shriber has, as usual, succeeded admirably in keeping up the suspense until the very end. Her solution, however, is just a bit disappointing." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p13 Je 1 '41 240w

"This mystery novel is written naively, but there is nothing naive about the plot. Recommended."

+ New Yorker 17:72 My 31 '41 50w

"Tangled and tragic events of unhappy honeymoon, vividly portrayed. Action swift, and sleuthing admirable, with copious clues around for observant puzzlers. A No. 1."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:20 Je 14 '41 40w

"Intricately well-plotted."

+ Time 37:100 Je 9 '41 20w

SHRIDHARANI, KRISHNALAL JETHALAL. My India, my America; with an introd. by Louis Bromfield. 647p $3.75 Duell

B or 92 India—Politics and government. India—Social life and customs. U.S.—Social life and customs (W) 41-52001

A high caste Hindu poet who has lived for several years in the United States, first as a student, then as a writer and lecturer, has in this book combined the story of his life with observations on the contrasts between the two cultures he has known, with portraits of Indian leaders, and with comments on the relations between Great Britain and India. Glossary. Index.

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin
Atlantic F '42 250w

Booklist 38:111 D 1 '41

"Shridharani cannot be too highly praised for what he has accomplished in 'My India, My America.' His descriptions are memorable; his portraits of Gandhi, Nehru, Patel, Bose, etc. are concise and dramatic; his thinking is straight, deep and persuasive. The book is a 'must' not only for people interested in India and the east, but for every one who wants to know the full pattern of the world crisis as it is today, and as it probably will be tomorrow." Thomas Sugrue

+ Books p4 N 9 '41 1700w

"A highly interesting and informative book. Its defects—which might be noticed at once, before I pass to its merits—are due partly to the fact that this Indian mind, though acute enough, lacks the charm and distinction of Dr. Lin's, and partly to the author's having attempted to crowd into a single volume what should have been dealt with in two. The first part, labelled 'Personal,' is unsatisfactory. . . So also with 'Part Two: Social.' It makes a number of good points, but the hundred and fifty pages allotted to it hardly do more than correct some of Katherine Mayo's overstatements. . . The really valuable parts of the book are those headed 'National' and 'Political.'" Theodore Maynard

+ Commonweal 35:322 Ja 16 '42 650w

"This book will probably be as popular as Lin Yutang's My Country and My People. A 'must' book for public libraries." M. E. Clark
+ Library J 66:903 O 15 '41 50w

Reviewed by S. K. Ratcliffe
Nation 153:578 D 6 '41 950w

New Repub 105:709 N 24 '41 30w

"With shrewdness, earnestness, and some humor, Mr. Shridharani answers the 'stock questions' about India. His advocacy of non-violence . . . is tempered to the admission that resistance and defense may sometimes require violent as well as non-violent fighting. His book ends with a stimulating, noble and far from vague look ahead to the place of the 'reborn' India in the civilization of a free world." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p8 D 14 '41 1300w

New Yorker 17:91 N 1 '41 90w

"This is a portrait, animated, discerning, and not excessively 'highbrow,' of two of the world's largest and most contrasted countries, by a Hindu who combines an Eastern background with a long period of study and residence in the United States. The result is an uncommonly interesting book, ranging over a wide variety of subjects without losing certain connecting threads of thought and analysis." W. H. Chamberlin

+ Sat R of Lit 24:5 N 1 '41 1600w

SHRIGLEY, GEORGE ANDREW CLEVELAND, comp. 101 prayers for peace. 144p $1 Presbyterian bd.

264.1 Prayers. Peace 41-9701

"Most of the prayers are short and may be found useful for both private use and in public worship. Among the contributors are Henry St. George Tucker, George Craig Stewart, Donald Aldrich, John Gass, Edward L. Parsons, Howard Chandler Robbins, John W. Suter, Mary E. Woolley, Robert E. Speer, Paul Scherer, A. J. Muste, Paul Jones, Harry Emerson Fosdick, Henry Sloane Coffin, Gaius Glenn Atkins and many others—both pacifists and non-pacifists." Churchman

Reviewed by J. F. Davidson
Canadian Forum 21:254 N '41 190w

"This is a helpful stimulus and guide to prayer in a difficult time."

+ Christian Century 58:832 Je 25 '41 70w

Churchman 155:34 S 1 '41 60w

SHULER, MARJORIE (MRS FELIX CHARLES); KNIGHT, MRS RUTH ADAMS, and FULLER, O. MURIEL, Lady editor; careers for women in publishing. 288p $2 Dutton

029.6 Publishers and publishing. Journalism. Woman—Occupations (W) 41-20197

Descriptions of careers for women in the fields of journalism, magazine editing, and book-publishing.

Booklist 38:89 N 15 '41

"A readable and stimulating book and one that is itself a fine example of editorial skill."

+ J Home Econ 33:746 D '41 220w

Spring'd Republican p7e O 12 '41 180w

Wis Lib Bul 37:179 N '41

SHULTZ, GLADYS. How to be a fashion designer. 141p il $2 McBride

646.01 Fashion. Clothing and dress (W) 41-12437

"[The author] discusses the many allied aspects of fashion design, giving a good background picture from the writing of advertising copy and articles for women's magazines to the opportunities in the accessory field and in the wholesale dress business." Library J

"Intended for girls in high school, this intensely readable report begins by asking them a few questions about how they feel about clothes. These are so pointed, so personal, that any girl will be quite sure within ten pages whether she has the first requisite for being a dress designer—that she'd rather be one than anything else in the world." M. L. Becker
+ Books p9 S 28 '41 230w

"An extremely useful and enlightening book for the high school student who has a flair for fashion and design and who wants to capitalize on it. The author is an authority in the field and gives sane, practical advice, avoiding too lyrical a tone in describing the opportunities in the field." E. A. Groves
+ Library J 66:621 J1 '41 150w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell
N Y Times p10 Je 15 '41 40w

"The writer has a gay delightful touch that illumines her practical advice. And long before the last page is reached, Seventh avenue in New York has become an exciting place, well worth invading."

+ Spring'd Republican p7e Je 22 '41 100w

SICKELS, ELEANOR MARIA. Twelve daughters of democracy; il. by Dorothy Bayley. 256p $2.50 Viking

920.7 Woman—Biography. U.S.—Biography (W) 41-15612

Biographical stories of twelve American women, each of whom played a part in the development of our history from 1865 to 1930, from the period of Westward expansion thru the struggle for women's rights. Those included are: Katherine Sherwood Bonner MacDowell; Henrietta Howland Robinson Green; Mary Harris Jones; Frances Folsom Cleveland Preston; Augusta Pierce Tabor; Libby Smith Collins; Mary Dahl Everson; Anna Rablen Snow; Olympia Brown Willis; Janie Porter Barrett; Sophie Irene Simon Loeb; Kate Richards O'Hare Cunningham.

Booklist 38:84 N 1 '41

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p10 N 23 '41 360w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p14 N 6 '41 40w

"Their stories are given in a lively compelling style and are especially timely now." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:467 N '41 90w

"The accounts are well done, short and impressionistic. Many of the women written about will be unfamiliar to the reader, and because they are not the usual well-known figures of our American and historical background they will compel attention. . . . The book will be useful in junior and senior high school social science courses." E. A. Groves
+ Library J 66:799 S 15 '41 150w

Wis Lib Bul 37:179 N '41

SICKLES, MRS DOROTHY (JUDD). Eskimos, hunters of the Arctic; il. by Oscar Howard. [20p] 50c Garden City pub. co.

41-8634

"Neku and Tula are the two Eskimo children who appear in this little story of life in the North. Information about their daily doings is told in a manner that small children will understand. Illustrations by Oscar Howard are the most outstanding part of the book. They are done in soft tones of brown and yellow, with touches of green and blue." Library J

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p7 Je 1 '41 50w

"Though only paper bound, this is a good value for such a low price. Teachers will be glad to know of it for use as supplementary reading on Eskimo home life." D. M. MacDonald
+ Library J 66:523 Je 1 '41 80w

SIEBER, SYLVESTER ANTHONY MICHAEL, and MUELLER, FRANZ H. Social life of primitive man. 566p $3.50 Herder

572 Society, Primitive. Schmidt, Wilhelm 41-16933

"This book . . . presents one of the few digests in English of the theories of Father Wilhelm Schmidt, hitherto available chiefly in German. Father Schmidt was formerly the director of the Catholic missionary academy in Moedling near Vienna, and of the missionary museum of the Pope, who supported anthropological expeditions suggested by Schmidt." (Am Soc R) "A very brief introduction on principles and method leads to an extended description of the nine culture circles together with their historical relationships and temporal sequences. These are the three primitive circles of food gatherers; the primary cultures—patriarchal pastoral nomads, matriarchal horticulturalists and totemistic higher hunters; and finally the secondary circles—free matriarchy, totemism and mother-right, and free patriarchy. Dr. Mueller, the sociologist, contributes the chapters on property, technology and economic life for the primitive and primary cultures, while Father Sieber is responsible for the sections on family, state and associations." (Commonweal)

"The fact that this book is at once so enlightening and so prone to exaggeration and one-sidedness finds its explanation in the factors influencing the formation of Schmidt's system. . . . Schmidt and his followers have based their doctrines not only on the results of special investigations made by themselves and by other Catholic missionaries, which are often highly useful in themselves, but also on the doctrines of scholastic or at least Platonic metaphysics; this is most evident in the collection of studies offered to Schmidt by his followers on the occasion of his sixtieth birthday, and in the chief work of his follower Menghin. While this book carries on the valuable work of Kroeber, Linton, and Lowie, in counteracting the older one-sided pure evolutionism, it is nevertheless vitiated by this dangerous metaphysical tendency." Paul Honigsheim

+ — Am Soc R 6:898 D '41 1900w

"The authors must be commended for giving us a book the equivalent of which does not exist in English and which provides an admirable and even indispensable companion volume to Father Schmidt's works on religion and ethnological method." T. M. Avery, Jr.

+ — Commonweal 35:98 N 14 '41 850w

Social Studies 33:47 Ja '42 10w

SIEMON, KARL OTTO GUSTAV. Manual for the design of ferrous and non-ferrous pressure vessels and tanks. 280p il $3 The author, box 286, Metuchen, N.J.

621.1845 Pressure vessels. Tanks 41-241

"The intention of the author seems to have been to collect all important data on the design of pressure vessels, evaluate and abstract them, and add bibliographies and brief discussions of his own practice. This book is lithographed from typewritten originals." Chem & Chem Eng N

"The book should be reasonably useful to those intimately connected with pressure vessel work and who are willing to learn exactly how to use and handle the book." Z. G. Deutsch

Chem & Chem Eng N 19:226 F 25 '41 700w

Reviewed by T. R. Olive

Chem & Met Eng 47:833 D '40 300w

Pratt p11 D '41

SIGERIST, HENRY ERNST. Medicine and human welfare. 148p $2.50 Yale univ. press

610 Medicine, Public health (W) 41-6085

This volume contains the author's lectures delivered under the auspices of the Terry foundation at Yale. "The purpose of the book is to discuss the manifold relations between medicine and human welfare and to clarify the present situation of public health by analyzing it historically and sociologically." (Pref) The author is William H. Welch professor of history of medicine in the Johns Hopkins university. Index of names.

"The book is somewhat restricted on account of the brevity necessitated by the lecture form—one wishes for more extensive evidence in many places. It is, however, a readable and engaging presentation, illustrated with a number of interesting photographs." D. A. Clark

+ Am J Pub Health 31:840 Ag '41 240w

Booklist 37:460 Je 1 '41

Christian Century 58:397 Mr 19 '41 60w

Reviewed by Eleanor Van Alen

Current Hist & Forum 52:5 My '41 220w

"The style is pleasant and easy, and illustrations and general make-up are good. Intended primarily for the intelligent layman, but would be of interest to physicians also because of Dr. Sigerist's scientific background and study of socialized medicine. An excellent book for large and medium-sized libraries and for small libraries whose readers want the more serious non-fiction titles." E. S. Brown

+ Library J 66:219 Mr 1 '41 80w

New Repub 104:642 My 5 '41 50w

"'Medicine and Human Welfare' is a highly interesting and suggestive contribution to the 'social medicine' controversy. It deserves thoughtful consideration from physicians and laymen alike. Twenty attractive old prints illustrate the text and although they add nothing to the argument they emphasize its historical basis." M. S. U.

+ Sat R of Lit 24:16 Je 14 '41 400w

"Highest praise is due Dr. Sigerist for the amount of information presented in such a readable manner in this small volume."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 12:3 Mr '41 420w

Reviewed by Joseph Hirsch

Social Forces 20:283 D '41 160w

"Gives us a delightful picture of the backgrounds of modern medicine." C.-E. A. Winslow

+ Survey G 30:302 My '41 280w

SILVER, FERN. Foods and nutrition. 522p il $1.72 Appleton-Century

641 Food. Nutrition 41-4111

"A textbook for senior high schools intended to build 'a satisfying and workable knowledge of the vital subject of nutrition' on the basis of the teaching received in the earlier grades. Using meal planning as the point of departure, it seeks to develop a scientific attitude toward the purchase, preparation, and consumption of food. It also seeks to develop and extend the social horizon of the student by a discussion of amenities and situations which are likely to be a part of his own social experiences." (J Home Econ) Index.

J Home Econ 33:344 My '41 60w

"In the evaluation of this book as a high-school textbook, the reviewer wonders whether it would not have been better to build the nutritional knowledge along with the learning of the planning and serving of meals rather than to devote separate sections to each. In the reviewer's experience, nutritional information is not learned apart from meal-planning. The reviewer also questions the advisability of presenting to high-school pupils as much technical information as Miss Silver's book includes. Because of its readability, the book should be widely used as one of the publications available for reference work, and the first section should appeal to parents or other laymen wishing to find nutritional information presented in an interesting and understandable manner." H. E. McCleery

+ — School R 49:552 S '41 600w

SILVERMAN, MILTON MORRIS. Magic in a bottle. 322p $2.50 Macmillan 615.109 Pharmacy—History. Pharmacists (W) 41-5618

Brief accounts of the lives of ten men of science, all of whom have made contributions to the field of medical chemistry. Contents: The conquest of pain; Sertuerner and morphine; The amazing alkaloids; Pelletier and quinine; Housewife's recipe: Withering and digitalis; Blessing from hell: Koller and cocaine; Kill the germs! Lister to Ehrlich to 205; The fever-fighters: Kolbe to aspirin; Synthetic lullaby: Fischer, von Mering, and the barbitals; Food against death: Eijkman and the vitamins; Magnificent trifles: Brown-Séquard and the hormones; The red assassin: Domagk and sulfanilamide. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Leona Baumgartner
Am J Pub Health 31:744 Jl '41 200w
Booklist 37:434 My 15 '41

"Dr. Silverman, trained in pharmacology, writes with romantic enthusiasm of the discovery of ten of the important drugs used in modern medicine. Good stories and striking personalities are involved, and he makes the most of them, supplying verbatim conversations with all the abandon of the historical novelist." H. M. Parshley

+ Books p26 My 11 '41 400w

J Home Econ 33:409 Je '41 70w

"Swift reading, done in the rather highly colored style of de Kruif's 'Men Against Death.'"

+ New Yorker 17:70 Mr 29 '41 50w

"Dr. Silverman has created numerous imaginary dialogs and scenes around his subjects and their contemporaries in an effort to make an otherwise conventional resume of 'test tube' discoveries interesting reading. With no documentary source notes included to authenticate such liberties taken, there must necessarily be serious question as to the complete reliability of a work such as 'Magic in a Bottle.' However, the Silverman opus makes smooth reading and is certainly in many respects better educational fare than much of the cinema originating in Hollywood which purports to cover similar ground." C. B. M.

+ — Spring'd Republican p12 My 14 '41 850w

SILVERMAN, STANLEY H. Dexter; ill. by George Daly. [63p] $1.50 Simon & Schuster 41-22779

The story of Dexter, the little dragon who preferred to be friendly with the other animals, rather than to breathe fire on them, and how he acquired their confidence.

Reviewed by H. L. Rinsse
Commonweal 35:111 N 21 '41 10w

"A first glance condemns the book as of little appeal to children: too small type, too modernistic illustrations; a careful reading discloses an amusing fantasy for children of eight to ten... George Daly's illustrations in vivid green and black exactly fit the story. To be read or told to children." J. E. Wooster

+ Library J 67:42 Ja 1 '42 100w

Spring'd Republican p7e N 16 '41 50w

SIM, GEORGES. See Simenon, G., pseud.

SIMENON, GEORGES, pseud. (GEORGES SIM). Maigret keeps a rendezvous; tr. from the French by Margaret Ludwig. 312p $2 Harcourt [8s Routledge]

(W) 41-13234

Two detective stories: The Sailors' Rendezvous, and The Saint-Fiacre Affair.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p9 Ag 10 '41 140w
Christian Century 58:1006 Ag 13 '41 40w

"M. Georges Simenon has a real power of creating atmosphere, developing his narrative by means of a number of apparently irrelevant details through which in the end a complete picture is built up. It is a method demanding great skill from the author and some patience from the reader, lest he grow tired of waiting for the finished picture to appear and is tempted to put down the book." E. R. Punshon

+ Manchester Guardian p7 Ja 28 '41 170w

Reviewed by Mort. Post

New Repub 105:598 N 3 '41 80w

"Maigret is good, but not quite as good as we have come to expect. The first four volumes were translated by Mr. Geoffrey Sainsbury into perfect English. Maigret Keeps a Rendezvous contains two of Simenon's stories by a new translator, and the difficulty of converting colloquial French into an English equivalent has not been surmounted. . . It is a pity that the translation does not convey the full grandeur of this ordinary man transfigured by a spiritual crisis." Ralph Partridge

+ — New Statesman & Nation 21:116 F 1 '41 240w

"These two Maigret stories do not conform in the least to the commonly accepted pattern of the American or English detective story, but they have a fascinating quality of their own which is not easily defined. The author and his detective hero are apparently more concerned with the study of crime than with its detection and punishment." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p17 Ag 10 '41 310w

Sat R of Lit 24:16 Ag 16 '41 40w

"M. Simenon whose crimes take place in a milieu of the grimmest realism, creates a kind of poetry out of them. It is not merely the brilliantly sharp descriptions of life in a deep-sea trawler or a provincial town: the figure of Inspector Maigret himself—patient, relentless and uncommunicative as Nemesis—together with the device employed in the first novelette of making the violence take place 'off,' produces an almost poetic sense of tragedy. . . The Sailor's Rendezvous is a nearly flawless tale (but 'three-mast brig'?—surely brigs are always two-masters?) The second novelette is, from a detection point of view, less successful." Nicholas Blake

+ — Spec 166:154 F 7 '41 180w

Spring'd Republican p7e Ag 24 '41 180w

"Translation not so smooth as earlier Simenon but both tales have brilliant workmanship."

+ Time 38:92 S 1 '41 50w

Times [London] Lit Sup p632 D 14 '40 290w

SIMENON, GEORGES, pseud. (GEORGES SIM). Maigret sits it out; tr. from the French by Margaret Ludwig. 305p $2 Harcourt [8s Routledge]

41-24631

Two detective stories: The lock at Charenton, and Maigret returns

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
+ Books p13 Ja 18 '42 330w

Christian Century 59:84 Ja 21 '42 10w

Reviewed by E. R. Punshon
Manchester Guardian p3 Jl 1 '41 90w

"The supply of Maigret is running low. . . The Lock at Charenton, the first story, gives a vivid picture of canal life in France, with an impressionist portrait in the centre, of Ducraw, the boss of the Paris waterfront. . . Maigret Returns, in which Maigret's inept detective nephew is framed for a murder in a night-club, circulates in a viscous medium of vice." Ralph Partridge

New Statesman & Nation 22:164 Ag 16 '41 200w

SIMENON, G., pseud.—Continued

"Maigret has to do a great deal of sitting in cafes before he is able to prove his case. All this does not sound very exciting, and it will probably not please those who demand violent action on every page, but for those who are interested in the workings of the underworld mind it has a fascination that is difficult to define." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p18 Ja 18 '42 330w

+ New Yorker 17:68 Ja 24 '42 50w

"Although both tales display French sleuth's heterodox methods at their best they are better as psychological studies than detective stories. Compelling."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:19 Ja 24 '42 40w

Reviewed by John Fairfield

Spec 166:640 Je 13 '41 290w

Springf'd Republican p7c Ja 18 '42 250w

Times [London] Lit Sup p265 My 31 '41 180w

SIMENON, GEORGES, pseud. (GEORGES SIM). Maigret to the rescue; tr. from the French by Geoffrey Sainsbury. 309p $2 Harcourt [8s Routledge]

41-613

This volume contains two detective stories: The Flemish Shop, and The Guinguette by the Seine.

"The Flemish Shop,' first in this double-header from the French, is a Simenon gem, not to be missed by you and you. We don't know this author's works in the original tongue, but surely 'The Flemish Shop' would be hard to match among them for all-around merit." Will Cuppy

+ Books p10 Ja 5 '41 240w

"If you know Maigret there is nothing I can add; if you don't it's high time you made his acquaintance." Marian Wiggin

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 11 '41 40w

Reviewed by E. R. Punshon

Manchester Guardian p7 Ag 13 '40 80w

"Simenon begins by reminding us, both in his gifts and his limitations, of Maupassant. When he tells a story, it is done with a conscious skill and at the same time it seems to have been prompted by some inner compulsion, as though to tell stories were a necessary activity of his being." J. P. Bishop

+ New Repub 104:345 Mr 10 '41 1450w

"To judge by the success of its predecessors it should be quite safe to recommend the new volume of Maigret to all readers of detection: I have yet to hear a hard word said against Simenon from the most critical lips. . .

The translation by Geoffrey Sainsbury is a triumph of transposition from colloquial French to colloquial English, and I have no sympathy with sticklers for the original language, particularly now when future supplies of French books will be unprocurable." Ralph Partridge

+ New Statesman & Nation 20:142 Ag 10 '40 280w

"Simenon's stories are not for those who demand sensational developments and brilliant deduction by a miracle-working detective. They are rather for those who are interested in how ordinary people may be led to commit crimes and in the tragic consequences that often follow thoughtless and unpremeditated infractions of the moral code. The reader of these stories is more likely than not to find himself sympathizing with the murderer and condemning his victim or the person who is really responsible, but whom the law cannot reach." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p16 Ja 5 '41 200w

"When it comes to mysteries, you won't find anything much better than this French author."

+ New Yorker 16:56 Ja 4 '41 50w

"Psychology to fore in initial offering, which is in crime passionnel dept.; concluding story presents super-fine detecting and inspired writing. For connoisseurs."

+ Sat R of Lit 23:20 Ja 11 '41 50w

"These two new Maigret adventures, laid in a Flemish wine-shop on the Franco-Belgian frontier, and in a week-end resort on the banks of the Seine, are in every way up to the standard of the earlier novels which Mr. Sainsbury has so admirably translated for us. One only wishes that the double volumes were appearing monthly instead of quarterly." Rupert Hart-Davis

+ Spec 165:68 J1 19 '40 300w

"Inspector Maigret is the latest hero of mystery story detectives and these two stories will lose him none of the prestige he has gained by his previous exploits."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 12 '41 270w

Time 37:76 F 3 '41 30w

"First for the sake of change and then for his own sake M. Simenon is very welcome. After the mazes of English detective fiction his studies of people and places are soothing. There are moments in 'Maigret to the Rescue' (excellently translated) which recall de Maupassant. This volume consists of two long short stories. 'The Flemish Shop,' which comes first, has so fine a quality that the other seems conventional by comparison though it would otherwise deserve praise."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p349 J1 20 '40 200w

SIMON, CHARLIE MAY (HOGUE) (MRS JOHN GOULD FLETCHER). Roundabout; il. by Howard Simon. 205p $2 Dutton

(W) 41-2321

The Jordan family lived on an ancient mail trail thru the Mississippi forest. Then the old road had to be used as a detour when the main road was closed, and gradually the almost abandoned settlement took on new life. For readers nine to ten.

Booklist 37:363 Ap 1 '41

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p8 Ap 6 '41 320w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p12 Je 30 '41 240w

"Mrs. Simon has given us another clear picture of a kindly happy family, living simply, aware of life in forest and stream. It is a pity that the title chosen belongs also to a well-liked book by Alice Dalgliesh." A. M. Jordan

+ — Horn Bk M 17:103 Mr '41 70w

"Roundabout has the same excellence of style and atmosphere as others of the author's books, but the too many and too fortuitous events make it less convincing. Large print and excellent format." A. Monroe

+ — Library J 66:223 Mr 1 '41 90w

"This is one of those warm and happy little tales which Mrs. Simon weaves around simple experiences, the sudden moments of realization of beauty and of the joy of friendship, telling them with the same freshness and clarity with which a sensitive child receives them, and in this story they are told with a perception and grace of expression which seems to reach more deeply than ever into a child's heart." E. L. Buel

+ N Y Times p10 My 11 '41 320w

"Charlie May Simon is doing some of the best writing for children now being published, and this book is as good as any she has written."

+ New Yorker 17:88 My 24 '41 80w

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 16 '41 110w

Wis Lib Bul 37:159 O '41

SIMONE, ANDRE, pseud. Men of Europe. 330p $2.50 Modern age

923.2 Statesmen. Europe—Politics (W) 41-19525

The author, a European journalist of the Left, writes of men and events in Europe during the last two decades, showing what each did to further or oppose the Nazi rise to power. Contents: Hitler's secret weapon; Adolf Hitler: conductor or instrument? Hitler's brain trust; Mussolini: Hitler's brilliant second; Francisco Franco: Pétain's pupil, Hitler's puppet; Kings and komitadjis; MacDonald: "the years the locusts have eaten;" Baldwin: "nothing lost but honor;" Chamberlain: "peace in our time;" Stalin's blitzkrieg; Winston Churchill: "blood, sweat, and tears;" Conclusion: The invisible men of Europe.

"In this keyhole view of modern history, in which each sordid betrayal of democracy by Europe's leaders is described in a behind-the-scenes, before-the-event manner, the story gains little in excitement or conviction, but it acquires a bouquet of illegitimacy and corruption which becomes it." Joseph Barnes
Books p18 S 21 '41 700w

Reviewed by R. C. Batchelder
Churchman 156:17 Ja 1 '42 150w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:381 Ja '42 40w

"Simone has had personal contact with everyone from Churchill and Stalin to the head of the Gestapo's kidnaping department. He has two assets which most foreign correspondents sadly lack: a dramatic, hard-hitting style, and a lot of information which hasn't been told before."

+ New Repub 105:446 O 6 '41 60w

"Simone (it's an assumed name) is apparently an influential European journalist who hews pretty close to the Stalin party line. He knows a lot but cuts in on the bias. This makes what he has to say interesting as political gossip but rather suspect. His book, though thoroughly readable, is a further demonstration of the superiority on practically every count of our American correspondents to even the best of the European journalists."

Clifton Fadiman
New Yorker 17:74 S 13 '41 120w

Reviewed by Linton Wells
Sat R of Lit 24:24 N 8 '41 380w

SIMPSON, EVAN JOHN (EVAN JOHN, pseud). Kings' masque. 477p $2.50 Dutton [8s 6d Heinemann]

Fersen, Hans Axel von, grefve—Fiction. Marie Antoinette, queen consort of Louis XVI, king of France—Fiction. Gustavus III, king of Sweden—Fiction (W) 41-983

Historical romance of the French revolution with Marie Antoinette for heroine and Gustav III, of Sweden, for hero, linked by the Queen's admirer, the Swedish Count Axel von Fersen.

Booklist 37:271 F 15 '41

Bookmark 2:14 My '41

"The novel is a brilliant tour-de-force; and one can only admire the fine sense of form after so many sprawling narrative yarns, the intelligence that animates it and the unexceptional use of the language. But it seems to lack emotional quality and that romantic beauty which distinguished Mr. John's first novel, 'Crippled Splendor.' This is artifice, excellent artifice, skillful and resulting in a highly readable tale; it is written out of a strong, if archaic, sense of history, feeling for royalty and the traditionalist point of view. But I doubt if it can be done this way."

F. T. Marsh

+ Books p2 F 9 '41 800w

"It is a strong story, told with color and life. The author is as much in love with Marie Antoinette as was Fersen; he makes King Louis more than an amiable dolt; he admires the brilliancy of King Gustavus; he de- tests the upstart Napoleon, and he shows Fersen as a loyal gentleman, true to his ideals. A vivid, splendid and satisfying piece of story-telling." F. S. Ambrose

+ Boston Transcript p2 F 15 '41 280w

"'Kings' Masque' is a competent piece of historical research, likely to be highly useful to students interested in the attitude of Sweden to the French Revolution, but not brought alive by any great pressure of imagination." Harold Hobson

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 26 '41 180w

"The episodic arrangement, far-flung incidents, and historic embellishment stifle vitality and weary all but a most persevering reader of historical novels. Limited purchase suggested." Esther Johnston

Library J 66:140 F 1 '41 130w

Reviewed by Harold Brighthouse
Manchester Guardian p7 Ja 10 '41 200w
New Repub 104:510 Ap 14 '41 50w

"The march of history on its human side has, surely, never been more affectingly portrayed than in these unhurried, uncrowded and profoundly satisfying pages." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p5 F 16 '41 900w

New Yorker 17:82 F 15 '41 40w

"In his 'Crippled Splendour' of a few years ago Mr. Evan John proved himself a historical novelist of authentic talent. . . . After so brilliant a predecessor this new book is disappointing. This is not to say that it does not have remarkable qualities. Mr. John does not know how to be dull. His taste and scholarship are too deeply rooted to permit either extravagance or distortion of fact. But the unity of structure, which was so notable in 'Crippled Splendour,' is not here. He has created only a series of episodes which, often perfectly proportioned in themselves, do not grow into the solid pattern he intends."

C. D. Abbott
+ Sat R of Lit 23:6 F 15 '41 650w

Reviewed by Bonamy Dobrée
Spec 166:72 Ja 17 '41 350w

"The story of the French revolution has been told many times before by many authors. It is to Mr John's credit that 'Kings' Masque' will keep you absorbed even though you know the main events that are going to happen."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e F 16 '41 420w

"It is a conscientious piece of work in its not very original way. . . . Mr. John works to an elaborate canvas; he does not easily bring himself to leave out any of the great personages of the period, and he has no hesitation in relating as though they were newly unearthed the details of the affair of the diamond necklace or of the flight to Varennes."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p5 Ja 4 '41 330w

Wis Lib Bul 37:156 O '41

SIMPSON, KEMPER. Big business, efficiency and fascism; an appraisal of the efficiency of large corporations and of their threat to democracy. 203p $2.50 Harper

338.8 Industry—Organization, control, etc. Corporations—U.S. U.S.—Economic conditions. Fascism 41-5630

"This book has grown out of an inquiry conducted by the writer for the Federal Trade Commission and the Temporary National Economic Committee. A report based on that inquiry has lately been published under the title: 'Relative Efficiency of Large, Medium-Sized, and Small Business.' This report shows that the vaunted efficiency of the giant corporation, its only possible justification, has been greatly exaggerated. This book is a plea for the revival of competition in business." (Pref) Index.

SIMPSON, KEMPER—Continued

"The reviewer has no desire to defend big business. He, too, believes that there are seeds of fascism in the present American business scene. But is the answer to be found merely in making big business somewhat less big? Mr. Simpson has stated a thesis. The first part of his book falls far short of proving it on the analytical level, while the factual part of the book dealing with costs, though useful, is largely irrelevant to his main argument." R. A. Gordon

Am Econ R 31:650 S '41 390w

Booklist 37:510 Jl 1 '41

"The ordinary American citizen sees just as great a danger of Fascism in more and more government unlimited power. The threat to democracy which the size and financial power of giant corporations imply is very real. Equally real is the threat to democracy in the powers necessary to halt the growth of business when held by bureaucrats who know nothing of the problems which they control. Mr. Simpson does not, apparently, see in Big Government the menace he finds in Big Business." C. N. Stabler

Books p16 S 14 '41 750w

"The book is curious in that the author presents all his conclusions at the outset and ends up on a rather flat note with a series of tables relating to workers' incomes. On the whole, 'Big Business Efficiency and Fascism' seems unsatisfactory and incomplete as a discussion of so timely and absorbing a problem in present day politico-economic conditions." Gregory Smith

Commonweal 34:41 My 2 '41 100w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:375 Ja '42 30w

Reviewed by R. H. McDonough

Library J 66:219 Mr 1 '41 140w

Reviewed by Lewis Corey

Nation 152:620 My 24 '41 450w

Reviewed by E. V. Bell

N Y Times p5 My 11 '41 550w

Reviewed by Guenter Reimann

Sat R of Lit 24:17 Je 21 '41 550w

SIMPSON, LESLEY BYRD. Many Mexicos. 336p $3 Putnam

972 Mexico—History. Mexico—Civilization (W) 41-6958

"This volume does not pretend to be a history of Mexico." (Author's introd) It is a commentary on Mexican cultural and economic history from the time of the Aztecs to the present. The author, at present associate professor of Spanish at the University of California, spent twelve years in research among original sources as a preparation for the writing of this book. Glossary. Index.

Booklist 37:512 Jl 1 '41

"The style is vivid and informal, and the book is very easy to read. Persons who already know something about Mexican history will find it stimulating and suggestive; others will derive from it a reasonably accurate impressionistic picture of the main forces in Mexican social development, but must go elsewhere for the detailed facts and figures." H. B. Parkes

+ Books p12 Ag 3 '41 950w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:387 Ja '42 10w

Reviewed by B. D. Wolfe

New Repub 105:283 S 1 '41 440w

"At a time when books about Mexico tend to be so stereotyped that a glance at the chapter headings suffices often to predict the contents and the reading public has expressed its boredom by virtually ceasing to buy them, Dr. Simpson has performed a valiant task. He succeeds in revitalizing a fascinating subject, which was on the point of being buried under successive layers of earnest but sadly uninspired platitudes. In addition to a vivid, readable style and a first-hand knowledge of the sources, both historical and geographical, he is equipped with the rare faculties of good humor, tolerance and critical insight. By virtue of his fresh and unprejudiced approach, the past takes on living colors and present-day controversies subside to fairer proportions when seen in the perspective of history."

R. L. Martin

+ N Y Times p6 Jl 6 '41 1100w

"A fascinating commentary. . . Lots of fresh and often witty detail."

+ New Yorker 17:91 Ap 19 '41 60w

"The accuracy of the present volume may be taken for granted. Simpson also knows how to write with color and irony and a fine flair for the dramatic. He cuts through dry documents to the human factor. His 'quotes' are gems of style and insight. . . Simpson, with real glee, chops down many a false cherry-tree episode related by less careful scholars, and all told this is an interesting, a stimulating volume, perhaps the best of its kind to appear in the past fifteen years or so—a real and permanent contribution." Carleton Beals

+ Sat R of Lit 24:15 Je 7 '41 750w

SIMPSON, WILLIAM HAYS. Small loan problem of the Carolinas; with a commentary on regulation in Virginia; with a foreword by John S. Bradway. 154p $2 Presbyterian college press, Clinton, S.C.

332.313 Loans. Interest and usury. Usury laws 41-5427

"This book describes the characteristics of the small loan business in North and South Carolina—states which lack regulatory small loan laws; reviews the periodic unsuccessful attempts to enact regulatory legislation in these states; analyzes the experience of other states with small loan laws, particularly on the question of maximum rates of charge; and compares small loan conditions in the Carolinas with those in Virginia, which has had a regulatory law since 1918." Ann Am Acad

"The book contains useful, yet not unusual or unexpected, information." Garland Downum

Am Pol Sci R 35:589 Je '41 140w

"The significance of Dr. Simpson's study goes beyond the elucidation of the loan-shark problem in the Carolinas. Reliable material concerning illegal loans is very difficult to obtain, and the specialized student of the small loan problem will find many uses for the tabulations in Chapter 1 and for the cases given in the Appendix. More than this, however, Dr. Simpson's monograph illustrates the fruitfulness of directing the work of graduate students to the study of the many knotty problems which exist in their own localities, for which the materials, however fugitive, are within ready reach." Rolf Nugent

+ Ann Am Acad 215:217 My '41 350w

Reviewed by G. D. Nickel

Survey 77:276 S '41 350w

SINCLAIR, MRS BERTHA (MUZZY). See Bower, E. M., pseud.

SINCLAIR, HAROLD. Years of illusion. 369p $2.75 Doubleday

41-52002

A story of life in a small midwestern city from 1900 to the outbreak of the European war in 1914. The two chief characters are contrasting figures: John Ransom, son of three generations of prosperous pioneering business men, and Parnell McGuire, a boy from the other side of the tracks who achieves a career as a journalist.

Booklist 38:114 D 1 '41

Reviewed by George Conrad

Books p10 N 9 '41 360w

"The defect of most group, or community, novels is that the individual is submerged into the larger genre picture and that considered merely as stories they are rarely stirring. To some extent this is true of 'Years of Illusion,' yet Harold Sinclair has done rather well by his two central characters, who exemplify two equally important strains in the town's social fabric... Both are equally likable. Both are vividly portrayed. Different as are their origins, they are able, curiously but typically, to meet on common ground." E. H. Walton
+ N Y Times p20 N 9 '41 750w

"An interesting book."

+ New Yorker 17:94 N 8 '41 50w

"Mr. Sinclair never forgets that he is writing a novel, writing about people. While a few of his characters are shadowy, most of them have reality, are distinct and well-drawn—the men more so than the women. You like them or they disgust you. Which is all to the good." Fairfax Downey

+ Sat R of Lit 24:14 N 29 '41 700w

"It is a little difficult to follow the wanderings of the story. It is rather as if a first-rate newspaper reporter was reporting events here and there as they came to his attention. In fact one has a feeling that he has just been reading a well-informed newspaper, when he closes the book. It is replete with humorous, tragic incidents, all well told. And it is undoubtedly an authentic presentation of life at the beginning of this century." M. D.

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e N 9 '41 300w

SINCLAIR, UPTON BEALL. Between two worlds. 859p $3 Viking

(W) 41-4373

"Mr. Sinclair continues the saga of Lanny Budd, begun in 'World's End.' [Book Review Digest, 1940]. This new novel starts with the Treaty of Versailles and ends with the crash in 1929. In the intervening ten years is packed a deal of incident—romantic, financial, political." New Yorker

Booklist 37:360 Ap 1 '41

"Into 'Between Two Worlds' Sinclair has poured great quantities of that enormous stock of information, that unflagging socialist zeal and those devices for narrative excitement that he has learned in the course of writing at least fifty novels. The result is superlatively Sinclairian. The story moves with the skittering speed of a jackrabbit; the dramatic personae include some of the most talked-of persons of our time, and social injustices are regularly brought into view by every sleight-of-hand in the repertory of an old magician of social fiction." Milton Rugoff

Books p4 Mr 30 '41 1250w

Reviewed by W. C. Derry

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 5 '41 600w

"Whether this book will live remains to be seen. That it is an important one at the present time is by no means so open to question; not only because it is extremely well written, but because, with World's End, it is the most comprehensive study of the period. It may be criticized because of the author's own bias and convictions, which clearly show through, but these, in the main, are based on irrefutable facts." M. I. T.

+ Canadian Forum 21:59 My '41 900w

"Mr. Sinclair, though wordy, writes well and the story goes down smoothly. It lacks punch because he leans over backward to be fair and avoid his own prejudices. It is an excellent chronicle of the period, even if the world sometimes seems too big for Mr. Sinclair to handle." G. E. Shieler, Jr.

+ — Churchman 155:18 Ap 15 '41 200w

Reviewed by Lloyd Eshleman

Commonweal 33:626 Ap 11 '41 360w

"The forbidding length and heavily energetic style restrict its appeal. Limited purchase suggested." Esther Johnston

Library J 66:265 Mr 15 '41 50w

Reviewed by Harold Brighthouse

Manchester Guardian p3 O 17 '41 230w

"Even though the book is primarily a novelized 'Only Yesterday,' Mr. Sinclair succeeds in making the story of Lanny Budd's worldly pilgrimage an engrossing tale in its own right. Though it dives temporarily into a slough of Dickensian caricature with the marriage of Lanny's flighty mother to the ascetic Mr. Parsifal Dingle, it recovers quickly and closes with the most dramatic picture of the October, 1929, stock-market crash that I have ever read in fiction." L. B. Salomon

+ Nation 152:386 Mr 29 '41 700w

"Mr. Sinclair's story is successful in giving a picture of the fun and games with which the expatriate American bohemians passed their time, but its picture of European affairs is puerile. The book is a memorial to that splendid band of young journalists who did so much to promote international misunderstanding in those unhappy years." Anthony West

— New Statesman & Nation 22:427 N 15 '41 440w

"When Upton Sinclair published 'World's End' last year it was discovered that the Pasadena crusader had struck a new and rich vein and it was surmised that something in the nature of a trilogy was being dug up. The present volume, plump, leisurely and spacious like the first, sustains the original impression. Mr. Sinclair has stepped out of the rather obvious role of a writer of moral tales with an old-line Socialist or new-line EPIC connotation. He has become a novelist—a novelist with about as many faults as a reviewer could shake a stick at, but still a novelist of considerable power and significance." E. L. Duffus

N Y Times p4 Mr 23 '41 1250w

"Told with enormous particularity in undistinguished prose. If Mr. Sinclair is not quite a great novelist, if he is sometimes absurd, he nevertheless handles a crowd of characters, a score of locales, and dozens of events with remarkable skill, insight, and moral courage."

+ — New Yorker 17:84 Mr 22 '41 70w

Pratt p11 autumn '41

"Although it is impossible not to appreciate Upton Sinclair's shrewd insight into recent history it is also impossible to refrain from observing that his hero has to be the most incredibly opportune of all tourists to be in Rome the day Matteotti is kidnapped, in Munich during the Beer Hall Putsch, in New York at the time of the stock market catastrophe... All the episodes of this too episodic novel are not so inept, however; some, such as Lanny's painfully exciting elopement with the heiress, display the author at the top of his story-telling skill. But Upton Sinclair has a lesson to learn... The lesson is that in these tremendous attempts to convey so much of the life of a period, the single hero who remains as consistent story-center cannot successfully unify so much mass." H. T. Moore

+ — Sat R of Lit 23:9 Mr 22 '41 600w

"With a less skillful writer, 'Between Two Worlds' would be dull, but in Mr Sinclair's hands it is well worth reading."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 23 '41 850w

"It is a little like a Rollo book on an international scale, or Tom Swift and His Electric Histroscope. The history is cursory but abundant and palatable; the excursions into art and love combine 'progressive' views with a captivating boyishness. The book is perhaps above all impressive as a demonstration that an almost moronic cheerfulness is not necessarily the foe of intelligence and sincerity, of which Sinclair has plenty."

+ — Time 37:90 Mr 24 '41 550w

"The narrative is vigorous, fecund and closely studied. Mr. Sinclair has kept a finger on every item of news that was indeed news during the decade he covers, he dresses it up with knowledge and often with dramatic resource, and nobody with the least inking of what is involved in trying to shape so compendious a chronicle into fiction can fail to be impressed by what he has in fact achieved. All the same, much as one dislikes the seemingly glib and evasive objection in face of Mr. Sinclair's high honesty of purpose, is it art, this largely unselective copy of the material of an epoch? Is it even history? Something like it, no doubt, but without the vision, the perspective, or the gleam."

SINCLAIR, U. B.—Continued

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p517 O 18 '41 950w

Wis Lib Bul 37:77 Ap '41

SISCO, FRANK THAYER. Modern metallurgy for engineers. 426p il $4.50 Pitman

669 Metallurgy (W) 41-11285

"Technical treatise on ferrous and non-ferrous metallurgy designed for the ultimate user of structural metals. The author, metallurgist and editor of the Alloys of Iron Research of the Engineering Foundation, has summarized the existing literature in the field on the basis of experience gained in teaching the subject to officers of the U. S. Army Air Corps." (N Y New Tech Bks) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 38:30 O 1 '41

N Y New Tech Bks 26:44 Jl '41

SITWELL, OSBERT. Open the door. 299p $2.50 Smith & Durrell [7s 6d Macmillan]

42-107

Seventeen short stories. "Here are stories of Edwardian and Victorian England, of South Italy with cosmopolitan gentry of Italy and England, one bitter, brilliant study of three young women who were super-rich, stories of artists, near-artists, and critics, and some stories of today, of England at war, of France at despair." (Sat R of Lit)

"Those living curios, rich and titled men and women who have survived the old life, the tranquil years before 1914, and live on into the chaotic European present are the subject of most of these sketches and short stories. Like a connoisseur of rare art forms Mr Sitwell fixes his attention on those faded reminders of forgotten splendor who still wander bizarrely across the European scene. Since the genus of these vignettes is Sitwellian and the species Osbertian, one is hardly surprised to find them urbane in manner, baroque in style, and occupied with quaint and curious kinds of people." Milton Rugoff

Books p4 D 21 '41 650w

Reviewed by Harold Hobson

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 10 '42 130w

"These are luxury stories, and one hopes they will continue. The culture that Mr. Sitwell represents is a luxury, an expensive one, and still a criterion of our civilization." P. M. Jack

+ — N Y Times p4 D 21 '41 440w

"Mr Sitwell is a minor Aldous Huxley, handling a precious, inlaid, languid prose." New Yorker 17:134 D 6 '41 40w

"While this book should be carefully avoided by all who detest wit, tolerance, and civilization, it will rejoice alike those who can still weep for mankind and those who can laugh." R. E. Roberts

+ Sat R of Lit 24:15 D 20 '41 500w

"The stories have a clarity and vigour, and the characters a quality of life. One feels they were there before he found them; that they will continue after he has turned aside. Even his eccentrics are valid, because he imagines the individual beneath the type. . . The stories are varied, some grave, others gay, some slight, others deep." John Hampson

+ Spec 167:494 N 21 '41 600w

"This is a volume of short stories, of which the best have a delicious coolness and lucidity of sentiment and a fascinating aptness and exactitude of phrase. They reveal in Mr. Sitwell, no doubt, the man of taste rather (than the man of feeling; his is an eighteenth-century elegance of deportment, a Regency dandyism in literary values, a Corinthian richness and brilliance of style. At his most urbane he gives a momentary impression of calculated aloofness or indifference. But even then, or at all events a moment afterwards, the common touch of curiosity, sympathy or fellow-feeling without which the most functional of good styles is a burden to the spirit is apparent in Mr. Sitwell."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p565 N 15 '41 1000w

SIZOO, JOSEPH RICHARD. On guard. [223p] $1 Macmillan

242 Devotional exercises

41-22506

Three hundred and sixty-five paragraphs, one for each day of the year. They are practical, sincere, inspirational and religious. The book is designed especially for the men in service. The author is minister of the Collegiate church of St Nicholas, New York city.

"No 'devotional' readings, in the ordinary sense, but vigorously religious, direct, practical, and not odiously preachy. Chaplains should find it very useful in army camps."

+ Christian Century 58:1444 N 19 '41 50w

"On Guard is not so militaristic as it sounds, but the reviewer thinks this is Dr. Sizoo's best book. . . It should be an ideal book to give to selectees. It would provide them with enough religious inspiration to carry them through their busy days of soldiering." H. J. Simpson

+ Churchman 156:17 Ja 1 '42 80w

SKEAPING, JOHN RATTENBURY. How to draw horses [il. by the author and others]. 64p $1 (2s 6d) Studio

741 Horses. Animal painting and illustration 41-15811

Instructions on the drawing of horses, written and illustrated for young people. The author-artist begins with children's drawings, and includes diagrams of joints, the drawing of different kinds of horses, and horses in motion.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p6 Ag 31 '41 70w

"The drawings which Mr. Skeaping has made for the book are 'more or less like real horses,' because they are intended to explain certain things about horses as well as about drawing, but, because he cannot draw horses as children do, he has included some drawings by some very young people indeed. The book should certainly encourage the habit of drawing for fun—which is the only sound reason for drawing at all."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p291 Je 14 '41 170w

SKIDMORE, HUBERT. Hawk's Nest. 368p $2.50 Doubleday

41-4553

A story of the workers on a tunnel-drilling project in West Virginia in the early 1930s. The workers not only suffer from injustice and neglect but also from the disease silicosis which eventually kills a large majority of them.

Booklist 37:410 My. 1 '41

"'Hawk's Nest,' like 'The Grapes of Wrath' and 'Uncle Tom's Cabin' is a functional novel. If it serves its function, a problem that has been twisted out of courts and locked away in investigating committees should soon be hauled up for public notice." Milton Lehman

Books p10 Mr 23 '41 750w

"Mr. Skidmore neglects some of the fundamentals of novel writing and yet the ennobling of these ordinary men and women in their fight against despair is moving to witness."

+ — Commonweal 34:93 My 16 '41 120w

"As a novel this is no great shakes, but as an indictment it about covers the story."

+ — New Repub 194:510 Ap 14 '41 50w

"His book is not only an obvious brief for the unfortunate but a well told and honest story." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p6 Mr 23 '41 1000w

"It isn't a pretty story, but it is convincing. There's some Steinbeck in it, and some Dos Passos. It is impossible to read 'Hawk's Nest' and remain unmoved." W. J. Gold

+ Sat R of Lit 23:16 Ap 12 '41 410w

SKINNER, CHARLES EDWARD, and HARRIMAN, PHILIP LAWRENCE, eds. Child psychology, child development and modern education [prepared] with the collaboration of Amy F. Arey [and others]. 522p il pl $3 Macmillan

136.7 Child study 41-5763

A college or normal school textbook made up of chapters by separate hands. Partial contents: Heredity and early development; Physical growth in children; Language development in childhood; Emotional development of children; The learning of children; Character development in children; Personality development, maladjustments, and mental hygiene; The exceptional child. Indexes.

Booklist 37:457 Je 1 '41

J Home Econ 33:410 Je '41 150w

SKINNER, CORNELIA OTIS (MRS ALDEN S. BLODGETT). Soap behind the ears; drawings by Alajálov. 214p $2 Dodd

817 (W) 41-22169

Eighteen sketches on various subjects from bicycles and Oscar Levant, to beauty salons and the defense of Long Island. Many of the articles have appeared in the New Yorker and other periodicals.

Booklist 38:110 D 1 '41

"Unlike many writers of the modern, sophisticated essay, who feel that this rather personal form of expression offers a splendid opportunity to give their personalities a bit of an exhibitionist run, Cornelia Otis Skinner appears to have no suppressed ego tugging at the leash. Miss Skinner is evidently on the happiest sort of casual, even impudent, terms with that charming woman and successful actress who is herself. For which reason she never finds it really necessary to be the heroine of any of these eighteen essays. This amiability of spirit makes Miss Skinner a pleasant and delightful companion instead of a scintillatingly brilliant one." F. H. Bullock

+ Books p27 N 9 '41 360w

"Of the dangers that beset the humorous writer the greatest of all, I suspect is Bathos—or, pace Jonathan Swift, the Art of Sinking in Prose. As he flits from one impending catastrophe to another, he must do it lightly. . . He must never let us down, for when he lets us down we fall with a thump, and we are ungenerous enough to hold him to blame. Miss Skinner does not avoid this danger. At her best she is gay, good-humored and amusing; and yet only one of these sketches—"God Rest You Merry"—achieves what might be called a sustained flight." George Dangerfield

+ — N Y Times p3 N 23 '41 500w

New Yorker 17:92 N 1 '41 40w

SLADE, MRS CAROLINE (BEACH). Job's house. 318p $2.50 Vanguard

41-51679

Another novel on the ramifications of relief by the author of The Triumph of Willie Pond (Book Review Digest, 1940). The central characters in this story are Jobie Mann and his wife, Katie, who in their late sixties are faced with the necessity of applying for relief, facing the questions and red tape of social workers and law administrators. Jobie can't face the loss of his independence so he and Katie sell the home they had worked for for forty years and move into a tenement house where they succeed in reshaping the lives of others as well as their own.

Booklist 37:388 Ap 15 '41

"Caroline Slade writes of these people with conviction and power for her years of experience as a social worker have given her a deep and intense understanding of the men and women whom she describes. 'Job's House' is not a pleasant book, and yet it is not bitter. Here is a realistic portrayal of vast portions of society, and if at times this picture constitutes an indictment of conditions as they exist today, it is also a promise that these conditions can be bettered by courage and determination and understanding." C. G. Miller

+ Books p10 Ap 6 '41 480w

"'Job's House' unlike the tragic story of the Pond family, never shakes off the artificial stiffness of a demonstration case, constructed to illustrate the functioning of some state agencies and the reasons why 'clients' are not always in a receptive mood."

Nation 152:417 Ap 5 '41 90w

Reviewed by Miriam Borgenicht

New Repub 104:832 Je 16 '41 240w

"Mrs. Slade writes with cool restraint, letting the drama grow out of the facts she presents. Where the book may be a little weak as creative art it is more than balanced by its importance as a social document." Rose Feld

+ N Y Times p21 Ap 6 '41 850w

"Less a novel than an indignant social document. Mrs. Slade provides a happy ending for Job and his old wife, and for some of their neighbors. Probably should be read by everybody who thinks relief is just a racket for folks who don't want to work."

+ New Yorker 17:90 Ap 5 '41 120w

"From such a work, we can learn more of the social character of good and evil, of hope and despair, of beauty and ugliness than we can in all the vague and abstract moral preachments of the critics who are so concerned with some abstracted soul of man that they see, in honest pictures of human souls, only ugliness and wallowing misery." J. T. Farrell

+ Sat R of Lit 23:11 Ap 12 '41 1250w

"Mrs. Slade's book will be welcomed by social workers who know the desperate need to humanize the public assistance programs and to save human stuff from maceration in the mechanics. It will be damned by such divergent people as those who bow down to eligibility and those who live and have their being in case work pure and not so simple. . . As a picture of social workers and their work, the book has great virtue and a broad defect. Public welfare case workers know that some of their colleagues are Miss MacArthurs and wish to high heaven something could be done about it. They also know what the general public does not: that Miss MacArthur is not typical." Louis Towley

+ — Survey 77:197 Je '41 600w

Time 37:102 Ap 7 '41 200w

Wis Lib Bul 37:117 Je '41

SLAUGHTER, FRANK GILL. That none should die. 423p $2.75 Doubleday

(W) 41-4554

This story of an idealistic young doctor has a thesis: that the medical profession is badly in need of an overhauling and that if the government should take it over the cure might be worse than the disease.

"Dr. Slaughter has observed the rules of fiction by introducing wives and mistresses, but his interest in these distractions is minor. They do not interfere with his real objective—to warn of the danger of an unholy alliance between unscrupulous and incompetent forces, should medicine be taken away from its trained, vigilant practitioners. If you intend to follow the story closely a medical dictionary will come in handy."

SLAUGHTER, F. G.—Continued

Books p12 Mr 30 '41 360w

Commonweal 34:93 My 16 '41 70w

New Repub 104:642 My 5 '41 50w

"Dr. Slaughter can afford to be critical. It is clear in every line of his book that he knows what he is talking about. Even those who may have no wish to see the skeletons in the medical closet exposed to public gaze will find it hard to refute or ignore charges so ably and specifically presented. . . . One has done Dr. Slaughter a wrong, however, if this suggests that his book is overlaid with discussion. 'That None Should Die' is first of all a cracking good story, one which holds the reader's attention from beginning to end."

Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p26 Mr 23 '41 900w

New Yorker 17:85 Mr 22 '41 60w

"A high light of the book which attests Dr Slaughter's skill as a writer of fiction, as well as his knowledge of medicine, is the quantity of information incorporated in the story, with no seeming effort. Only a practiced surgeon and medical doctor could have written 'That None Should Die,' and only a clever story teller could have imparted so much actual information while spinning a yarn."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e My 4 '41 900w

SLICHTER, SUMNER HUBER. Economic factors affecting industrial relations policy in national defense. 112p $1.50 Industrial relations counselors

330.973 Industrial relations, U.S.—Economic conditions. World war, 1939—Economic aspects 41-6926

"In 1939 the author published a monograph entitled Economic Factors Affecting Industrial Relations Policy in the War Period. The present book studies the subject further, viewing the effect of the war and the national defense program on the American economy and industrial relations." Booklist

Reviewed by E. P. Schmidt

Ann Am Acad 216:182 Jl '41 320w

Booklist 37:510 Jl 1 '41

Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '41

"Some readers may complain that Slichter has treated too many topics too briefly and has not focused attention upon outstanding matters for either private or governmental planning. The book, however, is full of specific and wise counsel for people practically concerned with labor relations; and it is also full of stimulating suggestions for theorists." Z. C. Dickinson

+ J Pol Econ 49:924 D '41 500w

Reviewed by Herman Feldman

Survey G 30:533 O '41 280w

SLICHTER, SUMNER HUBER. Union policies and industrial management. 597p $3.50 Brookings

331.88 Trade unions. Industry—Organization, control, etc. Labor and laboring classes—U.S. 41-2000

"A comprehensive discussion of both the content and process of collective bargaining except as to wages. Of especial interest to those concerned in the understanding and employment of the methods evolved in industrial jurisprudence. Answers such questions as, how do unions attempt to control entrance to trades? Does the closed shop produce labor shortage? Under what conditions have unions encouraged management to introduce new machines? What is the outlook for union-management cooperation?" (Commonweal) Index.

Reviewed by N. J. Ware

Ann Am Acad 216:211 Jl '41 700w

Booklist 37:383 Ap 15 '41

"Prof. Slichter writes without partisanship, seeking to make a case only for the facts. Unions and employers have needed such an analysis, and the book should be valuable to both." F. W. C.

+ Christian Science Monitor p20 Ap 2 '41 490w

"Excellent, wise and authoritative."

+ Commonweal 33:549 Mr 21 '41 70w

Pratt p15 autumn '41

Reviewed by W. J. Dunn

Springf'd Republican p7e S 14 '41 900w

SLOAN, ALFRED PRITCHARD. Adventures of a white-collar man [introd. by Karl T. Compton]. 208p il $2 Doubleday

B or 92 Automobile industry and trade. General motors corporation 41-4328

Autobiography of the head of General Motors written with the collaboration of Boyden Sparkes. Mr Sloan started his career as a draftsman in the Hyatt roller bearing company in 1895, at twelve fifty a week and three years later was running the firm. The book is also an account of the pioneering days of the automobile industry in the United States, and a history of General Motors.

Current Hist & Forum 52:59 Ap '41 180w

"Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., needs no introduction to the American business man; his influence during the last several decades of industrial expansion has been most significant. His autobiography, therefore, comes as a valuable commentary on the rise of the automobile industry, and also as a stimulating record of the life of one of our outstanding business leaders." D. K. Beckley

+ Management R 30:392 O '41 380w

Reviewed by H. J. Forman

N Y Times p14 Je 15 '41 650w

Time 37:101 My 19 '41 650w

SMALLWOOD, WILLIAM MARTIN, and SMALLWOOD, MRS MABEL SARAH (COON). Natural history and the American mind. 445p il $4.25 Columbia univ. press

574 Natural history—Study and teaching. Naturalists 41-16864

"This work gives the first-told story of the early American naturalists and their influence upon the cultural life of the American people. It tells of the development in America, up to about 1850, of the evolutionary sciences, bringing the end of the story to that point at which the forerunners of the modern scientific specialists appear." (School & Society) Bibliography. Index.

"The authors write without any special grace of style but clearly and simply; the immense field is well considered and sympathetically treated. Anyone interested in the history of the American mind, as well as in natural history or education, will be thankful for their work." E. P. Richardson

+ Commonweal 34:596 O 10 '41 600w

School & Society 54:228 S 20 '41 50w

"Professor Smallwood, chairman of the department of zoology at Syracuse University, and his wife have together produced a most interesting and scholarly book on early natural history in the United States."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 12:3 O '41 400w

Reviewed by Clifford Moore

Springf'd Republican p8 O 1 '41 1000w

SMART, CHARLES ALLEN. Wild geese and how to chase them; an informal discussion of living as an art. 245p $2 Random house

170 Conduct of life 41-23371

"Author of four novels, including 'R. F. D.' and 'Rosscommon,' Mr Smart for seven years has combined writing with dirt-farming in Ohio. His chosen jobs may break him, he realizes, but he loves them, and good shop talk about them. . . In that frame of mind he offers this volume of shop talk about living, because 'Everyone has a job of living, and every other job and process is interesting and important only in relation to that one.'" Spring'd Republican

Booklist 38:128 D 15 '41

"Smart is a talented and articulate writer, and some of the things he says have sincerity and worth. But one closes the book with a feeling that the author is not a man who has found himself or a good way of life, but of one who is still groping, who is justifying his own actions rather than expounding a philosophy." Rose Feld

Books p34 D 7 '41 540w

"Gay, at times almost flippant, in tone, this unconventional discussion of 'life in terms of the fun that can be made out of it' is a very thoughtful and thought-provoking analysis of the satisfactions of life and the most likely ways of their attainment."

+ Christian Century 58:1443 N 19 '41 60w

"This is not a handbook for the impounded citizen who enjoys slushing through the swamp with a shotgun, but a chatty book on everyday morality and the art of living. Although there are times when one thinks that the title might better be 'Wild Oats and How to Sow Them,' the book has good points for the audience to whom it is addressed: the women who have money enough to pay for Mr. Smart's books, who like to curl up on a sofa with a drink, and who will not mind what ordinary books on morals lack—'this very faint but attractive aroma of infidelity.'" Emerson Hynes

Commonweal 35:348 Ja 23 '42 280w

"Iconoclastic for reactionaries; a stimulating measuring rod for the unafraid." H. S. Taylor

+ Library J 66:793 S 15 '41 130w

"It is discursive, personal, erudite and entirely independent in spirit and thought. Mr. Smart is outspoken, fresh, gay and stout-hearted; and if his book may at some points seem iconoclastic, it is nevertheless rooted in principles of lasting worth. His wild-geese chase is indeed that something which is both in and beyond the moment, to give life significance as well as art."

+ N Y Times p3 Ja 25 '42 600w

"A beautifully written book, remarkably evidencing at once a tough-minded realism and an infectious zest for triumphant living."

+ Spring'd Republican p6 N 8 '41 1300w

SMASH Hitler's international; the strategy of a political offensive against the axis. 96p $1 Greystone

943.085 Propaganda. Germany—Nazi movement 41-12961

"The authors have written a manual of civilian defense against enemy propaganda and Fifth Column confusionists. They confront us with the political problems connected with colonial populations, unequal treaties, and the like which a reawakening democracy must solve. Finally, they have composed the first manual of counterattack upon the Swastika international, and in this counterattack civilians can play a great part." (Publisher's note) Contents: Total attack—the only defense against total war, by Edmund Taylor; The political battle of Asia, by Edgar Snow; The four freedoms vs. "the new order," by Elliot Jane-way.

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:379 Ja '42 20w
N Y Times p2 J1 20 '41 500w

Spring'd Republican p6 J1 5 '41 1000w

SMERTENKO, JOHAN JACOB. Alexander Hamilton, man of action; il. by Richard Wilt. 336p $2.50 Messner

B or 92 Hamilton, Alexander—Juvenile literature (W) 41-15616

A popular biography of a Revolutionary hero, friend of Washington's and first Secretary of the Treasury, written in terms suitable for high school students. Bibliography. Index.

"Mr. Smertenko's rehearsal of the familiar facts of Hamilton's career is lively and entertaining. The emphasis is on the Revolutionary chapters rather than on the later ones, and the Hamilton who emerges is, on the whole, a singularly attractive person. . . Uncritical praise of Hamilton is the chief fault of this book, but there are inaccuracies and omissions. It is not true that the Jersey plan of union was thrown out, in toto, or that Hamilton's plan furnished 'entire sections' of our Constitution." H. S. C.

+ — Books p8 N 9 '41 600w

Reviewed by E. J. Gray

Horn Bk M 17:476 N '41 50w

"Written with fire and vigor, this biography naturally devotes most of its length to Hamilton's part in the shaping of American policies during the formative period. Life in the intimate circle of advisers Washington called his 'Family,' is presented in a particularly vivid style which gives reality and substance to that group of young men. But the genius and brilliant intellect of Alexander Hamilton, one of the greatest men of his time, is portrayed without proper perspective, admitting no difference of opinion on points which are considered controversial, and tending to belittle other great men." A. M. Jordan

+ — Horn Bk M 18:33 Ja '42 180w

"There is no biography for young people of that brilliant youth from the West Indies which describes so well the life in the Army camps during the American Revolution. . . In fact, few books for the 'teens have been written with more evident use of source materials. But perhaps it is because Mr. Smertenko has written a life of Hamilton for adults, or perhaps it is because events crowd so fast, that at times the sight of the man himself is lost. Before the book is finished one is likely to stop reading, unless he is more than ordinarily interested in the step-by-step founding of this country's government." Miriam Snow

+ — Library J 66:848 O 1 '41 130w

SMITH, ANNE MARIE. Play for convalescent children in hospitals and at home. 133p $1.60 Barnes, A.S.

613.74 Play. Convalescence. Children—Care and hygiene 41-9917

"The purpose of this book is to show what can be done with play when it is made an integral part of the convalescent care of children, and when it is considered a fundamental part of the education of pediatric nurses. Specific illustrations are given of the organization of play for children in wards, before surgical operations, use of play in the education of nurses, volunteer play leaders and parents. The author describes the use of all the values in play and of the benefits of group play. Emphasis is placed upon play activities requiring no material equipment and which can be used with persons of wide age ranges, individually or in groups." (Publisher's note) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 38:76 N 1 '41

SMITH, A. M.—Continued

"Though her discussion is based on what is done in a large, well-equipped institution, it is full of sensible, practical suggestions for the intelligently directed play which helps the convalescence of the child in the ordinary home."

+ J Home Econ 33:605 O '41 60w

School & Society 53:712 My 31 '41 50w

Survey 77:232 Jl '41 30w

SMITH, BERNARD, ed. The democratic spirit; a collection of American writings from the earliest times to the present day; with an introduction. 932p $5 Knopf 810.8 American literature—Collections.

Democracy (W) 41-15020

"A huge volume of almost a thousand pages. It contains generous selections, tracing in prose and verse, rhetoric and humor, philosophical essay and dialect jingle, the graph of our democratic and equalitarian emotion, from the Mayflower Compact to Carl Sandburg. There are over two hundred items and each author is ushered in by a short, thoughtful, biographical commentary. . . The thread of the democratic tradition is strong and unbroken, but its later literary expressions are light in weight compared to the grave, considered reflections of such men as Roger Williams, Adams, Jefferson, Paine, Channing, Garrison, Theodore Parker, and Lincoln." (New Yorker) Indexed by author and title.

Reviewed by R. E. Danielson

Atlantic N '41 250w

Booklist 38:32 O 1 '41

Bookmark 2:7 N '41

"In his selection of illustrative passages the anthologist of democracy is sure to be embarrassed by a bewildering abundance, and a firm sense of direction is doubly necessary. Mr. Smith has done well to include a vigorous sermon by Jonathan Mayhew, a vivid picture of the early nineteenth century frontier from Timothy Flint's little known 'Recollections,' Longfellow's fine but seldom emphasized poem on 'The Jewish Cemetery at Newport,' and passages from Harriet Beecher Stowe's important New England novels rather than from 'Uncle Tom's Cabin.' On the other hand it is difficult to see how the democratic spirit is served by genre pictures of sordidness and squalor such as Erskine Caldwell's 'Daughter,' Leane Zugsmith's 'Room in the World,' and Albert Maltz's 'Afternoon in the Jungle.' The fact that nearly one half of the writers quoted belong to the twentieth century indicates a certain temporal provinciality in Mr. Smith's outlook. . . Mr. Smith's inclination to the left leads him to prefer the modern period, where the democratic spirit has been sadly confused with dialectical materialism." G. F. Whicher

— + Books p4 S 28 '41 950w

"The average American would be a worthier citizen by a reading from cover to cover. We suspect that the morale of our new army would be far higher today had the boys been nurtured on such revelations of the spirit of America." James Van Zant

+ Churchman 155:18 S 15 '41 150w

Reviewed by Malcolm Cowley

New Repub 105:409 S 29 '41 950w

"It is not too big a book, because so many of the older selections are welcome old friends. Quite aside from its specific purpose, it is a compendium of American writing which, with some possible exceptions toward the end, the reader will want to keep by him. . . It brings back to the attention of the younger insurgent generations many an American name which the young people have consigned to the dustbin of history." Simeon Strunsky

+ — N Y Times p1 S 21 '41 1000w

"Credit to Bernard Smith, first for conceiving a fresh idea in anthologies, a hard enough job in itself, and second for carrying it through with rare conscientiousness. . . The book as a whole is impressive. There is no need to point out its timeliness." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 17:108 S 20 '41 240w

"For about six hundred pages, of the total of approximately a thousand, one reads along thinking this is just another collection of selections from the familiar fathers of American liberty and democracy. . . To be sure, I personally began to sense some rather unexpected emphases, such as that on pacifism in a revolutionary country and age, on dislike for any wealth or privilege among a people which likes both when they can achieve them, and so on. . . Then there were occasional misleading statements, such as the remark in a note that Jefferson 'fought for general public education.' . . When, however, we come to the authors and extracts which compose a considerable portion of the last third of the volume, this reader at least had a distinct shock. . . From such names as Franklin, Jefferson, Samuel and John Adams, Madison, Tom Paine, Lincoln, Whitman (even the innocuous Longfellow), Henry George, Mark Twain, and so on, it is an amazing drop to some of those which will be found in the later pages of the volume, names in many cases little known outside the circles of Stalinism, communism, the proletarian literary group." J. T. Adams

Sat R of Lit 24:3 S 27 '41 3350w

"What makes 'The Democratic Spirit' delightful and refreshing as well as steadily clarifying is the editor's broad definition of the ingredients of liberty. . . Not the least notable of Mr Smith's work is his excellent selection of material from the last two decades."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e S 21 '41 850w

SMITH, BRUCE. Police systems in the United States; foreword by Raymond B. Fosdick. 384p map $4 Harper

351.74 Police—U.S.

40-29562

Survey of federal, state, and local police systems of the United States. Contents: The police problem; The crime problem; Rural and suburban police; Urban police; State and federal police; Police control; Organization; Central services; Outlines of future development. Index.

"There exists no more complete treatment of this vital subject. Students of political science, and especially those interested in police administration, will find the book an indispensable reference." F. M. Stewart

Am Pol Sci R 35:565 Je '41 700w

"The unique and extremely complex role of police in the United States represents problems which are without parallel in other countries and which have been but slightly clarified for us. In this comprehensive survey, Bruce Smith clarifies, defines, and criticizes both the old and the new problems of the police in such a manner that little remains to be desired." G. K. Brown

+ Am Soc R 6:765 O '41 480w

"This volume, as far as this reviewer is concerned, is the most important as well as the most ably presented analysis of American police systems that has yet been printed. The intimate knowledge of the author is crystal clear in excellent phrase and neat verbal turn, whether he is doubting the wisdom of accumulating mechanical gadgets to add to the prestige (and hardly anything else) of the police department or penetrating into the more abstruse problems of administrative organization in relation to public control." J. P. Shalloo

+ Ann Am Acad 217:169 S '41 1100w

"This thorough and thought provoking book is certain to be of inestimable assistance to police administrators and enlightening to all lay persons interested in police problems. . . There are fine chapters on police control, organization and central services with a multitude of material pointing toward the attainment of a country wide police unification that will greatly influence the combatting of crime." Joseph Timilty

+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 22 '41 480w

"This book, another valuable study by America's leading authority on police, is an examination of the interrelation of police systems—rural, urban, suburban, and state. The author's chief concern is with the problems arising out of popular control and the need for efficiency in organization, personnel, matériel, and leadership. The book is clearly outstanding in its field, and should serve as a guide to all persons concerned in the administration and development of American police forces." S. B. W.

+ Harvard Law R 54:1268 My '41 280w

Reviewed by L. M. Brooks

Social Forces 20:291 D '41 280w

Wis Lib Bul 37:71 Ap '41

SMITH, CHARD POWERS. Ladies day. 491p $2.75 Scribner

41-14666

A sociological novel, based on the life in an upstate New York town, in the period from 1884 to 1900. The Blaine-Cleveland campaign, the railroad strike, the panic of 1893, are included in this story of the days when the men were supposed to make money and "the ladies" upheld the morals of their families and towns. Pretty Sally Lathrop took her duties in that line seriously, and so came into conflict with Race Kirkwood, a rising young business man, with a questionable reputation. The struggle between these two, and Sally's repeated denial of her love for Race is the central theme of the book.

"This is the second volume of what seems destined to be an American saga. Though readable by itself, it gains both power and clarity when referred to Artillery of Time [Book Review Digest, 1939] of which it is a sequel in the sense that like Lathrop, the pivotal character of the former book, plays a major part in this one. . . . The book lacks, it may be, something of its predecessor's fusion of character with idea, something of its structural balance and finish. Like Artillery of Time, however, it contains several scenes of great and sustained power." Wilson Follett

+ Atlantic O '41 360w

Booklist 38:96 N 15 '41

"It is a great, long novel moving slowly but with admirable sureness through the years of its period with an unusual love story and a fresh theme to give it a certain distinction." F. T. Marsh

+ Books p2 Ag 24 '41 900w

"This [is a] big, fine novel; fine both in the colloquial and in the strictly critical sense and richly big in its wide-embracing humanity. . . . A great-bodied book, full of the meat of reality and the wine of philosophy, built round a deeply moving, utterly absorbing drama of sixteen significant years of American history." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p9 Ag 24 '41 800w

"If Mr. Smith had decided to be a novelist rather than a social historian, if he had omitted a good many details of menu, costume, and interior decoration, his story of Sally and Kirkwood would have been practically first rate. Worth reading anyhow, and if you are good at skipping, you'll enjoy it a lot."

+ New Yorker 17:55 Ag 30 '41 150w

"A novel quite sumptuously 'furnished.' Every brick, bow, and bustle is there, every prancing horse, croquet stick, flowery syllable. Byzantium, N.Y., the immediate scene, lives here like a well-preserved tinted print of the period. The protagonists, on the other hand, seem a little dusty. Chief among them is one Race Kirkwood, who can best be described as three parts Rhett Butler and one Clark Gable." R. L. Nathan

+ Sat R of Lit 24:12 S 6 '41 300w

"There is much drama in the subject which the writer has chosen for his theme, but he fails to make it click. His characters are unconvincing and artificial. A love story—two or three love stories, in fact—run through it but they are banal and uninteresting." M. D.

—Spring'd Republican p7e Ag 24 '41 180w

Wis Lib Bul 37:157 O '41

SMITH, CHARLES M., and ROOS, MRS MARY MAE (BARKULOO). A guide to guidance. 440p $3 Prentice-Hall

371.42 Vocational guidance 41-4614

"This volume gives a very fair and comprehensive picture of guidance in the City of New York Public School System. . . . The authors emphasize the fact that the major goal of education is to develop a type of training for the child that is wholly suited to his capacities and which will serve too as a challenge to his potentialities so that he may be encouraged to take advantage of the occupational opportunities that his community has to offer." (Survey) Index.

School & Society 53:96 Ja 18 '41 10w

"Will be found illuminating and helpful to counselors and educators in all towns where an effort is being made to help young persons prepare themselves to participate in the work of the world. . . . This book offers guidance to guiders as does no other book upon the market and will doubtless prove valuable as a reference book in guidance courses. It has this distinction too, it glorifies the role of the counselor." Emily Burr

+ Survey 77:308 O '41 300w

SMITH, CICELY FOX. The Ship Aground; a tale of adventure; il. by C. Walter Hodges. 221p $2 (6s) Oxford

(W)

Adventures of one Barty Dale, brought up by an uncle who is landlord of The Ship Aground, an inn on the bank of the Thames, some hundred years ago. At fourteen Barty is shanghaied to become ship's boy on a vessel bound for the west coast of America. The rest of the story is filled with mutiny, a pirate's treasure, a fire at sea, and finally a return to England for the boy, and the discovery of the treasure.

Booklist 38:100 N 15 '41

"Although the story can lay no claim to great originality, it makes capital reading. Pictures and format are excellent." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:463 N '41 100w

Reviewed by E. J. Gray

Horn Bk M 17:480 N '41 70w

"An 'T' story, fast-moving and graphic. For Treasure Island devotees from twelve to sixteen. Good format." Marguerite Nahigian

+ Library J 66:799 S 15 '41 120w

"Distinctly Stevensonian, but the derivation does not spoil one's pleasure in reading the book. The whole thing is very well done, and the illustrations are brilliantly in tune with it." M. C.

+ Manchester Guardian p7 D 6 '40 60w

"The characterization is excellent, the atmosphere of the London waterfront and life at sea 150 years ago is admirably conveyed, and the well-knit plot moves swiftly and surely to its solution, with plenty of excitement on the way. The book is designed with distinction and beauty. Walter Hodges's fine drawings delight the eye and perfectly suggest the period." A. T. E.

+ N Y Times p35 N 2 '41 250w

New Yorker 17:144 D 6 '41 30w

SMITH, MRS ETTA MAY. Salute the flag; pictured by Lucile Wallower. 32p $1 Whitman, A.

929.9 Flags—Juvenile literature

Story of the flag of the United States, its evolution, history, and meaning, how it is used by the army and navy, on merchant ships and on airplanes. The flag code and how the flag is used on holidays and special days is included. For readers of seven to nine.

SMITH, E. M.—Continued

"A useful little manual, attractively illustrated and bound. Recommended for children seven to nine." Emily Hutson

+ Library J 67:42 Ja 1 '42 80w

"It is intended for little folks but many an adult will find much to learn in Salute the Flag."

Springf'd Republican p7e D 14 '41 110w

SMITH, EUGENE CADWALLADER. Kodru, the monkey [il. by Anne Vaughan]. 58p $2 Knopf

Monkeys—Legends and stories 41-10787

Story of an African monkey from his babyhood to his leadership of the clan. For grades three to five.

Reviewed by H. L. Binsee

Commonweal 35:111 N 21 '41 30w

"Decorative animal drawings, highly successful. Color is handled decoratively and with skill." Warren Chappell

+ Horn Bk M 17:453 N '41 20w

"Attractive illustrations in color and large type make a pleasing format, but the story lacks vitality and most children prefer stories written in the third person. It might be used as a stepping stone to the reading of Willwerding." J. E. Wooster

+ — Library J 66:737 S 1 '41 60w

SMITH, FRANCES LOWE. Recipes and menus for fifty, as used in the School of domestic science of the Boston Young women's Christian association; completely rev. by Florence P. Stoddard. 301p il $2.50 Barrows

641.57 Cookery for institutions, etc. Menus 41-51757

"First published in 1913 [Book Review Digest, 1913] as a cooking school textbook and now enlarged and modernized." (Booklist) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:443 My 15 '41

J Home Econ 35:485 S '41 40w

SMITH, FRANK PERCY. Management trading; stock-market prices and profits; pub. for the Univ. of Rochester. 146p $2.50 Yale univ. press

332.61 Stock exchange. Securities. U.S. Securities and exchange commission 41-7993

"This study is an attempt to view in its proper perspective the stock trading transacted by corporate insiders. The author analyzes the major arguments advanced in support of greater freedom for insider trading; outlines some of the practices of insiders; and discusses the provisions of the Securities Exchange Act designed to restrict such practices. He presents data on stockholdings of corporate insiders, and with this information for a background forms his final judgment of the trading of corporate insiders and its relation to stock-price movements." (Management R) Index.

"The author shows judicious restraint in drawing inferences from his statistical findings, and although the questions raised probably cannot now be finally answered, readers will find here a clear, intelligent, and enlightening discussion of an important problem in private finance." C. C. Bosland

+ Am Econ R 31:647 S '41 340w

Reviewed by G. W. Hoffman

Ann Acad 217:190 S '41 450w

Management R 30:196 My '41 70w

SMITH, GEDDES. Plague on us. 365p il map $3 Commonwealth fund

614.49 Epidemics. Infection and infectious diseases 41-3585

Beginning with an account of the course of some great epidemics, like the Black death, yellow fever, Asiatic cholera and the so-called Spanish influenza of 1918-19, the author traces the struggle of mankind thru twenty centuries to understand and ward off pestilence. "The diseases with which the book is mainly concerned owe their origin to creatures from the microscopic world and beyond." The detective work involved in tracking down the sources of epidemics is graphically described in six narratives dealing with specific instances. The Epilogue tells how much there is yet to learn about the physiology of infections. Index.

"Only once in a very great while do books like this appear. It is recommended to the thoughtful and intelligent layman. It is suggested as required reading in all introductory courses in epidemiology. It might well serve as a model of clean-cut expression." H. S. Mustard

+ Am J Pub Health 31:390 Ap '41 440w

Booklist 37:384 Ap 15 '41

"The book under review, written by a layman with the constant assistance of experts, is at once fascinating and sound. It is equipped, unobtrusively, with unusually adequate notes and references to scientific sources, and it has a detailed index; indeed, it has been pronounced 'a valuable reference work for specialists in the field' by a technical reviewer. But beyond all this, the book is to be recommended for good writing." H. M. Parsley

+ Books p42 D 7 '41 650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '41

J Home Econ 33:264 Ap '41 60w

"Taken as a whole, this seems to me the best book I have read on the subject, and should do much to raise the level of epidemiological discussion, not only in general, but also in professional circles." Major Greenwood

+ Nature 148:69 JI 19 '41 700w

Reviewed by H. M. Davis

New Repub 104:767 Je 2 '41 300w

"Written from a layman's point of view, it is approved by authorities in epidemiology and bacteriology."

+ School & Society 53:160 F 1 '41 70w

"Geddes Smith [writes] expressly for the layman. His material, gleaned from medical histories, standard texts, current journals, and from many individual scientists, does not bristle with annoying references that deflect the eye from the text. Instead, at the end of each chapter, he not only lists his references but gives 'a note on sources' that is of more than ordinary value to the reader." A. H. Compton & others

+ Scientific Bk Club R 12:1 F '41 1300w

"This volume is designed for the layman and is well organized, skillfully written and, most important of all, it is blessed with broad and sound scholarship as pooled from the resources of an outstanding research foundation." C. B. M.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 13 '41 1000w

Reviewed by M. M. Davis

Survey 77:279 S '41 360w

"A first-rate book, excellently produced." + Times [London] Lit Sup p295 Je 21 '41 750w

SMITH, GLANVILLE. Many a green isle; il. by Everett C. McNear. 284p map $3.50 Harper

917.29 West Indies—Description and travel (W) 41-2200

A volume of travel sketches written during the months the author wandered from one small or little known island to another in the West Indies.

Atlantic Ap '41 170w

Booklist 37:323 Mr 15 '41

Bookmark 2:11 My '41

"This is something different and superior in the way of a travel book. Mr. Smith gives us belles lettres instead of journalism, which is in itself a novelty that has not been so well attempted since Lafcadio Hearn wrote 'Two Years in the French West Indies.' He lacks the richness and glamor of Hearn's style, but then he never aspired to it, and in making the comment I intended no slur. He is a gentle, somewhat wistful essayist of the Charles Lamb-Christopher Morley school, who has succeeded in linking twenty chapters, each dealing with some minor aspect of his travels, into an admirable whole." David Tilden

+ Books p6 Mr 23 '41 550w

Boston Transcript p2 Mr 1 '41 160w

"There is nothing mediocre about 'Many a Green Isle.' If you don't enjoy it, that will be because its decidedly personal quality is not to your liking; not because it is ever commonplace. . . Black-and-white sketches by Everett C. McNear are plentiful and piquant. 'Many a Green Isle' is a really rich book: a travel record that has substance and intelligent charm." K. W.

+ N Y Times p4 F 9 '41 800w

Wis Lib Bul 37:53 Mr '41

SMITH, GOLDWIN ALBERT. The treaty of Washington, 1871; a study in imperial history. 134p $2 Cornell univ. press

971.05 Washington, Treaty of, 1871. U.S.—Foreign relations—Great Britain. Great Britain—Foreign relations—U.S. 41-3361

"An intensive study to show the effect of the Treaty in the relations of Great Britain and Canada, with useful notes on Anglo-American affairs." Social Studies

Reviewed by L. B. Shippee

Am Hist R 47:187 O '41 280w

"The Treaty of Washington, 1871, gives a full and interesting account of the long struggle within the British delegation between Canadian Premier Sir John A. Macdonald and his British colleagues. The storm in Canada over ratification is told equally well. The volume amply demonstrates that in its very infancy the Dominion of Canada laid the basis for its present independence in foreign affairs. The volume is a well documented addition to Canadian-Imperial history." D. F. Fleming

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:1022 O '41 120w

"While giving praise to the book as a whole, the reviewer is of the opinion that it received insufficient attention in its final revision. The chapter on 'Canada and the Canadian Question' could have been strengthened, and use might have been made of such important works as Allan Nevins's Hamilton Fish and L. B. Shippee's Canadian-American Relations. It seems doubtful that Admiral Ranshawe 'captured over four hundred vessels in three months' (pp.4-5). Sir John Rose could not have written Lord Granville from Ottawa on January 26, 1871 (p.35), as he was then in Washington. Canadian ministers knew of Rose's financial relations with the American government before he reached Ottawa, and he informed both Thornton and Granville of the opposition to his appointment as Commissioner. He does not seem to have been wanting in 'honesty and candour' (p. 41)." R. S. Longley

+ Canadian Hist R 22:206 Je '41 600w

Social Studies 32:192 Ap '41 20w

Times [London] Lit Sup p484 S 27 '41 200w

SMITH, HARRY ALLEN. Low man on a totem pole; with an introd. by Fred Allen. 300p $2 Doubleday

B or 92 Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (W) 41-11466

Memoirs of a young journalist, who was born in Illinois, worked for a time in Denver, and finally arrived in New York, where he interviewed celebrities, among his other newspaper duties. The book is largely a collection of these interviews, liberally spiked with humor.

"Between interviews, Smith writes quaint paraphrases of the local weather forecasts. Escapist literature." Lisle Bell

Books p11 My 25 '41 500w

"The mixture is uneven and there is too much of too little, so that there is a sense of being full without having had anything particular to eat. You aren't dissatisfied—though the tailpiece 'My Hobby' has no place outside a course in the light, or familiar, essay—but for a writer like H. Allen Smith you are vaguely disappointed. He looked pretty good and he is pretty good, but on this one he just wasn't ready." Otis Ferguson

+ New Repub 104:896 Je 30 '41 500w

"Mr. Smith is one of the star feature interviewers around New York, keeps very busy, has met hundreds of people, and it is bad luck for every one that he has not yet encountered a Sam Weller because this book is very nearly as light-hearted as 'The Pickwick Papers,' and is funny, but it lacks a Weller to put it across. One good thing about Mr. Smith is that he's not in the least bored." Robert van Gelder

+ N Y Times p5 Je 8 '41 420w

Reviewed by Clifton Fadiman

New Yorker 17:90 My 17 '41 280w

"In addition to his interviews, most of them reprinted from the New York World-Telegram, Mr. Smith writes about himself. You'll like him and his book." Oliver Harrison

+ Sat R of Lit 24:11 My 31 '41 350w

SMITH, HARVEY HASSALL. The gang's all here. 325p $2.50 Princeton univ. press

41-6550

This novel is an unconventional who's who of a re-unioning class of graduates of Nostalgia university. Tubby Rankin, class secretary, commissioned to prepare the usual twenty-fifth re-union memory book, kicks over the traces and tells the "truth"—and then Tubby leaves hurriedly for an extended trip to the South seas.

Reviewed by Fred Schwed, Jr.

Books p10 Ap 6 '41 650w

"It is the story of 60 men, built around questionnaires arising out of their twenty-fifth re-union at fictitious Nostalgia University. . . Many of these are masterpieces. Tubby doesn't hold himself back in any way. He tells of those who have climbed to the top on others' backs with a bitter and incisive touch. And he tells of the decent men with humor and whimsy and kindness. His men are human and you see them all about you. It's a shrewd and telling picture of the World War I generation." E. J. Bartnett

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 19 '41 200w

Reviewed by Eleanor Van Alen

Current Hist & Forum 52:5 My '41 240w

Reviewed by R. D. Minnich

Library J 66:265 Mr 15 '41 90w

New Repub 104:642 My 5 '41 50w

"While most of the characterizations are humorous and several hilariously funny, the author has included a few revealing portrayals of quiet heroism and self-sacrifice that indicate a gift for depicting a wide range of emotions. The treatment of his subjects is varied, ranging from the short short story form to the New Yorker profile, so that the reader escapes any impression of monotony. The prevailing note is satiric, but the satire is as applicable to American middle-class life as to the college graduate component. It is a book which will be enjoyed by Old Nostalgians everywhere and perhaps more by their wives." Drake DeKay

SMITH, H. H.—Continued
+ N Y Times p7 Ap 20 '41 650w

"A good notion, but Mr. Marquand need not worry about his laurels. There are some sly hits, but for the most part Mr. Smith is fairly tame and often a victim himself of alma-mater sentimentality."

New Yorker 17:85 Ap 12 '41 50w

"It is no necessary derogation from [Mr Smith's] book that the humor is about the humor of alumni magazines and college reunions, for that, of course, is what he intended it to be. The farcical is very farcical, the sarcastic is very sarcastic, and the sentimental is of an obvious and rudimentary order. . . [The] book is an amusing travesty at the worst, and in the spirit of good social comedy at the best."

H. M. Jones

+ — Sat R of Lit 23:16 Ap 12 '41 440w

"Harvey Smith, the author, is a Princeton graduate and a New York advertising executive. He has written many short stories, but this is his first published novel—novel also in form, resembling a dictionary of biography, but with this difference—that all these pearls are strung upon a single cord."

+ Springfield Republican p7e My 11 '41 200w

SMITH, HILRIE SHELTON. Faith and nurture. 208p $2 Scribner

268 Religious education. Liberalism (religion) (W) 41-25774

"Modern 'progressive education' is under fire from many quarters, and the author of this book believes that religious educators, who have been so largely influenced by it must seriously ask whether it is not time to realign the theological foundations of Protestant nurture with the newer currents of Christian thought. He presents an outline of the origin and the growth of liberal religious education, with its emphasis on the immanence of God, the Kingdom of God as a democracy, the natural goodness of the child, who needs Christian nurture rather than conversion. He believes that the sort of religious education which we owe so largely to George A. Coe is inconsistent with the Christian tradition. We must in the church school, as the most modern preacher has already done in the pulpit, return to the 'new orthodoxy.'" (Churchman) Index.

"[The author] seems to the reviewer to use too much of his ammunition in attacking Dewey and those who with him do not postulate a personal God. He defends Bushnell, who originated the phrase 'Christian nurture,' as a sincere believer in the need for redemption, but seems to blame all Christian educators who have learned anything from Dewey for all the vulnerable points in Dewey's theology. But those who still believe in liberal religious education should read this book, since it presents an attack which must be repulsed if such education has any right to survive." W. L. Caswell

Churchman 156:17 Ja 1 '42 230w

"The author is a clever and incisive thinker and has done a scholarly piece of work. He is not an 'anti,' but he does challenge the liberal on his own ground, at the same time granting his inestimable contribution—up to a point—to religion. My criticism of Faith and Nurture is that it bases its whole study upon the work of the ultraliberals, men who are thoroughgoing humanists. But they do not speak for the rank and file of workers in the field of Christian education. . . Coe, Dewey, and their disciples are great and influential, but they are less dominant than Dr. Smith would have us believe." W. R. McNutt

+ — Crozer Q 19:80 Ja '42 380w

SMITH, JOHN MERLIN POWIS. The prophets and their times; 2d ed. rev. by William A. Irwin. 342p $2.50 Univ. of Chicago press

224 Prophets. Bible. Old Testament—Prophetical books 41-51821

"A Biblical study [Book Review Digest, 1925] revised to bring outdated interpretations in line with recent study. Most of the change is in the chapter on Ezekiel." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 37:495 Je 15 '41

"It is not too much to say that the book is essential to the intelligent reading of the Old Testament and of all that stems from it. (Its value, especially to the general reader, would be enhanced if the pages allotted to the index of passages were applied instead to making the subject-index more complete. Two or three maps and chronological tables are also to be desiderated.) More than this, the authors make a number of essays in what I might call 'universal interpretation'. . . In this they are not uniformly successful. . . But their task in this field—the highest function of criticism—is notably well-performed and its merit lies as much in its suggestiveness as in any declared analyses." R. E. K. Pemberton
+ — Canadian Forum 21:252 N '41 500w

"The revision by Professor Irwin, Professor Smith's colleague until the latter's lamented death, is both reverent and bold. Especially in dealing with Ezekiel has the reviser departed rather radically from the author's view. Much critical work has been done during the past fifteen years. Full acquaintance with this, in addition to his independent studies and the possession of Smith's marginal comments on his own copy of the work, has equipped Professor Irwin to give new usefulness and authority to what was already a living book. In every time of stress a restudy of the prophets offers fresh rewards."

+ Christian Century 58:691 My 21 '41 120w

Reviewed by I. G. Matthews

Crozer Q 18:252 Jl '41 700w

"Few, perhaps, would agree with all the positions taken in this new edition, but the work of revision has been well done, and the book is now more than ever one to be heartily recommended." Millar Burrows

+ J Religion 22:118 Ja '42 550w

SMITH, JOSEPH RUSSELL. The devil of the machine age. 89p $1.50 Harcourt

330.1 Economic policy. Industry—Organization, control, etc. 41-51758

A sermon in economics for modern America based on the theme that in our present economy as producers we all work for scarcity of our own product, so that as consumers we are denied the abundance that the machine age is capable of providing.

Booklist 37:433 My 15 '41

Reviewed by J. P. Boland

Commonweal 34:162 Je 6 '41 350w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:376 Ja '42 30w

"Professor Smith is no admirer of state socialism, and businessmen, therefore, may pay attention to what he says even though he makes mincemeat of some of their most cherished prejudices. He writes with admirable common sense and he brings to the subject of economics the geographer's constant awareness of physical realities—an awareness which seems lacking in all too many economists. I have only two mild complaints to offer. I wish he had developed more fully the positive remedies he puts forward for curing artificial scarcity. And some protest must be made to his publishers in regard to the pricing of this book." Keith Hutchison

+ — Nation 152:476 Ap 19 '41 700w

"Professor Smith as a neo-technocrat is trenchant, provocative, and inconclusive!" Orday Tead

+ — Survey G 30:350 Je '41 170w

Wis Lib Bul 37:89 My '41

SMITH, LOGAN PEARSTALL. Milton and his modern critics. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 87p $1.50 Little [3s 6d Oxford]

821 Milton, John, 1608-1674 41-5468

Milton, the author says, was for centuries regarded as one of the supreme masters of English. Even thru the first two decades of the twentieth century his fame grew, but with the coming to England of two American middle westerners—Ezra Pound and T. S. Eliot—a group was formed which sought to bring about Milton's downfall. In this small volume Mr Smith criticizes the critics and defends Milton from their attacks.

Booklist 37:435 My 15 '41

"Mr. Logan Pearsall Smith has written one of the smallest and most delightful of his small, delightful books. He has not 'any dread that the modern criticsasters may shove the immortal poet from his throne' and consequently his essay is not an effort to rehabilitate the reputation of John Milton. Rather it is his homage to one of the greatest of English poets combined with demure but none the less telling thrusts at the pretensions of those who, affecting to speak with authority, claim to have 'dislodged' Milton from his place of pride." S. C. Chew

+ Books p21 Ap 6 '41 750w

"This little book is at once highly entertaining and extremely well written, and it is a book that badly needed to be written." Theodore Maynard

+ Cath World 153:760 S '41 600w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 5 '41 600w

"It is an admirable performance critically, and an entertaining one from any point of view." M. W.

+ Commonweal 34:309 J1 18 '41 150w

"Provocative essay full of wit and scholarship in critical appreciation of the great poet." E. H. Crowell

+ Library J 66:219 Mr 1 '41 30w

"As an appreciation of the unique qualities of Milton's style, of its verbal splendour and subtly ordered syntax, this little book is a valuable corrective to excessive depreciation. It fails, however, to meet the whole argument brought by the younger critics against a style which reflects the 'egotistic sublime.'" H. F. A. F.

+ — Manchester Guardian p7 N 12 '40 340w

"Mr. Smith makes no attempt seriously to consider or answer criticism of Milton, preferring to retell literary gossip in his meditative, graceful, and feline style, with the result that to this reviewer at least his book has exactly the value of gossip as differentiated from that of criticism." C. I. W.

— New Eng Q 14:604 S '41 240w

"It is time that these Milton-baiters had their hair slapped down, but Mr. Logan Pearsall Smith in this little book hardly shows himself the man to do it. Commanding neither the Comanche war-whoop of Ezra Pound nor the distilled poison-drop of T. S. Eliot, he fails to deal with their main contentions, and too often loses himself instead in personal attacks on their merits as poets and their erudition as critics." Edgar Johnson

— + New Repub 104:800 Je 9 '41 420w

"The effect of the book is only mildly interesting. One of two courses was open to Milton's modern champion. Either he might have embarked on a detailed analysis of these contemporary attacks, seeking to understand the point of view that has inspired them, or—better still—have attempted a fresh survey of his hero's genius. Mr. Pearsall Smith takes both courses but succeeds in pursuing neither of them very far." Peter Quennell

+ — New Statesman & Nation 20:496 N 16 '40 1050w

"This slender volume carries much weight. Upon a subject of great literary importance it brings to bear both copious learning and unerring critical penetration. Using these invincible weapons, Mr. Smith conducts a brave and victorious defense by means of a bold and brilliant offensive." D. A. Roberts

+ N Y Times p5 My 25 '41 400w

New Yorker 17:71 Mr 29 '41 20w

"The little book may be heartily recommended to the student of Milton and to the more general reader as one of the year's most thoroughly enjoyable essays in literary criticism." A. M. Witherspoon

+ Sat R of Lit 24:8 J1 12 '41 550w

Reviewed by John Hayward

Spec 165:482 N 8 '40 700w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 8 '40 550w
(Reprinted from Times [London] Lit Sup)

Time 37:96 Mr 17 '41 750w

"Mr. Pearsall Smith is in capital form."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p567 N 9 '40 750w

SMITH, MINNA JOSEPHINE. Three secrets: a story of Portugal; il. by Agnes Lehman. 239p $2 Macmillan

(W) 41-4268

Modern Portugal provides the setting for this story of an American girl anxious to win a scholarship for a course in journalism. She spends a summer with relatives in Lisbon, lands in a lot of political intrigue, and finally succeeds in getting a story published in the paper. For girls twelve to fourteen.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p7 Mr 9 '41 230w

"Recommended as a good second-rate book for girls of twelve to fourteen; light, modern, satisfactorily written, if without literary distinction. The author will do better books, and did, I believe in her Llewellyn's Tower." J. L. Sauer

+ — Library J 66:269 Mr 15 '41 150w

SMITH, NICOL. Bush master; into the jungles of Dutch Guiana; il. from phot. by the author. 315p map $3.50 Bobbs

918.8 Arawak Indians. Dutch Guiana—Description and travel (W) 41-5320

Adventures of the author in the jungles of Dutch Guiana, where he met a strange German doctor who collected poisonous snakes, jaguars, voodoo, and indulged in Fifth Column activities.

"Mr. Smith tells the student of jungle lore little that can be called wholly new, though his book is pleasantly written and easy to read. There is a complete lack of any solid background for his tale, which often borders on the fantastic." Hendrick De Leeuw

— + Books p12 Ag 31 '41 400w

"This eventful story is presented as an 'authentic narrative of travel,' but fiction could scarcely outdo the thrilling quality of its appeal. It is told briskly and smoothly, with some humor and a good balance of suspense and excitement, and there is no reason why any one should bother about a possible question of complete factual accuracy. 'Bush Master' serves the purpose of entertainment merely, and readers who like this type of escape writing will find it very entertaining indeed."

+ N Y Times p18 Ap 27 '41 480w

"A slight but entertaining yarn."

+ New Yorker 17:88 Ap 12 '41 60w

"Fantastic though much of it may be, the book is convincingly written, with considerable humor and sensitivity, and the tangential tales carry you around the passages of somewhat shrill description. These tales of voodoo, of the green-faced girls, of old Daddy Winkler who once saved Teddy Roosevelt, of the exquisite Orchid Princess and her uncle, the tarantula, will hold the most skeptical by his upstanding hair." Hassoldt Davis

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:13 Je 14 '41 360w

Times [London] Lit Sup p440 S 6 '41 800w

SMITH, PAUL GERARD. The New Lancashire lad; narrated by Pat O'Malley; il. by George Price. 56p $1.50 Howell, Soskin 817 41-8139

A new volume of the humorous anecdotes in verse, narrated by Pat O'Malley, over the Alec Templeton radio hour. The first volume was entered in Book Review Digest of 1940 under the title: Lancashire Lad.

"This second book of fabulous ballads in Yorkshire dialect . . . will, like the first collection of them printed last year, delight all fans of the Pinwinkle family and of Sam Small. Happily for escapists, young 'Erbert's folks have not yet succeeded in bringing about his demise. . . George Price's accompanying drawings are even funnier than before—they're perfect—just by themselves, apart from the text."

+ Books p18 Ap 13 '41 130w

Boston Transcript p2 Mr 29 '41 100w

Reviewed by Beatrice Sherman

N Y Times p16 Jl 27 '41 150w

SMITH, ROBERT AURA. Our future in Asia. 306p maps $3 Viking

950 Eastern question (Far East). U.S.—Foreign relations (W) 40-32518

For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

"The author's concluding recommendations, however practicable, are of the highest interest. . . Mr. Smith, whatever the merits of his thesis, at least offers American democracy a chance at the initiative, and escape from the disheartening blind alley of negative defense. For this reason, his work is probably too bold to enjoy wide acceptance." P. M. A. Linebarger

Am Pol Sci R 35:177 F '41 550w

"His book is significant chiefly as a popular appeal on behalf of an American crusade, not for democracy, but for a new imperialism and new conflicts in the western Pacific. Needless to add, the book is totally lacking in references, footnotes, and bibliography; and the four maps are too elementary to be of much value." G. L. LaFuze

Ann Am Acad 215:190 My '41 320w

"This is one of the best books on American policy in the Far East to appear in recent years. Mr. Smith, a newspaperman who knows the Orient well, gives a comprehensive picture of the problems we face, particularly in Southeastern Asia where America's economic and strategic interests are shown to be anything but negligible. Though isolationists will not like his suggestions as to what active steps this country should take to protect its position in the Far East, they will find it very hard to refute them."

+ Foreign Affairs 19:687 Ap '41 70w

"On the basis of an impressive array of facts, Mr. Smith brilliantly discusses the major tenets of America's complex and important relationships with the lands bordering the South China Sea, and his conclusions are not pleasant to contemplate. . . One gets the impression, however, that the book was rapidly put together. There are mistakes in detail, many of which could be readily checked and corrected. For example, Mr. Smith speaks of both manganese and ferrograde and thereby apparently arrives at a total of 18 items on the 'strategic' list of United States deficiencies. At the time of publication, too, aluminum, optical glass, and wool had been dropped, and the list contained but 14 materials. A number of controversial points are also presented. The importance of Philippine sugar to the United States and the potentialities of the Chinese import market would, in themselves, seem hardly to justify strong action. By and large, an excellent job has been done in presenting a vital problem at a critical time in a way that should prove of interest to both political and economic geographers, as well as to the general public." R. B. Hall

+ — Geog R 31:351 Ap '41 400w

Reviewed by A. R. M. Lower

Pacific Affairs 14:122 Mr '41 380w

"On the whole the book is interestingly written, with historical and statistical material worked into the discussion in such a manner as to lend support to the arguments without burdening the reader who may not be accustomed to digesting large quantities of such data. There is a tendency throughout to oversimplify, and at times the author distorts the picture by a too detailed discussion of some one phase—for example, the pros and cons of an American embargo of Japanese goods. Although it lacks some of the impartial and scholarly qualities which characterize the studies of current Far Eastern problems now appearing in the Institute of Pacific Relations Inquiry Series, Our Future in Asia doubtless will reach a great many readers who would otherwise remain in ignorance regarding the essential factors underlying American Far Eastern policy." Knight Biggerstaff

+ — Pol Sci Q 56:304 Je '41 650w

SMITH, ROBERT AURA. Your foreign policy: how, what, and why. 280p $2.75 Viking

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations (W) 41-16943

This book on the foreign policy of the United States is dedicated to Mr. Jones, Johnny Brown, and Mrs. Green who have asked the author: Has the United States got a foreign policy? Is it any good? What can the ordinary private citizen do to uphold it or change it? The author is a member of the Foreign news department of the New York Times. Index.

Booklist 38:46 O 15 '41

"Because every book dealing with our foreign policy is significant, this book will be read, but it should be read as a book which will undoubtedly receive the plaudits of the state department." J. F. Mulholland

Christian Century 58:1212 O 1 '41 400w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:379 Ja '42 50w

Reviewed by R. H. McDonough

Library J 66:731 S 1 '41 90w

New Repub 105:381 S 22 '41 40w

"Mr. Smith's book should contribute to the understanding of lecture audiences—and even be read with profit and better lectures by speakers on foreign policy. And it should be highly recommended to those who accept frequently repeated assertion for fact and to those laymen and statesmen who hold forth upon international relations fortified only by their delusions and random-selected and undigested statistics from the World Almanac." S. T. Williamson

+ N Y Times p16 N 2 '41 1000w

Reviewed by J. F. Green

Sat R of Lit 24:13 S 27 '41 500w

Springf'd Republican p10 D 10 '41 500w

SMITH, ROBERT PAUL. So it doesn't whistle. 234p $2.50 Harcourt

41-18116

A novel about four very modern young New Yorkers and their work and their girls and their drinking. It is written in a staccato, stream-of-consciousness style, and describes the drinking bouts, bars, and parties, which were the forerunners of two marriages and the breakup of the apartment, known as The Place, where the four men had lived.

"Mr. Smith's little book is not a bad novel as such; it is merely aimless and coy. Like so many writers of his kind, he can write very well, but the best things in his book do not spring from anything deeply felt and directly seen; they are stabbing little scenes, adroit and tough and gay, that prove nothing more than Mr. Smith's abundant knowledge of the contemporary New York scene and his ability to mimic what he knows. . . The story oscillates between a boozy good companionship, full of high jinks and manly comradeship, and a swaggering toughness that gets Mr. Smith nowhere." Alfred Kazin

— + Books p10 S 21 '41 750w

"Frothy fiction pickled in alcohol."

— Christian Century 58:1243 O 8 '41 10w

"The book is no more a novel than an art student's sketch is a work to put on exhibition, and should have been treated accordingly by being laid aside until the author has more fully developed his powers. Making the start he has, he courts the fate that only too often overcomes precocity, and that is a pity, for one really feels that Mr. Smith has talents worth cultivating." Alvin Adey

— + Current Hist 1:275 N '41 250w

"Sometimes the book is a little overwritten, but it has a cocky appeal in the kind of thing it is, and it is the best of its kind since that particular mood appeared in the early Hemingway." Otis Ferguson

+ New Repub 105:411 S 29 '41 360w

"It is hard but not trim, emotional and unenthusiastic. There are passages that probably sounded good when written and explode at the touch of even a figurative pin, and other passages written casually that stand up very well. The characters take that old word bohemian and swing it out of the world. . . . The style is strained, self-conscious. At first impression the book is bad. . . . Yet there is a strength in the mood and in some of the scenes that almost makes up for the generalized hysteria that sets the males breaking down to cry every once in a while—though the females never cry." Robert van Gelder

— + N Y Times p27 S 21 '41 500w

"Mr. Smith has an unusually acute ear for current colloquial speech."

New Yorker 17:109 S 20 '41 30w

"This book contains about equal parts of Joyce, Saroyan, and Budd Schulberg; liquor, love, jazz music, and stream-of-consciousness reflections on death and such items are all inextricably mixed in a combination that is somewhat dizzying. The book is extremely funny in its more lucid passages. . . . Anyone who enjoys a 'screwball' story—and anyone with a sufficiently exquisite sense for the incongruous does—will probably enjoy 'So It Doesn't Whistle.'" Phil Stong

Sat R of Lit 24:12 S 6 '41 360w

"Although Mr Smith's people sound like seven characters in search of a psychiatrist, his presentation of them is extraordinarily good. His writing is engaging and forceful, but quite often of the 'smart' type that depends upon the sure-fire formula of calling a spade a spade. He has refined this formula to some degree by using the device of giving familiar obscenities names with less familiar forms, but with equally clear meanings. To put it delicately, he doesn't call a spade a spade, or even a shovel, but refers to it with a knowing smirk as a scoop with a handle—and there's no doubt what he means."

Springf'd Republican p7e S 21 '41 480w

SMITH, ROLLIN CARROL, and SMITH, ORLIN. Postmarked Vermont and California, 1862-1864 [letters] ed. by Fannie Smith Spurling; with drawings by Rollin C. Ayres. 202p maps $2 Tuttle pub. co.

B or 92 Frontier and pioneer life—California 40-34626

"In 1861, while others were going off to war, young Rollin Smith, of Pittsford, Vt., took passage to California to seek health and fortune. He reached his destination after a long and strenuous voyage, settled down in the little frontier village of Camptonville, and for almost three years worked as storekeeper, expressing agent and postmaster, taught a little school, sang at weddings and funerals, took a few flyers in mining, and wrote letters to his parents and to the girl whom he later married. His letters, and those from his father and sisters, were preserved, and his daughter has now presented them to us as an unvarnished record of daily life in Vermont and California during the Civil War years." Books

"There is a curious charm about these unpretentious letters. They are not at all clever or literary, but simple and homely, concerned with every-day events and interests rather than with the larger issues which the historian recalls." H. S. Commager

+ — Books p20 F 9 '41 700w

Reviewed by C. E. Tuttle, Jr.

New Eng Q 14:190 Mr '41 500w

SMITH, THOMAS VERNOR. The legislative way of life. 101p $1.50 Univ. of Chicago press 328.73 Legislative bodies. Representative government and representation 40-35246

The author, Congressman-at-large from Illinois and a Chicago university professor, writes here of the nature and philosophy of legislative government in a democracy, and in particular of American legislatures and legislators, their shortcomings as well as their achievements and possibilities.

Reviewed by Belle Zeller

Am Pol Sci R 35:357 Ap '41 700w

Booklist 37:236 F 1 '41

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:194 O '41 10w

"In a beautifully written defense, frankly purposed at counteracting the 'dangerous disease' of popular disdain of politicians, Mr. Smith displays a homely wit, an unpretentious erudition, and a greater concern for the theoretical than for the practical."

+ Harvard Law R 54:730 F '41 280w

"Mr. Smith, who delivered these three lectures, is both a practicing politician and a professional philosopher. . . . He possesses a unique combination of interests and talents which cannot but be fruitful for those who would gain insight into the functioning and problems of legislation." Chester Röhrlich

+ N Y Times p9 F 16 '41 600w

SMITH, THOMAS VERNOR. Lincoln, living legend. 83p $1 Univ. of Chicago press [6s Cambridge]

B or 92 Lincoln, Abraham 40-36030

"This essay, commemorating Lincoln's Cooper Union address, is the ripe product of a mind whose blending of philosophy with purposive politics is implicit in every paragraph. Seeing in Lincoln a great principle, the philosopher-congressman elaborates it with epigrammatic distinction, relates it to slavery, then fits it to our own day. Lincoln, as Mr. Smith believes, lifted political compromise to the level of exalted principle." Am Hist R

Reviewed by J. G. Randall

Am Hist R 46:990 Jl '41 220w

Social Studies 32:48 Ja '41 10w

SMITH, THORNE. The passionate witch; completed by Norman Matson; with drawings by Herbert Roesse. 267p $2 Doubleday (W) 41-13943

The ludicrous adventures of a mild little millionaire, brought up on ice water and vitamins, who made the mistake of marrying a witch and very nearly succumbed to her wiles.

"'The Passionate Witch' is an entertaining story. Mr. Matson has done well. Perhaps only rabid Thorne Smith devotees will mourn the scarcity of his bright particular madness." Page Cooper

Books p6 Jl 27 '41 400w

"It is the kind of light reading that gets pretty heavy after a while, not quite so funny as average Wodehouse but the same rapid invention and feeling of deliberate effort." Otis Ferguson

New Repub 105:259 Ag 25 '41 120w

SMITH, THORNE—Continued

"Mr. Matson has done a neat job of finishing the novel Thorne Smith left incomplete at his death. No one would ever know that any but the shaky Smith hand had set up these fantastic creatures and more incredible situations. There are no visible seams to indicate where welding or patching may have been done. The Smith fans can take this for straight Smith." Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p16 Ag 3 '41 240w

"It doesn't make sense, but Thorne Smith admirers probably won't care, in spite of an air of strain now and then."

New Yorker 17:54 J1 26 '41 70w

"Witch Jennifer in this last book is malignant, the first Thorne Smith character to be drawn from black magic, and although all ends well for her happy husband her vindictiveness at times casts an unaccustomed gloom over the story. It is indulging in fantasy to say that when Thorne Smith created Jennifer it was already later than he thought, but the fact remains that although his last book is an unexpected feast, there is a skeleton at it."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e J1 27 '41 360w

SMITTER, WESSEL. Another morning. 355p $2.50 Harper

(W) 41-6178

A story of a family of modern pioneers on the government colonization project in Matanuska Valley, Alaska.

Booklist 37:440 My 15 '41

Bookmark 2:18 N '41

"Mr. Smitter has chosen to tell this drama not so much in terms of human beings as in terms of the machine. As such, as a novel of the machine it is a fine and moving story, full of ultimate hope for the farmers who can avail themselves of tractors and 'cats' and power sprayers. Just as in 'F.O.B. Detroit,' his first novel, Mr. Smitter is at his best when he sings of machinery. . . But only rarely does he have the same understanding and intimacy with his characters. Their conversation is often well reported, natural, sometimes witty, flavored with real farm slang. . . Yet the characters never become as important as the land or the machine. Often they are completely lost sight of." Ruth Gruber

+ — Books p11 Ap 20 '41 700w

"It would be asking almost too much that the whole novel should live up to its first 80 pages. It doesn't, for two reasons. One is that Smitter is making a plea, and the last few chapters, with their question-and-answer method, read a little too much like a tract, no matter how much we agree with the point being made. The other is that the chronicle of the actual breaking of the soil . . . is the stale chronicle of all pioneer novels. . . Still, those two weaknesses cannot blind us to the importance of Mr. Smitter's book. Its characters . . . are solid and strong, good building material for democracy. And most of all, this novel is important because it transplants the typical frontier virtues from a dead past to a living present and future, and shows us an America trying to remake itself on a different and more enduring pattern." Wallace Stegner

+ — Boston Transcript pl Ap 26 '41 650w

"As a relation of the physical events of that enterprise, and a statement of a new ideal in socialized farming, the book is thorough, earnest, effective. But the effort to make it into fiction halts in every line. None of the characters come alive, and the illiterate dialogue is so carelessly written that the author cannot even stick to the grammatical errors of the characters he attempts to establish."

+ — Canadian Forum 21:93 Je '41 150w

"The author is unexpectedly sympathetic with the whole project. Sustained interest, able writing, and new subject matter will give this book a wide and general appeal." L. M. Kinloch

+ Library J 66:265 Mr 15 '41 120w

Reviewed by Miriam Borgenicht

New Repub 104:832 Je 16 '41 240w

"Wessel Smitter, more than most novelists, is master of the practical and technical side of the things he writes about. He tells Clem Williams's story, and by extension the story of the Matanuska Colony in very much the terms one imagines Clem Williams himself might have chosen. 'Another Morning,' is written in an unornamented prose from which purple patches are refreshingly absent. It makes few efforts at economic, and no effort at philosophic generalization. But Mr. Smitter handles his chosen material with great and reassuring competence." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p6 Ap 20 '41 700w

New Yorker 17:90 Ap 19 '41 100w

Wis Lib Bul 37:117 Je '41

SMYTH, FREDERIC HASTINGS. Manhood into God. 502p $3.50 Round table

232.1 Incarnation. Anglo-Catholicism. Sacraments. Sociology, Christian 41-1352

This book embodies the materials of the author's course in the elementary principles of the Catholic faith given to young men of university grade. The author is a priest of the Anglican communion. The book is in three parts: The incarnation and history; The incarnation and the sacraments; The incarnation and the social order. Index.

Christian Century 58:154 Ja 29 '41 90w

Reviewed by R. C. Miller

Churchman 155:18 F 15 '41 150w

SNAVELY, GUY EVERETT. Choose and use your college; how to get the most out of college. 166p $2 Harper

378 Students. Colleges and universities—U.S. (W) 41-9068

Terse, common sense advice for prospective college students and their parents or guardians. The author, who is executive director of the association of American colleges, discusses: Why college? Which college? How college? What to study; How to study; Careers; Friendships; Health; College Life; Life outlook. The book contains a list of approved colleges, and also a list of college loan funds. Index.

Reviewed by F. H. Kirkpatrick

Christian Century 58:1305 O 22 '41 300w

School & Society 53:616 My 10 '41 70w

"Although 'Choose and Use Your College' is addressed to prospective undergraduates, it will be equally informative to their fathers and mothers. If through it these realize that college isn't what it used to be in the good old days, admissions officers and deans will get more fun out of their jobs. The book deserves, and doubtless will receive, the attention of many a freshman, whether or not it becomes required reading for 'orientation.' . . The book is needed, and it will be most welcome to those who really deserve the privilege of going to college." H. J. Savage

+ School & Society 53:740 Je 7 '41 230w

Reviewed by M. C. White

Survey G 30:406 J1 '41 240w

SNOW, CHARLES HORACE. Sheriff of Yavisa. 252p $2 Macrae Smith co.

41-35

Western story.

"Lots of amusing lingo in this rough-and-ready volume." Will Cuppy

Books p15 Ja 26 '41 30w

Boston Transcript p2 Ja 25 '41 20w

"Charles H. Snow is a veteran of many Western tales. This one, in its sureness of touch, its gripping interest and the swift economy of its telling, is one of the best of the lot." G. W. Harris

+ N Y Times p18 J1 20 '41 230w

SNOW, EDGAR. The battle for Asia [Eng title: Scorched earth], maps $3.75 Random house [12s 6d Gollancz]

951 China—History. Chinese-Japanese war, 1931-. Eastern question (Far East). Communism—China (W) 41-51579

"Recent reports suggesting that the Kuomintang and the Communists may split and leave China open to a decisive Japanese victory give great timeliness to Mr. Snow's narrative. His book is lively eyewitness journalism, a running account, full of careful political and economic analysis, of the last three fateful years in China." (New Yorker) Index.

"Among journalists in the Orient, Snow is one who loves off-the-beaten-track trips in the interior and whose firsthand knowledge of the Chinese Communists probably exceeds that of any other foreign observer. When one adds to this background the gifts of a lively, sometimes brilliant style and of a quick, inquiring, unconventional mind, one naturally obtains a first-rate book on China which no one interested in the Far Eastern scene can afford to neglect." W. H. C.

+ Atlantic Ap '41 170w

Booklist 37:290 Mr 1 '41

Bookmark 2:9 My '41

"Mr. Snow recovers from his own personal observations and impressions, some very vivid pictures of the fighting about Peiping and Shanghai, with background material on Japan in China which is well boiled down but not over-simplified. Thenceforward he supplies a great variety of material. Scattered through the book are perhaps a dozen travelogues, amiable and interesting accounts of personal adventure—in and behind the war zones." Rodney Gilbert

+ Books p3 F 23 '41 1200w

"The Battle for Asia' is a presentation of today and tomorrow in the Far East, brilliantly and accurately written by a man who has few equals in knowledge of what is happening and why. It demands careful reading and cogitation, for upon the subject discussed rests the fate of a continent." P. J. Searles

+ Boston Transcript p1 Mr 1 '41 700w

"A thoroughly exciting volume, this brings Snow's well-known 'Red Star Over China' up to date, and gives the reader a comprehensive understanding of the intricacies of the far eastern situation up to about the end of 1940. While the point of view is frankly farther left than that of the Kuomintang, the author is apparently no Communist himself despite his extravagant championing of the cause of that militant and dedicated group in China. . . The last chapter, 'Things That Could Happen,' is a sort of Inside Asia for 1940, though the author may not have travelled as widely on that great continent as did Gunther; is more penetrating and challenging than Gunther's picture." J. F. Davidson

+ Canadian Forum 21:25 Ap '41 950w

Cath World 153:117 Ap '41 400w

"Edgar Snow's first book, Red Star Over China, put him in the front rank of writers on the Far Eastern situation. His second, now published, should make his standing secure. One hesitates to call any book a 'must' which deals with as fluid a state of affairs as obtains in the Orient. But I am quite serious when I say that I do not think any American has a right to discuss publicly our policy on the other side of the Pacific until he has read Mr. Snow's new book, especially Part X, which fills approximately the last 75 pages. I would feel far more comfortable about what we are up to in the Far East if the public could be given some assurance that the book had been read, and pondered, in the White House." Paul Hutchinson

+ Christian Century 58:460 Ap 2 '41 750w

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin

Christian Science Monitor p10 Mr 29 '41 900w

"As anyone familiar with Edgar Snow's work will realize, this is not a book hastily thrown together. It is rather a combination of brilliant descriptive reporting and searching analysis of the great struggle for the mastery of Asia that lies behind the undeclared Sino-Japanese war which is now in its fourth year and which has already caused millions of military and civilian casualties. It furnishes the best kind of background material for the headlines of today." W. H. Chamberlin

+ Current Hist & Forum 52:56 Ap '41 550w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 19:883 J1 '41 30w

"Very instructive is Snow's re-examination of Chiang Kai-shek's colorful personality of which he tries to do justice now. Snow does not believe that Japanese military imperialism can win out in the end against all its enemies. The book will find many enthusiastic readers in public and college libraries." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 66:139 F 1 '41 150w

"A great maturity of viewpoint, pleasantness of style and obvious rationality characterize the writing."

+ Living Age 360:92 Mr '41 1250w

Manchester Guardian p3 My 6 '41 200w

"This book of Edgar Snow's is in many respects more notable than his 'Red Star Over China.' It presents not only the birth of a dynamic, new political movement but also the rebirth of a great and ancient people. . . The book's revelations regarding internal conditions in China are of special interest in view of the recent conflict between Kuomintang troops and the New Fourth Route Army which ended in the destruction of the latter. . . If this book receives half the attention it deserves, it should help us greatly in recognizing our true interests in Asia." M. S. Stewart

+ Nation 152:215 F 22 '41 1150w

Reviewed by T. A. Blisson

New Repub 104:506 Ap 14 '41 1100w

Reviewed by Dorothy Woodman

New Statesman & Nation 21:414 Ap 19 '41 1100w

"Edgar Snow is one of those Communist sympathizers who is essentially a liberal and a humanitarian but who, no doubt because he has lived in the Far East throughout the past decade, is not yet disillusioned. . . His clear and penetrating account of China's economic and social problems, and the unanswerable case he makes out for democratic reforms, mass mobilization and guerrilla warfare as the only way to win the war, is unclouded by the realization that today the revolutionary dynamic may serve the interests of German and Russian National Socialism instead of the cause of liberalism and reform. . . The criticisms which Mr. Snow's political chapters provoke do not detract from the essential value of his exhaustive account of the situation in China, nor from the truth of his argument that Britain must abandon the undemocratic concept of Empire if India and China and the other Asiatic peoples are to be saved from Fascist tyranny, and the British Empire preserved from the Nazis and the Japanese." Freda Utley

+ N Y Times p9 Mr 9 '41 1800w

Reviewed by Clifton Fadiman

New Yorker 17:82 F 22 '41 350w

Reviewed by Joseph Barnes

Pacific Affairs 14:222 Je '41 1950w

Pratt p12 spring '41

"The organization of the book might be improved, and its earlier chapters, in which Snow describes his departure from Peking shortly after the war started and subsequent experiences in Shanghai and Chungking, throw little new light on the China scene. As the rest of the work, however, the material dealing with the Communist movement is probably the most authoritative ever penned [it] is to be commended to all who seek a realistic understanding of the forces at work in China and the outlook for that country after the conflict with Japan ends." Miles Vaughn

SNOW, EDGAR—Continued

+ — Sat R of Lit 23:5 Mr 1 '41 1400w

Reviewed by E. M. Gull
Spec 166:400 Ap 11 '41 500w

"The book is a great achievement, the story of a great conflict told with unique directness by one who has not lost his courage. The author formulates his belief in a 'broader and more responsible democracy,' a belief which is not only unshaken but rather confirmed by what he has seen. The publishers should be congratulated on the extremely attractive appearance of this book." E. O. Hauser
+ Survey G 30:255 Ap '41 300w

Time 37:90 Mr 10 '41 450w

Times (London) Lit Sup p158 Ap 5 '41 600w

Reviewed by A. W. Griswold
Yale R n s 30:630 spring '41 900w

SOARES, THEODORE GERALD. The origins of the Bible. 277p $2.50 Harper

220.6 Bible. Whole—History. Bible as literature 41-6904

The story of how the Bible developed, growing out of the religious experiences of ancient Israel and the early Christians. The book is written for the intelligent layman, with the findings of critical scholarship presented in simple, often dramatic form. The author is professor of ethics at the California Institute of Technology, and minister of the Neighborhood Church, Pasadena. Indexes.

Booklist 37:509 Jl 1 '41

"Professor Soares has given us a fresh, colorful, sparkling, dynamic book. By no means are its values for the layman alone. All who read it will be helped by it." L. H. Chrisman

+ Christian Century 58:862 Jl 2 '41 330w

Reviewed by T. L. Leishman
Christian Science Monitor p10 Jl 26 '41 500w

"Any layman who has been confused by the bits of information here and there which have come his way about modern biblical research will find in this work a delightful presentation of the fascinating story of how the Bible came into being. . . A reading of the book by laymen everywhere would do much to clarify the too often hidden meanings of the parson's sermon." James Van Zant

+ Churchman 155:18 Jl 1 '41 200w

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 O '41

"Written in non-technical language, it is easy reading, not infrequently fascinating in its human interest. . . Unfortunately, in so good a book, inaccuracies are not absent." I. G. Matthews

+ — Crozer Q 18:274 Jl '41 450w

SOHON, FREDERICK WYATT. Stereographic projection. 210p il $4 Chemical pub. co.

516.57 Geometry, Projective 41-5340

"The author, who is the Director of the Seismological Observatory of Georgetown University, presents a textbook useful to the cartographer. Chapters three and four include applications to astronomy and hydrodynamics, while chapters four, five, and six should prove of interest to the student of the complex variable and the seismologist." N Y New Tech Bks

"A very valuable book. . . The book was not intended by the author to be exhaustive, but it contains a good selection of proofs, some by vector methods, and explicit applications to many problems including some in astronomy, hydrodynamics and seismology." E. T.

+ Nature 148:37 Jl 12 '41 360w

N Y New Tech Bks 26:27 Ap '41

SONDERGAARD, MRS ARENSA. A history of the United States for young people; il. by Cornelis. 72p $1 Random house

973 U.S.—History—Juvenile literature (W) 41-20013

Brief history of this country, from the days of the Vikings to the present time, for fourth and fifth grades. The prose is simple and dignified, and pictures on each page emphasize the descriptive text. Could be used to advantage with adult foreigners learning English.

"The large-type, simply-worded text, with many bright colored pictures scattered through, shows at a glance that this is intended as a stimulating introduction to our country's story, for the use of quite young children. Its audience will, of course, be wider. . . It is quite probable that it will even have a place in the education of new citizens or new arrivals of adult years, who by running rapidly through its pages may get—with the aid of the colored strips—a connected and coherent though of course elementary idea of what America has been through. The language is dignified enough for an older beginner." M. L. Becker
+ Books p7 N 2 '41 120w

"We recommend this book for every nursery bookshelf." E. V. Wyatt

+ Cath World 154:374 D '41 130w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse
Commonweal 35:110 N 21 '41 20w

"For the price and board binding this is an excellent book. . . It is less in outline form and more wordy than Mabel Pyne's Little History of the United States, and therefore not quite so easy to follow and remember. The illustrations by Cornelis are larger and more picturesque, but not quite so perfect for the text as the tiny sketches by Mabel Pyne. If a library can afford only one history of this kind, the Little History is the better buy, even though double the price." J. E. Wooster
+ — Library J 66:953 N 1 '41 140w

"The book is brief and concise. The pictures which appear on every page enhance the interest of the text. . . The second half of the book lacks something of the clarity and easy flow of the first half; for this the author can hardly be held responsible, since it is difficult, if not impossible, to present the history of modern times successfully to children of the age for which this book is intended. . . A book that will prove popular and helpful in schools and public libraries and one that boys and girls from 7 to 10 will add to their own bookshelves with pleasure and pride." A. T. E.

+ — N Y Times p30 N 2 '41 360w

"Elementary outline of American history. Poor." Allan Nevins

— Sat R of Lit 24:7 N 8 '41 10w

SONTHEIMER, MORTON. Newspaperman; a book about the business. (Whittlesey house publication) 336p $2.75 McGraw

070 Journalism 41-7905

An American newspaper man, with considerable experience on different papers to his credit, explains the various departments of the work for the prospective journalist or student. He draws largely on his own observations and writes in anecdotal form. Index.

Booklist 37:539 Jl 15 '41

"A diffuse, slambang, highly uneven piece of work which adds but little to the literature on the subject, but which at the same time contains a great deal of sound observation and a vast amount of advice, some of it good. [The author] writes in a breezy, wise-cracking style, much in the manner of a shirtsleeved veteran who sits down after hours and says, 'Now, boys, I'll tell you how it is.' Stanley Walker

Books p12 My 25 '41 360w

SORENSEN, HELEN LAURA. The consumer movement; what it is and what it means. (Institute for consumer educ. Publications) 245p $2.50 Harper

339.4 Consumption (economics). Consumer education. Cooperation (W) 41-51728

"The preparation of this book was undertaken as a project of the Institute for Consumer Education at Stephens College in Columbia, Mo. . . . The study was undertaken with the objective of indicating what the consumer movement is, how it has developed, and what in future may be expected from it. Attention has been focused on the work of privately organized groups and data were obtained from official publications of the various organizations and through contacts with their officers." (Foreword) Index.

Reviewed by E. E. Hoyt

Am Econ R 31:673 S '41 900w

Booklist 37:403 My 1 '41

Bookmark 2:5 My '41

Reviewed by Margaret Stern

Commonweal 34:89 My 16 '41 1000w

"Objective, well-documented description of the consumer movement."

+ J Home Econ 33:485 S '41 60w

Management R 30:236 Je '41 70w

"Miss Sorenson has written a history of and guide to the consumer movement. It is both comprehensive and accurate. It threads its way unerringly among the many organizations, distinguishing between the real and the sham and between the quick and the dead." M. S. Stewart

+ Nation 153:145 Ag 16 '41 600w

Reviewed by L. M. Brooks

Social Forces 20:280 D '41 360w

Springf'd Republican p10 J1 16 '41 270w

Wis Lib Bul 37:89 My '41

SOROKIN, PITIRIM ALEKSANDROVICH.

The crisis of our age. 338p $3.50 Dutton

901 Civilization—Philosophy. History—Philosophy. Culture. Sociology 41-51942

"A total survey, of the world in which we live, it is an optimistic book, and reassures us that in spite of all the violence and bewilderment of our time, we are now headed for a better world. . . . In the first penetrating and systematic analysis of the nature, causes, consequences, of the contemporary crisis, Professor Sorokin asserts that we are living through neither the ordinary economic or political crisis nor the death-agony of Western society and culture. The causes of the present crisis, he asserts, are not Hitlers and Stalins, nor cosmic and climatic factors, nor biological degeneration, nor a maladjustment of economic or political conditions. It is a crisis which represents an internal and spontaneous development of a poisonous virus which modern culture contained in itself since the moment of its emergence. And the remedy, Professor Sorokin declares, does not lie in the mere readjustment of political or economic conditions, however radical. To find a way out, the author suggests a revaluation of basic values—a fundamental change in our outlook and conduct, and the replacement of dying forms by a superior culture and society." Publisher's note

"This volume then is neither science nor philosophy. It is infused with high moral purpose; it sounds like the anguished cry of a defeated idealist to whom the future looks black and who therefore lashes out against the world he does not like, and calls upon sinners to return to the comforting womb of the Absolute. Personally, I think this way is closed. . . . The way ahead is dark indeed but it is not so dark and dank as the medieval pit from which we have been digged. These dark days may be followed by a brighter dawn—or by oblivion. In any case, we cannot now return to Aquinas even if we would. Such a solution for the world crisis is impossible. We need prophets to lead us, but they must lead us forward out of the Wilderness, not back into the Egyptian Night." Read Bain

Am Soc R 6:907 D '41 1100w

Booklist 38:74 N 1 '41

"Perhaps the strongest impression left with the reader is that this is a foolish book—foolish not so much because of its utter lack of restraint and wisdom but foolish in that it fails to recognize the alternatives that are still open and available to us in our existing culture." Sidney Hook

— Books p10 Ja 11 '42 1500w

Reviewed by H. E. Fey

Christian Century 58:1505 D 3 '41 1000w

Reviewed by D. C. Gifford

Christian Science Monitor p11 N 22 '41 750w

"Sorokin nowhere plainly recognizes metaphysics as a science, that is as productive of real knowledge. He seems to relegate all 'supersensory' knowledge to the domain of 'revelation' leaving to the intellect no degree of abstraction higher than that of mathematics. Perhaps this is but a slip of the pen, but in the chapter on truth, science, philosophy, religion, etc. one might have expected much more recognition of the philosophy of being and its product, natural theology. With these reservations this book can be cordially recommended to the intelligent reader. This reviewer has found the chapter on the arts particularly satisfying." T. F. Woodlock

+ — Commonweal 35:73 N 7 '41 900w

Reviewed by Reinhold Niebuhr

— Nation 153:648 D 20 '41 700w

Reviewed by John Cournos

N Y Times p9 N 23 '41 1000w

"A clear if not very simple statement, challenging but full of loose distinctions. Can it be that Professor Sorokin is just an old-fashioned moralist?"

New Yorker 17:99 O 18 '41 60w

Reviewed by Rubin Gotesky

Sat R of Lit 24:20 D 20 '41 1350w

Reviewed by G. W. Blackwell

Social Forces 20:271 D '41 500w

Social Studies 33:48 Ja '42 30w

"In producing the 'corroborative detail' of his thesis the author seems heir to the occupational disease of sociologists, the necessity of sounding authoritative even when the facts are not to be had. Anyone who passes judgment on the politics, arts and sciences of 25 centuries (even aided by ant-like graduate students) must leave himself vulnerable at many points. Yet for all that, 'The Crisis of Our Age' is excellent collateral reading if arguments begin to rage about 'Two Way Passages.'"

Springf'd Republican p7e O 19 '41 420w

"The present crisis demands a complete change of contemporary mentality and a fundamental transformation of our system of values. Professor Sorokin concludes his readable treatise with an eloquent appeal to our generation to respond to the challenge by realizing 'man's divine creative mission on earth.'" Hans Kohn

+ Survey G 30:707 D '41 380w

SOROKIN, PITIRIM ALEKSANDROVICH. Social and cultural dynamics; v 4, Basic problems, principles, and methods. 804p $6; to colleges $5 Am. bk.

901 Civilization. Sociology. History—Philosophy. Culture (37-11112)

The first three volumes of this work appeared in 1937 (Book Review Digest, 1937). "In this volume dealing with 'Basic Problems, Principles, and Methods,' Professor Sorokin sets forth clearly the realities of social and cultural experience. Concepts of truth, reality, and value are regarded as the 'central and absolutely unavoidable' components of social and cultural systems. These entities are thus the primary factors to be reckoned with in the analysis of social and cultural change. . . The climax of the work comes in Sorokin's analysis and defense of his three super-systems of truth: Ideational, Idealistic, and Sensate." (Christian Science Monitor) Indexes.

SOROKIN, P. A.—Continued

"Thrice happy Mr. Sorokin! We admire his labors and we would not disturb his peace, even were that possible. We are impressed with his vast Spenglerian antitheses, his more than Spenglerian erudition, and his utterly un-Spenglerian massing of statistics. We envy his short way with critics and his secure Athanasian stand. We genuinely applaud his vindication of the integrity of knowledge, his vehement polemic against positivists and pragmatists, neo-realists and mechanists. If we still cavil at the Dynamics, it may be only because the inner light that guides the author has not been vouchsafed to such critics as the present reviewer." R. M. MacIver

— + Am Econ Rev 6:904 D '41 1550w

"'Social and Cultural Dynamics' represents one of the most revolutionary and valuable social philosophies of the twentieth century; and it is unfortunate that the authoritarian tone of the work has aroused in contemporaries an antagonism that has hindered recognition of the stature and importance of the thought." D. C. Gifford

— + Christian Science Monitor p11 N 1 '41 600w

"This is a brilliant book and an important contribution to theoretical sociology. . . The conflict of capitalism versus socialism appears to have a more significant meaning today for society than Professor Sorokin seems willing to grant it. . . Professor Sorokin also appears to us to dismiss too quickly the struggle between democracy and fascism." Rubin Gotesky

— + Sat R of Lit 24:21 D 20 '41 900w

"Because Sorokin has posed eternally important questions, his fourth volume will find readers, even among those who did not relish the first three. . . Unfortunately, the diffuse and repetitious style forces one to feel the author is often beating the obvious. . . Nevertheless, this final tome—but the volumes should be read in sequence—will prove valuable to readers who are specialists in various fields." R. H. H.

— + Social Studies 33:40 Ja '42 140w

SOULEYMAN, ELIZABETH V. The vision of world peace in seventeenth and eighteenth-century France. 232p $2.50 Putnam

172.4 Peace. Political science—History 41-6649

"Miss Souleyman's volume is about theories and theorists of peace, not about actual peace-making efforts. Her study is concerned with those writers of France in the period under consideration who thought that war was unnecessary and who believed the first step toward abolishing it was to work out a peace program on paper. The men treated comprise a varied group. They range from Pierre Dubois, who pictured a world at peace because it was dominated by France, to Anarchasis Cloots, who advocated a universal republic on the order of that the French revolutionists were trying to establish in their country." (Springf'd Republican) Bibliography. Index.

"A clear and scholarly book which is touched with human warmth and speaks with unconscious eloquence."

— + N Y Times p3 F 23 '41 550w

"Miss Souleyman's study is well documented and critical. Though it is a record of failures to achieve peace by intellectualizing about it, the volume is, nonetheless—aside from its importance as history, which is considerable—an encouraging reminder that the opponents of war have a background quite as distinguished as the militarists."

— + Springf'd Republican p10 Ap 23 '41 650w

SPAETH, SIGMUND GOTTFRIED. Great program music; how to enjoy and remember it. 343p $1.49 Garden City pub. co.

785 Program music. Music—Analysis, interpretation, appreciation 40-29870

A companion volume to the author's Great Symphonies (Book Review Digest, 1937). Here the author follows the same method as in the earlier book of supplying verses or jingles that will aid the memory in recalling the melodies. Partial contents: Early examples of program music; Beethoven's mastery of program music; The triumph of program music; Russian composers of program music; The program music of Richard Strauss; Program music among the modernists. Index.

Reviewed by Stanley Ferguson

— New Repub 104:671 My 12 '41 650w

"Even for music lovers whose memory requires no short cuts to revive auditory images 'Great Program Music' has value as an anthology of the best in the repertoire of such compositions. There is in the volume abundant anecdotal and historical material that is just as enlightening as the manufactured lyrics. The introductory chapter that defines and compares the subject-matter describes early examples of program music that are amusing as well as instructive."

— + Springf'd Republican p8 Ja 22 '41 550w

SPAULDING, THOMAS MARSHALL, and KARPINSKI, LOUIS CHARLES. Early military books in the University of Michigan libraries. 44p il $2 Univ. of Mich.

016.355 Military art and science—Bibliography

"A bibliography that includes only those books 'which are found by examination to have a military portion of real value,' published before or during the year 1800. Limitedly annotated. Richly illustrated by plates of title-pages." School & Society

"Because of its importance one wishes that instead of creating a bare check list, with references to standard bibliographies and with locations of titles in the University of Michigan Libraries and some twenty-nine others, these competent compilers had gone further and added bibliographical descriptions to their entries. . . After this expression of regret one turns to the pleasant task of congratulating the University of Michigan upon the possession of so many books in this distinctive and extremely interesting category, and upon the aid rendered it by our compilers in the formation of the collection." L. C. Wroth

— + Books p37 N 30 '41 550w

School & Society 54:572 D 13 '41 40w

SPEARS, HAROLD. Secondary education in American life; il. by the author. 400p $2.50 Am. bk.

373.73 Education, Secondary. Education—U.S. 41-11551

"Besides a brief introduction, the book comprises three major divisions. Part I reaches back into the historical background of the high school of today. The author opens this section with the title 'The School Emerges from Its Past.' . . Part II, entitled 'Growing Concern for Individual and State,' includes chapters on 'The Current Curriculum Enterprise,' 'Prevailing Classroom Methods,' 'That Which Is Known as Extra-curricular,' 'Incorporating the Extra-curriculum,' 'Preparation for Citizenship,' 'The Student as an Individual,' and 'Life and Learning—in America.' . . In Part III the author makes it clear that the success of curriculum reorganization will depend largely on the leadership of the principal. . . The book closes with a summary chapter in which the author specifies that 'the number one purpose of the American public secondary school is to train for American democracy.' (School R) Index.

School & Society 54:96 Ag 9 '41 30w

"The book is well organized and clearly written. The busy teacher or administrator who finds it impossible to keep abreast of modern secondary education in American life will find this book exceedingly valuable. Throughout the book the many references to evidence give the reader a feeling of thoroughness and authority. The reviewer was impressed with the author's arrangement of materials in Part I so as to interrelate the school's past and present features. All the suggestions in the book are practical and in line with current educational thought. The author's style of writing and clever use of cartoons contribute toward a uniqueness which makes this book easy and delightful to read." C. T. Feelhaver

+ School R 49:788 D '41 850w

SPECIAL LIBRARIES ASSOCIATION. Trade-names index; with definitions and sources from a card file in the Technology dept. of the Carnegie lib. of Pittsburgh and a bibl. of sources of trade-names and trade-marks. 178p $4 The association

600 Trade names

"Nearly 3,500 trade names have been collected into one alphabetical list for the convenience of all who may have occasion to identify or define the numerous products known and sold under various coined names. For each of these a brief definition is given and a literature reference is usually added for further information. In general the list is concerned with materials, processes and equipment having some technical significance. In addition, a list of more than 100 sources of information on trade names is included. Registered trade marks published by the U.S. Patent Office are not included." Chem & Met Eng

Booklist 37:404 My 1 '41

Chem & Met Eng 48:145 Ap '41 100w

Pratt p7 D '41

SPENCE, HARTZELL. Radio city. 351p $2.50 Dial press

41-22519

A story of the radio and advertising business and a man who thought he could dominate his job but found it dominated him until a woman came along to rescue him.

"Mr. Spence has written a revealing story, but it is all pretty much in one key. It would have been a more diverting narrative with less emphasis on the vocational jitters of its characters." Lisle Bell

+ Books p36 N 2 '41 200w

New Repub 105:709 N 24 '41 40w

"Spence obviously knows his way about advertising agencies and radio production and uses his knowledge ably. He is less effective on the creative side of his work, both with respect to the building up of dramatic incident and of characterization. McKenna is real enough; it is, in fact, in comparison with him that the other people in his story seem lay figures. In spite of these weaknesses, however, 'Radio City' deserves recognition for its vivid presentation of the background of radio entertainment." Rose Feld

+ N Y Times p28 O 26 '41 650w

SPENCER, FRANZ. Battles of a bystander. 260p $2.50 Liveright

940.5 Europe—Politics. Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 41-19526

A former Austrian newspaper man recounts some of his adventures in Austria, Germany, and Russia during the years 1914 to 1939.

Reviewed by Beach Conger

Books p15 S 21 '41 550w

"Franz Spencer writes with vitality but his style is neither subtle nor stimulating. All his adventures would make thrilling reading in some magazine; here they are hardly impressive. Simple stories may be told in a simple style, but exciting experiences narrated naively will always fall flat. 'Battles of a Bystander' might have become a rather fascinating and even sometimes startling book but the author missed his opportunity." H. B. Wreath

+ Sat R of Lit 24:22 D 27 '41 400w

"An interesting story, 'Battles of a Bystander' is never a great book. Mr. Spencer did interesting things, never great things, and he writes of his experiences in an engaging manner. The result is primarily a book for relaxation."

+ Spring'd Republican p10 S 24 '41 360w

SPENCER, THEODORE. The paradox in the circle. unp $1; pa 35c New directions

811 41-11944

Volume of lyrics, some of them previously published in such magazines as Atlantic Monthly, New Republic, Saturday Review of Literature. In a prefatory note the author explains that these poems were written to be read aloud.

"If the majority of the lyrics in this important first book make a few seem repetitive and weak, it is a quality of topnotch work to beggar its immediate neighbors. But Mr. Spencer, I am certain, has added something lasting to the difficult poetry of today." Oscar Williams

+ New Repub 105:411 S 29 '41 160w

"Mr. Spencer's rhythm seems to me to have caught the New England speech of philosophy accurately. It is shrewd, dry, witty, urbane, logical and repetitive; and if that seems too much for an accent to be, then the poems have to be listened to. . . Mr. Spencer's danger lies in speculative formalism, if that is not a paradox in itself; but no one has made more music out of it." P. M. Jack

+ N Y Times p5 D 14 '41 320w

"The Paradox in the Circle is interesting for its studied art, spareness of structure, and affiliation with British and Irish epigrammatic and gnomic verse. Spencer imitates mainly the mystery of the ballad, with its half-cryptic talk. . . Yet his poems, all short, lack the free rolling narrative and lustrous coloration of the traditional ballad; they tend towards the cerebral compression of the riddle, posing dichotomies concerning man and woman, youth and age, seeking and finding, beginning and ending." Harold Rosenberg

Poetry 58:266 Ag '41 380w

SPERANZA, GINO CHARLES. Diary, Italy, 1915-1919; ed. by Florence Colgate Speranza. 2v 406;336p il $6 Columbia univ. press

940.48173 European war, 1914-1918—Italy 41-6534

American born and bred, of Italian parentage, Gino Speranza made frequent visits to Italy and during the first World War lived there, attempting by his writings to explain America to Italy, Italy to America. This diary begins with his sailing from New York in August 1915 and ends in the spring of 1919. Index at end of volume two.

SPERANZA, G. C.—Continued

"Both volumes will delight general readers, particularly those who know or are interested in Italy. They contain exquisite passages descriptive of the country and sometimes of the people. . . . Numerous persons pass in and out upon the scene described in the pages of these volumes. Unfortunately, these dramatis personae are depicted as if at a distance and indirectly, as shadows. The diarist is repeatedly on the point of revealing a character, when it becomes fugitive and is lost." Constantine Panunzio

+ — Ann Am Acad 217:224 S '41 650w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:383 Ja '42 20w

Reviewed by Gaetano Salvemini
Nation 152:729 Je 21 '41 700w

New Repub 104:770 Je 2 '41 40w

SPERRY, WILLARD LEAROYD. Summer yesterdays in Maine; with ill. from pencil drawings by Charles H. Woodbury. 263p $2.50 Harper

917.41 Maine—Social life and customs
41-20682

Reminiscences of boyhood summers spent on the coast of Maine during the years 1885 to 1900.

"Reading Dean Sperry's book will be a timely and satisfying experience. A distinguished marine artist, the late Charles H. Woodbury, of Ogunquit, contributed the pencil drawings which adorn the book." Elizabeth Ring

+ Books p22 O 19 '41 380w

"What has come to [the author] since those years, his churchly learning, his tolerant philosophy, and his way of expressing himself with cultivated and kindly humor has combined with those backward glances to make a full-textured though unobtrusive book, a book to own and re-read—its form enhanced by illustrations from pencil drawings by the late Charles H. Woodbury."

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 O 25 '41 420w

Springf'd Republican p8 O 29 '41 300w

SPIEGEL, HENRY WILLIAM. Land tenure policies at home and abroad. 171p $3 Univ. of N.C. press

333 Land tenure 41-3667

Analysis of the land tenure policies of the United States, England, and Germany, with some reference to France and other continental states. The author is assistant professor of economics, Duquesne university. Selected bibliography. Index.

"The special merit of the book lies in the author's familiarity with the relevant American and German literature, his equally competent treatment of the subject from the viewpoint of law and political economy, and his alertness to the very latest trend of American thought concerning land tenure. The book deserves much praise for the sound and level-headed judgment underlying the presentation of the controversial policies. . . . Only twice does it seem that Mr. Spiegel's sound skepticism was not fully alert. He speaks about Sherwood Eddy's Delta Cooperative Farm as an enterprise whose ' . . . membership consists of an elite of farmers who proved their biological and mental fitness and who probably are above the average.' In this and the other statements concerning this dilettante's experiment in collective—not cooperative—farming, which the reviewer has visited, the author fell victim to the ballyhoo drummed and preached over the country by well-meant but unwarranted propaganda. . . . On the whole, the book is a significant contribution and 'must' reading for all students of land economics." Karl Brandt

+ — Am Econ R 31:385 Je '41 750w

Reviewed by H. C. Cook
Am Pol Sci R 35:581 Je '41 140w

"The value of the book lies more in bringing together available material in a readable and interesting form than in presenting new approaches or solutions to an old problem. The author's extensive bibliography adds value to the volume." A. F. Vass

+ Ann Am Acad 216:205 Jl '41 600w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:376 Ja '42 10w

Harvard Law R 54:1100 Ap '41 420w

"Perhaps the most remarkable quality of this book is the sense of realism and sociopolitical insight with which the author treats the formal legalistic matter of property and tenure of farm lands. In this respect his book is unique. The author's training in jurisprudence and in political economy—two disciplines whose complementary functions in the interpretation of social phenomena are much too little appreciated by social scientists—enables him to place the core of his subject matter, which is tenure law, in the dynamic setting of economic forces and political action. Here lies the main contribution of Dr. Spiegel's treatise." Rainer Schickele

+ — J Pol Econ 49:906 D '41 1300w

"This is a small book and at times Dr. Spiegel seems sketchy because of space limitations; once or twice he tends to substitute quotations from eminent authorities for citations of available relevant evidence. But these are minor flaws in a book which should be of great value to students of government action (and lack of action) regarding the land problems of our rural folk." Harry Schwartz

+ — Pol Sci Q 56:476 S '41 320w

Reviewed by P. W. Wager
Social Forces 20:130 O '41 650w

SPRACKLING, MRS HELEN. Setting your table. 213p il pl $2.50 Barrows

642.7 Table. Etiquet (W) 41-7518

A book on the "art, etiquette and service" of the dining table. Partial contents: Creating the picture; Your china; —And your glass; Invitation to a party; Like mistress, like maid; Maid's night out; After dinner coffee; Sunday night supper; Breakfast; The buffet; The etiquette of eating and drinking. Index.

Booklist 37:542 Jl 15 '41

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '41

J Home Econ 33:486 S '41 50w

Pratt p15 autumn '41

SPRAGUE, HARRY ALONZO. A decade of progress in the preparation of secondary school teachers. 170p $1.85 Teachers college

370.73 Teachers, Training of. Normal schools—Curricula 40-30021

"A study of curriculum requirements in 55 state teachers colleges in 1928 and 1938." (Sub-title) Bibliography.

School & Society 52:16 Jl 6 '40 20w

Reviewed by Butler Laughlin
School R 49:236 Mr '41 500w

SPRAGUE, HOWARD BENNETT. Better lawns for homes and parks. (Whittlesey house garden ser) 205p il $2 McGraw

635.964 Lawns 40-27821

"This book is intended for all those who are interested in good turf, whether it be on lawns, parks, estates, golf courses, or other recreation fields. . . . In presenting information on soil conditions and treatment, behavior of grasses, and control of pests, an effort has been made to offer the latest scientific results, in terms of practical lawn culture. The discussions and recommendations are nontechnical, however, and illustrations are used to supplement the printed page." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 37:149 D 15 '40

"Every one who wants to have a fine lawn, whatever its size, should read this explicit, factual book by one of the highest ranking turf experts in the United States. For years Dr. Sprague has led the scientific lawn-grass experimental work centered at the New Jersey Agricultural Experiment Station—work which has won considerably more than national acclaim. . . It is the summation of the important results of these experiments and tests which are presented in this thoroughly workable volume. One need not be a scientist to grasp its every point, for the writing is clear, direct, and non-technical. It is hard to conceive of a better guide to sound lawn making and maintenance." R. S. Lemmon

+ Books p9 Je 22 '41 130w

SPROUT, HAROLD HANCE, and SPROUT, MRS MARGARET (TUTTLE). Toward a new order of sea power; American naval policy and the world scene, 1918-1922. 332p 11 maps $3.75 Princeton univ. press

359 U.S.—Navy—History. Sea power. Disarmament 41-3096

For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

"The Sprouts are doing a splendid service to the country in their study of American naval policy—a work of which the volume under consideration is only a part. They have read the original sources extensively and examined them critically. . . Incidentally, for the first time a woman is vitally interested in American foreign policy and naval history. Professor Sprout and Mrs. Sprout understand the art of collaboration, and their work gains from a dual enthusiasm." C. S. Alden

+ Am Hist R 47:167 O '41 800w

"In covering their subject, the authors proceed in a very well organized vein, employing a lucid style, and providing extensive documentation. The volume should lend itself to very effective use as assigned reading for the limited period it covers. The reviewer hopes that this period may be extended in the near future by an equally valuable sequel." William Beard

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:370 Ap '41 700w

"The Sprouts have written another volume distinguished for its comprehensive, scholarly research. The book treats of American naval policy and the world scene from 1918 to 1922. All available source material has been explored, even to the extent that through the efforts of President Dodds of Princeton the hitherto unavailable diary of Colonel Theodore Roosevelt has been examined for 'behind closed door' views of the historic Washington Limitation of Arms Conference." L. P. Lovette

+ Ann Am Acad 214:229 Mr '41 450w

Christian Science Monitor p13 Mr 22 '41 600w

"A fine piece of scholarship and a valuable addition to postwar history."

+ Foreign Affairs 19:681 Mr '41 30w

"The style of the authors is clear and free from those turbid circumlocutions which many historians seem to find indispensable. The chapter titles are well chosen, and the headings with which the text is broken up are helpful signposts along the way. The entire format of the book is a tribute to the publishing ability and judgment of the Princeton University Press. But, since the purpose of the Sprouts' book is to deal with policies rather than events, it must be read in conjunction with some other account in order to get a complete picture not only of diplomatic dickering and congressional appropriations, but also of the morale of the men who man our ships. Therefore, Toward a New Order in Sea Power is not a book to inspire the average lay reader with accounts of the glory and might of our first line of defense. It is rather written for the painstaking student of history, who is interested in appraising the forces which have actually affected the destiny of our sea power. It is difficult not to regret that there is too little about men and ships and events, and too much of the dustiness of documents in the record compiled by the authors." A. B. Cook

+ — Pol Sci Q 56:137 Mr '41 800w
Reviewed by Grace Fox
Social Studies 32:284 O '41 500w

Springf'd Republican p7e My 4 '41 1200w

SPURLIN, PAUL MERRILL. Montesquieu in America, 1760-1801. 313p $3 La. state univ. press

320.1 Montesquieu, Charles Louis de Secondat, baron de la Brède et de. Political science—History 40-28815

"In an introductory series of quotations from American political writers, Mr. Spurlin shows that the size of the part played by Montesquieu in early American political science has long been the source of 'allegations and denials, of debate and speculation,' and his book is an answer to the question whether or not the founders of our republic were deeply indebted—or, indeed, indebted at all—to the author of the 'Spirit of Laws.' Mr. Spurlin tells us as best he can in what numbers copies of Montesquieu's works were to be found in public and private libraries, gives us some idea of the frequency with which Montesquieu's name appeared in American books, newspapers, pamphlets, and public documents of the period, and presents quotations concerning or mentioning Montesquieu from the writings and utterances of politically and intellectually prominent Americans." Sat R of Lit

Reviewed by B. F. Wright

Am Hist R 47:353 Ja '42 550w

"The volume is impressive in the exhaustive use of contemporary sources, and to the author the student of American political ideas should acknowledge a debt." F. G. Wilson

Am Pol Sci R 35:398 Ap '41 300w

Reviewed by P. A. Palmer

New Eng Q 14:398 Je '41 420w

"Mr. Spurlin in furnishing quantitative data has not written an heroic work but rather a most useful one, one on which better and larger books can be created. He shows the steady expansion of Montesquieu's influence, the variety of his appeal during the Revolution, Confederation and early national period, and the technique of dissemination. Taking the years covered, few if any writers were so widely read and commonly quoted. Some might surpass him in this or that crisis, but for the principles and practices of government, for the social ideals and individual psychology that lie back of those principles and practices, the name and contributions of Montesquieu must stand in these formative years of American history at the very top. To Mr. Spurlin we are genuinely indebted for a thorough appreciation of this." C. F. Mullett

+ Pol Sci Q 56:479 S '41 390w

"No one can doubt Mr. Spurlin's accuracy or his laboriousness, but the subject and the period are so interesting that one regrets that he has not made more of his book, particularly on the interpretive and human sides." Francis Steegmuller

Sat R of Lit 23:14 Ja 11 '41 450w

SPURR, WILLIAM ALFRED. Seasonal variations in the economic activities of Japan. 129p $1.50 Univ. of Neb.

330.952 Japan—Economic conditions 40-28412

"Professor Spurr's study encompasses in brief space the findings derived from a broadly conceived project calling for analysis of seasonal variation in series descriptive of the operations of the Japanese economy. Some one hundred series are divided into segments of seven to nine years and subjected to seasonal analysis—a task which the author lightened by use of his previously published graphic procedure that is covered in the chapter reviewing method. Subsequent chapters summarize the data used and the findings in the fields of prices, trade, and finance. Comparison is then made between the seasons obtaining during the different periods into which the series are broken." J Pol Econ

SPURR, W. A.—Continued

Reviewed by D. B. Yntema
J Pol Econ 49:314 Ap '41 200w

Reviewed by W. L. Holland
Pacific Affairs 14:125 Mr '41 200w

STACK, HERBERT JAMES; SEATON, DON CASH, and HYDE, FLORENCE SLOWN.
Safety in the world of today. 372p il $1.20
Beckley-Cardy

614.8 Accidents—Prevention. Safety education (W) 41-51612

Textbook on safety education, for grades seven to nine. The book stresses accidents in everyday life—in transportation, in industry, on the farm, in school, and at home. First aid measures are included, and a chapter on automobile driving. Index.

Booklist 37:328 Mr 15 '41

"It is within reason to expect this book and the principles which it illustrates to assist greatly in bringing the new functional curriculum more fully into the schools." C. C. Crawford

+ School & Society 53:740 Je 7 '41 110w
Wis Lib Bul 37:161 O '41

STAFFORD, HELEN GEORGIA. James VI of Scotland and the throne of England [pub. for] the Am. hist. association. ltd ed 336p $3.75 Appleton-Century

942.061 James I, king of England (James VI of Scotland). Scotland—History—James VI, 1567-1625. Great Britain—History—Elizabeth, 1558-1603 41-1118

A scholarly, detailed analysis of the complicated relationships existing between Scotland and England from the time of the Spanish Armada to Elizabeth's death and the succession of James to the throne of England. Bibliographical note. Index.

"Dr. Stafford has undertaken to describe in detail the activities of James VI which led to his great success in the field of foreign policy. While she has not uncovered any great amount of new material she has given a convenient summary of some exceedingly complicated negotiations." M. M. Knappen

+ Christian Century 58:322 Mr 5 '41 490w

"Well written, authoritative and thoroughly documented study."

+ New Repub 104:285 F 24 '41 50w

Reviewed by F. L. Baumer
Social Studies 32:285 O '41 360w

STAFFORD, PAUL TUTT. Government and the needy; a study of public assistance in New Jersey. 328p $3 Princeton univ. press

361.6 Charities—New Jersey. Poor—New Jersey. Charity laws and legislation 41-7199

"The following pages . . . trace the historical development of public poor relief institutions in New Jersey, examine in detail existing methods of administration, and propose steps necessary to the establishment of a modernized state system of public assistance. The final chapter outlines the framework of a new federal-state-local system within which, it is believed, a more effective program of public assistance can be planned and successfully operated not only in New Jersey but on a national scale as well." (Pref) Index.

Reviewed by Elinor Pancoast
Am Econ R 31:435 Je '41 370w

Reviewed by L. F. Requa, Jr.
Am Hist R 47:392 Ja '42 550w

Reviewed by Lewis Meriam
Am Pol Sci R 35:564 Je '41 750w

"Legal aspects of public poor relief, especially with reference to legal settlement as distinct from domiciliary residence, and the practice of farming out the care of the town's poor, might perhaps be treated with more incisiveness. These, however, are minor queries. The work as a whole is masterful in its comprehensive treatment. . . . It is a strong indictment, relieved only by the commendable improvement found under the present plan of Federal grants-in-aid." R. W. Kelso

+ — Ann Am Acad 216:214 Jl '41 450w
Christian Century 58:259 F 19 '41 60w
Christian Science Monitor p20 My 20 '41 550w

New Repub 105:709 N 24 '41 50w
Social Studies 32:192 Ap '41 20w

"This is a good book. If it shall serve to stimulate similar research in forty-seven other states, we may ultimately arrive at a solution of the problems of relief administration created by the unplanned development of such service during the last three hundred years." W. J. Ellis & E. C. Potter, M.D.
+ Survey 77:162 My '41 950w

STAMM, FREDERICK KELLER. Good news for bad times. 205p $1.50 Harper

252 Christianity. Sermons 41-4342

Forty short sermons on a variety of religious and ethical topics relevant to the times. They have been either preached by the author in his own pulpit, or given over the radio.

"The forty chapters of this book . . . are compact, rapid in tempo, concrete, confident, giving the reader (or hearer) a minimum of opportunity for flagging interest or of temptation to switch to another station."

+ Christian Century 58:259 F 19 '41 40w

"The [sermons] are clarifying, strengthening and cheering, truly good news for bad times. The author has the gift outstanding preachers have of looking closely at his subject as though under a magnifying glass and then opening his hearers' eyes with the surprising treasures which lay unsuspected in his subject or text. These little sermons will be of great value as devotional reading or they can be used as inspiring little ten to eighteen minutes long sermons for lay-readers." H. J. S.
+ Churchman 155:35 Mr 15 '41 60w

STANDISH, BURT L., pseud. See Patten, G.

STANFORD UNIVERSITY. LIBRARY. Hoover library on war, revolution and peace. Industrial relations in wartime: Great Britain, 1914-1918; comp. by Waldo Chamberlin; prepared under the direction of the Division of industrial relations, Graduate school of business, Stanford university. 239p $3 Stanford univ. press

016.940342 European war, 1914-1918—Economic aspects—Bibliography. Labor and laboring classics—Great Britain—Bibliography 40-14530

"Annotated bibliography of materials in the Hoover Library on War, Revolution, and Peace." (Subtitle) "Its preparation was inspired by the hope that the work would be useful to those who have to wrestle with industrial relations during our rearmament program." Am Hist R

"The bibliography is well arranged and classified, and the Hoover Collection is so rich that few important titles are missing. We may wonder at times whether the list is sufficiently balanced or representative, as when ten Labor newspapers are included but only one Liberal and one Conservative journal, and neither of the two latter comes from a provincial industrial area." Herbert Heaton
+ — Am Hist R 46:916 Jl '41 210w

"This lists most of the more important books published through the ordinary channels, but it is inevitably very incomplete in respect of pamphlets and occasional literature, and also in respect of government papers. The annotations are usually tolerably correct; but there are slips, such as listing the (communist) Labour Monthly under the labour party. It is regrettable that there is no author index. The book could be useful to others besides students using the library as an auxiliary source of references, but is much too incomplete to be used alone." G. D. H. C.

Eng Hist R 56:350 Ap '41 110w

Foreign Affairs 19:686 Ap '41 10w

STARR, JULIAN. Fifty things to make for the home. (Whittlesey house publication) 207p il $2 McGraw

684 Woodwork (W) 41-22247

Directions and working plans for amateurs who want to make such things as kitchen accessories or other household conveniences, furniture, outdoor accessories, toys and play equipment, and novelties. For the most part they are made with the aid of hand tools. The book is a companion volume to the author's Make it Yourself (Book Review Digest, 1938).

Booklist 38:153 Ja 1 '42

Books p27 N 16 '41 120w

STAUFFER, DONALD ALFRED. The art of biography in eighteenth century England. 572p $5; with bibl suppl $8.50 Princeton univ. press

920 Biography (as a literary form). Biography (as a literary form)—Bibliography 41-3950

This scholarly and at the same time readable study is a critical and historical survey of the golden age of English biography. From his study of several thousand works the author has developed a set of critical principles by which to judge these biographies, each of which is analyzed in detail. The bibliographical supplement lists alphabetically the biographies read in connection with the study and describes briefly any important biography not mentioned in the text. This volume may be purchased separately at $5. Index.

Reviewed by D. F. Bond

Library Q 12:137 Ja '42 850w

Nation 153:289 S 27 '41 120w

"The riches of this book lie not in life organized but in life in all its primitive and chaotic variety. Professor Stauffer seizes unerringly on the best critical comments of the eighteenth-century biographers, but he is less a critic himself than a journalist-antiquary with a lively nose for news and an enjoyment of human nature. Our gratitude to him must be for those gifts." Edgar Johnson

+ — New Repub 104:735 My 26 '41 650w

"Mr. Stauffer's study of biography's golden age, its High Renaissance, is more than scholarly; it is truly intelligent. Through ten years of research he seems never to have lost his eagerness to be amused. His book is extremely well written, the style crisp and the thought witty." Robert van Gelder

+ N Y Times p22 Mr 2 '41 1250w

"Besides his omnivorous scholarship, Mr. Stauffer possesses both taste and a set of critical principles."

+ New Yorker 16:67 F 8 '41 30w

"I feel strongly that this admirable book on English biography deserves to be ranked as a work of scholarship. . . . It would be an injustice to say that Mr. Stauffer has written a Baedeker's guide to his subject, although he is equally compendious. His book is on an altogether higher level. It has a good but unpretentious style, written with a gusto which unconsciously and most pleasantly reveals the author's genuine enthusiasm for letters. The writing of this book, one feels, was not a task but a pleasure." Richard Aldington

+ Sat R of Lit 23:8 Ap 19 '41 700w

"Mr. Stauffer would have been better advised not to attempt to make such a big book. His material needs pruning and knitting more closely together. It would have been an additional advantage if the fortuitous element in the bibliography had been more decisively subordinated to the selective. The book bears everywhere the marks of enthusiasm and industry; it is unfortunately lacking in form." Philip Magnus

+ — Spec 167:360 O 10 '41 480w

Spring'd Republican p7e Ja 19 '41 120w

STAUFFER, DONALD ALFRED, ed. The intent of the critic. 147p $2.50 Princeton univ. press

801 Literary criticism 41-20238

Contents: Introduction: the intent of the critic, by D. A. Stauffer; The historical interpretation of literature, by Edmund Wilson; The esthetic judgment and the ethical judgment, by Norman Foerster; Criticism as pure speculation, by J. C. Ransom; Criticism in a mass society, by W. H. Auden.

"The discussions deal with critical theory and practice from the points of view of an historian, a metaphysician, a humanist, and an anthropologist. Their agreements and differences make stimulating reading, and they are excellently analyzed in a lively and lucid introduction." Elizabeth Drew

+ Atlantic N '41 230w

"Literature like the rest of life, has a conscience—criticism. And it is illuminating to find criticism examining itself in such a book as 'The Intent of the Critic,' a companion piece to 'The Intent of the Artist,' published a few months ago. Considering the problems involved in the application of the critical faculty to itself, this symposium is a keen exposition of the more obvious functions of the critic, and makes an attractive effort to proceed in orderly fashion." Mario Collaci

+ — Books p18 S 28 '41 600w

Reviewed by L. J. A. Mercier

Commonweal 35:298 Ja 9 '42 490w

Reviewed by Jacques Barzun

Nation 153:376 O 18 '41 900w

"A collection of discourses on the whole too academic, too far removed from the reading and writing world of today, to prove of much influence. It would have been of more general and more practical interest if it had taken into serious account both the worth and the remissnesses of those major and minor critics who comment upon or review current publications. . . . Its four authors might now and then have walked away from the platform and entered the market-place. That, however, we quite understand, was not the intent of these critics. Yet for what we have been given let us be grateful; for this book has lasting value, mainly by reason of Mr. Wilson's clear presentation of theories and traditions of criticism and Mr. Foerster's very noble paper." G. S. Hellman

+ — N Y Times p16 O 26 '41 1000w

New Yorker 17:79 S 27 '41 90w

Reviewed by H. M. Jones

Sat R of Lit 24:3 O 11 '41 1450w

STEARNS, DAVID M. Whisk; the story of a chipmunk; il. by Sharon Stearns. [62p] $1 Farrar

41-11118

Picture-story book about a year in the life of a chipmunk. Part of Whisk's time was spent as a pet in a nature-loving family.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p8 S 21 '41 140w

STEARNS, D. M.—Continued

Reviewed by E. V. Wyatt

Cath World 154:371 D '41 90w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p9 N 3 '41 40w

"This is the type of book which it seems to me might well be eliminated from publishers' lists, not because of any lack of value, but because there are too many of this type published, and some of the older ones are more valuable than the ones under consideration." Gertrude Andrus

— Library J 66:799 S 15 '41 50w

"Boys and girls from eight to twelve will find Whisk an appealing little animal and his adventures very exciting." Marguerite Nahigian
+ Library J 66:799 S 15 '41 60w

"In 'Whisk,' as in his other animal stories, David Stearns, with the invaluable help of Mrs. Stearns's delectable drawings, gives to his readers the feeling of out-of-doors and the recurring seasons, and at the same time convincingly describes the life of a small creature of wood and field. . . This little book and the other three by the same author, 'Sleek, the Story of An Otter,' 'Chuckie, the Story of a Woodchuck,' 'Sniffy, the Story of a Skunk,' make a delightful miniature nature library for the 6 to 8 year old."

+ N Y Times p12 S 28 '41 280w

STEEGMANN, JOHN. Cambridge; as it was and as it is to-day. 128p il pl $3.75 Scribner [10s 6d Batsford]

378.42 Cambridge, England, University 41-11036

"Like the late Christopher Hobhouse's 'Oxford,' this beautiful blend of photographs and text, history and guidebook is meant as much for the untraveled as for one who is thoroughly familiar with the university and town of today. It begins with medieval Cambridge, showing the buildings that still represent this period of its history, outlining the history itself. The same plan is followed in successive chapters for Cambridge of the Renaissance, the Reformation, the seventeenth century, Georgian, Victorian and Edwardian times. The second section guides the tourist in search of the antique. . . The third section describes present-day Cambridge, architecturally and otherwise." Books

Books p25 My 11 '41 200w

Christian Science Monitor p11 My 24 '41 110w

"A reliable guide, Mr. Steegmann is as virile and humane as he is scholarly and carries his learning with a smile." G. T.

+ Manchester Guardian p7 Ja 7 '41 150w

Reviewed by E. M. Forster

New Statesman & Nation 21:328 Mr 29 '41 2100w

"What the author says is, throughout, informative, critical and to the point. Taste, in this instance, is in secure hands. If there be a drawback it is that compression hardly allows him enough space for his own opinions." Sacheverell Sitwell

+ Spec 166:65 Ja 17 '41 900w

Times [London] Lit Sup p192 Ap 19 '41 800w

STEEL, KURT, pseud. See Kagey, R.

STEEN, MARGUERITE. The sun is my undoing. 1176p $3 Viking

(W) 41-13235

A long, picaresque novel of eighteenth century life in England and the West Indies and at sea. The theme of the novel is the evils of slave trade and the work of the English abolitionists. The hero is Matthew Flood, who woos and wins the heart of a beautiful English girl. However, when he finds her an ardent abolitionist, he leaves England and enters the slave trade, takes a Negro mistress, and has many adventures culminating in his capture by Barbary pirates. After many years he returns home to face the results of his escapades.

"Like other novels of inordinate length written in recent years, this one has neither the epical power its size seems to demand nor the cutting edge a short novel can have. . . The reader is nevertheless certain to be caught and held by the sustained talent shown in carrying so massive a story along so clearly, and the invention that was able to make it so continuously absorbing as story." R. M. Gay

+ — Atlantic O '41 200w

Booklist 38:13 S '41

"So masterfully does Miss Steen weave this absorbing romance, that one accepts its melodrama as well as its drama. And there is more than plot in this tale; there is scholarly understanding of varying backgrounds, of politics, religion, social points of view. The Gold Coast, Cuba, Spain and England of the eighteenth century come alive. 'The Sun Is My Undoing' is a magnificent book of its genre." Rose Feld

+ Books p2 Ag 17 '41 1050w

Reviewed by Harold Hobson

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ja 17 '42 150w

Reviewed by J. S. Cleavinger

Library J 66:669 Ag '41 60w

"'The Sun Is My Undoing' is really no book to be reviewed. It sets out to tell a tall tale and it does so with enthusiasm. Yarns like this are to be read, not discussed." Graham Bates

Nation 153:232 S 13 '41 420w

"Here's a big blimp of an historical novel that never gets off the ground, although it has nosed its way onto the best-seller lists. . . Miss Steen's prose gets to be a drone that has you drowsy before you've read the first pound of her book."

New Repub 105:286 S 1 '41 60w

"'The Sun Is My Undoing' has more than a touch of the formality and lavishness of the eighteenth century in its manner. Some of its incidents might have come from the stilted pages of Richardson, but it owes its bizarre and authentic feeling to the spirit that wrote the 'Castle of Otranto' and built Strawberry Hill. Rococo and extravagant it may be, but only the art of a superb story-teller could have laced together so intricately the story of the Bristol Floods and those who mingled in their veins the dark, imperious blood of Sheba from the Combrie River country." Margaret Wallace

+ — N Y Times p6 Ag 17 '41 900w

"Murders, piracies, abductions, insurrections, storms, tortures, and a few dozen assorted romances are shaken out by the double handful. In fact, I know of few books that combine as much activity with as little life." Clifton Fadiman

— New Yorker 17:64 Ag 23 '41 550w

"There is excitement in it and suspense, a great deal of drama, both large-scale and intimate, much picturesque description, scenes of brutality and violence, scenes of beauty and of human sentiment—in fact, everything a book should have. No doubt it is what is sometimes called a novel in the grand manner, but beyond mere scope and size it is far from being a great book. . . It may be fair to say that as for the mere virtuosity of writing and the skill of planning, the book has not quite its equal in recent literature. But once one has put it away and, still feeling a little dizzy, leans back in one's chair to contemplate a final summing-up, one realizes that for all its richness it is shockingly empty." Klaus Lambrecht

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:7 Ag 30 '41 1000w

"This ponderous tale will undoubtedly be read far and wide, and in some ways it deserves such reading, because it truly does appear to give much exact information of period-civilisation and savagery, and it is qua narrative scrupulous. But it is written in the clichés of sensuality and of picturesqueness, and appears to this reviewer to contain no true novelistic value. However, it is a huge entertainment, in its way." Kate O'Brien

Spec 167:340 O 3 '41 450w

"Despite its frankness and plain speaking the work cannot be called indecent. It has genuine epic sweep, in spite of its somewhat episcodical development, and it is remarkably vivid and vital. Few readers who begin it will fail to finish its thousand pages or disagree that 'Finis coronat opus.'" R. J. C.

+ — Springfd Republican p7e Ag 17 '41 750w

Time 38:75 Ag 18 '41 230w

"Miss Steen is a writer of the florid variety, but she has energy, invention and a relish for broad dramatic effects, and in 'The Sun Is my Undoing' she has made a good job of what she plainly meant to do."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p497 O 4 '41 480w

Wis Lib Bul 37:157 O '41

STEEVES, HARRISON ROSS. Good night, sheriff. 274p $2 Random house (W) 41-6233

Detective story.

Booklist 37:465 Je 1 '41

"Here we have a well conceived and lovingly executed murder tale. . . Get your copy of this wov among spring mysteries. It's required reading." Will Cuppy

+ Books p17 Ap 13 '41 440w

"Mr. Steeves lands in the professional class at the first crack, with a slick surprise in his ammunition." Mort. Post

+ New Repub 104:674 My 12 '41 100w

"Those who seek thrills of the more violent sort will do well to avoid [this book], but those who are interested in probing into the workings of the human mind and the emotions will find in it a fascination that is utterly lacking in tales of murder for any one of the usual motives." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p20 Ap 13 '41 280w

"This well-plotted story, written by a professor of English at Columbia University, is convincing from the beginning to the end, when the doctor finds out that Bill Ackersley, county sheriff, has known the answer to the puzzle all along."

+ New Yorker 17:88 Ap 12 '41 60w

"Top-drawer."

+ Sat R of Lit 23:20 Ap 19 '41 40w

"A first-rate story, it is short on blood, long on plot and psychology."

+ Time 37:100 My 5 '41 70w

STEFAN, PAUL. Anton Dvorak; tr. by Y. W. Vance. 336p il $3 Greystone

B or 92 Dvořák, Anton (W) 41-20094

This biography of the great Czech composer is based on material found in the four-volume work by Otokar Sourek. The German edition, published several years ago, bears Sourek's name as co-author. This English translation has been revised, rearranged and adapted to meet the needs of an American reading public. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 38:158 Ja 1 '42

"Now that the biography has come, the work of Paul Stefan, former Viennese critic and writer, at present residing in this country, the result is rather disappointing. It consists for the most part of a rehearsal of the catalogue, year by year, of Dvorak's voluminous works, each one presented with brief appreciative comment, not long or significant enough to be serviceable to the serious student and tiresome and trite for the general reader. . . Somehow, possibly because of a lack of genuine sympathy of the author for his subject, one finishes the book with little impression of a definite personality." Douglas Moore

+ Books p27 O 26 '41 650w

Reviewed by W. P. Sears, Jr.
Churchman 155:18 N 1 '41 150w

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 O '41

Reviewed by F. A. Boyle
Library J 66:731 S 1 '41 70w

New Repub 105:630 N 10 '41 50w

"Paul Stefan's perfect knowledge of his subject is closely allied with his sympathy for Dvorak's genius as an artist. This is a quality which derives from Dr. Stefan's profound musical knowledge, for which he had an international reputation before writing this book." Milos Sefranek

+ N Y Times p9 S 28 '41 1300w

"Until we get something more up-to-date and exhaustive Stefan's 'Dvořák' will be useful in helping to restore this fine and unassuming musician to his rightful place, which is emphatically not that of the composer of 'the famous Largo.'" P. H. Lang

+ Sat R of Lit 24:12 O 25 '41 400w

STEGNER, WALLACE. Fire and ice. 214p $2 Duell

41-5677

Story of a young college student forced by poverty to work at a variety of jobs to earn his way thru college. He joins the Communist party and freely voices his hatred of capitalism, but when he becomes involved with a wealthy girl, whom he professes to despise, the real nature of his hatreds is exposed to him.

"Candor requires the admission that 'Fire and Ice' does not in any way represent an advance in Mr. Stegner's art, but it can be added with equal truthfulness that it ought not to diminish our interest in the work he has yet to produce." W. J. Gold

+ Books p10 Ap 27 '41 550w

"'Fire and Ice,' slighter than the others [by this author] but most timely, has the same general qualities as its predecessor. It is a good story, thoughtfully wrought; and sympathetically, for Mr. Stegner is of the more humane, generous wing of his school. . . It is as sound a study and as moving a story of youth of today as you are likely to come across." F. T. Marsh

+ N Y Times p7 My 11 '41 750w

"Not a book for everyone, but intelligent and powerfully done."

+ New Yorker 17:86 Ap 26 '41 40w

"The chief defect of the book seems to me to lie in the swiftness and ease with which the whole problem is resolved. A more complete background and more fully rounded secondary characters would have made it easier to accept. In short, I couldn't help feeling that, despite its excellence, the whole picture deserved a larger canvas." R. B. West, Jr.

+ — Sat R of Lit 23:12 Ap 26 '41 400w

STEIG, HENRY. Send me down. 461p $2.50 Knopf

41-8082

"Clarinetist Pete Davis moves out of Manhattan's 46th Street into a series of low-grade dates in Pennsylvania in the early '20s, winds up with a top-flight, ill-paid hot outfit in Chicago. His pianist brother Frank sticks to the seaboard; his greater talent and his tameness betray him into the venal successes of the 'swing' rage. Between the two of them they cover most of the salient features of jazz and Jazz-living among white musicians." Time

STEIG, HENRY—Continued

"'Send Me Down' is a novel dedicated to that little miracle—a new art. It is a full-length tribute to a group of creative artists who do their work with the same passion and in almost the same anonymity as medieval cathedral masons. Whatever its weaknesses as fiction, and they are many, 'Send Me Down' is a vivid exploration of a novel and exciting native idiom." Milton Rugoff

+ — Books p4 J1 13 '41 900w

"If your readers still demand more novels on this subject after Young Man With a Horn and Piano in the Band and if they do not object to the realistic approach, this book is recommended." R. D. Minnich

Library J 66:568 Je 15 '41 80w

"It would be too rough on the book to say you would not find it interesting if you were interested in jazz: it has a good deal of the way this music grew in our time and makes good sense on the way different types of musicians felt about it. Many of the facts about music as a business and as a career are there, whether you agree with the interpretation or not. And very few people seem to know very many of the facts. The trouble with the book as reading fiction, taking its place in the general field on its own merits, is that nothing happens. There haven't been many stories about jazz music but there have been better ones." Otis Ferguson

+ New Repub 105:259 Ag 25 '41 650w

"So far as I know, 'Young Man With a Horn' was the first book to deal with jazz and swing in a really serious way, and until now Dorothy Baker has had no important successors. 'Send Me Down,' however, explores the field with a thoroughness which is almost too exhaustive, and in so doing adds several chapters to our Americana legend. . . Whether he has been as successful in purely human terms is another and more dubious matter." E. H. Walton

+ — N Y Times p5 J1 13 '41 850w

"When you've said that Henry Steig knows his stuff cold, you've about charted the virtues and limitations of 'Send Me Down,' a get-it-all-in novel about hot, sweet, and medium jazz and the boys who make it. Mr. Steig, who used to be a jazz musician himself, probably hasn't missed a trick, and to an innocent like myself it sounds authentic enough. . . I suppose, if you have any interest at all in the phenomenon of jazz, you'll probably find yourself, as I did, not worrying to excess over Mr. Steig's artistic shortcomings. The color carries the paper-thin characters safely along from first to last page. The prose, I must add, is homemade." Clifton Fadiman

+ — New Yorker 17:55 J1 19 '41 360w

"Henry Steig can be wistful and ribald at the same time; he can produce a belly laugh, a cynical grin, and a salty tear all at once, which is what his brother's principal vehicle, The New Yorker, would probably label The Neatest Trick of the Week. . . There is a great deal of the Bix Beiderbecke legend in the story and some touches of Pal Joey but the thing stands soundly on truly perceptive and sophisticated and generally bawdy conversations and reflections." Phil Stong

+ Sat R of Lit 24:9 J1 12 '41 700w

"Jazz, what's good of it, is here to stay. And the story of the men who love it, play it, nurture it, live it, is a happy-sad story that will probably some day be well told. But this is not the day, nor is Henry Steig's 'Send Me Down,' the tale. . . Steig's improvisation is hackneyed, has no style. His 'schmaltz' is far from being a 'solid sender.'" Roy Block

— Springf'd Republican p7e J1 13 '41 280w

"A first novel by the brother of New Yorker Artist William Steig is the best story so far about hot jazz and the people who make it. . . But even Send Me Down leaves a long way to go. Its author has had some actual experience as a jazz musician, has knowledge and taste about the music, can do good reportage on the professional and erotic life of his colleagues. Beyond that he does not venture."

+ — Time 38:75 J1 14 '41 200w

STEIN, AARON MARC. Up to no good. 278p $2 Doubleday

41-13944

Detective story.

"There are four murders before this original and often amusing story ends in triumph for its archaeological sleuths." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p12 J1 27 '41 160w

"Physical malformations and effect of rare-fied Andean air keys to unexceptional puzzle staged in unusual and well-described surroundings. Picturesque."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:16 Ag 2 '41 40w

STEIN, EMANUEL. Government and the investor. 223p $1.50; text ed $1 Farrar

332.63 Securities. Corporation law. Stock exchange. Public utilities. Holding companies 41-2345

"A review of the problems of the investor and of the measures that the government has taken to meet them. Chapters: The Corporation and the Security Holder; The Securities Markets; Regulating the Sales of Securities; Regulation of Securities Markets; Public Utility Holding Companies; Investment Trusts and Investment Companies." (Management R) Index.

"In this small volume, Dr. Stein has compressed a large amount of interesting and valuable information, illuminated by some sound comment." E. S. Mead

+ Am Econ R 31:405 Je '41 220w

"In clear and simple narrative, the book covers the four indispensable aspects of the subject. . . Perhaps it is looking the gift horse in the mouth to say that the value of the book would have been increased by an enlargement and more critical discussion of the administration of the laws; and that a bibliography of current materials on this phase of the subject would have made a real contribution." G. H. E. Smith

+ — Am Pol Sci R 35:583 Je '41 380w

Reviewed by G. H. Evans, Jr.

Ann Am Acad 216:203 J1 '41 280w

Booklist 37:326 Mr 15 '41

"It is very much a book for the layman, quite lacking in scholarly distinction. With so much restraint of judgment is it written that not until we reach the bottom of page 216 do we learn why the American government finally went into action on behalf of the investor in 1933. . . One can only wish the author had let himself go. . . There is here the tepid and placid clarity of drawn bath water; the vigorous, provocative stimulation of a cold shower we miss." F. E. Richter

+ — J Pol Econ 49:787 O '41 390w

Management R 30:116 Mr '41 40w

STEIN, GERTRUDE. Ida. 154p $2 Random house

41-4374

Gertrude Stein's first novel in eleven years is a character sketch of one Ida whose course thru life was very simple: it consisted mainly in resting, for she was always tired; talking to herself; and getting married time after time.

Reviewed by Iris Barry

Books p10 My 18 '41 850w

Boston Transcript p1 F 15 '41 240w

"Miss Stein was a bore when, in 1909, she wrote her one intelligible book, 'Three Lives.' But then she was not much more boring than Frank Norris and the other second-rate Americans whom she was imitating. Now, after thirty years practise, she is without doubt the greatest bore among modern writers." Earle Birney

— Canadian Forum 21:28 Ap '41 490w

"Ida provides reading enjoyment for those who are willing to work at it. The grand thing about Miss Stein is that she is original, not merely in punctuation and parts of speech, but in expression. She puts together words that were never before associated in just such arrangements and yet they make sense in a personal way, by means of Gertrude's all-her-own style. There are times when you think you have the clue to her aims, and then again you wonder." E. C. S.

Christian Science Monitor p12 Mr 22 '41 400w

Reviewed by Dorothy Chamberlain
New Repub 104:477 Ap 7 '41 800w

"Ida, Miss Stein's first novel in eleven years, is not her most eccentric work, though it surely is a queer enough book. One might call it a short novel, a long poem, or a modern fairy tale; or a painting in words, reminding of a Dali rather than of a Picasso. . . Miss Stein's book, however futuristic or surrealistic, is a rounded piece of writing, cleverly balanced in its own way and not to be torn apart. Whether one likes or dislikes Ida is a matter of taste as well as patience. This, we admit readily, is quite a commonplace criticism. Yet we also feel it is the only final thing we can say about both the book and the heroine." Marianne Hauser

N Y Times p7 F 16 '41 650w

Reviewed by Clifton Fadiman
New Yorker 17:78 F 15 '41 750w

Reviewed by W. H. Auden
Sat R of Lit 23:8 F 22 '41 800w

"How much or how little sense Ida makes as a story is not important. The words in which it is told are stripped of normal logic, and totally cleansed of emotion. The result is something as intricately clean as a fugue or a quadratic equation."

Time 37:99 F 17 '41 300w

"The more I reread, the less it meant, and the more certain I was that there was something there eager to be unlocked if I only had the key." Robert Littell

Yale R n s 30:xiv spring '41 250w

STEIN, JOSEPH MAXWELL. Your heart, 240p $2.75 Alliance bk.

616.12 Heart, Heart—Diseases (W) 41-51961

A book written for the layman on the heart, its nature, functions and diseases, and how to care for it in health and disease.

Booklist 38:91 N 15 '41

"There is no doubt of Dr. Stein's title to speak with authority, but I fear that the net result will be to send people flocking to doctors' offices with the very fear-produced disorders against which he warns." Hugh Cabot, M.D.

Books p12 D 14 '41 300w

STEINBECK, JOHN. The forgotten village; with 136 phot. from the film of the same name by Rosa Harvan Kline and Alexander Hackensmid. 143p $2.50 Viking

917.2 Mexico—Social life and customs. Photographic books (W) 41-9736

The script of a moving picture film about a small Mexican village and the life of its inhabitants. The underlying purpose of the picture was to find an answer to the question: Why do so many of the children die?

Booklist 37:513 J1 1 '41

"If the stills are indicative of the true merit of the film, it will have high rank in the documentary world. The cameramen for this book have brought out something in these carbon black reproductions that give full credence to the Steinbeck text." R. F. Crandell

+ Books p6 Je 1 '41 480w

Reviewed by Barker Fairley
Canadian Forum 21:153 Ag '41 550w

Reviewed by P. T. Hartung

Commonweal 34:329 J1 25 '41 330w

"Mr. Kline has caught the feeling of Mexico, with its thick undergrowth of ignorance and superstition and its thin layer of modernity. He has even managed to convey, as few photographers of Mexico do or care to do, the squalor and dirt. As a result the reality comes through—and the reality of Mexico is far more moving than any soap-and-water interpretation. The writing is typical Steinbeck—eloquent and sentimental but suited to the subject." Margaret Marshall

+ Nation 153:36 J1 12 '41 230w

"It is a moving, enlightening story, and in its elemental simplicity it shows us, too, the daily pattern of the people's lives: work and festival, field and cottage, joy and sorrow and birth and death. And as it was photographed in a real village, among the people who really are the 'characters' we see, so the pictures are as vitally revealing as they are strong and beautiful."

+ N Y Times p8 Je 1 '41 480w

"With very few exceptions, the numerous photographs—stills from a motion picture written by Mr. Steinbeck, directed by Herbert Kline, and acted by Mexican villagers against their own background—are lustrous and handsomely composed. One of the better picture books."

+ New Yorker 17:77 Je 7 '41 100w

"One could profitably spend much time studying the dignified faces portrayed here—with both their sorrow and their promise deeply etched in line and eyes. Steinbeck and his collaborators have demonstrated their own humanity in presenting so humanly the reality behind the brilliant colors of rural Mexico." H. W. Eldredge

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Je 1 '41 280w

"Steinbeck's story—medicine v. magic for sick children—has warm beauty; so have the peasant actors. But his skillfully timed script sometimes goes pseudo-Biblical."

+ Time 37:88 Je 2 '41 20w

Wis Lib Bul 37:157 O '41

STEINBECK, JOHN, and RICKETTS, EDWARD F. Sea of Cortez; a leisurely journal of travel and research; with a scientific app. comprising materials for a source bk. on the marine animals of the Panamic faunal province. 598p il maps $5 Viking

591.92 California, Gulf of, Marine fauna. Invertebrates (W) 41-52050

An account of an expedition made by the two authors, one a novelist, the other a biologist, along the shores of the Gulf of California. The objective was the study of marine invertebrates and the book contains not only a narrative account of the voyaging but also a record of the scientific observations made. Index.

Booklist 38:153 Ja 1 '42

"An attractive book the general reader will find it—the holiday book of a person doing something he likes and enjoying it thoroughly. Marine biology is Steinbeck's hobby; his passion for it is contagious. . . 'Sea of Cortez' is a fine-flavored sketch of travel and biological field work." H. N. Doughty, Jr.

+ Books p3 D 7 '41 850w

"Filled with colorful Steinbeckian philosophy and spicy anecdotes, it has much the flavor of other Steinbeck books, but is free from emphasis on the sordid side of life and social criticism. Excellent illustrations." E. D. Hart

+ Library J 66:903 O 15 '41 130w

Reviewed by C. C. Munz
Nation 153:647 D 20 '41 370w

"If the book is in any sense a failure it is an admirable one. Mr. Steinbeck's novels will be better for the experience. One hopes that he and Dr. Ricketts get another trip together." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p3 D 28 '41 1350w

STEINBECK, JOHN—Continued

"In a brilliant essay, Edmund Wilson recently interpreted Steinbeck as a biological novelist, one whose vision of life derives from his sensitivity to its animal manifestations. . . 'Sea of Cortez' would seem to drive home Wilson's thesis to the hilt. It was obviously written not merely to tell us—and interestingly, too—about how the marine invertebrates of the Panamic faunal province are killed, preserved, labelled, and classified. Nor was it written as a simple narrative of the small adventures, many of them quite comical, that befell the crew on the expedition. It was written primarily to explain Steinbeck's view of life and mode of thinking." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 17:133 D 6 '41 900w

"Frankly, I would say that about one-tenth of this rabbit-out-of-hatting would have sufficed this reader. It is done with versatility, with nimbleness, with humor, sometimes eloquence; but we do, some of us, know how the trick is performed. . . Either Steinbeck or Ricketts (or all-two-both-of-them) is—are?—potentially a great poet, or poets, of Nature. The grandest of passages in this strange bargain-buy of two-full-length books under one cover are some of the descriptions of the sea, the tide, mirages, wind or dead calm, Indians, tidal pools, or simply night, or dawn, or the barking of a dog, or loneliness on a hot and empty shore. Style, reality, at these moments, all deepen and intone. More of this, and less sheer cleverness will make somebody, whichever he is, a writer as lasting in the future as he is brilliant today." D. C. Peattie

+ Sat R of Lit 24:5 D 27 '41 2100w

"The first half of the book is highly recommended as good reading for anybody; the second half as a valuable reference work for the marine biologist."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 13:4 Ja '42 300w

Reviewed by Eileen Carlson

Springf'd Republican p7e D 21 '41 900w

Time 38:64 D 22 '41 500w

STEINER, MRS CHARLOTTE. Pete and Peter [il. by the author]. [26p] $1 Doubleday

41-20737

Peter, a four-year-old, and his dog Pete, go hunting to try the merits of a new popgun. They have a beautiful time playing with some baby ducks and rabbits, until a hungry fox comes hunting his supper. Then the new popgun and Pete's agility come into action. For picture-book age.

"Bright color, an affectionate attitude to babies and pets, and a story to set the smallest smiling, makes this as good as 'Lulu' for picture-book age." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 O 19 '41 130w

"A fine, jolly little picture story for very small children. . . Children from two to six will be enchanted by both the story and the gay, amusing illustrations. Recommended." Emily Hutson

+ Library J 66:953 N 1 '41 80w

Reviewed by R. C. Benét

Sat R of Lit 24:14 N 8 '41 20w

STEINMAN, DAVID BERNARD, and WATSON, SARA RUTH. Bridges and their builders. 379p il pl $3.75 Putnam

624 Bridges. Engineers (W) 41-52051

History of bridge building from earliest times to the present. Includes biographical material on the men responsible for some famous bridges, and data on the life of the times in which they were built. Partial contents: The beginnings of bridgebuilding; Primitive bridgebuilding; Roman bridgebuilders and their bridges; The Renaissance; The eighteenth century, age of reason; Timber spans and covered bridges; Iron bridges; Steel and mathematics; James B.

Eads and the St Louis bridge; The Roeblings and the Brooklyn bridge; The Firth of Forth bridge; Man-made masonry; Great steel arches; Great steel cantilevers; Great suspension bridges; Recent developments in bridge engineering. No index.

Booklist 38:154 Ja 1 '42

"David Steinman, one of our ablest bridge engineers, and Sara Watson, a discerning art critic and writer, have collaborated in writing a richly informative survey of the science, art and human significance of bridge building. It will appeal alike to the technician, the artist, and those more general readers who will relish its detailed and dramatic accounts of great men and episodes in the progress of this mastery of space." W. R. Agard

+ Books p12 Ja 18 '42 700w

"'Bridges and Their Builders' is popular in the best sense of that word: authoritative and comprehensive without being overtechnical, and always awake to the human and social aspects of its subject."

+ N Y Times p9 Ja 25 '42 400w

"Bridges and their Builders is a truly worthwhile contribution to popular literature on bridges." C. B. M.

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Ja 12 '42 1000w

STEPHENSON, CARL. A brief survey of mediæval Europe. 426p il maps $2.25 Harper 940.1 Europe—History. Europe—Civilization.
Middle ages 41-8413

This is primarily a condensation of the author's college textbook: Mediæval History (Book Review Digest, 1935). "With few exceptions, the maps, figures, and plates are as they were in the Mediæval History, merely rearranged to suit the new organization of the subject matter. The genealogical tables and chronological charts have been retained in full, although they include more detail than is actually needed here. The list of suggested readings and the index are revisions of those published earlier." (Pref) Index.

"It is obvious that many difficulties must arise in the preparation of a survey of this type. That Professor Stephenson has coped with most of them successfully nobody can deny. As might be expected, his text is characterized by accuracy and by mature and up-to-date scholarship. The narrative is simple and clear. As in the larger volume the sections devoted to civilization and culture are outstanding. . . On the other hand, one must allow that condensation has not made Professor Stephenson's text more interesting. Many of the striking illustrative passages which give color and life to Mediæval History do not appear in the present volume." J. R. Williams

+ Social Educ 5:545 N '41 550w

Social Studies 32:334 N '41 30w

Wis Lib Bul 37:176 N '41

STERN, BERNHARD JOSEPH. Society and medical progress. 264p $3 Princeton univ. press

610.9 Medicine—History. Hygiene—History
41-25497

"Dr. Stern's present volume is a direct outcome of his work under a grant from the Committee on Research in Medical Economics. His chief purpose is to show that the progress of medicine, both as an art and as a science, is functionally related to the development of society at large. His thesis, impressively documented at all points, is that this progress may be expected to continue only if medicine frankly accepts and honestly encourages its social obligations." (New Repub) Index.

Reviewed by A. J. Carlson

Ann Am Acad 219:205 Ja '42 360w

Booklist 38:186 F 1 '42

"There are many fine pages giving excellent illustrative material such as the effects of the discovery of the microscope, the birth of modern chemistry and the like. The author shows very vividly what a great difference it makes to medicine whether one lives in a society where one makes a living with his own tools or earns a living with tools that belong to some one else. The conditions that make for a one-third of a nation which is ill housed, ill fed and ill clad make for medical havoc in research as well as in application. Mr. Stern has given us the how and the why of medical progress and at the same time skillfully chosen facts accompanied by the explanation of their social significance." W. M. Malisoff

+ Books p28 O 26 '41 480w

"This [is an] admirable volume... For the general reader Dr. Stern's book will be anything but dull, thanks to the author's talent for combining much valuable information with a vital point of view. Chapter Two, on the scientific foundations of medicine, is the best account known to me of the close dependence of medical techniques upon the general scientific, industrial and economic levels of a given period... That a scholar whose main work has been in the field of sociology should have written so well and with such authority on medicine is a further proof that the rigorous disciplines of science are inseparably linked with the needs of men and the urgent, constantly changing imperatives of society." Harold Ward

+ New Repub 105:566 O 27 '41 320w

Reviewed by M. C. Leikind
Social Studies 33:39 Ja '42 440w

"'Society and Medical Progress' can be recommended highly for physicians and for all who are interested in what goes under the name 'problems of medical economics.' It will be good medicine for conservatives and liberals alike." D. W. Orr, M.D.

+ Survey 77:371 D '41 650w

STERN, GLADYS BRONWYN (MRS G. L. HOLDSWORTH). Another part of the forest. 396p $3 Macmillan [12s 6d Cassell]

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 41-51830

Autobiographical essays, in which the author speaks at random about Jane Austen, pre-Hitler Copenhagen, juvenile reading, a little about the war, the writers' trade, poltergeists, Hollywood, etc. The book is in a sense a continuation of the author's earlier book, Monogram (Book Review Digest, 1936).

Booklist 37:514 J1 1 '41

Bookmark 2:15 N '41

"To read this book is an experience comparable only to walking in the woods in spring, without direction, without haste, without pause, led by one loveliness at random toward another. On such a walk, one never takes a map or brings back a report; about all one can say, when called upon to account for a long morning, is, 'I walked in the woods and could not sooner return because I was so happy.'" M. L. Becker

+ Books p5 Je 1 '41 850w

"Haunted throughout by the thought that this is not life; that the writer is skipping gaily from peak to peak of trivia, the reader becomes as absorbed as a child eating jam, and continues to the last currant in the bottom of the jar. 'Look thy last on all things lovely, every hour,' she quotes from de la Mare. Then, using as skeleton gay gifts from her myriad friends, she clothes them with the flesh of lively reminiscence, philosophy and much of the humor that she has stored up in a rich life." Eleanor McNaught

+ Canadian Forum 21:154 Ag '41 500w

Reviewed by Katherine Brégy
Cath World 153:633 Ag '41 200w
Christian Century 58:1054 Ag 27 '41 140w
Christian Science Monitor p11 J1 12 '41 600w

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 D '41

"While uneven in style and interest, this book is on the whole rewarding for its startling originality and brilliant wit as the author casually reveals her reactions to people and places while journeying about Europe and America. Of outstanding interest to the literary world are 'G.B.'s' scintillating comments about literature, both past and present, and her charming camaraderie with contemporary writers or with the contemporary great. Recommended." S. E. Sherman

+ Library J 66:462 My 15 '41 80w

"When she writes impersonally one finds her reminiscences quite interesting; for the rest there are innumerable details which leave the detached reader entirely cold and could only interest personal friends. But Miss Stern has a lively mind, and by selection one can secure entertainment in the reading." M. C.

— + Manchester Guardian p3 Je 6 '41 210w

Reviewed by Margaret Marshall
Nation 153:36 J1 12 '41 210w

"Four hundred pages of deliberate, well written, chatty and rambling escapism."

+ New Repub 105:230 Ag 18 '41 50w

"As the author herself should be the first to appreciate, both literally and figuratively, good wine needs no bush. Certainly this novelist's swiftly meandering and circling reminiscences need no 'introductory' adjectives to beckon readers to the avid enjoyment of their lively course. Like the popular 'Monogram' of a few years ago, 'Another Part of the Forest' has gathered memories from a richly flavored life, reflections of a brilliantly individual and polished mind, and set them down in a subtle pattern of involution instead of by chronology or subject or any other obvious formula." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p5 Je 8 '41 1500w

New Yorker 17:78 Je 7 '41 40w

"G. B. Stern frequently rebukes J. M. Barrie for his indulgence in whimsey; it is hard to believe this affectionate petulance springs from anything but a needless alarm at the same characteristic in her own work. For G. B. Stern is a passionate whimsey-addict. Under the bad advice of a good critic, E. V. Lucas, she tried realism; but puckishness darted over the fence, and she is always most herself when she lets her fancy free. . . . G. B. Stern has lectured, and enjoyed it; and some of the most amusing anecdotes in her book touch on the lecturer's experiences." R. E. Roberts

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:5 Je 7 '41 550w

"Aesthetically one shrinks a little from this expansive—as well as expensive—book. Christmas Day in the South of France with Miss Stern sun-bathing on an orange mattress, with drinks on little tables under coloured umbrellas, and High Mass from St. Peter's on the radio, isn't everyone's taste."

Spec 166:592 My 30 '41 250w

"It is like a series of delightful chats with Miss Stern to read this book. Not one chat but many, for the book is packed with conversation and the writer is witty, outrageous, deadly serious, scoffing and playful." M. D.

+ Spring'd Republican p7e Je 1 '41 850w

Times [London] Lit Sup p248 My 24 '41 550w

STERN, PHILIP VAN DOREN (PETER STORME, pseud), and NEWMAN, JAMES (PAUL STRYFE, pseud). How to torture your friends; il. by Steinberg. 170p $1.35 Simon & Schuster

793.73 Puzzles. Mathematical recreations 41-9920

Collection of brain twisters—puzzles, tricks, and mental problems—to be used at parties.

Booklist 37:543 J1 15 '41

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '41

STERNBERG, FRITZ. Fivefold aid to Britain: to save her and keep us out of war; with charts and drawings by Harry Roth. 76p pa $1 Day

940.5373 World war, 1939—Great Britain. World war, 1939—U.S. 41-51549

By means of statistical analysis and graphic charts, Mr Sternberg shows the inadequacy of our present aid to England and the necessity of increasing it to five times its current quantity if we really wish to avert danger to the United States.

Booklist 37:268 F 15 '41

"Fritz Sternberg has produced a book of incisive logic and great clarity." Hans Kohn
+ Boston Transcript p1 F 1 '41 280w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 19:376 J1 '41 20w

"The book is disturbing, but convincing."
L. B. Bloch
+ Living Age 359:592 F '41 250w

STERNE, MRS EMMA (GELDERS). America was like this [il. by Oscar Ogg]. 198p $2 Dodd (W) 41-19428

Six stories for young readers. Each story emphasizes an important era in the development of the United States. The opening story is about an Indian boy who witnessed the landing of Amerigo Vespucci in 1498. Gil's Treasure, is the story of an English boy who left Bristol in 1608 to settle in this new country. Peter, is about the boy who painted stirring sentences on New York walls in 1775 and helped rouse the sense of American union. The others are about the opening of the West; the invention of the automobile; and Grand Coulee.

Booklist 38:136 D 15 '41

"We need stories like this, bringing our country's historic background to children around ten or so, by showing them children as they lived in our country at successive important periods in our history. Mrs. Sterne does this dynamically: here are six children with whose personal problems the history of America is involved." M. L. Becker
+ Books p8 O 19 '41 240w

"A good idea well carried out." H. L. Binsse

+ Commonweal 35:113 N 21 '41 20w

"Make-up is good, though the illustrations by Oscar Ogg are not always happily conceived. Recommended for children ten and over." H. Y. Long

+ Library J 66:953 N 1 '41 160w

"The excellent purpose behind this book is no less worthy because it is apparent. We need the writing and thinking which have gone into its making, and Mrs. Sterne was well fitted for the undertaking. Her feeling toward history is very real. She re-creates a vital and spacious past to which boys and girls today have a direct relation." Irene Smith
+ N Y Times p7 N 2 '41 280w

"Commonplace." Allan Nevins
Sat R of Lit 24:7 N 8 '41 10w

STEBEN, JOHN. Labor in wartime. 159p $1.50 Int. pubs.

331.0973 Labor and laboring classes—U.S. European war, 1914-1918—Economic aspects. Trade unions 41-1267

A survey of the American labor situation during the first World war years, 1914-1918, including comparisons with present conditions. Written from a Leftist point of view. Index

Reviewed by Leo Wolman

Am Hist R 47:200 O '41 280w

"There are two respectable ways of dealing with a monumental subject. One is to deal with it in a monumental way, with exhaustive and scientific detail. The other is to deal with it suggestively. The results, although different, are legitimate and wholesome, provided the spirit in which the results are sought is impartial and scientific. John Steuben's Labor in Wartime . . . is an essay of the suggestive type, but it has been executed in no impartial or scientific spirit. Mr. Steuben set out with a certain point of view—that of discrediting the A. F. of L.'s rôle in the war and justifying the I. W. W.'s—and his prejudices are on some occasions thinly disguised. . . . There are many statements of Mr. Steuben which we would like more specific, and many for which we hunger for citations—although Mr. Steuben's book is not without citations—out of pure interest in the subject. But Mr. Steuben is a cagey writer. Where he is most provocative and belligerent, he is most diffident with his sources." Smith Simpson

— Am Pol Sci R 35:380 Ap '41 450w

"Its self-assurance and one-sidedness about international issues, and its failure to maintain balance in the use and interpretation of labor events, nullify the values of passages which would have made lively material in an objective account. The book will have no place in authoritative studies." Herman Feldman
— Ann Am Acad 215:222 My '41 130w

STEVENS, BERTHA. How miracles abound. 200p il $2.50; educ ed $1.85 Day; $1.85 Beacon press

500 Nature study (W) 41-10155

"Ten objects, ranging from star to dewdrop, are studied with a view to illustrating the forces and principles that pervade the universe. The book is addressed primarily to teachers." Christian Century

Booklist 38:76 N 1 '41

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p5 Ag 10 '41 140w

Christian Century 58:985 Ag 6 '41 60w

"This is a book which can deeply enrich the whole life of a child with whom it is understandingly opened. The photographs illustrating it are both significant and beautiful." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:289 J1 '41 110w

"No one dealing with young children in any capacity can fail to profit by the knowledge that Miss Stevens's long experience in teaching children has brought her. The book is illustrated by clear drawings and beautiful photographs. 'How Miracles Abound' will enrich elementary science teaching and give aid and inspiration to thoughtful parents." A. T. E.

+ N Y Times p10 S 14 '41 300w

STEVENS, MRS FRANCES MOYER (ROSS) (CHRISTOPHER HALE, pseud). Dead of winter. 270p $2 Doubleday

41-13945

Detective story.

"This is one of those housebound affairs with enough action to keep you always alert and likable detecting by Bill French of the state police." Will Cuppy

+ Books p10 Ag 31 '41 80w

"Such a chilling murder story as this should be just the thing for the dog days." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p16 Ag 31 '41 200w

"Deft shifting of suspicion in well-plotted yarn makes final solution anybody's guess until shivery ski-joring climax. Worth while."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:20 S 13 '41 40w

STEVENS, WILLIAM BERTRAND. bp. Editor's quest; a memoir of Frederic Cook Morehouse; with foreword by Clifford P. Morehouse. 240p il $2.50 Morehouse

B or 92 Morehouse, Frederic Cook 41-2894

Memoir of the Episcopalian layman who was editor of The Living Church from 1900 to 1932. The author is Bishop of Los Angeles.

"A strong writer, an able but never quarrelsome controversialist when controversy was called for, a devout churchman and an earnest Christian, Dr. Morehouse adorned the calling to which he devoted his life. His biography, by the Bishop of Los Angeles, is not only a personal tribute but a contribution to the history of the Episcopal Church in America."

+ Christian Century 58:60 Ja 8 '41 80w

Reviewed by W. L. Caswell
Churchman 155:19 F 1 '41 70w

STEVENS, WILLIAM OLIVER. Forever England. 299p il $3 Dodd

914.2 England—Description and travel
41-24139

The author is an American who had decided to spend all of his 1940 vacation in England, but was prevented from carrying out his plans by the war. Instead he has collected his materials and memories of many earlier trips, beginning with his first in 1887, and has illustrated his work with his own sketches. Touches on many sections of southern and southwestern England: Kent, Sussex, Devonshire, Wiltshire, and Herefordshire. Index.

"Here is England remembered as thousands of Americans remember it, or would if they had kept their memories green with notebooks and sketches made on the spot. The latter, reproduced in great number, are surprisingly good, those of famous buildings being accurate and of people—especially the one of an American watching a cricket match—often unexpectedly comic. The book shows what an American traveler owns in Britain."

+ Books p20 D 14 '41 300w

"A delightful, affectionate and realistic book, which [the author] has illustrated with his own pen-and-ink sketches in charming profusion."

+ N Y Times p5 N 23 '41 550w

"Dr Stevens has not written a guide-book, but a vivid and pungent outline of some of the things that used to be commonplace in England, and may be so no more. During his distinguished career as a teacher (he was for years head of the English department at Annapolis and has since taught in boys' schools) he continually emphasized the development in his pupils of the seeing eye and the understanding heart. He has followed his own precepts in taking us in this book to an England never to be effaced by bombs and never remotely to be understood or appreciated by the men who drop them or the megalomaniacs who imagine a vain thing."

+ Springfield Republican p7e Ja 18 '42 480w

STEVENS, WILLIAM OLIVER. The Shenandoah and its byways; il. by the author. 281p map $3 Dodd

917.559 Shenandoah valley. Virginia—Description and travel (W) 41-6589

A travel book which describes the beauties and wonders of Virginia's lovely western valley, the Shenandoah, interlarding the descriptive passages with narratives of historic and legendary interest. Partial contents: Frederick; the town of Barbara Frietchie; Harpers Ferry; the town of John Brown; Winchester; Front Royal; the town of Belle Boyd; The Caverns; Staunton and an excursion therefrom; Lexington; the town; Washington and Lee university; The Virginia Military Institute; The White Sulphur; Natural bridge; the "Miracle in stone"; The Blue Ridge and its skyline drive; Charlottesville. Index.

Booklist 37:437 My 15 '41

"'Shenandoah Valley is often referred to by older writers as the Great Valley or the Valley of Virginia,' says Mr. Stevens. My older colored friends used to call it the Value of Virginia and it is in this sense that Mr. Stevens has written so delightfully of the valley." R. Y. Williams

+ Books p6 Ap 27 '41 950w

"If 'The Shenandoah and Its Byways' lacks something of the spontaneity and evocative skill of 'Nantucket' and 'Annapolis' it is none the less to be welcomed as a useful and readable guide, enriched further with very agreeable pictures."

+ N Y Times p18 My 4 '41 450w

Pratt p22 D '41

STEVENSON, AUGUSTA. Ben Franklin, printer's boy; il. by Paul Laune. 176p $1.25 Bobbs

B or 92 Franklin, Benjamin—Juvenile literature (W) 41-15615

Biographical sketch covering the apprentice days and young manhood of Benjamin Franklin, with some material on the achievements of his later years. For boys of seven to ten.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p8 N 16 '41 230w

Reviewed by E. V. Wyatt

Cath World 154:379 D '41 130w

"This is a very simple biography, presented in a style just beyond the 'reader' stage. The sentences are short, the vocabulary simple, and the ideas and events presented in an uncomplicated manner which should hold the attention of third and fourth graders. . . Recommended as an introduction to factual material in the field of biography." M. R. Lucas

+ Library J 66:798 S 15 '41 120w

"Good anecdote, dialogue." Allan Nevins

+ Sat R of Lit 24:7 N 8 '41 30w

STEVENSON, DOROTHY EMILY (MRS JAMES REID PEPLOE). Alister and co; poems; il. by Doris Flather Richardson. 71p $1.50 Farrar

821

40-32786

"A collection of poems by [an] author of adult novels. They remind us, perhaps, of her cousin Robert Louis Stevenson's A Child's Garden of Verses. They too are about the everyday affairs of children growing up in happy homes with more or less understanding grown-ups." Christian Science Monitor

"[The author's] rhymes are more like Milne's than the 'Child's Garden,' but have their own flavor. . . The bits read aloud beautifully."

M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 Mr 9 '41 90w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p6 N 25 '40 60w

"Child verse after the fashion of A. A. Milne is here happily put together to remind us of toys and play in quiet English nurseries."

A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 16:445 N '40 40w

STEVENSON, DOROTHY EMILY (MRS JAMES REID PEPLOE). Mrs Tim carries on; leaves from the diary of an officer's wife in the year 1940. 307p $2.50 Farrar

(W) 41-10684

In February 1940 Mrs Tim saw her husband off to France, while she stayed at home in the Scottish garrison town where Tim had been stationed. In her diary she recorded her activities and anxieties—taking care of her children, coping with friends and the wives of other members of the garrison, and house-keeping aggravated by the war shortages. With Tim's return after Dunkirk some of her difficulties straightened out.

Booklist 37:547 Jl 15 '41

Bookmark 2:18 N '41

"Because of its theme, 'Mrs Tim Carries On' is closer to reality than some of her earlier books. The writing has a firmer texture, and the characters are more economically drawn. All of which places this novel among the author's best." George Conrad

+ Books p8 Je 29 '41 400w

STEVENSON, D. E.—Continued

"It is true that Mrs. Tim's observations are not profound, but they may be nearer the truth for not being arrived at elaborately. She finds enjoyment in the feeling of kinship which unites the whole population of London into one vast family, so that the Queen and the flower woman at the corner are both her sisters, and in this feeling she finds an aid to courage and the explanation of many a brave deed. This is pretty obvious, but it is expressed with freshness and a good deal of conviction." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 2 '41 500w

"It is deceptive stuff, this seemingly aimless and rambling patter of Miss D. E. Stevenson's. While Mrs. Tim is running on about choosing presents for the regimental Christmas party, and what Bryan writes home from prep school, and how much the colonel's wife had to do with getting Jack MacDougall sent abroad, you are apt to think there is nothing to it but froth. It is only later, sometimes very much later, that you realize how clear and inclusive a picture she has managed to present of this miniature army world." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p5 Jl 6 '41 800w

"Readers who have already met Tim Christie's wife in Miss D. E. Stevenson's previous books will be delighted to meet this charming personality again, even in diary form."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p261 My 31 '41 100w

STEVENSON, JESSIE LULU. Care of poliomyelitis. 230p il $2.50 (8s 6d) Macmillan 616.83 Infantile paralysis. Nurses and nursing 40-10350

"The material is divided into five chapters. The first, 'The Problem,' describes in a brief but comprehensive manner the development of public interest in epidemic poliomyelitis and some of the ways by which organized public efforts have aided the victims of the disease. The second, 'The Acute Stage,' describes the etiology, virus, pathology, mode of invasion and spread, course of the disease, and treatment during the acute stage in a scientifically accurate but easily readable form. This chapter provides a basis for an intelligent understanding of convalescent and later care which are admirably handled in the remaining three chapters." Survey

Booklist 37:354 Ap 1 '41

"Miss Stevenson's book will undoubtedly prove widely useful. It will be of particular value to the public health nurse because of the way in which it relates nursing care to adaptations in the home." Naomi Deutsch, R. N.

+ Survey 76:309 O '40 300w

STEWART, ALFRED WALTER (J. J. CONNINGTON, pseud). The twenty-one clues. 316p $2 Little 41-7660

Detective story.

Booklist 38:13 S '41

Bookmark 2:18 N '41

"Without stating in so many words that this is a fiction based upon the notorious Hall-Mills murder case, we venture to hint that the wind is in that direction. Mr. Connington has veiled, adorned, elaborated and otherwise adapted the story with a goody bag of tricks, including a most adroit substitution of identities. He has also provided a fine brand of detection and an answer that exactly fits his version." Will Cuppy

+ Books p28 My 11 '41 170w

"The working out of the solution shows all Mr. Connington's remarkable and careful ingenuity, a quality in which he remains unsurpassed." E. R. Punshon

+ Manchester Guardian p3 My 27 '41 90w

"The Twenty-One Clues is old-fashioned detection (and quite adequate, but no more) solved by Sir Clinton Driffeld in his prosiest vein. Instead of probing the bewildering mountain of clues, many readers will take a short cut by glancing at the characters of the persons involved. Sir Clinton can be trusted only to convict cads."

New Statesman & Nation 22:164 Ag 16 '41 50w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p19 My 11 '41 180w

New Yorker 17:96 My 17 '41 80w

"Methodical and painstaking investigation of ingeniously-planned crime should please those who care more for deduction than action. Well thought-out."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:18 My 10 '41 40w

Reviewed by John Fairfield

Spec 166:536 My 16 '41 20w

"Clever, and a satisfying puzzle."

+ Time 37:100 Je 9 '41 40w

"Calculating patience is Mr. Connington's chief characteristic. At times he dawdles so calmly over routine detail that he exasperates, but this assurance compels admiration directly you are even dimly aware where his purpose lies."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p213 My 3 '41 150w

STEWART, GEORGE RIPPEY. Storm. 349p $2.50 Random house

(W) 41-51984

On the first day of the twelve covered by this novel a young meteorologist noted on his chart a small storm center in the western Pacific, thousands of miles away from his San Francisco office. He dubbed the baby storm, Maria, and followed its course through the following days with an almost fatherly interest. "Maria" grew with astounding swiftness, swept across the Pacific and over California, affecting the lives of millions, causing death and disaster and forcing men to perform almost impossible feats in many walks of life.

"Mark Twain would be glad to know that after all these years of talk about the weather someone has finally done something about it. In writing the biography of one hypothetical storm Mr. Stewart is still only talking, but in doing so he tells all that needs to be told about storms in general, and he tells it with a significance which neither meteorologists nor common men have ever before achieved... Mr. Stewart's style is rather febrile and blown up, but so was Maria's. His distaste for understatement can be forgiven him in view of the originality of his theme and the imagination of its treatment, or forgotten in the course of a most absorbing tale." J. H. Bradley

+ Atlantic Ja '42 200w

Booklist 38:114 D 1 '41

"It is a familiar pattern—fragments of lives bound together by some one extraneous circumstance—the pattern of grand hotels and Orient expresses, of survivors in open boats after shipwreck, and workers in business whose single tie is the store. But the freshness and vividness of Mr. Stewart's background gives it novelty and his storm gives the individual characters something to fight. The individual lives are well sketched... A couple of the incidents are, perhaps, too carefully contrived, and so many characters are handled that only a few stand out with great distinctness. But the weather men do, and the men on Route 40 do—and Maria herself is a very decided character." S. V. Benét

+ Books p1 N 23 '41 1100w

Commonweal 35:325 Ja 16 '42 50w

"A 'must' book for libraries, and let the classifiers worry." G. W. Hill

+ Library J 66:793 S 15 '41 90w

Nation 153:649 D 20 '41 120w

"[A] most striking book, though hardly an impressive novel. . . The trouble with this as a book which holds itself together is that none of the people becomes identifiable as a character, and almost none of them has any relation with the others. Then, too, in his long build-up of unrelated people and incidents, there are long stretches of exposition. Some of this is technical, complex and fascinating; some of it is gratuitous and at times annoying. The best part of the book is the last part, where the storm sweeps in over the coast and the author finally drops the other shoe." Otis Ferguson

+ — New Repub 105:898 D 29 '41 330w

"The flaw in this novel as a novel is that though Mr. Stewart is imaginative as well as learned in his description of physical phenomena, the people are stereotypes—they behave like men in some company textbook prepared for the guidance of apprentices. Like tin soldiers, they all are valiant, but they do not live. The view of nature truly is, as some one has said, 'Olympian,' but this book is much more apt, I believe, to start a new fashion in the 'Popularization' of science than to set a new fiction vogue." Robert Van Gelder

+ — N Y Times p6 N 23 '41 700w

"This is essentially a story not about men and women but about a speeding low-pressure continent of air. It's something of a relief, as a matter of fact to read a tale in which human beings, valorous as many of them are in this book, shrink almost palpably beside the titanic element against which they measure their strength. . . Mr. Stewart has gone to enormous pains to get up his meteorology, his aeronautics, and a dozen related subjects. . . At times his story sags under the weight of technical detail. At times it loses its afflatus or becomes merely ingenious, but it never—at least to me, a pushover for this kind of thing—gets dull." Clifford Fadiman

+ New Yorker 17:106 N 22 '41 950w

"Necessarily composed of incidents, the book is in no sense episodic or confused, even when dealing with confusion. With remarkable skill of suggestion the incidents move along, and interest is sustained. After all, there is material enough. Lovers do get caught in mountain snowstorms, linemen perish at their duty, the maintenance of traffic does demand action, even heroism." P. B. Sears

+ Sat R of Lit 24:16 N 22 '41 650w

"A wealth of scientific data is accurately given in 'Storm,' and is most subtly related to mundane existence in what might be characterized as the book for the layman who wishes to know how meteorology impinges upon human consciousness."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 12:2 D '41 420w

"One of the most original and fascinating and entertaining pieces of fiction to appear this year." R. J. Conklin

+ Springfield Republican p7e N 30 '41 1000w

"Storm must be credited with the most magnificent idea behind a book this year. The storm itself (which was entirely invented, but carefully checked for accuracy) becomes absorbing as few human characters, in fiction, ever are. It is a splendid job of research and design. It is also a terrible job of writing."

+ — Time 38:91 D 1 '41 400w

STEWART, JAMES STUART. The strong name. 260p $2 Scribner [7s Clark, T] 252 Sermons 41-6084

"Twenty-four sermons by the minister of North Morningside Church, Edinburgh. The book's title is from that well-known hymn of St. Patrick, 'I bind unto myself today the strong Name of the Trinity,' while the three divisions of the book are in honor of the three Persons of the Trinity." Churchman

"The author of these sermons shows no signs of the faltering of his own faith. His message is very positive. He meets misgivings with ringing, challenging affirmations, fortified by a wealth of illustration. He speaks as one who never doubts the verity and power of the good news of salvation. The words of St. Patrick,

I bind unto myself

The strong Name of the Trinity, not only furnish an apposite title for the present volume; the convictions and earnestness displayed throughout these sermons testify to the author's unqualified allegiance to that Strong Name." W. E. Hammond

+ Christian Century 58:721 My 28 '41 340w

"It is significant, in view of the fact that this book has been written under the shadow of war, that no less than four sermons are devoted to the perennial problem of 'God and the Fact of Suffering.' This section alone is worth the price of the book for the helpful light it sheds on this, one of the darkest problems of humanity." G. E. Daniels

+ Churchman 155:19 My 1 '41 210w

Times [London] Lit Sup p16 Ja 11 '41 290w

STEWART, JOHN INNES MACKINTOSH (MICHAEL INNES, pseud). Appleby on Ararat. 254p $2 Dodd [7s 6d Gollancz]

(W) 41-17617

Detective story.

Booklist 38:114 D 1 '41

"Take it any way you like, preferably as detection highly flavored with fun, and allowing for the fact that this author isn't for everybody, seems to us that this belongs with Mr. Innes's major productions." Will Cuppy

+ Books p18 S 14 '41 300w

"The book is written with all Mr. Innes's accustomed wit and learning and is a most curious amalgam of detective tale and spy yarn, of the desert island theme, of the boy's adventure story, and finally of rollicking farce. To readers of the more sophisticated type the book will appeal enormously. But others may be inclined to suspect Mr. Innes of having this time pushed his tongue into his cheek just a little too far." E. R. Punshon

+ — Manchester Guardian p3 J1 1 '41 270w

"'Appleby on Ararat' is less a murder-mystery tale than a chronicle of wildest adventure, and the author's very wit has worked against the coherence—and thus against the excellence—of his story. His opening fantasia recalls Rose Macaulay's 'Orphan Island' in event and almost in satiric brilliance. Ironic character-searching plays in and out with murder, mass violence, international intrigue and extravaganzas of burlesque. This is a very minor Innes, but it's a diverting and always clever tale." Kay Irvin

+ — N Y Times p20 S 14 '41 260w

"Superbly plotted and humorously written, this is one of the outstanding mysteries of the year."

+ New Yorker 17:76 S 13 '41 60w

"Super-abundance of amazingly good talk crowds detecting into corner, with Appleby turning into an avenging angel in fantastically thrilling finish. Tour de force."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:18 S 20 '41 40w

"The story under all the ormulu is pretty good, with a nice blend of detective-work and rapid action, but. . ." John Fairfield

+ — Spec 166:640 Je 13 '41 60w

Time 38:100 O 6 '41 70w

"Richness is Mr. Innes's quality. Every sentence he writes has flavour, every incident flamboyance, and his plots are so luxuriant as to make rival detective stories and thrillers look like allotments. He was bound to arrive in the tropics sooner or later and here he is at last in the South Seas on an uninhabited isle more richly inhabited than all the others of celebrated romances. . . The murder mystery might almost be overlooked. The detective is nothing."

Times [London] Lit Sup p285 Je 14 '41 160w

STEWART, JOHN INNES MACKINTOSH
(MICHAEL INNES, pseud). The secret vanguard. 236p $2 Dodd [7s 6d Gollancz]

(W) 41-1360

Detective story.

Booklist 37:293 Mr 1 '41

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p15 Ja 19 '41 160w

"A book of the '39 Steps' school which will keep you on tenterhooks from beginning to end." Marian Wiggin

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 18 '41 50w

"The somewhat narrow framework Mr. Michael Innes illumines in 'The Secret Vanguard' with all the wealth of his knowledge, his wit, his ingenuity, his admirable if at times slightly affected style. The opening chapter, describing the life and environment of a leisured and amiable man of letters, is a most excellent piece of writing. For it alone the book would be worth buying and keeping." E. R. Punshon

+ Manchester Guardian p7 D 10 '40 150w

"Only a Swinburne expert could untangle all the clues, but there's exhilarating adventure of the 'Thirty-nine Steps' kind to keep the literariness from getting too flossy." Mort. Post

+ New Repub 104:349 Mr 10 '41 50w

"For sheer excitement and picturesque melodrama The Secret Vanguard will delight everyone with a taste for such things. Mr. Innes's talent for pastiche serves him faithfully, even gloriously, in this most hackneyed branch of fiction. Every step of The Thirty-Nine Steps he treads again with the punctiliousness of a don and the fidelity of a Scotsman. And if one Scotsman, John Buchan, could set himself to compose the super-thriller of the last war by mixing the right ingredients in the proper quantities, so can Michael Innes for this war. Only it is perhaps a pity to use exactly the same ingredients." Ralph Partridge

+ New Statesman & Nation 20:391 O 19 '40 100w

"A story that bears comparison with John Buchan's novels of adventure and international intrigue, not because of any similarity of plot, but because Innes, like Buchan, has mastered the art of swift, exciting and well-organized narrative." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p20 Ja 12 '41 240w

"Spies reach a new high in Scotland, and Michael Innes makes the most of it. And horror?—you'd let a cobra walk all over you before you'd put this one down to defend yourself."

+ New Yorker 16:30 Ja 18 '41 30w

"Extra good."

+ Sat R of Lit 23:20 Ja 18 '41 50w

"Within the pattern [the author] has adopted, he contrives great excitement and much surprise: his urbane dialogue and romantic colouring make a piquant contrast: his adventurous conceits are, as has been said in another context, far-fetched but worth the carriage." Nicholas Blake

+ Spec 165:424 O 25 '40 140w

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 2 '41 190w

Times [London] Lit Sup p533 O 19 '40 220w

STIERI, EMANUELE. Pewtercraft as a hobby; phot. by the author; il. by Ruth Batz. 110p $1.75 Harper

739 Pewter

(W) 40-27854

A craftsman's manual. Part one contains chapters on the history and development of the craft, on tools and equipment, and on methods of making numerous articles. Part two contains "projects" ranging from paper cutters to bowls, boxes, and lighting fixtures. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:171 Ja 1 '41

Bookmark 2:6 Mr '41

Wis Lib Bul 37:31 F '41

STIFLER, FRANCIS CARR. Every man's book. 113p $1 Harper

220 Bible. Whole

41-25070

The chapters in this book are based on radio talks given during the last three years over one of the national networks. The theme is the influence of the Bible in our modern living and how it came to have such influence.

Christian Century 58:1546 D 10 '41 80w

"This book is an admirable approach to the Bible for the average Christian who has let his Bible reading lag. It is simple, easy to read, and in full accord with the facts. The author obviously has a love for the Bible that goes beyond his work as Editorial Secretary of the American Bible Society, and there is an evangelical fervor running throughout the 113 pages." R. C. Miller

+ Churchman 156:16 Ja 1 '42 170w

"The eighteen comparatively short sections of the book are largely based upon Dr. Stifter's widely-known radio talks, and like those talks are popular, genial, and hence delightful reading. As a secretary of the American Bible Society the author has had at his disposal quantities of pertinent illustrative material; facts about the making of the Bible; its tremendous influence in the unfolding of human history; its supreme part in missionary endeavor; its immense and ever increasing circulation; the high valuation that the great ones of the earth have placed upon it." Mitchell Bronk

+ Crozer Q 19:81 Ja '42 400w

STILES, HELEN E. Pottery in the United States; foreword by R. Guy Cowan; with photographic il, decorative end papers and line drawings by Marion Downer. 329p $3 Dutton

738 Pottery. Decoration and ornament

(W) 41-15157

The author of Pottery of the Ancients, Pottery of the Europeans, etc. here completes her series of books with an account of pottery in the United States. The book is concerned chiefly with the pottery and potteries of the last fifty or sixty years with an introductory chapter on early pottery and a concluding chapter on imported pottery. The term pottery is used to cover dinner ware, sanitary ware, vases, figurines and decorative wares. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 38:31 O 1 '41

Reviewed by H. J. Greene

Horn Bk M 17:373 S '41 130w

"The information will be useful for those interested in pottery as an art, but the book will be read also for the stories of the lives of those who have contributed to this art in our country. The book is well made and generously illustrated with photographic pictures as well as line drawings. Junior and senior high school readers, but a most useful and delightful book for all ages." A. M. Wetherell

+ Library J 66:847 O 1 '41 130w

"[This is] probably for the general reader the most interesting of all of [her] authoritative books, marked not only by thorough acquaintance with the subject but by a most attractive manner of presentation."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e S 14 '41 600w

STILES, HELEN E. Pottery of the Europeans; with an introd. by Gordon M. Forsyth. 254p il $2.50 Dutton

738 Pottery

(W) 40-32352

The author's objective is "to interest the reader in the historical and social significance of pottery—its use and its art." In the term pottery she includes all ceramic wares and products. Index.

Booklist 37:113 N 15 '40
Wis Lib Bul 37:32 F '41

STILL, JAMES. On Troublesome creek. 190p $2.50 Viking

41-19418

More stories of the Kentucky mountain country and coal camps, similar to those in the author's earlier book River of Earth (Book Review Digest, 1940). The narrator is the same young boy who told the earlier stories—a boy with a deep desire to own a "store-boughten" shirt and a game cock. The tales are all of the simple, everyday lives of poor but proud people.

Booklist 38:159 Ja 1 '42

"[The stories] exhibit economy of movement and material, deftness in character development, a good feeling for the dramatic, and skill in the manipulation of form. But they also betray a sameness in structure that leads one to believe that Mr. Still is perhaps willing to play again and again the same tune on an instrument that has become as comfortable to him as an old pair of shoes." W. J. Gold

+ — Books p16 O 26 '41 500w

Christian Science Monitor p13 N 29 '41 450w

Nation 153:520 N 22 '41 50w

Reviewed by Kay Boyle

New Repub 105:596 N 3 '41 300w

"Mr. Still has now twice proved that he can do episodic pieces of this sort handily; 'River of Earth' was his first book. One wishes that he would buckle down and work all his stories together into a real novel."

New Yorker 17:98 O 18 '41 30w

Reviewed by Robert Littell

Yale R n s 31:x winter '42 150w

STILLWELL, MARGARET BINGHAM, ed. Incunabula in American libraries; a second census of fifteenth-century books owned in the U.S., Mexico and Canada. 619p $20 Bibliographical soc. of Am, G. L. McKay, sec, 47 E. 60th st, N.Y.

016.093 Incunabula—Bibliography 40-34763

"The idea of making a catalogue of fifteenth-century books owned in America originated in 1898 with John Thomson, librarian of the Free Library of Philadelphia. On the founding in 1904 of the Bibliographical Society of America it was voted that such a work should be its first publication other than its current proceedings and papers. A dozen years later Dr. George Parker Winship . . . undertook the task of assembling the data and editing it for publication. . . The New York Public Library printed the resulting 'Census of Fifteenth-Century Books Owned in America' in successive numbers of its 'Bulletin' from April to December, 1918, and in the following year brought out the completed work in book form. . . When in 1924 it was realized that the number of incunabula in America had materially increased, Dr. Winship suggested to Miss Margaret Stillwell, librarian of the Annmary Brown Memorial of Providence, that she gather material for bringing the 'Census' to date, and the result is the volume just published." Books

Reviewed by R. S. Granniss

+ Books p22 D 15 '40 1100w

"Although European booksellers may use it against us, although some American librarians may allow themselves to be exploited by it, although certain people may misuse it after it is obsolete, this Census will be a working tool of permanent use for American librarians. . . Miss Stillwell's work here, as always, is a model of accuracy and in her choice of printer she has been singularly fortunate: the volume is as beautiful as it is legible, which in this case is saying a great deal." Pierce Butler

+ Library J 66:656 Ag '41 1050w

Pratt p7 D '41

STIRLING, YATES. How to be a naval officer. 194p il $2 McBride

359 U.S.—Navy. U.S. Naval academy, Annapolis (W) 40-27822

"What qualities a naval officer needs, how to obtain an appointment to Annapolis, life at the Naval academy as an officer and in specialized branches of the service, described for those who want to enter the navy as a career. Appendixes give Naval academy courses of study, duties of the chief of naval operations and of naval bureaus, and types of airplanes used by the U.S. navy. Many photographs." Booklist

Booklist 37:148 D 15 '40

Reviewed by E. L. Buell

N Y Times p10 Je 15 '41 50w

Spring'd Republican p7e F 23 '41 150w

STITES, RAYMOND SOMERS. The arts and man. (Whittlesey house publication) 872p il maps $7.50 McGraw

709 Art—History. Civilization—History (W) 41-817

"The four objectives of this book are: 1. To bring the student into close contact with a few great works of art; 2. To acquaint the student with the formal principles of composition in the arts illustrated; 3. To demonstrate that intelligent criticism has enhanced rather than destroyed the creation and enjoyment of fine works of art; 4. To encourage the student to take an active part in the creation of the art of our times." (Intro) Index.

"Professor Stites has assembled an immense amount of excellent material for his 872 pages, through many years of obviously arduous work. His illustrations are often new, unusual and much to the point. Since a book of such encyclopaedic dimensions does not appear every year, it is lamentable that the author did not scrutinize more closely the material from the pre-Columbian field. The average reader is again seriously misled on the subject, when sound information and rich data could easily have been amassed through the always helpful cooperation of American archaeological institutions." Pál Kelemen

+ Am Anthropol 43:664 O '41 1500w

"Mr. Stites has surpassed the boundaries set by several other art historians who have produced comparable inclusive surveys; for he uses the word art in its full connotation, and while he gives precedence to fine art, to painting, sculpture, and architecture, he treats music, literature, and philosophy as well. Whoever throws his best energies into the arts finds himself drawn into allied arts. Mr. Stites has just such a supple and associative mentality, and he contributes a wealth of information in this encyclopedic volume which is refreshing to the art teacher and art critic, informing to the student, and an excellent book to initiate the layman into the fascinating world of art." D. A.

+ Christian Science Monitor p20 Ja 30 41 550w

"This book was long in coming. The better part of twenty-two years went into its making. Its author, now Professor of Esthetics at Antioch College, has been collecting material for this truly colossal undertaking since 1918 and has been engaged in the actual writing of it for the past five years. His researches took him to Greece, Italy, France and Austria. . . Moreover, to make sure that he understood the underlying beat, or processes, involved in the artistic creation of a work of art of other men and other times, he studied

STITES, R. S.—Continued
sculpture and painting. Thus, in every possible way he could, Dr. Stites has been an indefatigable worker in broadening his understanding and sympathies of past and present societies, cultures, art works and artists in order to better prepare himself for the gigantic task before him. The result is a work of truly encyclopedic dimensions." Dino Ferrari

+ N Y Times p26 F 9 '41 1100w
+ — New Yorker 16:68 F 8 '41 50w
Pratt p6 autumn '41

STIX, MRS REGINE (KRONACHER), and NOTESTEIN, FRANK WALLACE. Controlled fertility. 201p il $3 Williams & Wilkins 612.63 Birth control. Birth control clinical research bureau, New York 40-35844

"An evaluation of clinic service dealing with patients of the oldest and largest birth control clinic in the United States. . . The authors give a detailed and careful analysis of the contraceptive experience of a large number of patients before and after clinic attendance. The group is adequately broken down for the purposes of study." Am J Pub Health

Reviewed by W. E. Brown
+ Am J Pub Health 31:1098 O '41 450w

"The present study, unlike some of the papers published by the authors heretofore, makes a greater effort to put this research in its setting and to recognize the work of earlier investigators. That is a step in the right direction. More could have been done. It should be axiomatic in scientific inquiry that a particularized study should be presented against a background description of the previous work in order that the reader may see things in a developmental as well as cross-sectional manner. All matters considered, however, this is a first-rate scientific analysis, and it will bear study by workers in many fields." N. E. Himes

+ — Am J Soc 47:239 S '41 700w
Reviewed by N. E. Himes
Am Soc R 6:922 D '41 500w

Reviewed by N. E. Himes
Ann Am Acad 213:210 Ja '41 800w

STODDART, DAYTON. Lord Broadway, Variety's Sime. 395p il $3 Funk, W.

B or 92 Silverman, Simon J. 41-16909

"A fictionalized biography of Sime Silverman, the founder of Variety, presents to the average reader an exciting story of life in theatrical circles—principally in New York—as well as the portrait of a vigorous personality. Variety is close to being the Bible of theatrical people. It was started December 18, 1905, by Sime—as he always was known—with $2500 'on the cuff.' According to Stoddart's chronology, Sime spent the next six years in a financial war, seeking to keep the sheet going in the face of debts and reverses. His subsequent career was to include two major battles with E. F. Albee and the Keith 'vaudeville trust,' a tangle with the Shuberts, and two struggles against the White Rats, vaudeville actors' organization long headed by Harry Mountford." Springf'd Republican

Reviewed by Wilson Follett
Atlantic O '41 250w

"Dayton Stoddart, who has been on Broadway off and on for a good many years as a newspaper man and publicity agent, and who knew the immortal Sime, has done a highly readable and affectionate job. Perhaps it is somewhat too eulogistic, but there seems to have been something about Sime which causes the most hard-boiled of his acquaintances, even at this late day, to grow choky and misty-eyed when his name is mentioned." Stanley Walker

+ Books p4 Ag 24 '41 1050w

"'Lord Broadway' will probably remain definitive, for Mr. Stoddart is an expert in a field where few writers are equipped for research, and few who have the knowledge are equipped for writing. The book is pretty uneven, though it has a warmth of personal appreciation that comes through strongly, and it gives a knowing picture of the little known, of what is already passing into the confusion and blur of legend. It is good for reading. But it is best for its true story of a man who was admirable and at the same time important to and loved in his world." Otis Ferguson

+ — New Repub 105:315 S 8 '41 1200w

"You could wish that Mr. Stoddart's book had a style suggesting its Broadway background, hard-boiled on the surface, with a vein of honest sentiment beneath. Instead it is merely garish in its attempt at atmosphere, maudlin in its sentiment and frequently and unconsciously funny when it tries for serious emotional effect. The lean, objective style of Variety itself, assuming Mr. Stoddart to be capable of it, would better have suited a tribute to a man who was acutely embarrassed by tributes." J. K. Hutchens

N Y Times p31 O 5 '41 750w

"Natty writing, but a fascinating story."
+ New Yorker 17:56 Ag 30 '41 40w

"There's lots of Broadway and theatrical history between the adventures and exploits of Sime that makes the tome, as a whole, a fairly amusing job. The Mazda and Kleig light folks should go for it." Louis Greenfield
Sat R of Lit 24:16 Ag 16 '41 450w

"Despite the fact that this book is of startling interest to the reader who has no intimate acquaintance with the 'inside' of theatrical circles, it apparently does not meet with complete approval of some of Sime's associates. . . The rights and wrongs of facts concerned undoubtedly will not be of vital interest to the average reader. And the book brings to life, page by page, a vigorous, lovable, intelligent, kindly man who became a Broadway legend and acquired hundreds of friends in doing so."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 Ag 13 '41 700w

STOEVEER, HERMAN JULIUS. Applied heat transmission. 226p il $2.50 McGraw

536.2 Heat—Transmission 41-5654

"The first three chapters deal with equations required for solution of conduction radiation and convection heat exchange problems. In chapters IV and V numerous charts and tables are presented. Convection coefficients and pressure drop calculations may be made with their aid. In the last two chapters common types of heat transfer equipment and varieties of industrial insulation are described. Twenty-eight illustrative problems, some of them requiring more than two pages for complete solution, are scattered throughout the text." (Chem & Met Eng) Index.

Booklist 37:460 Je 1 '41

Reviewed by T. B. Drew
Chem & Chem Eng N 19:943 Ag 25 '41 1100w

"Frequently the preface of a technical book contains a statement to the effect that it is intended for both students and for practicing engineers. Also frequently, it is obvious to a reviewer that the book will be much more widely used as a textbook than as a reference. However, Prof. Stoeveer, after making a similar statement, has really written a book which justifies such a claim."

+ Chem & Met Eng 48:145 Ap '41 160w
N Y New Tech Bks 26:23 Ap '41

STOLPER, GUSTAV. This age of fable; the political and economic world we live in. 369p $3 Reynal

330.9 Economic conditions. Europe—Politics (W) 42-2144

An Austrian-born economist (now resident in the United States) here reviews world history during the last three or four decades in an attempt to explain why certain economic and political "fables" were invented—the need of a gold standard, the economic causes of war, the successes of Hitler's diplomacy, etc.—and why these are fables and not truths. Index.

"This is a work of exceptional and enduring quality, a strong, lucid, plausible, and realistic interpretation of the gigantic crisis of our age. It cannot be recommended too warmly to that very large number of readers who must be seeking for clues as to the past and present trend and the future prospects of world politics and economics." W. H. Chamberlin
+ Atlantic F '42 500w

"Two fables have been obsessing us. One is the glorious fable of nineteenth century individualism, the official philosophy of our two great political parties. . . . The opposing fable is the ideal of perfect economic planning by expert officials of a central government. . . . With keen analysis, a lively and attractive style, and moving at a blitzkrieg pace, Dr. Stolper tears these two myths to shreds and tatters. Out of this destructive enterprise he develops a clearer realization of how capitalism really works." Thurman Arnold
+ Books p3 Ja 11 '42 1450w

Christian Century 59:22 Ja 7 '42 150w

"Although written ostensibly for the layman, it is long and occasionally verbose. Recommended only for large libraries." M. A. Gray
Library J 66:949 N 1 '41 100w

"Here is a book that should be welcomed by anyone willing to put his concepts of the world to a sharp test. If he can come out of its cross-examination with his suppositions intact, he will be entitled to feel himself on solid ground. Not that everything Mr. Stolper says in arguing for liberal capitalism is puncture-proof; a writer who is answering bad reasoning is entitled to a few liberties of over- and under-statement. But Mr. Stolper has made a notable contribution to the greatest social understanding there can be, the knowledge of the realities we have lived by and shall continue to live by." R. G. Swing
+ Nation 154:68 Ja 17 '42 850w

"Appearing at this time, here is an important book. It is written by a man who has kept his head amid the chaos and crises of the twentieth century. It is intended for those who, with illusions dispelled, have to find their bearings and set their course toward a hazardous and speculative future. . . . For those who realize what results depend on a thorough and discriminating appreciation of the position at home and abroad, this book is one to examine carefully. It is, from cover to cover, a plea for an objective attitude toward actualities. It opens the door out of the past into the future, and points to the pilgrim way of the practical pedestrian who keeps his feet on the ground and gets somewhere." P. W. Wilson
+ N Y Times p1 Ja 11 '42 1900w

"His book is stimulating. Dr. Stolper writes in a fluent, journalistic style even on complicated problems—often too journalistic—for which Dr. Stolper apologizes in his introduction. . . . 'This Age of Fable' is a provocative, partisan work, in defense of the views of 'liberal conservatives' who are against Governmental interference in economic life, and who believe that this war must be won for ideals 'fitting the great world power to which all mankind looks for leadership and salvation.'" Guenter Reimann
+ Sat R of Lit 25:8 Ja 17 '42 700w

"'This Age of Fable' is recommended to that citizen who likes to bicker his way, so to speak, through a book by a man who knows a lot, if not everything." Marshall Bragdon
+ — Spring'd Republican p6 Ja 3 '42 1000w

STOLPER, JOEL. Whiskers; il. by [the author]. 99p $1.50 Harcourt

(W) 41-15463

Whiskers was a leopard, and this picture story book for young readers describes his life from the time he was a cub until he was a full grown animal, living and hunting in the jungles.

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p9 N 3 '41 120w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse
Commonweal 35:111 N 21 '41 10w

Reviewed by Warren Chappell
Horn Bk M 17:455 N '41 20w

"A story told with sympathy and directness, and will be liked by all little boys and most little girls from eight to twelve years old. The book will be inviting to the slow reader, for the type is large and the margins wide. The illustrations, done by the author, are very good, and the color of the illustrated pages—a green that does not miss very much being a Chartreuse—while not a favorite shade with many people, at least has the shadow of the jungle in it." S. J. Johnson
+ Library J 66:678 Ag '41 80w

"It is full of unusual adventures which should be interesting to children. . . . The style seemed a little too dull to hold a child's interest, but the superb illustrations would no doubt counteract that dullness of style."

+ Spring'd Republican p7e S 14 '41 60w
Wis Lib Bul 37:204 D '41

STOLZ, KARL RUF. Making the most of the rest of life. 216p $1.50 Abingdon-Cokesbury

613 Hygiene. Middle age. Old age 41-15786

"The cultivation of wholesome middle-aged or elderly personality requires the utilization of all the resources the individual can command; hence this volume. If the reading of this book induces people who are no longer young to clarify their status in life, to make wise adjustments to changed circumstances, and to engage in suitable activities, the writer will have accomplished his purpose." Pref.

Christian Century 58:1242 O 8 '41 280w

"This is a pleasant little book of essays on various subjects having to do with living wisely and growing old gracefully. . . . They are well written but there is nothing strikingly new." H. J. S.

+ — Churchman 155:35 N 1 '41 100w

STONE, IRVING. Clarence Darrow for the defense; a biography. 570p $3 Doubleday

B or 92 Darrow, Clarence Seward (W) 41-20757

"Evidently an authorized biography. . . . Mr. Stone, apparently a liberal himself, conveys to the reader the passionate intensity, the zest for living, and above all the deep humanitarian spirit of his subject, though faults and failures are not glossed over. The backgrounds of some of Darrow's most famous cases are phases and incidents in the social and economic history of our country and are well handled." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 38:79 N 1 '41

"Irving Stone's informal biography begins a little too much like a novel, but it becomes full, rich and fascinating. It says all there is to say, briefly, about Darrow's private life, which consisted of conversation, love-making and attempts to lay by a little money for his old age; these activities were too skimmed, scantied and casual to be interesting. Darrow never could spare the time for a genuinely private life. But the story of his public life embraces an epoch and the author does complete justice to it." Floyd Dell
+ Books p4 O 19 '41 1550w

"Very readable. Recommended." G. W. Hill
+ Library J 66:903 O 15 '41 120w

"Well documented, even brilliantly written, the book reads like an adventure story but has the impact of a forgotten indictment." George Joel
+ Nation 153:488 N 15 '41 950w

STONE, IRVING—Continued

"The biography has its flaws. It is not as critical as Darrow himself might have liked it to be. It doesn't explain all his contradictions. . . Mr. Stone is capable of some remarkably clumsy sentences. . . These are small defects in a biography arising out of an obviously earnest desire to understand a man who ought to be understood, and to set him down carefully and painstakingly for future reference. This is probably the last book that will be written about Clarence Darrow, and Mr. Stone has felt his responsibility." R. L. Duffus

+ — N Y Times p5 N 9 '41 1400w

"An excellent job, fluently written and exhaustively documented."

+ New Yorker 17:98 O 18 '41 30w

"'Clarence Darrow for the Defense,' is a straightforward and solidly factual biography. And by and large a good one. Its merits are that it is elaborately documented and manifestly a labor of love. Its chief defect is that the writing is of an uneven quality." J. R. Parker

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:6 O 25 '41 650w

"Mr. Stone's reputation is haunted by the startling success of 'Lust for Life,' the inspired biography of Vincent Van Gogh. In comparison with that book, 'Clarence Darrow for the Defense' suffers slightly by contrast. It fails to maintain the intense pace and direction of 'Lust for Life' and quite frequently appears ponderous and unimaginative. Nevertheless, such is the irresistible charm and power of Darrow that the book emerges as an almost monumental work." M. C. Abrams

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e O 26 '41 950w

"Mr. Stone has written an excellent account of Darrow's turbulent career at the bar. . . This . . . is doubly welcome, first, as an account of the life of an active practitioner, and, second, because it serves to recall to mind the great professional opportunities which await the lawyer who succeeds at the trial table." G. A. Gesell

+ Yale Law J 51:362 D '41 1200w

STONE, ISIDOR F. Business as usual; the first year of defense. 275p $2 Modern age 355.2 U.S.—Defenses. U.S.—Economic policy. Monopolies (W) 41-15675

"For the past year, I. F. Stone has been the Washington correspondent of The Nation. In [this book] he has reexamined a number of the issues on which he has already written, and added entirely new chapters to provide an . . . analysis of the progress of the defense program." (New Repub) Index.

Reviewed by Leo Wolman

Books p14 Ja 25 '42 950w

"Interestingly written and easily read, the book is a strong statement for one side of the case. . . As a staunch supporter of President Roosevelt, Mr. Stone attributes a good portion of the defense lag to Mr. Knudsen's background as an automobile magnate but doesn't go into the at least debatable question of whether Mr. Knudsen might not have done a better job had the President given him more real power to make and enforce unpopular decisions. . . As a textbook as to how Washington and Big Business work and shouldn't work, 'Business as Usual' has a place in the library of everybody who is making an effort to follow the country's progress at this desperate juncture in its history. It should be read, however, with the reservation that while Mr. Stone has uncovered much inefficiency and much wasted motion, he has not always uncovered the full reasons back of them." J. G. H.

+ — Christian Science Monitor p20 S 30 '41 500w

Reviewed by Walter Hausdorfer
Library J 66:668 Ag '41 100w

"Occasionally Mr. Stone scores a bull's eye, but his position well to the left of center sometimes distorts his aim."

Management R 30:472 D '41 50w

"Every American should know the story that Stone tells—and tells with superb journalistic skill. The facts he presents endanger our democratic future as well as Corey in the war against Hitlerism." Lewis Corey

+ Nation 153:204 S 6 '41 1100w

Reviewed by Michael Straight

New Repub 105:284 S 1 '41 900w

Reviewed by D. C. Coyle

Sat R of Lit 24:10 S 20 '41 750w

"Gravely disturbing, yet hopefully challenging, is I. F. Stone's critique of America's effort to become the arsenal of democracy. . . This is the book a good many citizens have been yearning for. Even those moderates and conservatives who will fume at his leftwing viewpoint and profess to see unfair distortions here and there, even these will admit he is extraordinarily informed, not completely the captive of de laire nonsense and, as a writer, able to handle refractory material and still make his book move with the speed and fascination of a prairie fire."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 S 6 '41 1300w

STONG, PHILIP DUFFIELD. Captain Kidd's cow; pictures by Kurt Wiese. 123p $2 Dodd

(W) 41-6803

A crowd of youthful pirates from Pittsville, Iowa, hear that their beloved boat, an abandoned houseboat, is going to be taken from them, so they up anchor and set out for the Mississippi river, fifty miles away. They progress at the rate of some three miles an hour and their difficulties increase with every mile. They discover a stowaway, foil some cattle thieves, and finally wake up to find themselves heroes.

Booklist 37:466 Je 1 '41

"The youth of the free-booters, their honesty and good intentions, and the mess into which these can get them, cause a steadily rising crescendo of interest. . . Long may such piracy thrive, with nice kids like those in Kurt Wiese's colored drawings, all skinny and innocent and as alive as a mess of eels." M. L. Becker

+ Books p9 My 11 '41 360w

Christian Century 58:532 Ap 16 '41 10w
Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '41

"Able illustrations made with apparent enthusiasm and pleasure in the text. Color plates, hand separated about as well as it can be done." Warren Chappell

+ Horn Bk M 17:448 N '41 40w

"Children about sixth grade and up will enjoy what happens in the story; the full flavor of its humor will appeal vastly to adults. Only slightly above average size, the book is appropriately illustrated by Kurt Wiese, who mingles humorous sketches of the real boys with those of the buccaners they fancy themselves to be." Jean Stewart

+ Library J 66:466 My 15 '41 160w

"Those who know Phil Stong's books do not need to be told of the comedy which he can find in any given situation in which boys exert their most serious efforts in play, all the funnier because of the poker-faced gravity with which the story is told. In spite of the fact that most readers of 8 to 12 are not very familiar with the fine points of river navigation and thus will find the mechanics of the story a little confusing, this is the best of Mr. Stong's books since 'Young Settler.'" E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Ap 27 '41 320w

"The credibilities are constantly violated, especially in the jargon stuffed full of literary allusions which the boys talk, but it's pretty good reading even so."

+ — New Yorker 17:89 My 24 '41 60w

STONG, PHILIP DUFFIELD, ed. Other worlds. 466p $2.50 Funk, W.

41-10142

"An omnibus of weird and fantastic stories. . . The twenty-five tales are from work—almost all the authors are unfamiliar—done in the last decade." New Yorker

"Excessively serious, sober, and sensible people are warned to stay away, but for those who enjoy Lewis Carroll at his most nonsensical and Poe at his most horrible, Mr. Stong has spread a delectable feast. His taste in the field of fantasy is unfailingly good. This book has some virtues rare among anthologies: namely, well-worn items are rejected because they are too well known and authors are judged by their merit rather than by their reputations."

+ Nation 152:648 My 31 '41 120w

"Very nice horrors indeed."

+ New Yorker 17:91 My 10 '41 30w

"If you are fairly well-read in the field, you will almost certainly miss your favorites; and as you read through the volume you will find that Mr. Stong is much too easily pleased, and that he often abandons his own expressed or implicit standards." Basil Davenport
— + Sat R of Lit 24:16 S 27 '41 750w

STONG, PHILIP DUFFIELD. The princess. 309p $2.50 Farrar

(W) 41-8360

Arnhold's mother died when she was born and the baby was left to the care of Rey, Arnhold's much older brother, and the farm's handy man, Jake Stewart. This story tells how these two succeeded in their task of bringing up Arnhold, to beautiful, intelligent, capable womanhood, but how, too, they almost failed in their plans to make her happy as well.

Booklist 37:547 Jl 15 '41

"It is the collection of Stong's characters which makes 'The Princess' the highly enjoyable book it is. Every single one of them has a lusty charm. While Jake runs away with the honors for the flavor of his talk and the slant of his philosophy, the others are no mean followers. . . That the story which binds them isn't very exciting or important doesn't matter. They are." Rose Feld
+ Books p6 Je 1 '41 650w

"Told in characteristic, easy manner but not one of the author's best." Catherine Van Dyne
+ Library J 66:400 My 1 '41 30w

"A pleasant, steadily readable book—Mr. Stong's good writing seems by now to be a habit—but rather less substantial than some of his earlier books."

+ New Repub 104:898 Je 30 '41 40w

"Primarily this is the story of Arnhold Edson, an Iowa Brunnehilde. But around this central theme, which is not always perfectly convincing, Mr. Stong has woven another of his priceless, and by now attractively nostalgic, pictures of life in rural Iowa. It is in the drawing, salty dialogue, the richly quotable anecdotes, the earthy humor and sentiment of the incidental characterizations, that Mr. Stong is at his best. Indeed, you will need to go back to Eli Ledom in 'Buckskin Breeches' for another figure worthy to set beside old Jake Stewart." Margaret Wallace
+ N Y Times p7 Je 1 '41 700w

"Clever and entertaining story."

+ New Yorker 17:76 Je 7 '41 70w

STORM, DAN. Picture tales from Mexico; with 11. in black-and-white by Mark Storm. 122p $1.25 Stokes

(W) 41-51877

Nineteen Mexican animal folk tales, in many of which the witty coyote is the hero. For story-telling, and for grades four to six.

Booklist 38:18 S '41

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p8 Ja 25 '42 140w

"These eighteen animal stories are authentic folklore full of humor and animal wisdom." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:358 S '41 100w

"Local color and atmosphere give a fresh twist to familiar folk patterns. There are numerous black and white illustrations by Mark Storm. Recommended for children of eight to ten." M. F. Potter

+ Library J 66:678 Ag '41 80w

"Mr. Storm retells these tales in colloquial fashion, keeping their spirited, dramatic quality, though the result on the whole is less distinguished than some of the other volumes in this series."

+ N Y Times p10 Ja 25 '42 240w

STORME, PETER, pseud. See Stern, P. V.

STOUMAN, KNUD. L. Baxter, medicus. 406p $2.75 Greystone

(W)

The background of the story is New York in the late sixteenth century. Lourens Steenwyck Baxter, nephew of an early New York mayor is the central character. The steps in his career as physician are traced; his apprenticeship to a New York man, next his studies in Holland and England, and then his practise in New York. Two women share the center of stage with him—his first wife, who dies tragically in the Leisler rebellion, and his beautiful Rosalje.

"Perhaps especially to New Yorkers, the intrinsic interest of this first novel will lie more particularly in its pictures of boweries along the Hudson, trading ships and pirate ships in the harbor and a lead-and-silver mine, worked by Indians, in Connecticut. For readers with a medical flair, there will be many added glimpses of lore, custom and original acumen and a description of the Anatomical Gallery in Leyden, taken from a contemporary catalogue, which should not be missed." Mary Ross

+ Books p8 D 21 '41 440w

New Repub 105:870 D 22 '41 60w

"Though motivation and characterization of Lourens leave something to be desired, the story has a thematic interest which puts it in a class above the average of first novels." Drake de Kay

+ N Y Times p28 D 7 '41 480w

"This Dutch-American, colonial, medical romance deals with enticing topical matters and deals with them well, with simplicity and Dutch vigor. . . The story is told with direction and economy, as befits a work in which settings and circumstances contribute plenty of high color and action." Phil Stong

+ Sat R of Lit 24:7 N 29 '41 450w

"Although the author has gone to authentic records to find his descriptions of the rise of medicine in this country and Europe, he has, unfortunately, dwelt so lengthily upon the emotional life of his hero that much of the historical medical material has been omitted or given scant attention."

Spring'd Republican p7e N 16 '41 250w

STOUT, DORMAN GLADSTONE. Teacher and community. 236p $2 World bk.

371.1 Teachers. Public schools. Community life 41-7530

"The purpose of this book is to . . . provide a background for making the program of instruction serve community needs. It seeks to offer a technique of leadership whereby the teacher may promote understanding and co-operation between the school and the community. . . The material is arranged in three parts. The first part deals with the basic elements in the community pattern and makes an inquiry concerning the proper teacher-community relationship. The second part covers the steps involved in developing mutual understanding between the school and the community. The third part gives a technique of dynamic leadership, carrying the public-relations program beyond the usual interpretation stage." (Pref) Index.

STOUT, D. G.—Continued

"This book is written in a simple, clear manner. Although originally prepared to serve as a basis for class lessons and discussions, it offers excellent suggestions for those engaged in public education, from the ranking executive to the individual teacher. While much of the material has been encountered at one time or another by the average teacher, it provides a new organization which is invaluable in its proposals for selling the schools to those who created and control them—the people." E. F. Kerr

+ El School J 41:792 Je '41 850w
School & Society 53:160 F 1 '41 40w

STOUT, REX. Alphabet Hicks. 271p $2 Farrar 41-27321
Detective story.

Booklist 38:190 F 1 '42

"Alphabet Hicks strikes us as a slick snoop, an entertaining fellow and an all-around incentive to puzzling as he flies at a mixup involving treachery and murder in the plastics industry." Will Cuppy

+ Books p22 D 14 '41 500w

"It's all slightly mechanical, really, as if the writer had turned on his story and left it running. It would have been a good enough yarn if someone else had done it, but it doesn't come from the same shelf as Nero Wolfe. We all want Archie back again. One of the richest bits in American detective lore, he can't be spared so long." Mort. Post

New Repub 106:125 Ja 26 '42 100w

"Alphabet Hicks has well earned the right to a place alongside Nero Wolfe and Tecumseh Fox on the staff of the Rex Stout Detective Agency." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p15 Ja 4 '42 220w

"Alphabet Hicks, Mr. Stout's corny new detective, solves a good mystery. You will probably not like this new boy, who is a disbarred lawyer, nearly as much as you did Nero Wolfe."

+ New Yorker 17:56 Ja 3 '42 30w

"Expertly constructed plot, interesting and amusing sleuth, pay-off that brings up nice legal point, and some satisfying romantic touches. Better grade."

+ Sat R of Lit 25:18 Ja 17 '42 40w

Time 39:72 Ja 5 '42 40w

STOUT, REX. The broken vase. 275p $2 Farrar
(W) 41-36
Detective story.

Booklist 37:325 Mr 15 '41

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p15 Ja 26 '41 160w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 F 1 '41 60w

"When Rex Stout brought out his first Tecumseh Fox mystery it was inevitably compared with the Nero Wolfe stories, and it suffered a little by comparison. This new one will easily stand comparison with anything that Mr. Stout has previously written, and that means that it is a top-flight detective story." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p24 Ja 28 '41 160w

"Those of you who like a smooth-running story will be well content with this one."

+ New Yorker 16:72 Ja 25 '41 30w

Sat R of Lit 23:18 F 1 '41 40w

STOWE, LELAND. No other road to freedom.
432p map $3 Knopf

940.542 World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American. World war, 1939—U.S. (W) 41-51878

An American war correspondent relates his experiences during seventeen months of war in England, Finland, Norway, the Balkans and Greece. His concluding chapters are largely devoted to arguments directed against America's appeasers and isolationists.

"Leland Stowe confirms in this book what readers of his dispatches already know: that he possesses all the qualities of the glamorous war correspondent. Among these are the gifts of vivid description and dramatization, warm emotional sympathy for the peoples whose struggles he is reporting, and a remarkable knack of being in the most exciting place at the right time." W. H. Chamberlain

+ Atlantic D '41 250w

Booklist 38:8 S '41

"Leland Stowe, one of the most legitimately distinguished foreign reporters of his generation, has written a book about the war. It is a good book; it tells a reporter's story well and honestly, which is the true function of a newspaper man's book, and Stowe's story is still hot. Just how hot it is may be seen in the bitterness, the hope and the evangelical conviction—all of which are still a little foreign to the tradition of American reporting—with which this book is written." Joseph Barnes

+ Books p1 S 7 '41 1300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p17 O '41

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:376 Ja '42 130w

"Good, stimulating reading, impassioned interventionist." J. E. Cross

+ Library J 66:669 Ag '41 120w

Reviewed by Ralph Bates

+ Nation 153:227 S 13 '41 850w

"It isn't exactly fair to expect a war correspondent to be what his publishers try to make him—a sort of Lord Byron out of Charles and Mary Beard. Leland Stowe is sensitive and emotional, a good writer who sometimes works harder at his prose style than at getting all the facts. But he writes it the way he sees it, and he saw plenty." Mill Lampell

+ New Repub 105:413 S 29 '41 550w

"All who ever knew Lee Stowe expected—when they learned that his thrilling newspaper dispatches from the Finnish and the Norwegian and the Greek fronts were to be made into a book—a narrative filled with action, written with certainty of touch and clarity of style and high regard for accuracy. And his book abounds in pages on which these things are supplied in rich measure. . . All the action and vigor and clarity that we expected of him Lee Stowe has put into his book." T. R. Ybarra

+ N Y Times p3 S 14 '41 1900w

"His book is all first-hand stuff. Though repetitious and vitiated by a certain rather questionable Rover Boy note, it remains a moving piece of reporting. . . Interesting as are Mr. Stowe's adventures, it is his book's moral that gives it its real weight. The last five chapters form the angriest and also the most cogent answer to the American appeasers that I have so far seen in book form." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 17:74 S 6 '41 230w

Pratt p24 D '41

"If Leland Stowe were not one of those few remaining reporters who hold that between right and wrong you cannot be neutral, he could never have written 'No Other Road To Freedom'—a masterly chronicle of his seventeen memorable months of ordeal and conversion abroad—a clarion warning to America that must not go unheeded." Linton Wells

+ Sat R of Lit 24:5 S 20 '41 1100w

Springf'd Republican p7e S 14 '41 600w

Reviewed by B. P. Adams

Survey G 30:705 D '41 300w

Reviewed by Bernet Nover
Yale R n s 31:379 winter '42 390w

STRACHAN, JAMES ERNEST. New Zealand observer; a schoolmaster looks at America. 128p il $1.50 Columbia univ. press

917.3 U.S.—Description and travel. Education—U.S. U.S.—Civilization 41-1755

"The author of these letters is the principal of the high school in Rangiora, New Zealand. . . The letters were written during February and March, 1938, while Mr Strachan and his wife were traveling in the United States on a grant from the Carnegie Corporation of New York. They were addressed to his colleagues and students in the high school and were intended solely as a means of sharing an exciting experience with friends at home. . . As a professional educator, Mr Strachan was chiefly interested in our educational machinery." Pref.

"For the New Zealander and other non-Americans this cleverly illustrated report presents the heart and soul of the country and its educational system. For the American it offers a foreigner's fair, but not too thorough, impression of his schools; an opportunity to see some of his educational institutions as others see them. For a complete overview of educational conditions and progress in this country, however, both would have to look elsewhere." W. W. Brickman

+ — School & Society 53:512 Ap 19 '41 600w
Social Studies 32:144 Mr '41 10w

"Mr. Strachan is evidently a writer of some experience. New Zealander though he be, he observes and writes from a sophisticated and cosmopolitan point of view. He clearly doesn't mean to be labeled a provincial." E. N. Jenckes

Springf'd Republican p6 F 8 '41 1200w

STRACHEY, EVELYN JOHN ST LOE. Digging for Mrs Miller [Eng title: Post D]. 150p $1.25 Random house [3s 6d Gollancz] 940.54422 Air raids, World war, 1939—Personal narratives, English. World war, 1939—Great Britain—London (W) 41-13055

Mr Strachey, author of treatises on economics and socialism, in this new book tells the story of his experiences as an air-raid warden in London during the fall of 1940. The story is told in the third person, in a style that is unsensational and quiet, with only an occasional paragraph of criticism or theorizing on governmental action.

Booklist 38:50 O 15 '41

"John Strachey writes simply and humanly of his experiences, with fantastic British restraint at the horrors of aerial warfare, with admirable lucidity in showing the work of the air raid precautions services as they operate in a residential neighborhood. The book ought to be read by the 60,000 men and women who have enrolled as post wardens in New York City and by all Americans who are interested in civil defense. They will find it a valuable primer for their work, full of information about the technique of dealing with bombs, bodies, fires and debris." Frank Kelley

+ Books p9 J1 27 '41 400w
Manchester Guardian p6 Ap 1 '41 180w

"The story is told in such an off-hand, simple, quiet sort of way that it is only the reader's mounting feeling of distress which brings home to him the full horror of the scenes described. The same style conveys admirably the common-sense heroism which enables people to bear this kind of life if they deal with it according to an established routine. It is as direct as a documentary film, and more effective, since it reveals what people think and feel as well as what they do and say."

+ Nation 153:166 Ag 23 '41 160w

"John Strachey's new book, based on his experiences as an air-raid warden, is unquestionably the best presentation we have had of the thinking Englishman's attitude toward the air raids of last September. The American who used it as a guide for his own writings on London life would be written off by his friends as callous and shortsighted. Mr. Strachey, on the other hand, will command supreme admiration from his readers here, for the very reason that from first to last he dismisses the heroics of battle—and so appears, willy-nilly, as the greatest hero of them all." Nigel Dennis

+ New Repub 105:123 J1 28 '41 1400w

"As a book about wartime London, 'Digging for Mrs. Miller' indeed has everything: information and descriptive clarity, human drama, insight, wit, and profound and reticent eloquence."

+ N Y Times p5 J1 27 '41 500w

"Probably the most readable and very likely the finest book we've had about the London atrocities."

+ New Yorker 17:55 J1 26 '41 50w

Pratt p24 D '41

"Through Ford, the reader learns not only that it can take four men twenty-six hours to dig a woman out of wreckage, but he is made familiar with all the homely details of the existence of those working with the Civil Defence Services. Putting down the book, one is clearly aware of the kind of clothes one would need, the kind of bed and the length of sleep possible, the very hourly schedule of day after day in raided London. And this unobtrusive emphasis upon the ordinary is the strength of the book." I. W. Athey

+ Sat R of Lit 24:6 Ag 2 '41 550w

"Literature is always the best propaganda because literature is accurate. Americans need only compare the careful literary qualities of Mr. Strachey's book with such emotional outpourings as Miss Britain's to know where the truth lies, and to know, too, that help will never come too late." Graham Greene

+ Spec 166:348 Mr 28 '41 600w

"'Digging for Mrs Miller' is a masterly, unostentatiously written chronicle of ordinary folk doing an unaccustomed job of work—joint self-preservation—with almost customary calm. Most of its 150 pages march with a bare clarity of style which, as it happens, best displays the substance of the book. Abstractions and 'principles' put aside for the duration, Strachey catches in focus the methodical routines of civilians fighting for their lives; the primitive grubbing which alone can pierce a heap of rubble to the trapped human beneath it; the labored removal of bodies through such a tunnel. He does not raise his voice, but when he is done you can smell the brick dust in your nostrils."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 J1 26 '41 950w
Time 38:75 Ag 4 '41 450w

"The odd thing about Mr. Strachey's book is that, eloquent and revealing though the best of it is, about three-quarters of the whole was not seriously worth printing. There is far too much of the trivially personal, too much in the way of A.R.P. 'copy'—and rather literary copy at that, with Shakespeare quotations and wildly inaccurate Russian terms of speech to decorate thin and uninteresting stuff. Only two of the ten chapters, indeed, are really worth while—the chapter entitled 'Digging for Mrs. Miller' and the long, vivid and very moving 'The Big Bomb.' It is rather surprising that the Mr. Strachey who wrote these should also be anxious to include the rest."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p135 Mr 22 '41 550w

STRACHEY, EVELYN JOHN ST LOE. A faith to fight for. 146p $1.75 Random house [6s Gollancz]

940.5342 World war, 1939—Great Britain. Socialism (W) 41-51759

"Basing his argument on the history of the Roman Empire, Strachey demonstrates graphi-

STRACHEY, E. J. ST L.—Continued
 cally what Hitler is endeavoring to accomplish by subjugating all the peoples of the world; how an empire built on lies and hatred must fail, as did the Roman Empire similarly built; how ultimately Britain and her allies will win through because of faith and love." Library J

Booklist 37:436 My 15 '41

"As a statement of his personal faith, it is a moving and important document, and it is also another clew to the mystery of British resistance. If it is important for Americans to understand 'Why France Fell,' it is even more urgent for us to learn why England didn't. This book helps to answer the question, if only by its implicit demonstration that an honest Englishman of the left, no matter how deeply he may distrust his economic lords and masters, is not without faith that England is worth fighting for and that England can fight." Joseph Barnes + Books p14 Ap 20 '41 650w

Reviewed by L. R. Etzkorn

Library J 66:304 Ap 1 '41 80w

Manchester Guardian p7 Mr 7 '41 320w

Reviewed by Ralph Bates

Nation 153:17 Jl 5 '41 400w

Reviewed by Louis Fischer

New Repub 104:863 Je 23 '41 650w

Reviewed by Paul Birdsall

Sat R of Lit 23:13 My 3 '41 900w

"The result of Mr. Strachey's meditations is a moving and useful book. It is a reflection on our age and on the not-so-very-intelligentsia that it should be necessary to repeat such platitudes as are here stated so warmly and so effectively, but it is necessary all the same. In his zeal, Mr. Strachey of course overstates his case or states it in a careless form. It would be hard to prove to a tiger that his carnivorous activities were wrong absolutely and from a utilitarian point of view, and there are many human tigers and groups of human tigers who find that their pursuit of happiness is best conducted with a Tommy gun. More serious is Mr. Strachey's neglect of his own repeated insistence on the paramount importance of truth. It is not that he is mendacious, but that he appears to conceive of truth-telling more as a moral than as an intellectual enterprise." D. W. Brogan

+ Spec 166:177 F 14 '41 900w

"Mr. Strachey's latest volume is written in a more personal style than that which he is accustomed to use. It is in fact a very personal book. The author, one feels, is not only offering a faith but himself searching for one. . . . Mr. Strachey's outline of his own faith is interesting and provocative. His argument has several points of weakness, and not every one will agree that truth and love are the only values or that Mr. Strachey's application of them exhausts their possibilities."

Times [London] Lit Sup p74 F 15 '41 490w

STRACK, MRS LILIAN (HOLMES). Asbestos; a magic mineral. 56p il $1 Harper 553.67 Asbestos—Juvenile literature (W) 41-23076

"Tells the story [of asbestos for young readers]; how it was first discovered and used by man; how it is mined and prepared for market; [how it is used today]." (Publisher's note) Bibliography.

Booklist 38:179 Ja 15 '42

Reviewed by Dorothea Dawson

Library J 66:1050 D 1 '41 20w

"Medicine on a silver spoon." Raymond Holden

— Sat R of Lit 24:9 N 8 '41 20w

STRACK, MRS LILIAN (HOLMES). Nickel; a magic mineral. 45p il $1 Harper 669.7 Nickel—Juvenile literature (W) 41-23291

"Tells the story [of nickel for young readers], how it was first discovered and used by man, how it is mined and prepared for market, [how it is used today]." (Publisher's note) Bibliography.

Booklist 38:179 Ja 15 '42

Reviewed by Dorothea Dawson

Library J 66:1050 D 1 '41 20w

"Misses fire for the young." Raymond Holden

— Sat R of Lit 24:9 N 8 '41 20w

STRACK, MRS LILIAN (HOLMES). Radium; a magic mineral. 53p il $1 Harper 546.432 Radium—Juvenile literature (W) 41-22820

"Tells the story [of radium] from how it was first discovered and used by man, through how it is mined and prepared for market, to its many various uses today." Publisher's note

Booklist 38:179 Ja 15 '42

Reviewed by Dorothea Dawson

Library J 66:1050 D 1 '41 20w

"Ill-adapted to child." Raymond Holden

— Sat R of Lit 24:9 N 8 '41 30w

Wis Lib Bul 37:206 D '41

STRANG, RUTH MAY. Pupil personnel and guidance. 356p $2 Macmillan

371.1 Educational guidance 40-30019

"This book is addressed to the administrator and teacher rather than to the specialist in personnel work. It emphasizes indirect means of promoting good development, describes changes in the physical environment, in policies and in methods of instruction that may affect the pupil." School & Society

Reviewed by G. E. Manson

Am J Psychol 54:470 Jl '41 230w

School & Society 52:144 Ag 31 '40 30w

Reviewed by David Snedden

School & Society 54:93 Ag 9 '41 300w

"Educators not acquainted with guidance literature will benefit greatly by reading this volume, and the specialist will appreciate having a recent and thorough presentation of guidance material for students or for others needing a good introduction to this field." R. C. Woellner

+ School R 49:150 F '41 600w

STRANG, STEPHEN B. Dude rancher. 271p $2 Dodd

41-20052

Modern career story for older boys. Phil Marshall, an Easterner, learns about ranching on a vacation in Colorado. His teacher is Pop Wakefield, a dour but well-meaning old westerner. When Phil decides to establish a dude ranch for boys his real troubles begin.

"A good story of Colorado today, of horses and open-air life, and an expanding industry that in Phil's case gets to the stage where in the last chapter, he is saying, 'Polo field, too, later, maybe, if we can find a spot flat enough.'" M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 Ja 4 '42 350w

"A career story full of information for those interested in dude ranching. Plot is slow moving in parts and style is often crude." E. A. Babcock

+ Library J 66:1001 N 15 '41 120w

STRANGE, JOHN STEPHEN, pseud. See Tillet, D.

STRANGE, OLIVER. Sudden takes charge. 300p $2 Doubleday

Western story.

40-31458

"Elegant open-space reading, with melodrama, chivalry, lingo, Western pathos and everything." Will Cuppy

Books p26 N 24 '40 80w

"A first-class Western thriller with all the requisite ingredients." G. W. Harris

+ N Y Times p21 D 15 '40 120w

STRATON, HILLYER HAWTHORNE. Baptists: their message and mission. 179p $1.25 Am. Bapt.

286 Baptists

41-24704

"Dr. Straton has presented us with another handbook on Baptist principles and polity. In brief, concise compass he has retold the familiar story of the origin of the people called Baptists, restated their doctrines, emphasized their contribution to religious and civil life, defined their organizations, and forecast their future." Crozer Q

"A delightful and informative volume." E. D. Jones

+ Christian Century 59:19 Ja 7 '42 410w

Reviewed by R. E. E. Harkness

Crozer Q 19:73 Ja '42 650w

STRATTON, DOROTHY CONSTANCE, and SCHLEMAN, HELEN BLANCHE. Your best foot forward; social usage for young moderns; il. by Alice O'Connor. (Whittlesey house publication) 264p $2 McGraw

395 Etiquet. Students (W) 40-34356

A book on etiquette addressed particularly to young people at school or college. Contents: You and social usage; Introductions; Techniques for the table; Dining in hotels and restaurants; In public places; Dates; Social communication; Extending and receiving courtesies; Travel; Personal appearance. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:148 D 15 '40

"This unusual etiquette book is based on the replies which students from nine co-educational institutions in different parts of the country made to a carefully planned questionnaire, supplemented by opinions of college student leaders on 59 campuses. . . A skillful presentation of the material adapts it for class use without lessening its interest to the ordinary reader."

+ J Home Econ 33:114 F '41 120w

Pratt p10 spring '41

STRAUSS, MRS PATRICIA (O'FLYNN). Bevin and co; the leaders of British labour. 246p il $2.50 Putnam

329.942 Labor party (Great Britain). Bevin, Ernest. Labor and laboring classes—Great Britain 41-10816

Survey of the British labor party, its history, methods, program for reform, and participation in wartime activities, with numerous character sketches of famous present-day leaders: Herbert Morrison, Arthur Greenwood, Clement Attlee, Dr Hugh Dalton, Ernest Bevin, among others. The author is the wife of a labor M.P.

Reviewed by Eric Estorick

Ann Am Acad 218:209 N '41 410w

Booklist 37:545 J1 15 '41

"A timely contribution to an understanding of British politics by Americans who are worried for fear England will 'go Red.' Mrs. Strauss writes as an insider, having been associated with the party for many years."

Tania Long

+ Books p8 J1 6 '41 440w

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 23 '41 310w

"In readable style Mrs. Strauss covers the history and functioning of what is called the labor movement. . . Most of the book is given to portraits of Party leaders, but these are handled in such a way that all the controversial issues in the Party's history come clearly to light reflected in the personalities of the seven men and one woman who wear the mantle of leadership. And the author's viewpoint seems fairly objective. Certainly she is frank." J. C. Cort

+ Commonweal 34:377 Ag 8 '41 650w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:385 Ja '42 10w

"Only once is Mrs. Strauss a little unjust in her portrait of Bevin. Bevin is a brutally powerful man, prodigiously competent and very conscious of the fact. He roars down, and sometimes clubs down, opposition. His arguments are hard to meet. But Mrs. Strauss's remark that he has never been a real recruiter is a mistake. Bevin's organization, the Transport and General Workers' Union, is the largest free union in the world. It was built, in its present form, by a process of confederation of smaller unions, and that in itself was a major feat of labor statesmanship. . . There are few such misestimates in this book, however, and for anyone seeking to understand the relation of the British democracy to the war, it should be compulsory reading." Ralph Bates

+ Nation 153:38 J1 12 '41 1050w

"The wife of one of the younger and more dynamic Labor M.P.'s, and in her own right an active member of the party, Mrs. Strauss tells a living, human story from first-hand experience." D. W. Petegorsky

+ New Repub 105:258 Ag 25 '41 550w

Reviewed by Francis Brown

N Y Times p3 J1 27 '41 1250w

"An excellent survey. . . Well written and decidedly critical."

+ New Yorker 17:79 Je 21 '41 40w

Pratt p22 autumn '41

Reviewed by J. F. Green

Sat R of Lit 24:7 J1 12 '41 550w

"Authoress Strauss specializes in the cultivated titter, the swift verbal snickersnee. Hers is one of the liveliest books yet written on labor. Result is a picture of the tramping herd as seen by a talented family black sheep—and two ironies that Authoress Strauss did not foresee. Irony No. 1: Her leftist criticisms will do much to reassure U.S. readers not dedicated to perpetuating social chaos that Ernest Bevin, Herbert Morrison, et al. are responsible leaders. Irony No. 2: From Authoress Strauss's book emerges an unusually crisp self-portrait of the radical intellectual mind—its arid cleverness, doctrinaire arrogance, urban provincialism, intolerant insistence on substituting ideas for life."

Time 38:68 J1 7 '41 1050w

Reviewed by S. K. Ratcliffe

Yale R ns 31:189 autumn '41 600w

STRAUSZ-HUPE, ROBERT. Axis America; Hitler plans our future. 274p $2.50 Putnam 940.5488 Propaganda, German. U.S.—Foreign relations. Germany—Nazi movement (W) 41-5201

An analysis of German (Nazi) propaganda in the United States, the weapon, the author believes, that Hitler has chosen to conquer America. The book opens with an analysis of Nazi psychology and philosophy and then goes on to show, by frequent quotations, how the Germans, Italians and Japanese are trying to introduce these ways of thinking into the consciousness of potential Fifth Columnists here. Index.

Reviewed by C. A. Timm

Am Pol Sci R 35:812 Ag '41 320w

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin

Atlantic My '41 170w

"Mr. Strausz-Hupé has written a simple, honest, frightening book. Any single tactical maneuver of Nazi propaganda against the United States is often laughable. The chief service of this popular review of Nazi strategy is that it puts the tactics in perspective and shows only too clearly that a good deal of what seems Nazi double-talk to Americans is, like Hitler himself, about as irrational as a fox." Joseph Barnes

STRAUSZ-HUPE, ROBERT—Continued

+ Books p3 Mr 2 '41 700w

"Though there is little that is new in this book, it is valuable for two reasons: first, it shows the broad sweep of the Axis propaganda, the aims behind that propaganda, and the catastrophic results it might have; secondly, it brings together many illustrations of what the Axis is actually saying and doing in America." R. H. M.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 F 27 '41 500w

Reviewed by F. Baerwald
Commonweal 34:188 Je 13 '41 370w

Reviewed by Edmond Taylor
Current Hist & Forum 52:3 Ap '41 750w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 19:884 Jl '41 30w

"One of the virtues of Mr. Strausz-Hupe's book is its comparative objectivity. He seldom labors to prove his thesis, but rather allows quotations from Rome, Berlin and Tokyo to prove it for him. The Axis spokesmen, high and low, are the real authors of the book." F. P. S. Glassey

+ Living Age 360:495 Jl '41 550w

"Intelligent, up-to-date."

+ New Yorker 17:76 Mr 8 '41 60w

Reviewed by Harold Lavine
Sat R of Lit 23:7 Mr 15 '41 550w
Time 37:91 Ap 28 '41 30w

STREATFIELD, NOEL. Stranger in Primrose lane; il. by Richard Floethe. 338p $2 Random house

(W) 41-19205

A group of English children, playing in an empty house, find a man hiding there. They let slip some military information, and then realize, too late, that the man may be a spy. For forty-eight hours they trail the man, and help to effect his capture when he actually turns out to be a German spy.

"As usual, there is humor and excellent characterization. This ranks next to Ballet Shoes as Miss Streatfield's best book." Marguerite Nahigian

+ Library J 66:954 N 1 '41 160w

"The children are such amusing characters and the action is so rapid that a slight stretching of the probabilities can be forgiven." + New Yorker 17:145 D 7 '41 40w

STREET, CECIL JOHN CHARLES (JOHN RHODE, pseud). Death at the helm. 282p $2 Dodd 41-1946

Detective story.

Booklist 37:325 Mr 15 '41

"One of Mr. Rhodes' most gripping tales in a masterful manner. One of the high points is the behavior of Rabbit E in the laboratory tests. Several sciences and some fine points of the law come to a head in the final stages of this recommended story." Will Cuppy

+ Books p14 Ja 12 '41 170w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 Ja 18 '41 30w

Reviewed by E. R. Punshon
Manchester Guardian p3 My 27 '41 70w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge
New Statesman & Nation 21:538 My 24 '41 170w

"Jimmy Waghorn deserves much more credit for his work on this case than on most of the other cases that Dr. Priestley has helped him to solve. Another feature of this story that merits attention is that it introduces us to some of the most interesting characters Mr. Rhode has created." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p14 Ja 19 '41 170w

"Good."

+ Sat R of Lit 23:20 Ja 18 '41 50w

Reviewed by John Fairfield

Spec 166:536 My 16 '41 40w

Time 37:76 F 3 '41 40w

Times [London] Lit Sup p163 Ap 5 '41 150w

STREET, CECIL JOHN CHARLES (JOHN RHODE, pseud). Signal for death. 275p $2 Dodd 41-10973

Detective story.

"A recommended item of the classic leisurely school by one of the old guard." Will Cuppy

+ Books p11 Je 29 '41 240w

"Like all the work of John Rhode and his school, this is a well-built and somewhat laborious story which gives painstaking attention to ingenious detail." Kay Irvin

N Y Times p17 Je 29 '41 300w

"Scientific knowledge of Dr. Priestley not only answers question of who warned 'Jerry' but who was slick killer and why. According to Hoyle."

Sat R of Lit 24:17 Je 28 '41 40w

STREET, JAMES HOWELL. The biscuit eater; il. by Arthur Fuller. 88p $2 Dial press

Dogs—Legends and stories (W) 41-21731

Touching story of a little white boy, Lonnie, his colored friend, and the dog they raised and trained. On the day of an important tryout the boys refused to let their dog win, out of loyalty to Lonnie's father, and tragedy resulted. The story first appeared in a shorter version, was made into a movie, and is now first published in book form.

Booklist 38:136 D 15 '41

"The Biscuit Eater' is not merely just another story of a boy and his dog, but one which so closely approaches perfection in its minor way that there is likelihood of its staking out a small claim to permanency in sporting fiction." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p35 N 2 '41 310w

"Don't miss it." K. U. Wise

+ Sat R of Lit 24:5 N 8 '41 40w

STREET, JAMES HOWELL. In my father's house. 348p $2.50 Dial press

(W) 41-5679

This story, told in the first person by "young Hob," pictures first the happy home life of the Abernathys—Big Hob, the father, a cotton farmer in Mississippi, respected and popular in the community, his wife and two children, "little Hob" and his sister, Teenie. Thru the boy trouble and tragedy come to the family leaving him in the end to shoulder burdens and responsibility beyond his years.

Booklist 37:440 My 15 '41

Reviewed by Lawrence Olson

Books p4 Ap 20 '41 700w

"Inevitably reminiscent of The Yearling this book has its own individuality. Recommended." L. M. Kinloch

+ Library J 66:305 Ap 1 '41 60w

"The narrator, Little Hob Abernathy, spins his tale with a good deal of boyish charm in the genuine idiom of rural Southern speech. You can't hurry him, any more than you can hurry a mule, but you'll like him for his honesty and his affection for living things."

+ Nation 152:481 Ap 19 '41 60w

New Repub 105:166 Ag 4 '41 40w

"There are advantages and disadvantages to the boy's telling. His love of farm life, his eagerness in absorbing his father's sound teachings, his unconscious estimate of the man's character are effectively told in this way. . . On the debit side, the realistic story-telling of a 14-year-old, refreshingly novel at first, grows a bit monotonous in a long story. And while the lad's observations of character and emotion are shrewdly conveyed, such acuteness does not jibe well with his obtuseness in saying the wrong thing at the wrong time on several occasions and thus becoming indirectly responsible for tragedy to his family." Beatrice Sherman

+ — N Y Times p7 Ap 20 '41 700w

"A warmhearted and touching story."

+ New Yorker 17:90 Ap 19 '41 40w

"In spite of the oily title and a suspicious odor of sweetness and light and character play in introductory remarks by author and publisher, this story is a joy forever. . . It belongs in the category of products too close to the whole of human nature for a regional or class stamp. . . These are strong people, and very sweet ones, and even though their love for one another and their stern loyalties betray them in the end you have a sense in that end of something like Finland going down or the Greeks finding a worth-while in their never-flinching against odds." J. T. Graves

+ Sat R of Lit 23:12 Ap 26 '41 420w

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 1 '41 280w

STREETER, FLOYD BENJAMIN. The Kaw; the heart of a nation; il. by Isabel Bate and Harold Black. (Rivers of America) 371p $2.50 Farrar

917.81 Kansas river. Kansas—History (W) 41-3357

In Kansas the river known to the rest of the world as the Kansas river, is called the Kaw. This book in a notable series recounts the story of the river and of the country it crosses, its cow towns and railroads, early settlers, politicians and writers from Indian times to the present. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:356 Ap 1 '41

"This book is interesting and convincing throughout. One can find nothing to carp at but the pictures in the book, which are not only disappointing as decoration, but to one who knows Kansas—and I was born there—quite unconvincing as illustration. Kansas has been compared to France, and is an almost intolerable sunny region. Yet one finds nothing in these illustrations to suggest anything but a kind of murky angularity. A book is not a picture gallery. The pictures in it should bear the same relation to the text that good sculpture does to the building it adorns." Stanley Vestal

+ — Books p17 Ap 6 '41 450w

Boston Transcript p1 Mr 8 '41 270w

Christian Science Monitor p18 Ap 15 '41 550w

"Recommended for libraries which consistently include all titles in this series, though not above the average." B. E. Weston

Library J 66:178 F 15 '41 80w

"A more accurate title for Mr. Streeter's book would be 'Kansas Since the Kansas-Nebraska Bill.' It's a good theme (there's nothing much wrong with Kansas, as William Allen White pointed out years ago), to which Mr. Streeter has done, perhaps, more factual than imaginative justice. He has less interest in people and folkways than some of his predecessors in this series. He pays little heed to the interesting social composition of his State. He mentions the dialect of Kaw folks but never defines or illustrates it. He shows no interest in place-names or the Kansas contributions to our American language. Some of his anecdotes, particularly in the first third of the book, miss point and purpose because of unskillful exposition. . . But Mr. Streeter has dug up and presented many facts about the Sunflower State for which his readers must be grateful." Horace Reynolds

+ — N Y Times p5 Mr 2 '41 1500w

"Good material, rather baldly written."

New Yorker 17:76 Mr 8 '41 50w

Pratt p14 D '41

Sat R of Lit 24:21 My 17 '41 140w

Wis Lib Bul 37:138 Jl '41

STREIT, CLARENCE KIRSHMAN. Union now with Britain. 234p maps $1.75 Harper

321.041 International federation of democracies (proposed). International cooperation. Democracy. World politics. U.S.—Foreign relations—Great Britain. Great Britain—Foreign relations—U.S. (W) 41-4606

Arguments for and practical plans for immediate union between the United States and the British empire, by the author of Union Now (Book Review Digest, 1939). "This book is not a revision of Union Now. It is a sequel to it, written in the light of subsequent, present and looming events. It has been necessary, of course, to cover some of the same ground, but that represents only a small part of this book. The reader whose questions are unanswered here may find them answered by consulting Union Now." (Foreword)

Reviewed by H. S. Foster, Jr.

Am Pol Sci R 35:577 Je '41 450w

Booklist 37:352 Ap 1 '41

"If he has pared his scheme to the realities of the present war in Europe, this change has only speeded up the urgency with which Mr. Streit advances his proposal and deepened the fervor with which he warns us not to miss his federal bus. This is a short book, full of words with capital letters. Its arguments are buttressed more by quotations from St. Paul, Napoleon, Pliny the Younger and Walt Whitman than by cool statistics or patient, careful reasoning. But this quality of fervor has none of the sound of screaming. Mr. Streit believes that only federalism can save the world, and in his search for converts there is little defeatism or faint-heartedness." Joseph Barnes

Books p5 Mr 23 '41 850w

"Those who used to consider Mr. Streit's plan as utopian, theoretical, beyond the serious contemplation of any existing government, now must recognize that overnight an emergency can develop which makes such an aim not only practical politics but an urgent national necessity. . . This book deserves the careful consideration of every American. The experience of the last two years documents its thesis. For early 1941 it is required reading." C. W. M.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 Mr 8 '41 500w

Reviewed by W. F. Thompson

Churchman 155:13 Je 1 '41 250w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 19:875 Jl 1 '41 40w

Manchester Guardian p3 Jl 1 '41 550w

"Mr. Streit submits a closely reasoned and cogent argument for action now. Without necessarily agreeing with every detail of his outline, this reviewer believes that it offers the only rational solution of the world crisis. Thus it is an indispensable book for every American to read and ponder." Hans Kohn

+ Nation 152:383 Mr 29 '41 370w

"After a hundred objections have been raised, Streit's plan remains the most practical proposal for some kind of international order yet made." Max Gissen

+ New Repub 104:737 My 26 '41 430w

STREIT, C. K.—Continued

Reviewed by Freda White

New Statesman & Nation 22:119 Ag 2 '41 1000w

"What impressed this reviewer with Mr. Streit's book was, on the one hand, the religio-moralistic tone pervading it and, on the other, the resolute dodging of the multitudinous problems involved in carrying out his scheme in actual practice." C. H. Grattan

N Y Times p14 Mr 16 '41 1200w

New Yorker 17:75 Mr 8 '41 100w

Pratt p22 autumn '41

"Adequately to review a book like 'Union Now with Great Britain' would be to write another book about it, as indeed, should it come to pass, a hundred thousand books will be written about it. It is in no sense literature. Like 'Das Kapital,' or 'Mein Kampf,' it is a profound revolutionary document, every word and argument of which must be met and disposed of by the individual reader before he can honestly dismiss its general thesis as 'impractical, visionary, doomed to failure.'" Clare Boothe

+ Sat R of Lit 23:9 Ap 5 '41 1050w

"Mr. Streit's book is one of the most impressive pieces of political pamphleteering published in our time; impressive for its sincerity, evangelical fervour and hortatory force rather than for depth or logic, but nevertheless impressive." Allan Nevins

+ Spec 166:611 Je 6 '41 1300w

Times [London] Lit Sup p274 Je 7 '41 3350w

Wis Lib Bul 37:135 Jl '41

STRELSKY, NIKANDER. Saltykov and the Russian squire. 176p $2.50 Columbia univ. press [12s 6d Oxford]

891.77 Saltykov, Mikhail Evgrafovich (Nikolai Evgrafovich Shchedrin, pseud) 40-36124

Study of the works of a nineteenth century Russian writer, known as "the greatest Russian satirist and one of the greatest among ancients or moderns." "It is the author's thesis that the picture of the rural folkways of serfdom given by the classic writers of the period (Turgenev, Aksakov, Gogol, Goncharov, Tolstoy) tells only a partial story because of its over-emphasis on the exceptional individual and the upper class. He feels that, for a real understanding of the development of the Russian way of life and the types of landlord and serf which grew from it, we need the corrective viewpoint of Saltykov. Three central chapters titled The Old Order Changes, The Doom within the New, and The Good Old Times summarize Saltykov's minor sketches of the landlord and his two great satires, the Goloviyov Family and Bygone Days in Poshekhonie." (Social Forces) Bibliography. Index.

"Mr. Strelsky does a valuable job not only of refreshing the Western memory of the great novelist-sociologist but also of reminding the reader that there may be another non-Marxist kind of admiration for Saltykov." Albert Parry

+ Am J Soc 47:257 S '41 200w

"We are fortunate, indeed, in possessing this most successful, if modest, volume by Mr. Strelsky. While confining itself to those novels which deal particularly with the squirearchy, it constitutes, nevertheless, a most happily rounded picture of a man whose personality, method and work are so easily subject to misrepresentation. It is the first critical study of Shchedrin in English." J. S. Will

+ Canadian Forum 20:326 Ja '41 650w

"In a book consisting so largely of quotations and summaries from Saltykov, who is often nearly 'untranslatable,' the author is to be congratulated on his successful rendering of the Russian meaning. An appendix includes a good bibliography and some useful notes, and the volume is carefully indexed." Alice Davis

+ Social Forces 20:131 O '41 850w

STRODACH, PAUL ZELLER, ed. Parable of the empty soul, and other sermons on the proper gospels of the Lenten season. 330p $1.75 United Lutheran pub.

252 Sermons. Jesus Christ—Seven last words 41-2743

"A volume of sermons on the Gospels for the pre-lenten and lenten seasons together with three different series of addresses on the words from the cross and a series of outlines for lenten sermons and addresses. It presents a sample of the preaching of some of the ablest men in the United Lutheran Church." Churchman

Christian Century 58:363 Mr 12 '41 10w

"It is solidly Bible preaching, but remarkably free from convention, strong in technic, and with an eloquence which in places magnificently overcomes the handicap of the printed page."

S. L. R.

+ Churchman 155:34 F 15 '41 50w

STRODE, HUDSON. Finland forever. 443p pl map $3.50 Harcourt

914.71 Finland. Arctic regions (W) 41-51640

Based on his own experiences and observations during a visit to Finland last year this book combines a history of Finland, a discussion of her economic and social life, with descriptions of her cities and countryside and sketches of some famous men and women. Bibliography.

Booklist 37:357 Ap 1 '41

Bookmark 2:11 My '41

"Hudson Strode has written authoritative and fascinating books on South America and the Caribbean, but his book on Finland has a deeper pathos. The subtler loveliness of a Nordic summer, the quieter, more subdued ways of the Finns, whatever moods they express, friendship, indignation, good humor or melancholy, has given a softer charm and warmth to this book with the defiant title 'Finland Forever.'" Sigrid Undset

+ Books p3 Mr 16 '41 1300w

Boston Transcript p1 Mr 22 '41 110w

Christian Century 58:463 Ap 2 '41 200w

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ap 19 '41 330w

"Especially noteworthy is Mr. Strode's friendship with some of Finland's most important personages, including the great composer, Jean Sibelius. If you read of Finland at war you should enjoy much more this artistically written story of Finland at peace." J. B. Parrish

+ Churchman 155:34 Mr 15 '41 120w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 19:880 Jl '41 10w

Reviewed by A. L. Jewett

Library J 66:219 Mr 1 '41 80w

"All who know Mr. Strode's writings admire his style. In Finland Forever he has surpassed himself." F. P. S. Glassey

+ Living Age 360:294 My '41 330w

"This glowing and beautiful book is written with restraint as with receptivity and vigor. It sparkles with humor and is bright with variety of character and scene. Though fate has stamped it with sorrow and the Finns have imbued its most matter-of-course records with unescapable inspiration, it is a book to be read with enjoyment, through and through." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p1 Mr 16 '41 1550w

"As warm and charming a travel book as you are likely to find, but also an intimate and thoroughgoing picture of the levelheaded Finnish democracy at work."

+ New Yorker 17:87 Mr 15 '41 50w

"The book is not entirely without flaws. Some of the descriptions are a little long-drawn and tiresome, and too much trivial detail makes the volume longer than necessary."

Yet, that is a minor thing. Mr. Strode has written an inspiring book about an heroic people caught by destiny at a crucial moment of its nation's history." Gösta Larsson

+ — Sat R of Lit 23:6 Mr 22 '41 600w

"While not exhaustive, Mr. Strode's book gives an animated, yet responsible, impression of contemporary Finland." S. M. N.

+ Spring'd Republican p7e Mr 16 '41 1200w

Wis Lib Bul 37:75 Ap '41

STRODE, JOSEPHINE, and STRODE, PAULINE R. Introduction to social case work. 219p $2.50 Harper

360 Social work 40-35839

"[This book is] designed to meet the needs of beginning practitioners and their supervisors, of college students and their teachers.

Miss Strode has organized her material into three parts: In the first, Historical Perspectives, she traces the development of social case work from friendly visiting to social diagnosis, through individual therapy to mass relief, and describes the growth of federal participation in relief and security services. In the second, Social Case Work Practice, she discusses basic considerations of emphasis and definition; the social case study, including criteria for analysis; social resources, their location, use and development; the significance in practice of knowledge from related fields; the case work process as a science of social adjustment. In the third part, Areas of Service, she outlines the 'case work approach' in such matters as unemployment relief, child welfare, youth adjustment, assistance to the aged and the blind, and so on." (Survey) Index.

"The book covers the history and theory of social work; the theory and technical methods of social case work; and a discussion of selected social problems requiring case work services. Most teachers, however, will regret that the wide scope of the book, which attempts to treat in one volume the subject matter ordinarily handled in a minimum of three courses, necessarily results in a too superficial consideration of many of the subjects discussed. The references are well chosen to supplement the chapter discussions for the most part, and it is assumed that any teacher would expect to depend largely on supplementary discussions. The author has a lucid and readable style, and her own wide background of experience is apparent in her condensation of material." A. F. Fenlason

+ — Am Soc R 6:608 Ag '41 200w

"It is a sad omission in a text that no significant case situations are presented. Miss Strode's feeling for the need of clients and their problems is sincere and responsible. We wish that she had been able to give a broader and deeper description of the field and to have avoided the dilemma of indoctrinating her readers." I. K. C.

+ — Social Forces 19:597 My '41 240w

"The text is notable for its lack of technical terminology and for its simple, lucid style. Each chapter is accompanied by questions for group discussion, suggested activities related to the subject matter, and a list of selected reading. All these as well as the whole plan of study have been tested in Miss Strode's course in social case work at Cornell University." Gertrude Springer

+ Survey 76:371 D '40 550w

Wis Lib Bul 37:30 F '41

STROMBERG, GUSTAF. Soul of the universe. 244p pl $2 McKay

577 Physics—Philosophy. Life 40-9111

"Views of a member of the staff of the Mount Wilson Observatory on the riddle of the universe and the relationship between the human mind and matter. He has brought whatever concepts he has accumulated from a study of the physical and biological sciences into one unified discussion. The resulting opinions are not intended to be taken as a final word on the subject." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Reviewed by G. A. Cunningham

Churchman 155:18 Jl 1 '41 160w

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 O '41

"It must be said in favour of the author that his account is plain and straightforward and free of the mystifications and paradoxes used by certain contemporary popularizers. The book may appeal to the general public on its merits. It is scarcely likely to interest the man of science, and the philosopher who is concerned with the notion of the world-soul will probably prefer Plato's 'Timæus', even though the physical theory is out of date."

Nature 146:543 O 26 '40 100w

N Y New Tech Bks 25:46 O '40

"There never was a time in the history of the world when spiritual values were at so low an ebb. Any book that can make out a sound case for them is needed. Why are we here? What is our relation to the world about us? These age-old questions cannot be answered by any mechanistic conception of the universe. What Dr. Strömberg has done is to connect man and his soul with the universe by invoking the devices that physicists have invented to explain atoms." Waldemar Kaempffert

+ N Y Times p18 Ap 13 '41 1100w

STRONG, ANNA LOUISE (MRS JOEL SHUBIN). Soviets expected it. 279p $2.50 Dial press

947.084 Russia—Foreign relations. Russia—Defenses. World war, 1939—Russia

(W) 41-25940

A popularly written resumé of Russia's international and domestic policies during the years just preceding Hitler's attack in June 1941. Partial contents: Russians are people; Stalin; Building for total defense; The army and the people; Smashing the fifth column; The fight for peace fails; Building the buffer belt; The pact that blocked Hitler; War of the whole people.

Booklist 38:176 Ja 15 '42

Reviewed by Elizabeth Barnes
Books p13 Ja 11 '42 500w

New Yorker 17:136 D 6 '41 70w

"Anna Louise Strong rigorously interprets every event in recent and contemporary Soviet history from the standpoint of the 'Party line.' There has been no such uncritical eulogy of Stalin and his regime since that amazing work of the Dean of Canterbury. . . . Like the Dean of Canterbury, although with less excuse, because she has lived for a long time in Russia, Miss Strong humorlessly and uncritically adopts as her own the official Soviet explanation of every phase of foreign and internal policy. The wholesale slaughter of the purges was just 'smashing the Fifth Column.'" W. H. Chamberlin

— Sat R of Lit 24:7 D 20 '41 1300w

STRONG, DONALD S. Organized anti-Semitism in America. 191p $3; pa $2.50 Am. council on public affairs

296 Jews in the U.S.

41-8521

"Commendable study of the rise of group prejudice during the decade 1930-40." Social Studies

"The book is to be commended for giving an ordered presentation of an important recent phase of American life about which facts are difficult to secure." Alfred Severson

+ Am J Soc 47:512 N '41 260w

STRONG, D. S.—Continued

Reviewed by Belle Zeller

Am Pol Sci R 35:802 Ag '41 390w

Am Soc R 6:926 D '41 60w

Booklist 38:73 N 1 '41

Commonweal 34:43 My 2 '41 120w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:380 Ja '42 10w

Social Studies 32:239 My '41 10w

"Dr. Strong has given us a fine picture of the rise of group prejudice in the United States during the decade, 1930-40. Living in a section of New York City that is dominated by one of these pressure groups, the reviewer can appreciate the author's well documented work."

J. J. Flynn

+ Social Studies 32:330 N '41 280w

STRONG, LEONARD ALFRED GEORGE. John McCormack, the story of a singer. 301p il $3 Macmillan [15s Methuen]

B or 92 McCormack, John (W) 41-19298

This biography of the famous Irish singer is told by an English novelist, but contains enough of John McCormack's own words to make it essentially an autobiography. It recounts the whole story of his life, training, and successes, from his boyhood in Ireland to his farewell tour of Britain in 1938. Includes a list of McCormack's gramophone recordings.

Booklist 38:112 D 1 '41

"A happy book about a happy career." John Erskine

+ Books p23 O 26 '41 320w

Christian Century 58:1306 O 22 '41 70w

"Though, as in most biographies of famous singers, there is in Mr. Strong's pages too much recording of trivial sayings and events, we do find here some highly interesting information. . . Happily the account is not entirely an essay of the hero-worshipping type. . . John McCormack is a generous but keen critic of other artists, and his remarks about past celebrities—Caruso and Melba, for instance—are valuable. What he says about his own technique in the matter of enunciation is enlightening though not always convincing. His defence of feeble songs and of his performance of them is naïve and entirely unsuccessful."

G. A. H.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 22 '41 200w

"Mr. Strong's book is not what you would expect of a novelist. Musically, it is admirable; everything he says about singing and opera shows discrimination and love. And he earns from me a special good mark for realising the importance of the gramophone. . . On the side of narrative and character, however, he is often dull and perfunctory: the usual success-story, with the usual royal and back-stage anecdotes told in the usual style. . . He has missed an opportunity: there is more than this in John McCormack." Desmond Shawe-Taylor

+ New Statesman & Nation 21:632 Je 21 '41 1300w

"Perhaps the best way to realize just how good a book L. A. G. Strong has made out of the life of a tenor is to imagine what this life could have been in different hands. And to that rare reader who knows nothing of Mr. McCormack's art the surest proof of the taste his biographer claims for him is that he chose so skilled a man of letters for the job of writing this book. Mr. Strong has desentimentalized the singer's story, as McCormack and Kreisler desentimentalized the popular music they recorded. He has told the Irishman's story as if no one before him had ever written the biography of a famous singer." Horace Reynolds

+ N Y Times p8 Ja 4 '42 1050w

"Mr. McCormack has been fortunate in securing an artist of Mr. Strong's calibre to put his reminiscences into writing. And even though Mr. Strong has not achieved the impossible of making a masterpiece of his material, he has put together an interesting, and at times amusing, book. For his subject has a fund of good stories and all an Irishman's gusto in their telling." Dyneley Hussey

+ Spec 166:404 Ap 11 '41 600w

Reviewed by Milton Berliner

Springf'd Republican p6e N 9 '41 290w

"There is one difference here between this and other singers' biographies. Mr. Strong tells us that his admiration for McCormack was first aroused through the early gramophone records, of which he now possesses over 160."

Times [London] Lit Sup p136 Mr 22 '41 700w

Wis Lib Bul 37:175 N '41

STRUTHER, JAN, pseud. See Maxtone Graham, J.STUART, MRS FLORENCE (PARTELLO). Piang, the Moro chieftain; il. by Robert Robison. 293p $2 Messner

(W) 41-6940

Piang, a young Moro chieftain-elect, with two boy companions, spends a year in the jungle of his native Mindanao. The story is of their battles with crocodiles, pythons, pakdas, pygmies, and warrior ants, during the months when they were proving their fitness as warriors of their tribe.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p6 S 7 '41 270w

"Out of a wide knowledge of country and people, the author weaves an absorbing tale of these three Moro boys and the events which bring them into manhood. Each boy has marked traits which distinguish him from the others. In showing how the year's experiences bring growth according to the needs of each, Mrs. Stuart has done a sound piece of characterization." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:292 Jl '41 180w

Reviewed by Alice Martin

Library J 66:466 My 15 '41 60w

"It is a story which boys, and girls too, of ten and up will find absorbing not only for its breathless action and for its detailed account of jungle life, but for its portrayal of the customs and the thoughts of a people who live with dignity a simple but by no means barbarous life, with a strict regard for a code which has its own nobility." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Jl 27 '41 400w

STUART, FRANK. S. Caravan for China. 307p $2.50 Doubleday [7s 6d Paul, S.]

41-532

This tale of adventure in the days of Tiberius follows the fortunes of the members of a trading expedition to China. The chief character is Simon of Cyrene (briefly an actor in the Jesus tragedy) who is pictured as a mercenary fighter who accompanies the expedition ostensibly as guard, actually to further his own romance with a girl sold into slavery in China.

"'Caravan for China' is ornate in bloodshed, oriental in mood and ingeniously modern in dialogue. Mr. Stuart goes escapist in a big way." Lisle Bell

Books p12 Ja 12 '41 240w

"There is enough action for several books as well as witty and discerning comments on the frailties of mankind."

+ Boston Transcript p1 Ja 11 '41 150w

"It is told with a more or less modern slant, and not too much intrusion of erudition. The general effect is swashbuckle, with plot creakings; and there is too much prose."

— + New Repub 104:126 Ja 27 '41 50w

"For fantastic adventure and violent action the book is to be recommended. Its characterization, style and humor are no more than mediocre," Beatrice Sherman
 + — N Y Times p7 Ja 12 '41 500w

"A good deal of the color of the period comes through, though somewhat garishly, and Mr. Stuart secures a diverting if obvious effect by placing Times Square lingo in the mouths of Roman patricians, Levantine galley slaves, and Chinese concubines." Clifton Fadiman

New Yorker 16:55 Ja 4 '41 130w

"A first-class thriller reaches its climax in the dramatic incident when Simon, 'the great free Captain for whom Caesar waited,' urged by an impulse that he could not understand, flung his sword from him and plunged forward to carry 'a gallows for a dying criminal.' Dramatic, certainly, and a fine ending to a good novel, but the figure of Simon is altered out of all recognition from that Cyrenian whom, we are told, 'they forced to take up the Cross.' Those who have no objection to this sort of juggling will enjoy 'Caravan for China,' for it is an exciting and swiftly moving story, full of fine descriptions and compelling incidents."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p643 N 4 '40 250w

STUART, JESSE. Men of the mountains. 349p $2.50 Dutton

41-4022

Twenty-one stories of the Kentucky mountaineers, on their hill farms, in their elections, and the daily course of their lives generally.

Booklist 37:410 My 1 '41

"There is nothing slick or tricky in Stuart's work, nothing even sophisticated. And yet neither is there the rawness of the Southland etchings of Erskine Caldwell nor the horrifying decadence of Faulkner. Next to Caldwell, Stuart seems lyrical and classic, and next to Faulkner, wholesome and conventional. . . And Stuart's work is regionalism at its purest." Milton Rugoff

+ Books p2 Mr 16 '41 850w

"Fresh and breezy, chockful of Kentucky hill-folk's lore and good humor, they are among Mr. Stuart's best creations, and he is at his best in the short story."

+ Nation 152:508 Ap 26 '41 50w

"Jesse Stuart should not be grouped with story writers. He is variously a poet, reporter and atmosphere man, and most of the pieces in 'Men of the Mountains' would make nice contrasting essays for one of the collections of, say, John Burroughs. He is without discipline and perhaps beyond it, but everything he writes is simply fragrant with the close and immediate detail of a life on the land." Otis Ferguson

+ New Repub 104:410 Mr 24 '41 380w

"Mr. Stuart is as critics have said a 'discovery,' an 'authentic writer' and an 'original.' He is sincere and honest in his work; he has talent. Yet there is no use in not adding that these stories are extremely difficult to read. His descriptions are tangled and often repetitiously phrased. . . One puts the book down with fuzzy knowledge. No character is rounded. They are done in flat as caricatures." Robert Van Gelder

+ — N Y Times p7 Mr 23 '41 650w

"These short stories have unity of place and atmosphere, distinction of theme, and great skill in the telling. A fine, sound book."

+ New Yorker 17:85 Mr 22 '41 50w

"These new stories are all excellent additions to the sum of Jesse Stuart. . . [The people] are the same people Jesse Stuart has shown us before, speaking the same poetry, the same comedy and wisdom. If this collection of stories, as it seems to me, only adds to the quantity of Stuart's work, it still adds to the quantity of some of the richest native writing being done in America." Jonathan Daniels

+ Sat R of Lit 23:8 Mr 22 '41 400w

"There is humor as well as pathos in these stories, the rough unsophisticated humor of rural America with its gift for exaggeration. This marks even the account of such events as the fight between the Dinguses and the Bridgewaters in which Sweet William slays two men with his bare hands. One of the most memorable stories in the collection—that about two black snakes—is also the shortest."

+ Springfd Republican p7e Ap 27 '41 800w

"Some of the best [stories] are merely rich descriptions of farm work, masterful records of the quiet talk that runs over it. More ambitious is a poetic essay on graves, generations and the mountain heritage. Toward the end of the volume Hillbilly Stuart breaks into plain English and writes a story of two snakes which is the shortest, best piece in the collection."

+ Time 37:93 Mr 24 '41 230w

Wis Lib Bul 37:117 Je '41

STUART, WARREN. The sword and the net. 284p $2.50 Morrow

41-20734

A spy story which is scened in three countries: Germany, Sweden, and the United States, in 1940 and 1941.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p29 O 5 '41 160w

"It would scarcely be fair to mention more than the theme and some of the characters of an action romance which depends for its reader interest primarily on the element of surprise. It is enough to say that this is one of those rapid-fire spy stories which the addict will not want to lay aside before turning the last page." Drake de Kay

N Y Times p32 O 5 '41 400w

"Exciting and pretty darned patriotic, too."

+ New Yorker 17:80 S 27 '41 60w

"Swift action, thrilling suspense, and tender love, mixes and blends them skilfully to make a dish of adventure and excitement fit for the keenest taste. . . All this makes an exciting and disturbing story."

+ Springfd Republican p7e S 28 '41 120w

STUDENSKI, PAUL, and MORT, PAUL R. Centralized vs. decentralized government in relation to democracy; review of the arguments advanced in the literature of various nations. 69p pa 75c Teachers college

320.157 State, The. Local government

41-10921

"The pros and cons are classified under the rubrics: (1) merits of well-conceived local control; (2) shortcomings of excessive decentralization; (3) advantages of well-conceived central control; (4) shortcomings of excessive centralization." School & Society

"The utility of the collection, and of the publication, of the material is entirely beyond the comprehension of this reviewer. The authors offer their document 'to the general public' with the hope that it will help 'to clarify' the issue and 'to lay the groundwork for further significant research.' The material is not in the most suitable form for the education of the 'general public'; 'the issue' is no clearer than it was before the quotations were placed in juxtaposition; and anybody setting out to do 'significant research' would already be acquainted with the ideas and views collected." V. O. Key, Jr.

— Am Pol Sci R 35:818 Ag '41 320w

Reviewed by O. P. Field

Ann Am Acad 218:217 N '41 700w

School & Society 53:648 My 17 '41 30w

Social Studies 32:335 N '41 20w

STURM, ALEXANDER. The problem fox. [77p] il $1.25 Scribner

741 Caricatures and cartoons. Humor 41-16946

Picture book for adults, with brief text, describing the adventures of Augustus, the problem child in a family of Connecticut foxes of distinguished lineage.

Books p12 S 28 '41 150w

"When you come right down to it, and think hard, and study (well, that is to say, unrestrainedly enjoy) this little masterpiece again and again and again, 'marvelous' is exactly the right word. Such inspired artlessness, such guileless profundity, such innocent netting of life's complexity and pretentiousness and unconquerable perversity—what but marvel, in apparently quite simple drawings, could achieve that?" K. W.

+ N Y Times p5 O 12 '41 550w

"Readers who delighted in 'Ferdinand the Bull' will grow excited over 'The Problem Fox' which carries on the same brand of humor, sarcasm and wit in both script and drawings as whetted the appetites in the earlier book."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e S 21 '41 200w

STUTZER, OTTO. Geology of coal; tr. and rev. by Adolph C. Noé. 461p il maps $5 Univ. of Chicago press [30s Cambridge]

553.2 Coal. Geology, Economic 41-953

Discussion of the origin, chemical composition, characteristics, microscopy, stratigraphy, and petrography of coal. The present work "is in part a translation of the second edition of Kohle (Allgemeine Kohlengeologie) by Otto Stutzer and in part a translation of a revision and abbreviation of certain chapters of that edition by Professor Stutzer." (Pref) Bibliographies. Indexes.

"The publication of this excellent translation of the late Dr. Otto Stutzer's Kohle constitutes a welcome addition to our literature on coal and its geology. Most coal chemists, technologists, and geologists have had occasion to use the original German text as a reference book and will appreciate this more easily available presentation of Dr. Stutzer's comprehensive work. This is especially true because the translation by the late Dr. Noé presents the original text accurately and in smooth, easily readable English." T. A. Hendricks

+ J Geol 49:669 Ag '41 550w

"The general plan of the work seems admirably designed, and with the help of a detailed table of contents and of adequate indexes to subjects, authors and places, the reader has little difficulty in finding any particular subject or reference he may wish. It is claimed that in the present edition Stutzer's work has been revised and brought up to date. It would, however, be difficult to justify this claim in its entirety." M. Macgregor

+ — Nature 147:521 My 3 '41 650w

N Y New Tech Bks 26:6 Ja '41

"While these matters are of interest chiefly to the geologist, mining engineer, and those persons concerned directly with the coal industry, nevertheless even so technical a publication as this may prove of interest to a wider group, for in one way or another 'coal' touches the lives of most of us."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 12:4 Ja '41 180w

SULLIVAN, SIR ARTHUR SEYMOUR. A treasury of Gilbert and Sullivan; ed. by Deems Taylor; il. by Lucille Corcos; arrangements by Albert Sirmay. 405p $5 Simon & Schuster

782.6 Operettas—Stories, plots, etc. Songs (W)

Words and music of the best-known songs from eleven of the Gilbert and Sullivan operettas: Trial by Jury, the Sorcerer, H.M.S. Pinafore, The Pirates of Penzance, Patience, Iolanthe, Princess Ida, The Mikado, Ruddigore, The Yeomen of the Guard, The Gondoliers. Each operetta is prefaced with an essay by Deems Taylor, giving its history, and facts about its creation, with a synopsis of the story.

Booklist 38:109 D 1 '41

Reviewed by F. P. Adams

+ Books p3 O 26 '41 950w

"It is a grand book in every respect. And what a swell Christmas gift." W. P. Sears, Jr.

+ Churchman 155:18 N 15 '41 120w

Reviewed by Margaret Marshall

Nation 153:457 N 8 '41 70w

Reviewed by Frank Weitenkampf

N Y Times p3 N 9 '41 700w

"[This] work of genius recaptures the colorful spirit of the D'Oyly Carte Opera Company to perfection. Deems Taylor, the editor, has whittled the operettas down to the essentials. . . The book is of a size and weight well adapted to a piano music-stand, and is most decorative." Katharine Scherman

+ Sat R of Lit 24:33 D 6 '41 380w

"Good measure and running over. All [the songs] are eminently singable and fitted for playing on the piano or group singing or singing in the bathtub. The price is large, but just this once it seems highly justifiable, and it is to be hoped that many families will find this large and handsome volume under their Christmas trees and be richer thereby."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e O 26 '41 240w

"Dr. Sirmay's piano arrangements of the 102 songs from 11 operettas will suit any technic from one-finger virtuosity upward." Milton Berliner

+ Springf'd Republican p6e N 9 '41 60w

SUMMERS, HARRISON BOYD, and WHAN, FOREST LIVING. How to debate; a textbook for beginners. 336p $1.25 Wilson, H.W.

808.5 Debates and debating (W) 41-51550

"This book is a revision of an earlier text, published under the title, Contest Debating. Those who are familiar with the earlier publication will find that the general plan of that text has been followed in the present book, and that many chapters have been transferred to the present publication almost without change. The organization of the book has, however, been changed in the interest of greater clarity; a number of sections have been entirely rewritten; and new illustrative materials have been inserted. We have tried particularly to simplify and clarify those parts of the earlier book which were found by experience to offer difficulty to inexperienced debaters; and we wish to express our very great appreciation to the many coaches and debaters who have offered valuable suggestions and criticisms." (To the instructor) Index.

Booklist 37:273 F 15 '41

Wis Lib Bul 37:71 Ap '41

SUMMERS, MONTAGUE. Gothic bibliography. ltd ed 621p il $10 Columbia univ. press [42s Fortune]

016.823 English fiction—Bibliography

[A 41-3676]

"When Mr. Summers published his 'Gothic Quest' he foreshadowed a 'second volume' entitled 'The Gothic Achievement.' He seems now to have decided to issue, between his two volumes of critical history, a bibliographical appendix, uniform in appearance with 'The Gothic Quest' and even more generous in proportions. . . The book is divided into two parts: 'Index of Authors' and 'Index of Titles,' with addenda to each index at the end. The Index of Authors gives the name and, where discoverable, the birth and death dates of the author, followed by a list of the titles and dates of his works. In the majority of cases no particulars are given in this section of the number of volumes or the place of publication. The entries vary very greatly in fullness, some authors receiving extended treatment, others merely a list of their works. The Index of Titles supplies number of volumes, publisher and frequently a record of subsequent editions, dramatizations, &c. Here again certain titles are annotated, while others are mere index-entries." Times [London] Lit Sup

"The many hundreds of titles here catalogued range in date from the late seventeenth century almost to our own day, and many things are included that by no stretch of definition can properly be called 'Gothic.' For all its immense bulk every one who has inquired into the subject will detect omissions." S. C. Chew

Books p28 O 26 '41 130w

Times [London] Lit Sup p120 Mr 8 '41 1300w

SUMMERS, RICHARD ALDRICH. Cavalcade to California; il. by Donald McKay. 256p $2 Oxford

Ansa, Juan Bautista de—Fiction (W) 41-5225

"A book about the 1775 expedition of Spanish colonists led by Captain Anza from Mexico to Drake's Bay to found the settlement which became San Francisco. It is based on the diary of Padre Font, the priest of the cavalcade, and other contemporary records." New Yorker

"Besides being a good story of an expedition and the early settling of California, it gives an excellent picture of the establishment of the great California missions. The illustrations by Donald McKay add but little to the book. Older boys, twelve to fourteen, and some girls of the same age, will, I believe, enjoy this book." J. F. Carter

+ Library J 66:310 Ap 1 '41 150w

"While many histories and stories with historical backgrounds dealing with the colonies along the Eastern seaboard have been written for young people, the early days of the Far West have been for the most part neglected. Such a book as Mr. Summers' well-written 'Cavalcade to California' makes us keenly aware of what colorful, dramatic material is available in the diaries and letters written by pioneers, soldiers, priests and friars who explored, established settlements and founded missions." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p9 Je 1 '41 270w

"Mr. Summers writes a vivid tale of hardship and of human nature under stress."

New Yorker 17:90 My 24 '41 60w

SUMNER, GEE LYNN. We have with us tonight. 175p $1.75 Harper

808.5 Public speaking (W) 41-19812

"Secrets of success at the speakers' table." (Subtitle) It is the purpose of this book "to suggest those elements which go to make up a successful speaking program. To suggest to club officers and chairmen of program committees the necessary advance arrangements; ways of handling speakers and special guests. To bring to toastmasters and presiding officers helpful hints about the technique of presenting head-table guests, introducing speakers, keeping a program moving on schedule. To suggest to luncheon and dinner speakers ways of responding to an introduction, of winning and holding the interest of an audience."

Booklist 38:155 Ja 1 '42

"The book will be a life-saver to many beginners at the business of presiding at a gathering where distinguished guests appear."

+ Books p21 O 12 '41 70w

Wis Lib Bul 37:175 N '41

SUMPTION, MRS LOIS (LINTNER), and ASH-BROOK, MRS MARGUERITE (LINTNER). Breads and more breads; recipes from many nations. 248p il $2 Manual arts

641.631 Bread 41-12111

Following a brief historical sketch and a chapter of detailed general instructions, the body of this book contains scores of recipes for breads of all kinds, biscuits, muffins, waffles, various types of cakes and sweet breads, etc. The recipes are grouped under countries—from America and Austria to Russia, Scotland and Switzerland. Bibliography. Index.

"The woman who dotes on homemade breads will surely find this a provocative book. . . . Helpful is the page which lists about 12 recipes each under these four headings: 'If You Are a Beginner,' 'If You Are an Experienced Cook,' 'If You Want Something Inexpensive,' 'If You Do Not Mind the Expense.'"

+ J Home Econ 33:669 N '41 100w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 4 '42 110w

SUPER, DONALD EDWIN. Avocational interest patterns; a study in the psychology of avocations. 148p $2.25 Stanford univ. press [10s 6d Oxford]

790 Hobbies. Interest (psychology) 40-9816

"The purpose of [this] piece of research is to apply the methodology of vocational-aptitude testing to the field of avocations in the interests of both vocational and avocational guidance. The author attempts to obtain answers to three general problems: (1) the logical problem of the objective determination of avocational interests and the derivative patterning of these interests; (2) the nature of the relation between adolescent and adult avocational interests; and (3) the nature of the relation between vocations and avocations." (School R) Bibliography.

"The students of vocational interests have built up a literature on the ways in which these interests originate, the extent to which they are integrated with the personality, and such questions. Super opens up the same type of study for hobbies. His work is on a small scale and is only a start, but it does succeed in bringing out some of these patterns, which are not the same for different types of avocations. He concludes with an 'individualized theory,' which is that 'avocations are chosen according to the present needs of an individual in a given situation, and on the basis of the possible ways in which that individual can meet those needs in that situation.' If that appears too obvious and commonplace, the reader can satisfy himself that it is a real advance by looking at the early theories of vocational interests and abilities." R. E. L. Faris

Am J Soc 47:264 S '41 140w

Reviewed by P. H. Sheats

Am Soc R 6:616 Ag '41 150w

School & Society 51:752 Je 15 '40 40w

Reviewed by F. J. Kobler

School R 49:74 Ja '41 750w

SUTER, JOHN WALLACE, comp. Book of English collects. 484p $2.90 Harper

264.036 Prayers 41-15082

"In this single volume are brought together the collects contained in all the prayer books of the Anglican or Episcopal churches; namely, those of England, Scotland, Ireland, Canada, South Africa and the United States. Full notes make it in effect a variorum edition. An essay on the nature and pattern of collects is included." Christian Century

Christian Century 58:192 F 5 '41 20w

Reviewed by W. L. Caswell

Churchman 155:17 F 15 '41 200w

"For the liturgical church this book will prove an invaluable source of material for study, comparison (because of the 'Notes on the Collects'),

SUTER, J. W.—Continued
and understanding. For the free church and its ministers the book will be no less important. The prayer literature of the Anglican Church is a never-failing stimulation and inspiration to those whose sense of prayer includes the impressive power of gracious utterance." R. E. Keighton

+ Crozer Q 18:186 Ap '41 160w

SUTERMEISTER, EDWIN. Chemistry of pulp and paper making. 3d ed 529p il $6.50 Wiley 676 Paper making and trade 41-10191

"The first two editions of this volume [1920, 1929] were the work of Dr. Sutermeister only. Chapters in the new edition follow the same order as the second edition, with the exception that the sulfate process is placed before the soda process. The two additional chapters are on printing and the moisture relations of pulp and paper. Because of the increasing complexity of even a specialized field, such as the chemistry of one industry, the author obtained the collaboration of a number of authorities in the preparation of the third edition." (Chem & Chem Eng N) Index.

Booklist 38:57 O 15 '41

Reviewed by C. J. West

Chem & Chem Eng N 19:1118 O 10 '41
350w

SUTHERLAND, IVAN LORIN GEORGE, ed. Maori people today. (Institute of Pacific relations. Int. research ser) 463p il $4 Oxford

919.31 Maoris

41-7550

"Authors qualified to write on special aspects of Maori life have cooperated to present a comprehensive interpretation of the people... Dr. Ernest Beaglehole presents a general survey of the ancient Maori culture. Mr. Harold Miller outlines the relations between Maori and European until the end of the Taranaki and Waikato wars, while subsequent history is reconstructed in other sections. Mr. H. Belshaw and Mr. H. B. Turbott discuss economic and social welfare conditions, and Mr. Roger Duff contributes a section on the South Island Maoris. . . . Of special value are the contributions on land settlement, tribal organization, arts and crafts and religious influences, written by Sir Apinana Ngata, the outstanding Maori leader of today." Times [London] Lit Sup

Foreign Affairs 19:686 Ap '41 10w

"The anthropologist will find new material in this book, and the social scientist will find an absorbing study of racial adaptation; but the book is more than a laboratory record because, to quote Dr. Buck again, 'the Maori is above all, a man.'" J. B. Condliffe

+ Pacific Affairs 14:131 Mr '41 900w

Times [London] Lit Sup p240 My 17 '41 490w

SWADOS, FELICE (MRS RICHARD HOFSTADTER). House of fury. 263p $2 Doubleday

41-28066

A story of the inmates in a reform school for girls. Tho the colored girls are segregated and there is open hostility between them and the white girls, when two colored girls attempt to escape it influences the lives of all.

"The opening letters are definitely shockers, perhaps rather too intentionally so. Much of the talk is not for your Aunt Hattie, but it has the ring of veracity. The final effect of this unusual novel is one of a strong, unsentimental compassion for all the girls who lacked a home and found a House." Lorine Pruette

+ — Books p12 N 23 '41 500w

"Miss Swados' earnestness and the fact that she has written the book as if from within the walls and completely without venom or motive should be signaled, but that is all. Apart from this, awkwardness, even diffidence, mar the characterizations, and although many of the scenes are as violent and depraved as any Faulkner has dealt with, they stir the reader about as much as would the description of a taffy-pull at a young ladies' seminary. Miss Swados' recording of them—and of all the other scenes—is bloodless, ineffectual and dull." Kay Boyle

+ New Repub 105:707 N 24 '41 180w

"The author seems very sure of her material, and the primal, amoral intensity of life in a corrective school is sympathetically told. For sheer cyclonic pace the book is unusual." George Froede

+ N Y Times p20 N 2 '41 550w

"The girls themselves are interesting, varied, and appealing, but they seem much older than the thirteen or fourteen years the author makes them."

+ New Yorker 17:90 N 1 '41 40w

SWAIN, OLIVE. comp. Notes used on catalog cards; a list of examples. 102p pa $1.25 A.L.A.

025.3 Cataloging

40-27619

"The volume contains some fifteen hundred notes which have been used on catalog cards. . . The compiler states in her Preface that 'the aim has been to enable a cataloger to look under a given heading and find there either a note which expresses clearly and briefly what he wants to say about the book at hand, or one which will suggest the wording to suit the particular need.'" Library Q

Booklist 37:5 S '40

"A list such as this is not properly the sphere of action for one person to compile or for one person to evaluate. An expression of opinion from a representative number of catalogers is required in order to define its use, scope, and the method of presentation of material. A co-operative checking by many libraries is necessary to give the individual notes authoritativeness." J. E. Hitchcock

Library Q 11:115 Ja '41 1000w

SWAN, MRS MABEL MUNSON. The Athenaeum gallery, 1827-1873; the Boston athenaeum as an early patron of art; with an introd. by Charles Knowles Bolton. 312p pl $6 Boston athenaeum

708.1 Boston athenaeum

41-8309

"The Athenaeum was founded, as a library, in 1807. For fifteen years thereafter, as Mr. Bolton observes, 'it concentrated on literature, science and theology.' But in 1822 Augustus Thorndike gave the institution some casts from antique sculpture and thenceforth the Athenaeum was destined to occupy itself more and more with artistic issues. It was in 1822 also that it commissioned Gilbert Stuart to make a copy of his portrait of James Perkins, one of its first benefactors, a portrait which was to serve as the nucleus of a collection of paintings, to be followed by the establishment of a gallery to receive it, on the third floor, where it was to be lighted 'only from the top.' It has been Mrs. Swan's task to expose the salient figures and episodes of the ensuing years." Books

"Mrs. Swan has written a reliable, informative book on an interesting subject." Royal Cortissoz

+ Books p9 Jl 27 '41 750w

Reviewed by Dorothy Adlow

Christian Science Monitor p10 Mr 8 '41 450w

Reviewed by Lucile Gafford

New Eng Q 14:578 S '41 300w

SWANSON, WILLIAM ELMER. Modern ship-fitter's handbook. 269p il $2.50 Cornell maritime press, 350 W. 23d st, N.Y.

623.8 Shipbuilding (W) 40-27620

"The object of [this book] is to cover the fundamental principles and the working problems encountered in building a ship. Written in plain language, with most of the emphasis placed on working drawings to explain the details of good construction, the Handbook is arranged to take up in order the four major stages in a ship's construction: mold loft work and template making; structural shop work and angle-smithing; preassembly of sections; and erection of parts and sections on the ways. Chapters on welding, blueprint reading, etc., are included, together with a glossary of ship construction terms." Pref.

Booklist 37:8 S '40

N Y New Tech Bks 25:54 O '40

Pratt p11 winter '41

SWARTHMORE COLLEGE, SWARTHMORE, PENNSYLVANIA. An adventure in education; Swarthmore college under Frank Aydelotte. 236p $2.50 Macmillan

378 Swarthmore college, Swarthmore, Pennsylvania, Aydelotte, Frank 41-16001

An account of what was done at Swarthmore college, particularly in the development of "honors" courses, during the nineteen years under the presidency of Frank Aydelotte. The book, written to honor President Aydelotte on his leaving Swarthmore, is the work of a number of his colleagues on the faculty and one outsider. Bibliography. Index.

"As a record of a genuinely brilliant experiment in education which is not likely to stop at the present stage this book is one that must not be missed." G. F. Whicher

+ Books p30 D 7 '41 450w

Reviewed by J. S. Cleaver

Library J 66:567 Je 15 '41 80w

"The honors plan sounds simple enough when briefly stated. But it has been no simple matter to turn a college in these days of mass education and rote learning into a place where students and faculty alike are interested not in courses and credits but in learning and ideas. This is just what has been achieved at Swarthmore under Aydelotte to an astonishing degree, for the honors courses have affected the atmosphere and the standards of the whole college. This book is a good report on how the thing was done. The book is written with quiet humor, with recognition of failures as well as successes, with zest tempered by sound sense." E. R. Embree

+ Sat R of Lit 24:11 S 20 '41 750w

School & Society 54:144 Ag 30 '41 30w

"This book serves as a real tribute to Frank Aydelotte and his success with the honors program at Swarthmore. It is also a stimulating story of an adventure in higher education. As such, it proves interesting to educators desiring to try experiments with different types of learning experiences at the college level." J. M. Mart

+ School & Society 55:108 Ja 24 '42 350w

Springf'd Republican p10 O 8 '41 550w

SWEETZ, MRS MAXINE BERNARD (YAPLE). Structure of the Nazi economy. 255p $3 Harvard univ. press

330.943 Germany—Economic conditions

A41-4057

"Beginning with a chapter on war economics in peacetimes, Dr. Sweetz proceeds to analyze the Nazi economy under the heads, 'Government and Business,' 'Organization of Transportation,' 'Corporations,' 'Cartels,' 'Industrial Price Policy,' 'Control of Foreign Exchange and Foreign Trade,' 'Financial Policies: Capital and Money Markets, Banking and Government Finance,' 'Regimentation and Conscription of Labor,' 'Agricultural "Planning",' 'National Income, Consumption and Social Welfare.'" Canadian Forum

Reviewed by F. M. Marx

Am Pol Sci R 35:1203 D '41 300w

Reviewed by Paul Ucker

Ann Am Acad 219:180 Ja '42 750w

"This is an admirable book, indispensable to any serious student of the subject. It is comprehensive, scholarly and thoroughly documented. Until the short, concluding chapter it is almost uniformly judicial in tone; and that chapter is of judicial severity. The book may be particularly commended to those (newspaper editors and others) who suffer under the delusion that there is something socialist about 'National Socialism.'" Eugene Forsey

+ Canadian Forum 21:250 N '41 1600w

Reviewed by Walter Hausdorfer

Library J 66:731 S 1 '41 90w

"In 'The Structure of the Nazi Economy' Maxine Y. Sweetz has attempted to provide a comprehensive picture of the Nazi economy at work. The actual achievement, however, falls far short of the aim in three respects. First, the exposition is too heavy-going for the non-professional public. Secondly, Dr. Sweetz goes over much ground that has already been covered at least as competently by other authors. . . Finally, Dr. Sweetz's interpretation of the economic development of the Third Reich suffers from leaning too heavily on the point of view of the German Social Democrats." Thomas Reville

Nation 154:72 Ja 17 '42 180w

Reviewed by P. L. Gamble

Springf'd Republican p6 Ja 13 '42 440w

SWIFT, EMERSON HOWLAND. Hagia Sophia. 265p il pl $10 Columbia univ. press

726 Constantinople. St Sophia (mosque)

41-1549

A monograph on the structure and details of a famous Byzantine church, the church of Hagia Sophia at Constantinople. "Although the present volume was designed primarily for the specialist . . . the contents have been so arranged that discussion of matters of broader scope and least technical complexity may be found in the first few chapters. In these are grouped a general description of the church, a summary of its history, a discussion of its design and of the aesthetic theories advanced to explain its composition, and an account of its structure and decoration. The remaining chapters are devoted to a detailed study of the church from ground floor to dome, to its adjuncts, to its furnishings, and to the subordinate structures around it." (Pref) Index.

"A large number of drawings in the text and 46 full-page plates give visual completeness to Professor Swift's descriptions and make this de luxe volume a thing of beauty worthy of its theme." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 58:186 F 5 '41 650w

Reviewed by H. A. Reinhold

Commonweal 33:378 Ja 31 '41 430w

"Minor criticisms aside this book is a truly great accomplishment and a much-needed model of what scholarly publication ought to be. In these days of mass production, it is most encouraging to have published such a record of significant research, so distinguished for its quality." H. R. Willoughby

+ J Religion 21:470 O '41 1000w

"Mr. Swift's book will remain the standard treatise on Santa Sophia (as it is more commonly known to us), and is of greatest value to all students of Byzantine architecture. The typography is not impeccable—the use of a heavy lettre de somme on title page and in heads making for a spotty appearance, but the format is clear and well organized." C. P. Rollins

+ Sat R of Lit 23:12 Ja 25 '41 390w

Times [London] Lit Sup p356 J1 26 '41 410w

SWINNERTON, FRANK ARTHUR. The fortunate lady. 371p $2.50 Doubleday [9s 6d Hutchinson]

(W) 41-18118

The life story of a good and gentle English woman, the one pleasant and normal member of a family of five. Parallel to Catherine's story, runs that of Lucien Oldbury, a warped and unhappy individual, whose main object in life was to become wealthy. After years of acquaintance, the gentle Catherine turned to Lucien for help when she went blind, and the last years of their lives were spent together in a rarely happy marriage. The time is the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries.

Booklist 38:53 O 15 '41

"Obviously writing a novel in the Victorian pattern, Mr. Swinnerton is lavish with character and incident. In the main his scenes are developed with emphasis on the neurotic and macabre. 'The Fortunate Lady' is a strangely un-modern book, and for that reason has a certain fascination. It leaves one with the feeling that it should be read by gas light." Rose Feld

+ Books p3 S 7 '41 600w

"In contrast to many of the slight and superficial novels gracing the best-seller lists, this work of a deeply reflective intelligence and an unmistakable virtuosity will not readily be forgotten by readers discriminating enough to weigh its merits." Lucile Harrington

+ Commonweal 34:571 O 3 '41 360w

"Should be of interest in any collection of fiction." Thelma Brackett

+ Library J 66:731 S 1 '41 70w

"'The Fortunate Lady' is an interesting book, well seen and, of course, well written, but never fully alive. The characters have a Dickensian effect of being cartoons rather than portraits, and though we may follow their various fortunes with eagerness we can never forget that we are reading a work of fiction." J. D. Beresford

+ — Manchester Guardian p3 My 23 '41 400w

"A pretty, intricately manipulated story, remote as a daguerreotype, and guaranteed to leave not a wrinkle on your brow."

New Repub 105:382 S 22 '41 50w

"This new novel by Frank Swinnerton is, in many respects, a remarkable achievement. For one thing, it really escapes out of its own time. It is not only that the novelist lays his scene in England in the last quarter of the nineteenth century but that he actually manages to give the impression that he has not himself lived in the twentieth. Such objectivity is rare, unless you accept the alternative that Mr. Swinnerton has not grown up, which is hard to believe. 'The Fortunate Lady,' in its attitude, psychology and writing, has a decidedly Dickensian flavor. . . Here is a real break for old-fashioned folks." John Cournos

+ N Y Times p7 S 7 '41 750w

"Very romantic and quite incredible."

New Yorker 17:75 S 13 '41 30w

"This seems very strange Swinnerton." Phil Stong

— Sat R of Lit 24:7 S 27 '41 450w

"Mr. Swinnerton has been able to eliminate the feeling that this is merely a novel, set down on paper out of one man's mind. Instead, he has created characters whose human qualities and human problems make them live of themselves."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e S 14 '41 310w

"Mr. Swinnerton's is conscientious and craftsmanlike work. There is no fire in it, nothing of the vision and the gleam, but rather a steady curiosity and a mature and practised sympathy. His new novel, is, perhaps, rather more obviously composed than usual—more synthetic, if one may say so with respect. That is to be expected, no doubt, the times being what they are, though the readiness with which Mr. Swinnerton takes refuge in stock dramatic situations is not the less disappointing. Still, in its unhurried and faintly Trollopian manner 'The Fortunate Lady' is, as it was evidently meant to be, sound enough reading for the most part."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p228 My 10 '41 440w

SZYK, ARTHUR. The new order [cartoons; introd. by Roger W. Straus, Jr]. 38pl $1.50 Putnam

940.549 World war, 1939—Humor, caricatures, etc. Caricatures and cartoons

41-12753

A collection of cartoons on subjects related to the present war. The author is a Polish artist who has been famous for his book illustrations since before the first World war. Some of the cartoons are reproduced in color.

Booklist 38:6 S '41

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 J1 '41

"Americans are likely to find this meat a little strong: it is inspired by such scorn and hatred that we are revolted after the first half-dozen specimens. Imagine twisting the unchangeable words of Our Lord: 'Father, do not forgive them, for they know what they do.' Essentially (and there is some irony in this) Szyk's style is German. . . The very violence of the style makes us understand better the intensity of continental politics."

Commonweal 34:429 Ag 22 '41 100w

"Here is the terrible bestiality of today's aggression, set forth with polished and relentless art. . . Not with the simplicity of caricature but with a medieval sedulousness of detail, a finished perfection, these pictures portray the world's tragedy."

+ N Y Times p9 J1 20 '41 600w

"Not political satire in the ordinary sense but an indictment of the inhumanity of the dictatorships, especially Nazi Germany. Superb draftsmanship, composition, and detail, though the ideas are limited."

+ New Yorker 17:56 J1 19 '41 40w

T

TAFT, HENRY WATERS. Legal miscellanies; six decades of changes and progress. 218p il $3 Macmillan

340.9 Law

41-10207

"The book consists of a series of unrelated essays on various phases of the law. One section is devoted to an outline of procedure in the courts, with a history of various reform movements, and some suggested changes by the author. The antitrust law is dealt with at length, from its inception to the present. . . There is an interesting chapter on women in business and the professions in New York city. . . Other chapters cover old and new methods of title examination and insurance; breach of promise of marriage and alienation of affections; Jewish lawyers in New York; will making, with accounts of some famous wills that failed to work out as the testators intended, and short sketches of some of the leading members of the New York bar." (Springf'd Republican) Index.

Books p37 N 23 '41 90w

"These miscellaneous essays on legal topics have a groundwork of profound knowledge of the law but in form and style they seem the charming and informing conversation of a wise old lawyer rather than papers prepared for a bar association."

+ Christian Century 58:887 J1 9 '41 60w

Reviewed by M. T. Quigg

N Y Times p8 N 2 '41 360w

"I regret to say that Mr. Taft's fellow-lawyers will constitute his chief audience on this occasion, for the author's favorite theme is admittedly a special one. My regret derives from the fact that there is in Mr. Taft's work a reasonableness of thought and a precision of expression that are in themselves admirable. Civilized prose is not yet a surplus commodity. Non-lawyers who combine an interest in the general field of law with a fondness for expository writing of a superior order will perhaps afford Mr. Taft a second audience. At least, one hopes so." J. R. Parker

+ Sat R of Lit 24:12 J1 5 '41 600w

"The author's presentation of his material is nontechnical, and the book may be read to advantage by lawyers and laymen alike. An exhaustive index is provided."

+ Springfield Republican p12 J1 4 '41 480w

TAGGARD, ERNESTINE, ed. See Scholastic (periodical). Here we are

TAINTOR, SARAH AUGUSTA, and MONRO, KATE M. English for American youth. (Am. youth ser) 550p il $1.68 Macmillan

808 English language—Composition and exercises (W) 40-30681

"The ultimate objective of this text is to fit the pupil for life activities. Intended for the use of pupils on an age level above the junior-high-school grades, and especially for persons of the non-academic type." (School & Society) Contents: Entering high school; Expressing yourself correctly; Adding to your interests; Using books, magazines, and newspapers; Looking toward your lifework. Index.

"An appealing volume on language activities designed in content and appearance to win the enthusiasm of skeptical adolescents. All the chapters are concentrated upon real life-problems and interests of youth—upon school life, conversing, writing friendly letters, talking and reading about sports, hobbies, motion pictures, using the dictionary and the library, reading the newspaper, and thinking about one's life-work."

English J 29:857 D '40 60w

School & Society 52:208 S 14 '40 40w

"The outstanding characteristics of this text for senior high students is its definitely practical nature. . . . Pertinently illustrated with good photographs."

+ School Management & School Supply & Equipment News 10:154 Ja '41 130w

TALLMADGE, THOMAS EDDY. Architecture in old Chicago [introd. by Charles Collins]. 218p pl $3 Univ. of Chicago press

720.97731 Architecture—Chicago 41-51761

This last book by the author of Story of Architecture in America (Book Review Digest, 1936) relates the history of the building and rebuilding of Chicago from the days of the construction of old Fort Dearborn, in the early 1800's, to the World's Fair of 1893. In addition to its architectural history the book also contains an informal general history of Chicago's settlement and growth. Illustrated with reproductions of contemporary prints and photographs. Index.

Booklist 37:434 My 15 '41

"In addition to its historical and technical value, this book is interesting because of its appreciation of human effort and purposes. The biographical introduction by Charles Collins indicates why this is so; Mr. Tallmadge himself was a man of wide interests and warm sympathies." W. R. Agard

+ Books p21 Ag 24 '41 460w

"Tallmadge was doubly distinguished, for his work as a practicing architect and for his books on the history of architecture. His sudden and untimely death last year prevented the intended development of the present work into a complete history of Chicago's architecture. Yet as it stands it is complete within its limits. . . . It will interest not only architects but laymen as well."

+ Christian Century 58:464 Ap 2 '41 150w

TALMADGE, IRVING DEWITT, ed. Whose revolution? a study of the future course of liberalism in the United States, by Roger Baldwin [and others]. 296p $2.50 Howell, Soskin

320.4 Political science. Liberalism. U.S.—Politics and government 41-24543

In this symposium a group of American self-styled "liberals" review the past history of liberalism, socialism, communism and attempt a blue print for the future. Contents: Two revolutions, by Hans Kohn; The technology of democracy, by A. M. Bingham; Communism and the American intellectuals, by Granville Hicks; When liberalism went totalitarian, by Eugene Lyons; Faith and the future, by Malcolm Cowley; Liberalism and the united front, by R. N. Baldwin; Is democracy possible? by James Burnham; The U.S. and the U.S.S.R., by B. D. Wolfe; The need still is: a new social order, by Lewis Corey; Towards a tolerable society, by John Chamberlain.

Reviewed by J. N. Vaughan

Commonweal 35:74 N 7 '41 1000w

"A most thoughtful reevaluation of liberalism and democracy in a changing world." J. B. Fogg

+ Library J 66:841 O 1 '41 140w

"The eminence and undoubted ability of the several authors of this symposium hardly compensate for its collective weakness, for it achieves little more unity of plan or purpose than any good monthly magazine to be had at one-tenth the cost." Reinhold Niebuhr

Nation 153:403 O 25 '41 850w

TAMAGNA, FRANK M. Italy's interests and policies in the Far East. 91p $1 Inst. of Pacific relations. Am. council

327.45 Italy—Relations (general) with the East (Far East). East (Far East)—Relations (general) with Italy 41-8529

"From a careful analysis of Italian trade with Japan, China, Manchoukuo, British Malaya, the Netherlands Indies, Thailand, French Indo-China and the Philippines, Dr. Tamagna draws the conclusions that Italy depends on southeast Asia for the supply of strategic raw materials, but that the Far East is not dependent upon Italy for any specific commodity or product. Hence, it is perhaps to be expected that commercial relations between Italy and Japan will be increasingly dependent upon political considerations. Dr. Tamagna is Instructor in Economics at Xavier University, Cincinnati, at present on leave of absence." (Publisher's note) Index.

Reviewed by P. H. Clyde

Am Pol Sci R 35:816 Ag '41 110w

"A careful account of Italy's political and economic relations since 1918 with China, Japan, and the countries of southeastern Asia." L. A. Mills

+ Ann Am Acad 217:184 S '41 360w

Booklist 37:493 Je 15 '41

Christian Science Monitor p18 Ag 11 '41 60w

Reviewed by C. H. Gratton

New Repub 105:92 J1 21 '41 80w

TANGERMAN, ELMER JOHN. Design and figure carving. (Whitlsey house publication) 289p il $4 (21s) McGraw

736 Wood carving 40-8364

"This book illustrates and details hundreds of design and figure elements for whittlers and wood carvers including over 1300 individual sketches and photographs. The text progresses naturally from the simplest design units, executed with a single tool, to the most elaborate, requiring a variety of tools. The figure carving portion begins similarly with the carving of such elements as the hands and feet, then progresses naturally to the carving of the figure in action, and the design and carving of caricatures, portrait busts and folk pieces. Supplementary chapters discuss the principles of design, figure proportions, carving styles or 'periods,' folk carving, grotesques, and the shaping of animal or bird figures." (School Arts) Bibliography. Index.

TANGERMAN, E. J.—Continued

Booklist 36:379 Je 1 '40

Pratt p9 autumn '41

"A valuable book to all who are interested in carving," either of an elementary or advanced nature.

+ School Arts 40:8a Mr '41 180w

TANSILL, CHARLES CALLAN. The foreign policy of Thomas F. Bayard, 1885-1897. 800p il $5 Fordham univ. press

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations. Bayard, Thomas Francis 41-2416

"This definitive study presents a detailed account of the activity of our Secretary of State under Cleveland's first administration, 1883-1887, and a somewhat less detailed but nevertheless decidedly complete record of Mr. Bayard's accomplishments as Ambassador to England during Cleveland's second administration, 1893-1897." Cath World

"The author has been minute in his investigations, and what he has written covers the entire field. He has made a distinct and authoritative contribution to our history." J. B. Moore

+ Am Hist R 46:946 Jl '41 1100w

"For scholars in this field, Dr. Tansill's book is invaluable." C. M. Frasure

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:1008 O '41 300w

"Although Professor Tansill's book will not be without interest for the lay reader, it will have greatest appeal to close students of diplomatic history. The scholarly use which has been made of the heretofore unused Bayard Papers, the careful documentation, and the scrupulous avoidance of generalizations, will appeal much more to the latter than to the former. In the reviewer's judgment, the volume will stand as the definitive work on the foreign policy of Bayard." C. A. Riches

+ Ann Am Acad 216:192 Jl '41 500w

"Professor Tansill is well known to all specialists in the field of diplomatic history, and has already put them much in his debt. He does so once again in this detailed and well documented study which runs to nearly 800 pages. It is, perhaps, not for the reviewer, who has been pretty voluminous himself, to cast the first stone in commenting on the length of this book. Yet he cannot help asking as much in the spirit of repentance as in criticism, whether the time has not come for the writing of diplomatic history in less meticulous detail. There is an increasing interest in the subject, and a wider public ready to read such history. That interest and that public should be effectively fed by scholars such as Professor Tansill." Dexter Perkins

+ Books p12 My 25 '41 650w

Reviewed by R. S. Longley

Canadian Hist R 22:207 Je '41 550w

"A volume which should be in every library concerned with American diplomacy." P. K.

+ Cath World 153:247 My '41 700w

"This handsomely printed, well-written and scholarly volume will reward both students of American history and readers intent on discovering the bases of an Anglo-American community. It is a major contribution to the history of American foreign policy. It is also a monument to one of America's independent statesmen, who, for good or ill, was 'glad to set his foot in Old England, and . . . to breathe the free air of liberty he breathed at home.'" G. B. Young

+ N Y Times p16 Mr 23 '41 950w

TARKINGTON, BOOTH. The fighting Littles. 304p $2 Doubleday

(W) 41-21285

As in Seventeen and the Penrod stories the author once more takes up the battle between youth and its parents. This picture of the revolt against authority shows the effects of the New Deal and Hitlerism upon Mr Little, who was a "nice, kind man" before their advent. Because he cannot do anything about the New Deal, he does try to be the head of his own household, with little success and much conflict.

Booklist 38:114 D 1 '41

"Mr. Tarkington enjoys poking fun at them all; the New Deal, traveling pinks, income taxes, underprivileged business men, conceited youngsters who tell you how to run your business. For his own amusement he has been lavish with arresting adverbs, such as 'chucklingly,' 'languishingly,' 'loungingly,' and has invented an ingratiating new line of near profanity." Page Cooper

+ Books p2 O 26 '41 500w

Christian Science Monitor p12 N 29 '41

"Mr. Tarkington's teen-age children are real and recognizable. All their problems are on the light and funny side. They shoot sky rockets from the roof but suffer only a burnt ear. They smash cars but come out with only bruises and bent fenders. They fall in love but no hearts are broken or even bent. They live in a lively, comfortable world Mr. Tarkington has made for them. And their adventures in it are mighty amusing, at times riotously funny." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p5 N 2 '41 750w

New Yorker 17:90 N 1 '41 30w

"All the Tarkington patterns are used again with accustomed skill in this novel. Even the double talk so successful in 'Seventeen' appears, this time as part of Ripley Little's inadequate equipment for self-expression when life and his children become too much for him. . . While Mr Tarkington is usually willing to regard the manifestations of youth with a sort of wistful patience, he never wholly emerges from the generation of Mr Ripley Little. Perhaps that is why 'The Fighting Littles' is somewhat dated and the author's approach has become grandfatherly as well as parental. . . 'The Fighting Littles' is not without its amusement value despite its anachronisms. Booth Tarkington is a good story teller and, if only for the hilarious trip to Maine, will start a lot of chuckles at a time when they are welcome indeed."

+ Spring'd Republican p7e O 26 '41 360w

Wis Lib Bul 37:202 D '41

Reviewed by Robert Littell

Yale R n s 31:xii winter '42 80w

TARKINGTON, BOOTH. The heritage of Hatcher Ide. 310p $2 Doubleday

(W) 41-2817

The scene is a midwestern city during the depression years, when life was a struggle to keep up appearances, even among the "best people." Hatcher Ide came home from school and college, perfectly confident that a place would be found for him in the firm established by his grandfather. Gradually the truth dawned upon him that the business was rocked to its foundation by the impact of the depression. The story describes young Hatcher's mistakes, and his courage, as he fights his way thru a disillusioning love affair and a near tragedy to the comparative safety of a more promising outlook.

Reviewed by Edward Weeks

Atlantic Ap '41 220w

"'The Heritage of Hatcher Ide' moves along with the competent briskness of a practiced novelist. It has some amusing scenes and a few that are poignant. When some future critic comes upon it in the long line of Mr. Tarkington's writing, he may find an explanation in its first copyright date, 1940. It comes out in 1941 and already its eulogies and laments seem dated." Mary Ross

Books p8 F 23 '41 650w

"A new novel by Booth Tarkington is always an occasion for rejoicing and the latest one to come from his pen is worthy of an extra cheer. For it is more than ever a story of today in every respect. All the characters are faced with the troubles of our own times, the young and the middle aged, the rich and the poor alike, all face the world in this year of 1941 even as you and I and millions of others throughout the country. It is a story of the Middle West just because Mr. Tarkington is himself a Middle Westerner but it is universal in its appeal and application. It is a story of people and conditions rather than places." F. S. Ambrose

+ Boston Transcript p1 Mr 8 '41 600w

"This is a good story from a master of his craft and adds another portrait to the engaging Tarkington gallery in the person of Hatcher Ide, an older Penrod."

+ Cath World 153:253 My '41 150w

Christian Science Monitor p10 Mr 29 '41 360w

Reviewed by E. S. Brown
Library J 66:80 Ja 15 '41 120w

Reviewed by Charles Marriott
Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 8 '41 70w

Reviewed by L. M. Field
N Y Times p6 F 23 '41 850w

"Mr. Tarkington's economics are oversimplified and his stuttering, love-sick young man sounds a trifle dated. Probably it's a mistake to mix the two."

New Yorker 17:83 F 22 '41 100w

Pratt p11 spring '41

"The Heritage of Hatcher Ide,' necessarily assumes a peculiar significance in the light of what has gone before, but it does not need the bolstering of reputation. From the point of view of craftsmanship, very few novelists can match it, for Mr. Tarkington's experience has only added to his skill, without an aftermath of perfunctory weariness. His new book speaks as eloquently of today as 'The Gentleman from Indiana' did of its own period. It has the wisdom of an older man, but also the zest for life and the good nature of a man who has never aged." J. P. Marquand

+ Sat R of Lit 23:7 Mr 1 '41 1400w

Reviewed by John Hampson
Spec 168:218 Ag 29 '41 130w

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 9 '41 470w

Times [London] Lit Sup p405 Ag 23 '41 360w

TARSHIS, MRS ELIZABETH (KENT). The village that learned to read; il. by Harold Haydon. 160p $2 Houghton

Children in Mexico 41-8636

Pedro, a little Mexican boy, was determined to be a bullfighter when he grew up, so he could not see the necessity of learning to read. The other boys and girls in the new government school finally ganged up on him, and in the end Pedro gave in and learned to read. Then there was a big fiesta, with the governor on hand to award prizes.

Booklist 37:516 Jl 1 '41

"Pages and print are large; the pictures, which are many, were made on the spot. The tone of both pictures and story is so happy that it makes an excellent 'good neighbor' book." M. L. Becker

+ Books p5 Je 8 '41 350w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p12 Je 30 '41 110w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '41

"Mrs. Tarshis shows a real knowledge of boys and their point of view, much alike wherever they may chance to live. But the flavor of Mexican life seems to lie behind this simple story of a wise teacher, a group of natural children, and a young rebel who found good reason to change his mind." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:291 Jl '41 60w

"School and public libraries will want to add 'The Village That Learned to Read' to their shelves, and as it is a book that can be read with pleasure and profit more than once, boys and girls will enjoy owning it themselves. For readers 9 to 12." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 Ag 24 '41 450w

TATE, ALLEN. Reason in madness; critical essays. 230p $2.50 Putnam

804 Literature—History and criticism. Criticism 41-6601

"Book reviews, addresses, and critical essays, in several of which the author asserts the claims of 'literature as knowledge' and defends it against the encroachments of applied science." (New Yorker) Contents: The present function of criticism; Literature as knowledge; Tension in poetry; Understanding modern poetry; Miss Emily and the bibliographer; Hardy's philosophic metaphors; Narcissus as narcissus; Procrustes and the poets; Nine poets: 1937; The function of the critical quarterly; Liberalism and tradition; What is a traditional society?

Reviewed by Albert Guerard
Books p4 Je 1 '41 1250w

Reviewed by J. G. Brunini
Commonweal 34:428 Ag 22 '41 490w

"The style will please anyone: few people write English with so much strength, ease, and wit. . . . Mr. Tate's criticism of critics—Arnold, Coleridge, Richards, Daiches—is sound, brilliant, and crushing; he altogether avoids the filial relaxation of standards that is our customary tribute to the distinguished dead." Randall Jarrell

+ Nation 153:75 Jl 26 '41 900w

"Mr. Tate is an indispensable critic of the worst excesses of scientific arrogance; there is no doubt of his value as an apologist for poetry; but it is only in the particular application of his intelligence that we can believe in him. So far, his criticism of poetry is not distinguishable from that of a reviewer's." P. M. Jack

+ — N Y Times p10 N 23 '41 1600w

"Fruitful and distinguished writing, occasionally very technical."

+ New Yorker 17:87 Ap 26 '41 60w

"The critical tone of these valuable pages is lacking in generosity. Granted that a critic must be a sceptic, he must not be a misanthrope. If indignant, he must be savage in his indignation, not superior. Yet though Mr. Tate hints at a number of real admirations, he more often chills us with tight-lipped understatements. He picks up an offending quotation with rubber gloves and a pair of tongs, denying all solidarity with his opponents. It is not surprising that he also denies solidarity with our middle-class civilization, imagining an aristocracy respectful of art in the past, and even preferring 'frank barbarism'—also imaginary—wherever he thinks he has found it in the present." Jacques Barzun

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:7 My 31 '41 950w

TAX POLICY LEAGUE, Inc. Property taxes, by Leo Day Woodworth [and others] symposium conducted by the League, Dec. 27-29, 1939, in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. 288p $2.50 The league, 907 Broadway, N.Y.

336.22 Taxation—U.S. Real property 40-12338

"The papers in the book are put into five parts: trends in property taxation; classified property taxes; justification of the property tax; alternative bases for real estate taxation; and administrative problems of property taxation." Columbia Law R

TAX POLICY LEAGUE—Continued

"As is often true of symposia, the articles are not of uniform merit; but the book is a valuable source of stimulating ideas, illustrative materials, and clash of opinion." H. M. Groves

+ Am Pol Sci R 34:1208 D '40 220w

"The book, as a whole, is competently written by competent participants and students in the field. It is not and does not purport to be either an authoritative or a legal work, although there is much in it that will interest lawyers. Its chief value will lie in the interest of the scientific study of a neglected field which it may stimulate." F. B. Murdoch

+ Columbia Law R 41:183 Ja '41 1950w

"To the man whose time must be budgeted, the volume, written in nontechnical language, facilitates a convenient introduction to a tax type which in all likelihood impinges heavily upon his affairs." P. H. Wueller

+ Harvard Business R 19:258 winter '41 110w

Harvard Law R 54:1268 My '41 170w

TAYLOR, ALRUTHEUS AMBUSH. The Negro in Tennessee, 1865-1880. 306p $3 Associated pubs.

325.26 Negroes—Tennessee 41-5247

"The author, professor of history and dean of the college of liberal arts in Fisk University, presents a thorough and scholarly study of the condition of the Negroes of Tennessee at the close of the Civil War and their efforts to win a place for themselves in the economic and political life of the state during the subsequent fifteen years." Christian Century

Reviewed by J. W. Patton

Am Hist R 47:377 Ja '42 550w

"From the point of view of interpretation, the book is poorly written; but one will find that Dr. Taylor has presented, like most historians, an abundance of cold, well-related facts which in this particular case represent a real contribution to the literature." George Snowden

+ Ann Am Acad 217:222 S '41 550w

"It is a dramatic story and a valuable chapter in the history of reconstruction."

+ Christian Century 58:427 Mr 26 '41 50w

"It is unfortunate that in so competent a work as this the author did not see fit to summarize the major trends which could be noted during the period. A final chapter, too, might have been written to indicate just how present race problems in a democratic society stem from conflicts of the past." W. P. Sears, Jr.

+ Churchman 155:21 Ag '41 190w

Reviewed by George Streater

Commonweal 34:138 My 30 '41 550w

Living Age 360:598 Ag '41 120w

Springf'd Republican p7e JI 27 '41 70w

Reviewed by Alain Locke

Survey 77:343 N '41 120w

TAYLOR, DEEMS. Walt Disney's Fantasia; with a foreword by Leopold Stokowski. 158p il $3.75 Simon & Schuster

782.9 Disney, Walt—Fantasia. Music—Analysis, interpretation, appreciation 41-832

Tells the story behind the making of the film, Fantasia, and narrates in original form the plots of the musical compositions used in the film. Illustrated with colored pictures. For adults.

"This is supposed to be the first Disney book for adults, but 'adults' should be defined. The book is really a series of program notes on program notes, for Mr. Taylor does little more than retell the stories that are told so much better in the film itself. Beautifully illustrated with colored pictures from the film, with extra sketches and line drawings of the characters, and with musical phrases used decoratively, it makes an excellent souvenir of the Disney opus." P. T. Hartung

+ Commonweal 33:357 Ja 24 '41 280w

"As daring an experiment in bookmaking as the film is in the arts of music and design."

New Yorker 16:124 D 7 '40 50w

"The volume makes a good souvenir of the production and is of special value for the Disney colored pictures, many of which in this film represent his finest achievement in colors. Some also are in black and white."

Springf'd Republican p10 D 20 '40 330w

TAYLOR, GEORGE E. The struggle for north China. 250p map $2 Inst. of Pacific relations. Am. council

951 China—History. China—Politics and government. Japanese in China 41-51528

"[In this book there is] presented a detailed account of the widely advertised puppet government at Peking for several years known as the 'Provisional government of China,' which was established in December 1937, with its 'Siamese twin,' the Hsin Min Hui, [and also] what constitutes the unique distinction of the work, great attention is paid to the rival Border Government of Hopeh, Shansi, and Chahar, inaugurated at Fuping in western Shansi. . . . Much has been reported of the Eighth Route Army and the guerrilla warfare in northern China since midsummer of 1937. Comparatively little has come out concerning the factors, the agents, and the agencies lying back of these units. With these Mr. Taylor deals with meticulous care, likewise with the extremely complicated and perennially complicating factors of foreign rights and interests in China." Ann Am Acad

Reviewed by G. N. Steiger

Am Pol Sci R 35:595 Je '41 350w

"The Struggle for North China is the most exhaustive, discriminating, and objective analysis of the impact of Nipponese militarists and carpetbaggers upon the area mentioned that has yet appeared." H. F. MacNair

+ Ann Am Acad 215:185 My '41 400w

Booklist 37:326 Mr 15 '41

Christian Science Monitor p18 Ag 11 '41 70w

Reviewed by C. H. Grattan

New Repub 105:92 JI 21 '41 330w

"This volume presents a wealth of fact regarding the Japanese-sponsored Provisional Government, which the author was able to study on the spot while serving as Professor of Political Science at Yenching University. At the same time it presents one of the most cogent and fascinating analyses of the problem of puppet government which has yet appeared. The resulting synthesis of observation and interpretation is a first-rate achievement." J. K. Fairbank

+ Pacific Affairs 14:226 Je '41 1500w

Reviewed by A. P. Ludwig

Social Educ 5:628 D '41 1050w

TAYLOR, MRS KATHRYN S., and GREGG, MRS EDITH W. Winter flowers in the sun-heated pit. 294p il $3.50 Scribner

635.982 Greenhouses. Floriculture 41-6201

Recounts the authors' experiences with a new kind of greenhouse, which consists of a pit sunk at least four feet below the surface, a glassed-over roof, and insulated ends and sides. The building costs very little, and there is no heating problem, the heat being supplied by the sun's rays on the glass roof. The pit greenhouse can be either a separate building or attached to another building. Includes plans, bibliography, and index.

Booklist 37:434 My 15 '41

"The lean-to greenhouse is a valuable supplement to a pit and, although immensely popular and valuable as a sort of garden brought indoors there is little modern writing on the subject. . . Throughout the book, emphasis is placed upon simple and practical methods. The entire work bears the stamp of actual experience. Undoubtedly, the book will serve as a strong stimulant to pit culture and will make the lean-to greenhouse more popular. The book is the most valuable work of its kind that has appeared in many years. Any gardener with the least trace of ambition should not fail to add it to his book-shelf." W. H. Clark

+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 29 '41 440w
Wis Lib Bul 37:72 Ap '41

TAYLOR, PHOEBE ATWOOD (ALICE TILTON, pseud). The hollow chest. 284p $2 Norton 41-13507

Detective story.

Booklist 38:36 O 1 '41

"You couldn't ask for a better pick-me-up than this criminoous comedy by one Alice Tilton, rumored along the mystery grapevine to be none other than Phoebe Atwood Taylor in disguise. Simply stuffed with good fun, a slick plot and general mystery treats, it got us through a superheated afternoon in fine shape and left us with the feeling that Phoebe Atwood Taylor, if it is indeed she, may well be classed by posterity as the most important mystifier of her time on the strength of her Asey Mayo and Leonidas Witherall stories, of which latter group this is a shining example." Will Cuppy

+ Books p10 Ag 3 '41 250w

"This opus achieves the fantastic effect of alcoholic farce without any recourse to alcohol. But it most closely resembles an Asey Mayo story gone quite mad." Kay Irvin

N Y Times p13 Ag 3 '41 160w

"Funny in spots, forced and tiresome in others. Moves at breakneck pace from extravagance to incredibility and back again. For Witherall fans."

Sat R of Lit 24:16 Ag 2 '41 40w

"The Hollow Chest" has the what's-that-again wackiness of Leonidas's earlier misadventures, the fun and excitement that set apart her tales of well-bred folk breaking their shins on fell circumstances. . . An excellent mad-and-merry thriller."

+ Springfd Republican p7e Jl 27 '41 170w

TAYLOR, PHOEBE ATWOOD (ALICE TILTON, pseud). The perennial boarder. 288p $2 Norton 41-7509

Detective story.

Booklist 37:465 Je 1 '41

"As for the story itself, if it isn't darned near the best of all the Asey Mayo series we'll eat it with a mess of clam fritters fried by Jennie Mayo. . . A tale herewith highly recommended to all and sundry as the best spring tonic and general pick-me-up in sight, plumb full of Taylorism in every direction and sure-fire entertainment on every count." Will Cuppy

+ Books p14 Ap 27 '41 380w

Reviewed by Mort. Post

New Repub 104:674 My 12 '41 20w

"Asey Mayo's Cape Cod dialect seems to grow more ungrammatical with each succeeding book. Can't something be done about that?" Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p20 My 4 '41 160w

"Mystery holds up well and story exhibits all Mayo virtues—although all concerned take tragedy rather lightly. Good fun."

+ Sat R of Lit 23:20 My 3 '41 40w

"The Perennial Boarder" is as gay and exciting as the previous Taylor mysteries, which is really all that needs to be said." Springfd Republican p7e Je 8 '41 170w
Time 37:100 Je 9 '41 30w

TEGGART, FREDERICK JOHN. Theory and processes of history. 323p $3.50 Univ. of Calif. [21s Cambridge]

907 History—Historiography. History—Philosophy 41-16586

"Of the two books included in this volume, the first, entitled Theory of History, was originally published by the Yale University Press in 1925 [Book Review Digest, 1926]; the second, The Processes of History, was likewise issued by the Yale University Press, but in 1918 [Book Review Digest, 1918]. The two are now reprinted without changes other than occasional revisions of phraseology and alterations of punctuation and the elimination of a few references to what were, at the respective dates of writing, current events." (Pref) Index.

Reviewed by Howard Becker

Am Soc R 6:733 O '41 1700w

Social Studies 32:335 N '41 40w

TEMPLE, WILLIAM abp. of YORK. Hope of a new world. 125p $1.35 Macmillan [3s 6d Student]

230 Christianity

"The title 'The Hope of a New World' originally belonged to six broadcast talks given by the Archbishop of York during the past autumn [1940]. After appearing in the Listener they are now published in book-form together with a number of addresses and sermons and an essay, all bearing on the same subject. The Archbishop sees the fundamental defect of our national life in the twentieth century as the attempt to divorce civilization from Christianity." Times [London] Lit Sup

Reviewed by A. L. Byron-Curtiss

Churchman 155:20 S 1 '41 230w

"It is a little book, only 125 pages, but the author delivers a lot of sage philosophy permeated with religion, or vice versa, if one prefers, that is worth more than what is often found in more pretentious volumes."

+ Springfd Republican p10 O 10 '41 290w

Times [London] Lit Sup p4 Ja 4 '41 430w

TEMPSKI, ARMINE VON (MRS A. L. BALL). Judy of the Islands; a story of the South seas; il. by Carl Burger. 279p $2 Dodd 41-16069

After the explosion of the Pacific liner, on which Judy and her mother were traveling to Australia, the two were separated. Judy was rescued when she had been adrift alone four days in a lifeboat, but her mother was apparently lost. Judy's rescuer was Captain Bill, a kindly copra trader, and the girl was enchanted with the natives and the life on the atolls where they traded. A stiff humorless grandmother tried to take Judy back to Sidney with her, but Judy elected to stay with Captain Bill. Then after long searching Judy's mother was found, and peace was made all around.

"The author loves this part of the world and expresses her affection for it with unaffected sincerity; this, as much as the actual adventure, gives the story a romantic attraction to girls somewhat younger than those who read her 'Pam of Paradise Ranch.'" M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 S 7 '41 280w

"One of the best stories of the year." E. V. Wyatt

+ Cath World 154:381 D '41 70w

TEMPSKI, ARMINE VON—Continued

"A good adventure story for girls, with a background that gives a very good and colorful description of the South Sea islands and their customs. Recommended for ages eleven to fourteen." Thais Dudley

+ Library J 66:798 S 15 '41 110w

TENGGREN, GUSTAF, II. See New illustrated book of favorite hymns

TENNANT, KYLIE (MRS LEWIS CHARLES RODD). The battlers. 405p $2.50 Macmillan [9s 6d Gollancz]

41-11199

"A novel about Australian hoboos, migrant laborers who follow the fruit crops or any other job from place to place and, when there are no jobs, live on dole rations or on what they can beg or steal." New Yorker

"Unlike Mr. Steinbeck in 'The Grapes of Wrath,' Miss Tennant does not seem to have any special objective in writing her book. She writes of 'The Battlers' because they are the people she is interested in, and she likes them. She does not attempt to stir the reader to indignation or pity for the migrant workers as a whole group, but rather to enlist his sympathy for her favorite characters as individuals. She is not a crusader, and the social problems which the book touches on are merely incidental. She remains throughout an amused though wholly sympathetic onlooker. Although in actual subject matter, 'The Battlers' closely parallels 'The Grapes of Wrath,' there is no cause pleaded in it nor was there any such intention. It is simply a story, and, as such, a good one." Barbara Woolcott

+ Books p6 Ag 10 '41 500w

"Described as 'a sort of Australian Grapes of Wrath,' it does have a degree of vigor, the writing is competent, and it deals with the experiences of a queerly assorted and casually collected group of migrant workers, but the comparison does it more than justice."

Christian Century 58:985 Ag 6 '41 40w

"The story runs fairly well, but it is a series of incidents or pictures rather than a plot. These pictures show the wanderings, struggles, intrigues and abundant wrong-doings of a group of destitutes in the Australian bush. Here is a combination of the most unusual events happening to the most original characters in the strangest setting the American fiction audience is likely to be offered again for quite some time, if that is what you are looking for." Lionel Bridge

Commonweal 34:595 O 10 '41 550w

"None of it is very exciting. All of it is sound and probable and different enough as a window on a kind of living to make it one of those familiar and companionable books you are always getting around to finish." Otis Ferguson

+ New Repub 105:259 Ag 25 '41 300w

"Even a really bad novel about Australia might be acceptable if it gave a truthful picture of local conditions, but The Battlers is not a bad novel. It is clumsily written, perhaps, and spoilt in places by a feminine coyness about bad language, but it is sincere in feeling all through, and above all its subject-matter is new and extremely interesting."

+ New Statesman & Nation 21:90 Ja 25 '41 250w

"There are enough stories in 'The Battlers' to have filled a novel twice the size in the hands of a less concise, less artistic writer. And there is the curious affection aroused in us for characters as unglamorous and devoid of showmanship as they are genuine. It is a book whose outstanding feature is the sort of strength that compels admiration." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p6 Ag 10 '41 700w

"Picturesque, amusing, and interesting, both because the locale is strange and the people are real."

+ New Yorker 17:58 Ag 9 '41 50w

"It is not a great book but certainly a most appealing one, because there is humor in it and a bitter realism, tragedy and love, warmth and cruelty, and a sensitive conception of a peculiar form of life." Klaus Lambrecht

+ Sat R of Lit 24:7 Ag 9 '41 450w

"A refreshing book, without much thought, it is true, but which seems to come straight from life, with no smell of the study or of the lamp." Bonamy Dobrée

+ Spec 166:72 Ja 17 '41 420w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 17 '41 650w

"The narrative never loses its air of complete authenticity. And for the first quarter of the book or so one is fascinated by the types and conditions thus revealed. After that, however, one begins to look for something more, something to give pattern and significance of other than the obvious kind to this procession. It is not often to be found."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p5 Ja 4 '41 550w

Reviewed by Robert Littell

Yale R n s 30:xiv autumn '41 270w

TERRELL, MRS MARY (CHURCH). A colored woman in a white world. 437p $2.50 Randsell

B or 92

40-34942

The colored woman who here tells the story of her life, was educated at Oberlin and in Paris and Berlin. As a teacher in Washington she taught Latin and German, later married a lawyer who was appointed a judge by President Theodore Roosevelt. She has lectured in many cities of the United States and served on committees of organizations working for the advancement of her race. Index.

Reviewed by Lewis Gannett

Boston Transcript p11 D 11 '40 100w

"It is a notable story of a notable life. . . Such a book helps white Americans to be humble in their pride, and to know their country better."

+ Christian Century 57:1346 O 30 '40 90w

TERRY, PAUL WASHINGTON, and SIMS, VERNER MARTIN. They live on the land. 313p il pa $1.50 Univ. of Ala. Bur. of educ. research, University, Ala.

309.1761 Sociology, Rural. Social surveys. South—Social conditions 40-28505

"Conducted by several agencies, including the Tennessee Valley Authority and the Works Progress Administration, this survey of 209 white and Negro families in an open-country area in Alabama presents a range of data which defies brief summarization. Item by item, part by part, the all too-familiar picture emerges: a stable, virile population; a semi-subsistence, one-crop economy (cotton) dominated by tenancy; a simple material culture; and a complex body of folk practices. The chapters start with a history of the area's settlement and then consider, in turn, the people, their economic life, civic activities, health and medical services, homes, churches, schools, how time is spent, the opinions of persons at various age levels, and the quality of leadership." School R

"One of the chief merits of the book is the manner in which details are handled. Facts on many aspects of community life, gathered by the use of schedules, questionnaires, and tests; by informal observation; and by interviews and other procedures, are presented in the study. They are so well integrated, however, that the general outline of the story is never obscured. Little interpretation is included, but the facts are arranged in such a manner that they speak for themselves. The study should, however, be regarded primarily as an excellent collection of source materials." H. G. Richey

+ El School J 41:626 Ap '41 950w

Reviewed by L. A. Cook

School R 49:391 My '41 700w

"This picture of civic life, health, home life, religion, education, leisure, thought, and leadership is highly significant and interesting. Teachers and students who are interested in a candid portrayal of Southern rural society will profit from a perusal of this provocative study." C. McA. Destler

+ Social Educ 5:553 N '41 380w

Social Studies 32:46 Ja '41 20w

THANE, ELSWYTH, pseud. See Beebe, E. T.

THARP, MRS LOUISE HALL. Sixpence for luck; il. by Gertrude Howe. 284p $2 Crowell (W) 41-18717

Connecticut colony in 1752 is the background for this tale for ten to thirteen-year-olds. It describes the adventures of Nathan and Abigail, children of a sea captain, and involves smugglers and buried treasures.

"A lively tale."

+ Christian Century 58:1213 O 1 '41 30w

"The tale is told smoothly but the style lacks distinction. The make-up of the book is beautiful, with its clear print on buff paper and frequent illustrations in sepia wash." Gertrude Andrus

+ Library J 66:909 O 15 '41 80w

Reviewed by Jessie Stanton & E. W. Steele

New Repub 105:837 D 15 '41 30w

Social Studies 32:380 D '41 10w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 30 '41 140w

THAYER, LEE (MRS EMMA REDINGTON [LEE] THAYER). Hallowe'en homicide. 266p $2 Dodd 41-16493

Detective story.

"Oddly lush and melodramatic tale of tortured passions. Wiggat, the comic relief valet, also helps, and the plot is the sort that leads you on and on. More sudden death and some picturesque village atmosphere for good measure." Will Cuppy

+ — Books p10 Ag 31 '41 80w

"'Hallowe'en Homicide' is not a Grade A mystery, but it makes pleasant reading." Isaac Anderson

+ — N Y Times p16 Ag 31 '41 160w

"Rather feverish but neatly plotted, tale of sudden death amongst artists, dress-designers interior decorators and the like. Average."

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:16 Ag 30 '41 40w

"In her latest murder mystery, Lee Thayer has mixed unusually good characterization with action to produce a swiftly paced story likely to baffle any reader to the end. . . The clues, the motives and the holes in Clancy's logic are all there—but only brilliant readers will beat him to the solution."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 24 '41 120w

THAYER, LEE (MRS EMMA REDINGTON [LEE] THAYER). Persons unknown. 263p $2 Dodd 41-1985

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p13 F 2 '41 110w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 F 1 '41 40w

"This is not a Grade A mystery, but it will do for an evening's entertainment." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p16 F 16 '41 120w

"Well-groomed and moderately exhilarating tale of poisoning and greed. Sleuth and valet Wiggat work well enough, but wordage seems excessive."

+ — Sat R of Lit 23:18 F 1 '41 40w

THIELEN, BENEDICT. Stevie. 278p $2 Dial press

41-4629

"A collection of eleven stories—all of them about the various affairs of the same two couples, and most of them turning upon the personality of Stevie. Stevie is a man with a whipsaw tongue, a Philistine self-confidence, and the energy in high jinks of a Legion convention." New Repub

"You have met this foursome in 'The New Yorker,' and now you can chuckle over their escapades in book form. Mr. Thielen presents them with an accurate ear and without apology."

Books p10 Mr 30 '41 160w

"Stevie and his friends are good fiction for the reason that Benedict Thielen knows how to write it. . . It is secondary fiction but easy reading; and it will be a document of value to some great-grandson with glasses and a researcher's interest in how it was with us, beyond the formal histories and headlines, movies and strangled poets." Otis Ferguson

+ New Repub 104:318 Mr 3 '41 360w

"Mr. Thielen is unusual among the satirists of these years in that he seems not too discontented with fairly obvious material. No urge for extreme subtlety pushes him beyond the bounds of acceptance by a large number of readers. His people are unpleasant, but almost any one who has paid much attention to others and has not led too sheltered a life will recognize them." Robert van Gelder

N Y Times p6 F 23 '41 600w

New Yorker 17:84 F 22 '41 20w

THIRD mystery book. 500p $2.50 Farrar

41-20706

Collection of five detective novelettes and one short detective story. Contents: Bermuda grapevine, by M. G. Eberhart; Death on post #7, by Frank Gruber; Farewell party, by Leslie Ford; R: death, by Philip Wylie; The policeman's cape, by David Frome; Bottom deal, by Judson Phillips.

Booklist 38:177 Ja 15 '42

"All in all, this volume is a new item, highly recommended to all fanciers of violent death in its more entertaining forms." Will Cuppy

+ Books p28 N 16 '41 200w

"None of the stories in this volume has previously appeared in book form. By bringing them together here the publishers have provided a six-course banquet for the lover of good detective stories." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p20 N 23 '41 230w

"Good for bedside reading."

+ New Yorker 17:112 N 22 '41 20w

"Six star turn."

Sat R of Lit 24:20 D 13 '41 50w

THIRKELL, MRS ANGELA (MACKAIL). Cheerfulness breaks in. 342p $2.50 Knopf [7s 6d Hamilton, HI]

(W) 41-1947

Light and amusing story of life in an English country town in the early dull period of the war, with evacuees, refugees, war committees, sewing parties, and the rest.

THIRKELL, ANGELA—Continued

Booklist 37:293 Mr 1 '41

Bookmark 2:16 My '41

Reviewed by Isabel Paterson
+ Books p2 F 23 '41 900w

"Laughs in war time are precious. Angela Thirkell, beautiful queen of fictional entertainment, has not lost her light touch or her incomparable flavoring. British mixing bowls may be cracked by bombs, and the stove not what it used to be, yet Thirkell concocts a soufflé as feathery, as delicious, and as fundamentally nourishing as her peaceful ones." O. O.

+ Boston Transcript p1 Mr 1 '41 280w

"We meet many old friends amongst the deftly drawn characters, all rising with a matter of fact nobility to the demands of a country at war. That there are others who seem too inconsequential to matter, who are more foolish than funny, and that it is the serious side of this book we like best, makes us wish that Mrs. Thirkell would write again in the vein of her first work, the charming and artistic Three Houses."

+ Cath World 153:252 My '41 180w

"A novel of the most delicate and unflinching amusement." Harold Hobson

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 D 14 '40 100w

"Light, slight, amusing, closely resembling the earlier books, this will appeal to the seeker for escape, who yet wants to keep pleasantly in touch with England today." J. M. Flexner

+ Library J 66:140 F 1 '41 140w

"There is ample material for Miss Thirkell to entertain us with in her account of how all sorts of different people lived and worked in those comparatively peaceful months that preceded Hitler's invasion of Europe. There is no developing story except for one thread of what is—we are left to infer—a tragically ended love affair, but it is all very cheerful and amusing." J. D. Beresford

+ Manchester Guardian p7 O 11 '40 220w

Reviewed by George Orwell

New Statesman & Nation 20:384 O 19 '40 440w

"Whatever the society function . . . you can depend on everybody being touched up impartially with the same stingingly effective but delicately wielded whiplash. With two exceptions, Southbridge Public School, which is sacrosanct, and the refugees, who are anathema. One might forgive, to some extent, the natural partiality but not the excessive condemnation. On the side of the book where cheerfulness does not break in a far from feeble brief could very surely be held for the children." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p7 Mr 2 '41 750w

New Yorker 17:57 Mr 1 '41 110w

"Why Miss Thirkell should call her new book Cheerfulness Breaks In it is difficult to say, since so long ago she cornered that bright virtue. And here she dispenses it again, as lavishly as ever, though Southbridge School and Northbridge Manor and Barchester Deanery are struggling now through the comedies, farces and domestic upheavals—and a little too through the tears and fears—of 1939-40. The fans will meet a great many old friends here, and a few new ones. And what more need one say?" Kate O'Brien

Spec 165:348 O 4 '40 170w

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 2 '41 500w

"'Cheerfulness Breaks In' is very like the rest of Mrs. Thirkell's books in the matter of construction, types and incident, and is therefore extremely funny, high-spirited, capricious, delicately malicious, and entirely feminine."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p505 O 5 '40 400w

THIS is Greece; as photographed by members of the American school of classical studies at Athens and their friends. 128p map $2.50 Hastings house

914.95 Greece—Pictorial works. Photograph-ic books 41-11312

About two hundred photographs showing splendid ruins and modern engineering works, a child on a pack mule and two women with a lamb, mountains, rivers, ships and harbors. The text consists only of brief captions, many being quotations from Greek literature.

Books p10 S 14 '41 140w

"If the American School of Classical Studies at Athens had been a graduate school of photography, its members could scarcely have produced a more beautiful pictorial representation of the common life as well as the scenery and antiquities of Greece. Few countries offer a more attractive field for the camera. . . . An accompanying note indicates that all royalties from the book will go into a fund for Greek civilian relief. The well-wisher who buys the book to help the cause will find that the consciousness of helping a needy people is not his only reward, for the book itself is a thing to be treasured."

+ Christian Century 58:691 My 21 '41 110w

Reviewed by Carl Roebuck

Class Philol 36:317 Jl '41 270w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 19:831 Jl '41 10w

N Y Times p9 Je 15 '41 450w

"An enchanting book. . . . The many apt quotations from the Greek anthology lend charm to a book that should lie on the table of your living room."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:21 Je 7 '41 100w

"A picturesque and informing study."

+ Theatre Arts 25:554 Jl '41 40w

THOMAS, MRS DOROTHY SWAINE (THOMAS). Social and economic aspects of Swedish population movements, 1750-1933. 487p $6 Macmillan

312.09485 Sweden—Population. Sweden—Social conditions. Sweden—Economic conditions 41-3071

"This book is the first of a series concerned with the interrelationships between social and economic factors and population developments in Sweden. It is the result of research made possible through Swedish and American co-operation. . . . The first part of the book gives a general analysis of the Swedish population development from 1750 to 1933, and describes the agricultural development and the industrialization within which this population development took place. With regard to the fluctuations in emigration, the author reaches the interesting conclusion that the cyclical upswings in the homeland were a much more powerful counter-stimulant against the pull exerted by American business conditions than is generally recognized by American writers. . . . In the second part is given a special analysis by types of communities for the period 1895-1933. The 2500 Swedish communities have been classified in socio-economic groups. The total population growth and its elements, and the mobility, have been analyzed for these different types of communities. The results confirm hypotheses with regard to population differentials which have previously been made, but which so far have been impossible of satisfactory verification." (Am Soc R) Index.

Reviewed by W. S. Thompson

Am J Pub Health 31:741 Jl '41 310w

"Judging from the present volume, there is reason to assume that this series, when completed, will make an extremely valuable contribution to economic-demographic literature, and that it will establish the facts, as far as it is possible to establish them through statistical research, with regard to the economic and social background of population movements in a society like the Swedish one in the era of industrialization and urbanization. . . The presentation of the stuff is somewhat unusual. The author has, rightly, deemed it important to give other scholars access to her valuable material, and the book is therefore heavily weighted with statistical tables. The text presents the main conclusions to be drawn from the tables, but there are ample opportunities for the reader to make further investigations." Arne Skaug

+ Am Soc R 6:437 Je '41 700w

"This study is a substantial research contribution, of particular significance as a link between demography and certain of the social sciences." E. P. Hutchinson

+ Ann Am Acad 215:234 My '41 650w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:382 Ja '42 10w

Reviewed by M. J. Hagood
Social Forces 20:274 D '41 550w

THOMAS, EDWARD. Handbook for chemical patents. 270p il $4 Chemical pub. co.

660,0038 Chemicals—Patents. Patent laws and legislation 40-35367

"A compact volume supplementing the author's previous book, The Law of Chemical Patents, published in 1938 [Book Review Digest, 1938]. Intended as 'a handbook for the general reader interested in chemical progress and a supplement to the earlier book to enable attorneys to locate rapidly any pertinent new cases on chemical inventions decided in the last two and one-half years.' The author is a former Assistant Examiner in the U.S. Patent Office." N Y New Tech Bks

"For those whose work is mainly with chemical patents, the book may prove a useful tool, but for the average chemist who has to do with patents only as an infrequent by-product of his activities, it cannot be recommended." C. S. Miner

Chem & Chem Eng N 18:1160 D 25 '40
270w

Reviewed by R. E. Sadtler
Chem & Met Eng 48:170 F '41 270w
N Y New Tech Bks 25:51 O '40

THOMAS, HARLAN C. A Yank in the R.A.F. 246p $2 Random house

(W) 41-17875

Story of a young American mail pilot and his experiences in England where he enlists in the R.A.F. The story in its military aspects ends with the fight over Dunkirk; the love story, in a wedding in a London church during an air raid.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p8 Ag 10 '41 250w
Christian Century 58:1006 Ag 13 '41
20w

"Brief and packed with thrills, this yarn will no doubt find a large appreciative public among young men in the service or preparing to take their part." Drake de Kay

N Y Times p6 Ag 17 '41 400w

THOMAS, HENRY, pseud. See Schnittkind, H. T.

THOMAS, LESLIE. Long may it wave. 65p il $2 Morrow

929.9 Flags—U.S. (W) 41-22946

Brief story of the various flags which have flown over what is now the United States, from the time of Leif Ericson and Cortez to the present. Includes colored pictures of over fifty flags. For ages ten to twelve.

Booklist 38:162 Ja 1 '42

"Unfortunately, the author has included also historical events that are only indirectly connected with the adoption of the various emblems. This makes specific information difficult to find and weakens the book as a ready reference tool. The outstanding feature is the fine colored pictures." Claire Nolte

+ Library J 66:1096 D 15 '41 90w

"A novel and interesting approach to history." Amy Loveman

+ Sat R of Lit 24:6 N 8 '41 50w

THOMAS, LOWELL JACKSON, and BRALEY, BERTON. Stand fast for freedom. 314p il $2 Winston

323.44 Liberty (W) 40-33042

Stories of the struggle for liberty in many lands from the time of the signing of Magna Carta to the present. For junior high schools. Bibliography.

"This book is intended mainly for young people, though older ones could read it with enjoyment and perhaps enlightenment. . . Possibly it fits best junior high school and upper elementary pupils. For them it ought to render a thoroughly appropriate and desirable service." R. O. Hughes

+ Social Educ 5:151 F '41 390w

Social Studies 32:47 Ja '41 10w

"It is a book to put in every youngster's hands today." Phillips Bradley

+ Survey G 30:258 Ap '41 30w

THOMAS, NEWTON GEORGE. The long winter ends. 360p $2.75 Macmillan

41-16494

The hero of this story is a young Cornish miner who, about the turn of the century, migrated to America, to the Michigan copper mines. Jim Holman had to live in a crowded boarding house, he suffered from the intense cold, from monotony, and from his inability to write—for he had left his young wife at home and could send messages only by others. But opportunity came to Jim, he learned to read and write, he made a good friend, and at the end of the winter he could send for his wife and baby son.

Booklist 38:53 O 15 '41

"Newton Thomas writes well, and with authority. Born in Stoke-Climsland Parish, Cornwall, he migrated to Michigan, and has been successively miner, country schoolmaster and professor at Northwestern and the University of Illinois. Slow and unswerving as a glacier, his novel moves with a power not superficially apparent." Nancy Flagge

+ Books p10 S 28 '41 600w

"This is a novel, not a patriotic preaching, but it is a pretty good tonic for Americanism."

+ Christian Century 58:1213 O 1 '41 30w
Cleveland Open Shelf p24 D '41

"A vivid though plotless story of 'the immigrant American, told in Cornish dialect.'" A. G. Higgins

+ Library J 66:731 S 1 '41 70w

"With a story that has often been told before, though with an unexploited setting, it successfully skirts the quicksand of sentimentality and pays an unpretentious tribute to simple devotion and sterling courage."

+ Nation 153:520 N 22 '41 100w

"Mr. Thomas' novel is a capable, well written and essentially static work. . . The book's faults are chiefly its conflict-free and idyllic structure and the general priggishness of the principal characters. But it is honest, pleasant and probably, in these dubious times, even a patriotic novel. It just happens to be small-scale." S. E. Hyman

THOMAS, N. G.—Continued

+ — New Repub 105:678 N 17 '41 180w

"This is a curiously unequal book, in which some dullish pedestrian stretches tend, during their passage, to make one forget the pleasures of earlier and, if one is reading a second time for reassurance, of later parts of a journey over ground and through a period of American history of great intrinsic interest." J. S. Southron

+ — N Y Times p6 S 21 '41 800w

"Full of interesting details about Cornwall, and told with warmth and feeling."

+ New Yorker 17:109 S 20 '41 70w

"The ancient Cornish dialect is used throughout the book, a dialect with which the author is thoroughly familiar. It is not easy reading, but the power of the narrative overcomes this factor."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e S 28 '41 240w
Wis Lib Bul 37:178 N '41

THOMAS, NORMAN MATTOON. We have a future. 236p $2.50 Princeton univ. press

330.973 U.S.—Economic policy. U.S.—Foreign policy. World war, 1939—U.S. Socialism (W) 41-51823

The leader of the American Socialist party writes critically of our present domestic and foreign policies, particularly the "drift toward war" and attempts to show how we yet may be saved by the adoption of socialistic principles. Index.

"There is much hard, common sense to be found in the pages of this brief, popularly written treatise." Karl Scholz

+ Am Econ R 31:625 S '41 450w

Am Hist R 47:201 O '41 60w

"The volume is a clear and vivid account of the author's views on the immediate past and on the future of the United States." R. S. Rankin

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:1004 O '41 340w

Reviewed by Broadus Mitchell

Ann Am Acad 218:212 N '41 500w

Booklist 37:486 Je 15 '41

Reviewed by R. H. Rovere

Books p8 Je 8 '41 760w

Reviewed by H. A. Wooster

Library J 66:356 Ap 15 '41 90w

Living Age 360:396 Je '41 260w

"'We Have a Future' is probably the nearest Norman Thomas will get to an autobiography for a long time. It is a statement of deeply cherished convictions, of shattered hopes, yet of abounding faith in the decency of man, the vitality of democracy, and the ultimate combination of the two in the endeavor to bring about a saner world. This hopeful outlook is due in large measure to the fact that he will not allow himself the 'luxury of despair.' As a writer and speaker Norman Thomas is always crisp, keen, and stimulating. In this latest product of his brain and pen these qualities are at their best." R. M. Stein

+ Nation 152:758 Je 28 '41 800w

Social Studies 32:335 N '41 20w

"Norman Thomas's new book, despite its optimistic title, has a tone suggestive of a weary campaigner. 'I will show you the road,' says Mr Thomas, in effect, 'but I don't believe you'll take it.' . . . Some of Mr Thomas's fears seem fantastic, such as his belief that the supreme court verdict in the Jehovah's Witnesses case sets a precedent for a religion of state, but most of his views deserve a sympathetic hearing."

Springf'd Republican p6 My 5 '41 650w

Wis Lib Bul 37:112 Je '41

THOMAS, WRIGHT, and BROWN, STUART GERRY, eds. Reading poems; an introduction to critical study. 781p $3.50; college ed $2.75 Oxford

821.08 English poetry—Collections. American poetry—Collections 41-20598

"This book is intended, in general, for anyone who wishes to develop the skills needed in the intelligent reading of poems, and, in particular, for teachers and students in undergraduate courses in English and American poetry who may wish to emphasize the skills of reading rather than the history of poetry. It has grown out of several years of experimental work in the classroom and of study in modern criticism. . . . The method is inductive, beginning with specific poems rather than with theories of the art of poetry. The poems themselves, which form the largest section of the book, are arranged according to generally accepted categories, but are freely grouped for purposes of study without reference to historical relations or to authorship. . . . The book moves from relatively simple lyric poems to poems of increasing difficulty, and concludes with The Waste Land. . . . The notes are intended primarily as critical guides, and often include substantial commentaries. Necessary explanatory information is given, but there are no notes of the usual historical or biographical nature." (Pref) Index.

Reviewed by W. P. Sears, Jr.

Churchman 155:18 S 15 '41 180w

"If there is no chronological order in 'Reading Poems,' there is what might be called an explanatory order: the poems are arranged according to their type—lyrical, pastoral, etc., and they go right through the long line of English poetry. The editors contribute a chapter on reading poems which is not only very competent but very fine and imaginative criticism. . . . While heartily recommending this anthology to systematic students of poetry, it is only right to draw attention to what we believe are some of its drawbacks: It is rather too voluminous for its purpose. . . . Then the book has a somewhat staid air which perhaps comes from its frankly pedagogic object or from too high a respect for the old favorites of the historians of literature." M. M. Colum

+ — N Y Times p5 Ja 11 '42 600w

Time 38:103 D 8 '41 130w

THOMASON, JOHN WILLIAM. Lone Star preacher. 296p il $2.75 Scribner

41-51615

"This is a collection of eight short stories, or episodes, from the life of the Rev. Praxiteles Swan, fire-eating, red-headed Methodist preacher who came out of Texas as a chaplain to accompany the Texas men who fought in the Army of Northern Virginia and who soon became a roaring, indomitable captain of infantry, fighting in all the bloody engagements in which that great army took part." Books

"Colonel Thomason is a first-rate storyteller, and these stories are as good as his best—if not better than any he has done heretofore. The book is delightfully illustrated with his own drawings." R. E. D.

+ Atlantic Mr '41 120w

Booklist 37:325 Mr 15 '41

"These are romantic, swashbuckling stories, but they are founded on exact historical knowledge, and a rare feeling for the Texas background. The author's pen and ink illustrations, as usual, are highly effective. . . . Few if any living writers can match Thomason in handling the military man in fierce action. Here, with Praxiteles Swan, he is at his best. Exciting and thoroughly ingratiating stuff." Stanley Walker

+ Books p4 Ja 19 '41 650w

Reviewed by Lewis Gannett

Boston Transcript p9 Ja 31 '41 950w

"One of the best-reading books of the season. It is full of drawings, by the writer, of soldiers and their mounts."

+ Boston Transcript p2 F 1 '41 390w

Christian Science Monitor p11 F 15 '41 480w

Churchman 155:35 Ap 15 '41 60w

Commonweal 33:476 F 28 '41 50w

"Tailored for laughs, but essentially a vivid and realistic picture of Lee's army in camp, on the march and in battle."

+ New Repub 104:158 F 3 '41 40w

"Each [story] has a certain amount of repetition, inevitable in a collection of this sort. It is also true that at times the writing has more facility than depth, but with these objections disposed of, there is still a welcome residue of entertainment and edification, of wholesome and unashamed emotion and sentiment and humor." Herschel Brickell

+ — N Y Times p6 Ja 19 '41 900w

New Yorker 16:71 Ja 25 '41 50w

"The book is not subtle; it is neither a complex nor a sustained piece of work. But it is wondrously clear, memorable, and in part stirring." Allan Nevins

+ — Sat R of Lit 23:14 F 15 '41 900w

"This is a thoroughly satisfactory book, and is made even more enjoyable by the author's illustrations. Although the story is entirely from the southern viewpoint, Elder Swan is as American as corn on the cob and he and his army of individuals should no longer be thought of as 'rebels' but as men of strong will and of great courage."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 26 '41 550w

Wis Lib Bul 37:140 Jl '41

THOMEN, AUGUST ASTOR. Doctors don't believe it—why should you? with introductions by Logan Clendening and Lord Horder. 384p $2.50 Simon & Schuster

610 Medical delusions. Errors, Popular, Superstition (W) 41-14191

"Facts and fallacies about health with practical guidance for the layman." (Subtitle) The question and answer method is used. Bibliography. Index. This book supersedes an earlier volume: Don't Believe It! Says the Doctor (Book Review Digest, 1935).

"Although the questions are asked in a layman's language, the index has been built up around the names of authorities cited or medical terms used so that the layman will probably find it less useful than the text. It is interesting to note that even the professional person may find some of his pet fallacies laid bare if he goes through the text carefully." Leona Baumgartner

+ — Am J Pub Health 31:1221 N '41 400w

Booklist 38:31 O 1 '41

"Any attempt—however valiant—such as that made by Doctor Thomen, must face the situation tersely described by Professor Whitehead when he said—'Unfortunately, facts keep no better than fish.' With these words of warning, one can wholeheartedly recommend the book. It contains a literally enormous amount of very accurate, very important information." Hugh Cabot, M.D.

+ Books p22 S 28 '41 550w

"Doctors Don't Believe It—Why Should You?" includes a large bibliography of sound and authoritative works on superstition, and particularly in the field of health. There is also a detailed index of more than ordinary value. All in all, it is a book which, when thoroughly read and assimilated, should help the average person to cut a sure path through a labyrinth of modern superstitions and errors that confront and beckon to him from every side, and at the same time save himself needless doctor's bills. The doctor should incidentally benefit in many ways, too numerous to mention."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 17 '41 1300w

Reviewed by I. S. Wile, M.D.

Survey G 30:712 D '41 190w

THOMPSON, CECIL V. R. Trousers will be worn; drawings by Margaret Freeman. 243p $2 Putnam

917.471 New York (city)—Social life and customs 41-7623

A satirical survey of New York café society by the author of I Lost My English Accent (Book Review Digest, 1939).

"Mr. Thompson, who came from England to New York a few years ago as American correspondent for a London newspaper, appears to have passed a good many of his nights mingling with the members of what is known hereabouts as café society. . . . In this little book he reports on his findings and makes many observations about the odd folk he has encountered. The result, alas, is disappointing in the extreme." Stanley Walker

— Books p12 My 18 '41 700w

"If the constant gagging doesn't offend you and if you want to know more about Miss Brenda Frazier (she's really a peach, the author says), then this is for you."

New Yorker 17:79 Je 7 '41 50w

"Here is the low-down on one of the more harmless products of today. It is worth reading." H. S.

+ Sat R of Lit 24:20 My 31 '41 100w

THOMPSON, CHARLES WOODY, and SMITH, WENDELL ROSS. Public utility economics. 727p maps $4.50 McGraw

380.166 Public utilities 41-6379

"Designed as a text for advanced students in economics and commerce, this book relates the field of public utilities to the broader area of economics of which it is a part. Thus the book seeks to acquaint the student with the place which the public utilities occupy within our economic structure, and with the special problems of price control, service supervision, security regulation, etc." (Management R) Index.

"In the field of public utilities the time is ripe for a textbook that will take into account the many important developments since the advent of the Roosevelt administration. Widespread adoption of this excellent book by Professors Thompson and Smith may, therefore, safely be predicted." Eliot Jones

+ Am Econ R 31:657 S '41 600w

Management R 30:156 Ap '41 50w

THOMPSON, FLORA. Over to Candleford. 215p $3 (8s 6d) Oxford

914.2 Country life—England. England—Social life and customs A41-4540

Sequel to the author's Lark Rise (Book Review Digest, 1939). In this volume of reminiscences of life in a tiny English village in the '80s and '90s "characters" abound. One of them is Miss Lane, who took over her father's business as blacksmith, and combined it with that of postmistress. With the apprenticeship of the girl called Laura, who is in reality the author, to Miss Lane, the book closes.

"It is a quiet and simple tale, made real and even vivid by the skill of the writer with her delicate touches." L. B. H.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 15 '41 210w

"Miss Thompson's new book is an amplification of her endearing Lark Rise. . . . Over to Candleford has the same sanity and solidity. . . . The book is full of sharply focussed detail, in some way connected, one supposes, with the extreme quietness of life."

+ Spec 167:189 Ag 22 '41 250w

THOMPSON, FLORA—Continued

"It is rare for a sequel to follow a pattern so unwaveringly, to maintain a high standard so constantly, as does this present volume, and readers of the previous one will need no further commendation."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p338 J1 12 '41
550w

THOMPSON, SYLVIA (MRS T. D. LULING).
The gulls fly inland. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 278p $2.50 Little

(W) 41-5441

A story told in diary form. A young French woman is asked by an old school friend to come to her home in the south of England to watch over a young child in the mother's enforced absence. During the months that follow, from October 1939 to August, 1940, Blanche Lancet writes in her diary the story of her past life, her school friendship with Annabelle Strudwick, her love affair with Annabelle's brother, Vernon, her visit to Boston, the home of the Strudwicks, and her battle waged against Vernon's wife Leonora.

Booklist 37:410 My 1 '41

Bookmark 2:16 My '41

"Delicately, with wit and a fine sense of detail, Miss Thompson writes of a vanishing people in a vanishing world. Perhaps for this reason the book has a static pictorial quality which appeals to the imagination rather than the emotions." Page Cooper

Books p10 Ap 6 '41 400w

Reviewed by Olga Owens

Boston Transcript p1 Ap 5 '41 600w

Reviewed by A. L. Graham

Library J 66:265 My 15 '41 40w

Reviewed by Wilfrid Gibson

Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 29 '41 90w

"The central figures are elaborated with particular subtlety. . . There are no blacks and whites. Even Leonora, who comes measurably close to being villainess of the piece, has her humanity. . . It is a novel made memorable by perpetual contrast. Blitzkrieg and the true, quiet story of deep human emotions behind the headlines." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p7 Ag 6 '41 800w

New Yorker 17:90 Ap 5 '41 60w

"It is a delicate book, charmingly written." R. B.

+ Sat R of Lit 23:21 Ap 12 '41 220w

"Having carped because a book which contains a great many good things is never as good as it keeps on hinting it could be, I can only concede that it is bound to be enormously liked—and more for its weaknesses, I fear, than for its merits." Kate O'Brien

+ Spec 167:244 S 5 '41 300w

"The Gulls Fly Inland" is clever, sophisticated, wittily observant. It is also romantic, lightly emotional and quite unblushingly glamorous. Between them the two strains provide most of the pleasures of escape. . . The truth is that the love story, for all the assurance and the cool graces of its telling, is of no great consequence. What matters is not the glamour but the unbeglamoured intervals, and these Miss Thompson fills with qualities of perception and wit, of gay and ironical sensibility that together give evidence of an unmistakable capacity for a fuller and richer style of novel."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p405 Ag 23 '41 1000w

THOMPSON, VIRGINIA MCLEAN. Thailand, the new Siam. (Inst. of Pacific relations. Int. research ser) 865p map $5 Macmillan

915.93 Thailand

(W) 41-21625

"Scholarly study of the historical background and economic, political, and cultural conditions and problems of contemporary Siam, now officially Thailand, which emphasizes the recent industrialization of the country, involving practically a re-education of the whole people, and explains Siam's increasing importance in the present world conflict as a producer of raw materials and as a strategic military base." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

"Miss Thompson is to be congratulated on the thoroughness with which she has covered every detail of Siamese history, politics, economics, religion, daily life, and folklore in the 865 pages of her book, which is well documented." W. H. Chamberlain

+ Atlantic D '41 240w

Booklist 38:94 N 15 '41

"Miss Thompson's huge volume, a product of compilation and research, is encyclopedic in its scope. Unfortunately the same adjective applies to its style as well as its form, a regrettable fact which will doubtless confine its circle of readers to those with leisure in which to mine from its multiple strata the nuggets of information which lie buried there." Edgar Snow

+ Books p26 N 16 '41 700w

Reviewed by Joseph McSorley

Cath World 154:499 Ja '42 360w

"Virginia Thompson in the 841 pages of this book has given us the first careful, comprehensive view of that little known country, a book that will be a storehouse of information and interest for present and future generations." Clifton Macon

+ Churchman 155:18 N 15 '41 300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p21 D '41

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse

Commonweal 35:202 D 12 '41 130w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:386 Ja '42 50w

"Based on wide and critical reading rather than on prolonged personal observation in the country itself. Recommended for every library needing authentic reference material on the Far East." M. J. Messler

+ Library J 66:669 Ag '41 140w

"Dr. Thompson's thoroughgoing and workmanlike presentation of the background for judgments in dealing with present problems in Southeastern Asia is not a book for beginners. It is in no sense a 'popular' book, offers nothing to the 'glamour and lure' enthusiasts, avoids arguments and eschews anecdote. The basic style of this book is simple, forthright and clear, but the totality of its materials and the minuteness of detail may prove overpowering to any but the highly trained reader. In short, it is a source book of great value written with great skill, but it is not the type of thing that one leaves lying on the week-end bed-table." R. A. Smith

+ N Y Times p18 N 23 '41 1000w

"Where so much is offered in a book it is ungracious to ask for more; yet this reviewer finds it difficult to be wholly satisfied. Precisely because the book is so rich in basic material it is to be regretted that it does not move on a step further and offer more in the way of a final distillation of the material which it presents. Neither at the end of the chapters nor at the end of the book are there conclusions which would serve to bind the entire mass together. In her preface the author suggests that the completion of the book 'has synchronized with the outbreak of the Second World War, which in all probability coincides with the end of one period of Siamese history.' The book would have been much enriched if that period could have been drawn into focus as a whole." Rupert Emerson

+ Pacific Affairs 14:474 D '41 1350w

Reviewed by E. O. Hauser

Survey G 30:705 D '41 280w

THOMSON, DAVID. The democratic ideal in France and England. 136p $1.25 Macmillan [3s 6d Cambridge]

321.8 Democracy. France—Politics and government. Great Britain—Politics and government 41-8721

"This essay attempts . . . an analysis of the chief characteristics of that democratic conception of society which has emerged in a particular set of circumstances: in the conditions of France and England during the last two and a half centuries. The formulation of the ideal in terms of social and political organisation, and the precise emphasis which happens to be placed upon particular aspects of it, are necessarily determined by such conditions of time and place. It is these particularities which ought most to concern us to-day. The historical approach is at present more useful than the philosophical. Though this book was in type before the overthrow of the Third Republic in France, and most references to France have therefore been left in the present tense, no change of interpretation has been made necessary by the events of July 1940." (Pref) Index.

"If the author's purpose was 'to restate the [democratic] ideal in terms relevant to the times,' he has not succeeded. This is a solid, scholarly little book, but it is scarcely likely to become a powerful weapon in the war of ideas. It is too completely historical and much too reluctant to come to grips with present realities." C. C. Rodée

Am Pol Sci R 35:809 Ag '41 300w

"A scholarly, well-grounded little treatise. . . It is a thought-provoking excursion into a controversial field." Eleanor Van Alen

+ Current Hist & Forum 52:62 My '41 200w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 19:873 Jl '41 10w

Reviewed by D. W. Brogan
Spec 165:296 S 20 '40 420w

"An admirable comparative study."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p466 S 14 '40 40w

THORN, ALICE GREEN, ed. Singing words; ll. by Masha. 71p $1.75 Scribner

821.08 Children's poetry. Children's songs 41-21727

Anthology of poetry for children. Each group is introduced by a song with music, and the poems following have been selected because of their lyrical qualities.

"Miss Thorn's own setting for Rose Fyleman's 'Fairly Flute' is included. The illustrations by Masha are delicate and fanciful. In short, this is a lovely book for a wide variety of ages." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 66:1001 N 15 '41 80w

Reviewed by Jessie Stanton & E. W. Steele
New Repub 105:837 D 15 '41 10w

"The selections are wisely made from the most charming and appealing verse, the format is attractive and the music both simple and appropriate. What more could a mother or teacher ask? What more delightful introduction to poetry for children at home or in the schoolroom?"

+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 23 '41 100w

THORNDIKE, EDWARD LEE. Human nature and the social order. 1019p $4 (18s) Macmillan 301.15 Psychology. Social psychology 40-10178

For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

"The reviewer wonders what the professional economist would say of Thorndike's critique of managed currency or of his views as to the function of credit, or what the student of politics would say as to his utopia about college presidents and large entrepreneurs controlling, or at least helping to control, the political state. So, too, moralists and students of social change have long wrangled over the sort of items which he lists as making for the 'good life.' Most of these are phrased in terms of his individual psychology and many of them distinctly reflect our own particular cultural standards. It is just in this neglect of social-cultural frames of reference that the students of society may easily overlook some of the larger contributions of this volume, for in spite of these limitations this book has considerable merit." Kimball Young

+ Am J Psychol 54:448 Jl '41 900w

"In comparing the earlier and the later parts of the book the reader is struck by a certain looseness in their relations. This is by no means to say that the light Thorndike is able to throw on social problems from the results of psychological investigation that he summarizes is negligible—far from it. These results are, however, rather in the nature of quite general considerations which set limits of variation and define necessary conditions of social phenomena. Two contexts stand out as most important. One is the general consideration that responses followed by a satisfying result tend to be confirmed, even though this result is not biologically inherent but is deliberately or culturally associated with it. The other is the general application of our knowledge of genetics to the conditions of social phenomena, including especially our knowledge of the genetic basis of the differentiation of human abilities. Thorndike's discussion of these problems is admirably well-balanced, undogmatic, and convincing. . . The main criticism of Thorndike's book is that it should be entitled something like 'One Kind of Approach to the Scientific Study of Human Nature and the Social Order.'" Talcott Parsons

+ Am Soc R 6:277 Ap '41 2900w

Reviewed by Morris Ginsberg
Nature 148:351 S 27 '41 1950w

"This is not a book concerned with paper Utopias. It is meaty with shrewd practical suggestion, ranging all the way from the public encouragement of scientific genius through financial grants to the better management of industry. It attempts to find ways of scientifically encouraging the better side of that obstreperous, blundering, but precocious primate homo sapiens. . . Although much has happened in the short while since this book was published, its sane and forward-looking optimism is still not unjustified. It is a work extensive in scope but compact in purpose. It is an education in common sense." L. C. Elseley

+ Social Educ 5:236 Mr '41 500w

THORNDIKE, EDWARD LEE. Thorndike Century senior dictionary. 1065p ll maps thumb indexed $3.25 Appleton-Century; school ed $2.48 Scott

423 English language—Dictionaries

(W) 41-4229

"[This] dictionary follows the same general principles as the Junior Dictionary [Book Review Digest, 1935], adapting them to students who have wider knowledge and greater intellectual maturity. It aims to provide such students with the most effective means of learning quickly the spelling, pronunciation, and meaning of more than fifty thousand words." Pref. and acknowledgments

Booklist 37:486 Je 15 '41

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 26 '41 130w

"Most important among the many important things about this volume, is Dr. Thorndike's fundamental concept so adequately carried through:—that a dictionary is, first and last, not merely a reference to be leaned upon like a crutch, but should be actually a teaching tool, enabling the student, every time he opens it, to improve in his accurate and effective use of words." M. J. Taylor

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 My 3 '41 300w

School & Society 53:320 Mr 8 '41 30w

"The scholarship behind the dictionary is of the highest. Dr. Thorndike himself and his editorial committees are distinguished in the field of language. Sir William Craigie, Professors Kemp Malone, Leonard Bloomfield, Miles

THORNDIKE, E. L.—Continued

Hanley, Louise Pound, and many others, served in an advisory capacity as did the editors of the Century Dictionary. . . The Thorndike-Century Senior Dictionary is recommended."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 12:45 J1 '41 850w

"Thousands of small but unusually interesting and helpful pictures are a feature of this, as of the Junior Dictionary. . . The up-to-date-ness of the volume is beyond question. Leafing it through, one finds 'blitzkrieg,' 'electric eye,' 'blackout,' 'Vichy,' 'FHA,' and many other words and terms for which a young newspaper reader in these confusing times is likely to need help from his dictionary." Beulah Amidon

+ Survey 77:248 Ag '41 200w

THORNDIKE, JEANIE PAINE. Not to the strong 346p $2.50 Crowell

41-6372

A story of Kenya colony twenty-five years ago during the first Great war. The chief characters are Anna Stillman, daughter of a lonely rancher, and John Bradley, a man who has failed to live up to his best self and who therefore has to win again his self-respect before he can accept happiness.

"J. P. Thorndike went to Africa at the age of twelve and was early initiated into the ardors and endurances of what was then a strenuous life. The conversation is a little stilted in 'Not to the Strong,' and there are times when the story's pace might be profitably increased. But the background is convincing and the action moves with sureness." H. M. Shaw

+ Books p12 Ap 13 '41 410w

"The writer has been deep in Africa, knows the remote reaches of Kenya, and has managed to bring it whole and undistorted to these pages. There is a persistent aura of truth about [the] story." Olga Owens

+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 15 '41 400w

Christian Century 58:329 Mr 5 '41 30w

"Despite the banality of theme and treatment, the book has quality and pace. The defects of technique are counterbalanced by a quality of genuineness and feeling. 'Not to the Strong' is eminently readable and gives one the feeling that it is the first novel of someone who will mature." Stuart Cloete

+ Sat R of Lit 23:12 Mr 29 '41 330w

"To any who have never been humiliated by the breaking down of the nervous system through the means of fear; and the long, haunting traces of it lingering for years in daily conduct, this story of the tragedy of fear may seem unreal and its effects unduly prolonged; but to any who have been even partial victims, the struggle of the young man to right himself both in his own eyes and those of his non-understanding companions is very real."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 27 '41 400w

THORNDIKE, LYNN. History of magic and experimental science. (History of science soc. Publications, new ser) v5-6 695:766p ea $5 Columbia univ. press [66s 6d Oxford] 510.9 Magic. Science—History

"With these two stout volumes Professor Thorndike completes a work which, in magnitude and in theme, has something in common with Frazer's Golden Bough. . . Thorndike's specific assignment was to trace the course of medieval and Renaissance magic and to show how, before its stream sank into the sands like a disappearing river in the desert, its waters were mingled with the currents of modern science fed by the springs of observation, experiment and reason. . . These last two volumes, of six, cover the sixteenth century and the first part of the seventeenth, bringing the study down to the time of Kepler and Galileo and into the vestibule of modern science." (Christian Century) For earlier volumes see Book Review Digest, 1923 and 1935. General index at end of volume six.

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 58:1080 S 3 '41 850w

"Thorndike's is certainly the most important single contribution to the intellectual history of the sixteenth century made in some years. All students of the period will greatly appreciate his achievement and constantly use his book as an invaluable guide and reference." P. O. K.

+ J Philos 38:690 D 4 '41 950w

"No one can fail to appreciate the labour, patience and learning that have gone to the writing of these volumes, which, together with four earlier ones, complete a remarkable survey of sixteen centuries of thought about natural phenomena. Prof. Thorndike richly deserves the warm congratulations and gratitude of all who are interested in the history of human thought." A. Wolf

+ Nature 148:296 S 13 '41 1400w

"A monumental, erudite and authoritative work. . . Primarily a work for the specialist, it is so clearly written that the general reader interested in its subject matter will turn to it with confidence and delight."

+ New Repub 105:518 O 20 '41 50w

Social Studies 32:287 O '41 30w

Times [London] Lit Sup p546 N 1 '41 1800w

THORNTON, WILLIS. Almanac for Americans; pictures by James Daugherty. 418p $2.75 Greenberg

973.02 U.S.—History—Chronology 41-23736

"Every day in the year 'has seen American history made'—and here is the comprehensive reminder of that summary, in an American Book of Days. . . The scheme of the Book of Days is to present one major event for each day of the year, and often to follow this with the citation of minor happenings." N Y Times

"This is a fascinating way to present our nation's story and Mr. Thornton makes it easily palatable." Richardson Wright

+ Books p2 D 28 '41 1000w

N Y Times p7 D 14 '41 210w

THREE prize murders. 557p $2.50 Farrar

(W) 41-17551

These three mystery stories each received honorable mention in the Mary Roberts Rinehart mystery novel contest. Contents: Murder for Tea, by Edith Howie; Old-Fashioned Murder, by Marguerite McIntire; Westbound Murder, by C. S. Wallace.

"These variously exciting stories require no sales talk to justify their appearance, for they are all of a meritorious brand, excellent entertainment for the whole goggling family. Personally, we preferred 'Murder For Tea' and 'Old-Fashioned Murder,' nice blends of goose-flesh in the Rinehart tradition. . . 'Westbound Murder' is fairly hardboiled, fast and often amusing. A balanced ration." Will Cuppy

+ Books p9 Ag 10 '41 160w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p17 Ag 10 '41 550w

New Yorker 17:68 Ag 23 '41 50w

"Good week-ender."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:18 Ag 23 '41 40w

THURMAN, HARRIETT. The swift hour. 301p $2 Macrae Smith co.

41-38

Carey Brooke, still young and a successful actress, awakens suddenly to the fact that she and her own half-grown daughter are in love with the same man. An unsuccessful play on Broadway, a young girl's attempt to live in a grown-up world, and a serious accident, finally resolve matters.

"It is a human story and its solution is deftly handled." Lisle Bell
+ Books p9 D 22 '40 120w

"A complicated, but well-handled, situation and a fast-moving story."
+ Boston Transcript p1 Ja 25 '41 80w

"Though it has to do with the mother-and-daughter complications when both fall in love with the same man, this is essentially a novel of the very youthful. . . Despite the juvenile point of view, the book is more mature and more interesting than Miss Thurman's previous efforts and inclines the reader to hope for something more substantial from her later on."
Charlotte Dean

+ — N Y Times p14 D 29 '40 240w

THURSTON, CARL HAMMOND PHILANDER.
The structure of art. 190p il $2.50 Univ. of Chicago press

701 Esthetics. Art (W) 41-1196

The author "proposes that aesthetics be treated as a science rather than as a branch of philosophy. . . Restricting himself to the investigation of the 'spatial' arts which do not involve actual movement, he illustrates a possible scientific method for the use of aesthetics in general. He begins by assuming that the basic 'ingredients' of the spatial arts are visual units, empty space, and the human being who perceives them. These 'generate' four sets of relationships, which in turn form the 'elements' of the spatial arts: (1) . . . between visible shapes, (2) between such shapes and the space within and around them, (3) between such shapes and whatever space falls within their spheres of influence and the human observer and (4) relationships developed within the personality of this observer by contact with a work of art." Using these relationships as his working hypothesis and as far as possible analyzing his material in their terms, the author attempts to extract the norms of successful practice and appreciation in the arts of decoration, architecture, sculpture, and painting."
(Nation) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:355 Ap 1 '41

J Philos 38:190 Mr 27 '41 350w

Reviewed by Clement Greenberg
Nation 152:219 F 22 '41 600w

"A work that is as important as it is concise and stimulating. While it is addressed rather to mature art lovers than to students, it would be hard to imagine a more useful text book for college classes." F. J. M., Jr.
+ Sat R of Lit 23:18 Mr 22 '41 350w

THYSSEN, FRITZ. I paid Hitler [tr. from the original by César Saerchinger]. 281p il $2.75 Farrar; Cooperation pub. co, inc, 30 Rockefeller plaza, N.Y.

943.085 Germany—Nazi movement. World war, 1939—Germany. Hitler Adolf
(W) 41-22008

An account of the part played by German industrialists and business men in Hitler's rise to power. The book is the work of one of the foremost among Hitler's financial backers, writing in exile.

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin
Atlantic D '41 120w
Booklist 38:93 N 15 '41

"While in France Thyssen was persuaded by the associate publisher of this book to write his story. It is a terrible confession. It is a terrible indictment. And in the end Herr Thyssen's hatred for Nazism and Prussianism makes anything so far expressed by American writers on the subject seem pale and anemic, indeed."
W. L. Shirer

Books p5 O 26 '41 1250w

Reviewed by J. F. Thorning
Cath World 154:502 Ja '42 600w

Reviewed by Joseph Calderon
Commonweal 35:76 N 7 '41 240w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:382 Ja '42 110w

Reviewed by Franz Hoellering
Nation 153:574 D 6 '41 850w

Reviewed by Thomas Reveille
New Repub 105:708 N 24 '41 700w

"Fritz Thyssen is no doubt one of Hitler's most spectacular victims. Deluded, disillusioned, self-exiled, and now probably dead at the hands of the Gestapo, this powerful German industrialist of yore supported the Nazi movement not merely with money but also with considerable idealism. He was a conservative Catholic gentleman. . . What induced him to support the Nazis? And what caused him ultimately to turn over to Emery Reves a volume of memoirs which, for all its faults, is one of the most effective indictments of Hitler so far published? . . . Of Mr. Reves's introduction one can say only that most of it should never have been written, for reasons which will probably be obvious to the reader. And concerning the 'Historical Notes' I shall say only that their quality is well illustrated by the fact that the former Chancellor of Germany is referred to in them as 'Hermann' Bruening." G. N. Shuster

+ — N Y Times p1 O 19 '41 1500w

"A rambling account, part personal, part a tracing of economic events before and after Hitler came to power. Rather muddled and naive."

New Yorker 17:91 N 1 '41 60w

Time 38:100 O 13 '41 1050w

"'I Paid Hitler' is a curious and lame apologia. It offers very little more than is generally known, or that can be deduced with complete safety, by way of explanation of Thyssen's quarrel with his political bosses, though on two or three other matters, it is quite instructive."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p601 D 6 '41 1250w

TIEGS, ERNEST WALTER, and KATZ, BARNEY. Mental hygiene in education. 418p il $2.75 Ronald 371.71 Mental hygiene. Psychology, Pathological. Children, Abnormal and backward. Education of children. Personality 41-11057

"The authors 'have tried to bring together in meaningful pattern the principles, techniques and agencies which are primarily responsible for guiding personality development . . . they have attempted to make teachers see mental hygiene in relation to the other important objectives of education.'" School & Society

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '41

School & Society 53:760 Je 14 '41 40w

TILDEN, FREEMAN. Better see George. 307p $2.50 Harper

41-5503

A story of a New England town during the post-depression years, viewed thru the eyes of a city man who brings his family to live there. The principal character is the town banker, George Hadlock, guide, counselor and friend to the whole town.

Booklist 37:492 Je 15 '41

Bookmark 2:16 My '41

"'Better See George' is a narrative of episodes, depending upon richness of observation and genuine flavor of life it presents rather than upon climax. It is a rewarding book to turn to in these strident times." Lisle Bell

+ Books p14 Ap 6 '41 400w

"'Better See George' is unexpectedly engaging. It may be a little sentimental, but it is very good fun." E. H. Walton

+ N Y Times p21 Ap 6 '41 800w

TILDEN, FREEMAN—Continued

"Although the pattern of this novel has already been overworked, the personality of its main character is sufficiently strong to sustain interest."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Je 8 '41 330w
Wis Lib Bul 37:118 Je '41

TILLET, MRS DOROTHY (STOCKBRIDGE)
(JOHN STEPHEN STRANGE, pseud). Murder gives a lovely light. 304p $2 Doubleday (W) 41-13946

Detective story.

Booklist 38:13 S '41

"This recommended item struck us as probably the best on John Stephen Strange's honorable list of mysteries. It's a full-bodied, genuinely interesting and sufficiently swift tale of goings-on in a fine old Gramercy Park mansion inhabited by persons a good cut above those in most crime stories." Will Cuppy

+ Books p8 Jl 13 '41 320w

"This is one of the most skillfully constructed detective stories that we have encountered in many a day." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p19 Jl 13 '41 200w

"This story, which is as much a novel as a murder mystery, is leisurely and beautifully written. Recommended for readers who prefer the tangled family affairs of the upper classes to the noisy shootings of the masses."

+ New Yorker 17:56 Jl 19 '41 50w

"Extra well-written and capably constructed tale with ample suspense and dénouement that seems just a bit forced. Worthwhile."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:17 Jl 19 '41 40w

Time 38:76 Ag 4 '41 30w

TILLIER, CLAUDE. My Uncle Benjamin; tr. by Marie Lorenz; il. by Mahlon Blaine. 304p $2.50 Coventry house, 50 E. 42d st N.Y. 41-8924

"First complete English edition of a nineteenth-century French classic, being the adventures of a personable bachelor, the 'gayest, funniest, wittiest man in the country around,' and, except for the town drummer, the least sober." New Yorker

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

+ Books p10 Mr 9 '41 550w

"A delightful, civilized, completely French book."

+ New Yorker 17:75 Mr 8 '41 50w

"Why should any American publisher bring out now a novel which, though first issued in France ninety-nine years ago, has never enjoyed a very wide public even in its own country? . . . The careless translation and smudgy illustrations add nothing to the French original." Justin O'Brien

— Sat R of Lit 23:13 Mr 29 '41 480w

Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 13 '41 120w

TILTON, ALICE, pseud. See Taylor, P. A.

TIMMERMANS, JEAN. Chemical species (La notion d'espèce en chimie); tr. by Ralph E. Oesper. 177p il $4 Chemical pub. co.

541 Chemistry, Physical and theoretical 40-35603

"The original edition in French was published at Paris in 1928. The book is divided into four main parts: Definition of chemical systems; Pure materials, Determination of physical constants; and The way to find in the literature the best method of purification and the most probable value of the constants of pure materials—examples and applications. The author has been Director of the International Bureau of Physico-Chemical Standards at Brussels since its creation in 1921, and the translator is Professor of Analytical Chemistry at the University of Cincinnati." N Y New Tech Bks

"It is probable that every reader of the book will feel that certain parts with which he happens to be particularly familiar, might well have been omitted. The inclusion however of apparently foreign and unnecessary subjects such as the inter-relation of units and of standards, the detailed explanation of the method of least squares for the treatment of numerical data, and the listing and description of reference books and collections of constants, adds to the chance that the book will prove of some interest to every one engaged in the determination or evaluation of physico-chemical properties. It is neither an exhaustive text nor a reference book, but a discussion of principles, which will repay a reading on the part of any chemist." J. E. Riecl

+ Am Chem Soc J 63:1173 Ap '41 350w

"Students as well as men in the technical field will welcome this book. It is meant to brush up chemical doctrines and rules from a physico-chemical aspect and to bring clarity to many problems. It will teach the reader to be critical and will show him not to believe that all 'constants' he finds in handbooks and tables are truly reliable." F. C. Nachod

+ Chem & Met Eng 48:134 Ja '41 220w

N Y New Tech Bks 25:45 O '40

TIMOSHENKO, STEPHEN, and YOUNG, DONOVAN HAROLD. Engineering mechanics. 2d ed 523p $4 McGraw

620.1 Mechanics, Applied. Statics. Dynamics 40-33432

"Formerly published in two volumes, this college textbook has been condensed by re-writing and omission of unnecessary material." (Booklist) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1938. Index.

Booklist 37:121 N 15 '40

N Y New Tech Bks 25:49 O '40

TIMS, RICHARD WONSER. Germanizing Prussian Poland; the H-K-T society and the struggle for the Eastern marches in the German empire, 1894-1919. 312p $4.25 Columbia univ. press

325.2438 Poles in Prussia. Prussia—Nationality. Deutscher ostmarkenverein 41-24159

History of the anti-Slav movement in East Prussia from 1894 to 1919. Prussia was established on Slavic soil, and in the late eighteenth century a large part of its population was Polish. The Prussians regarded the Slavs as an inferior race, and in 1894 the anti-Slav policy in the Eastern Marches took shape in the form of the H-K-T society. This society which tried to Germanize the Polish parts of Prussia was not a success, but it did prepare the way for Hitler's later campaign. Bibliography. Index.

"Well-documented and scholarly monograph." Hans Kohn

+ Nation 153:518 N 22 '41 210w

Social Studies 33:47 Ja '42 40w

TINTNER, GERHARD. The variate difference method. 175p $2.50 Principia

311 Sampling (statistics) 40-8751

"In this book the author gives an extensive survey of the discussion of the variate difference procedure in the literature of recent years. His approach is largely from the 'stochastic' viewpoint developed by Oscar Anderson in sundry papers during the last twenty-five years." J Pol Econ

Reviewed by E. E. Blanche
Am Econ R 31:878 D '41 600w
Reviewed by Max Sasuly
J Pol Econ 49:133 F '41 1100w
N Y New Tech Bks 25:49 O '40

TIPPETT, JAMES STERLING. I know some little animals; with pictures by Flora Nash DeMuth. 42p $1 Harper

41-15196

"Rhythm and humor mark these verses about squirrels and turtles, snails, grasshoppers and other small creatures. The drawings well suit the poems which are meant for the younger children." Horn Bk M

Booklist 38:38 O 1 '41

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk M 17:359 S '41 30w

Reviewed by R. W. Stewart
Library J 66:799 S 15 '41 50w

"Mr. Tippet is fortunate in his illustrator: Flora DeMuth's drawings have genuine beauty and a lovely clarity, as well as the action and liveliness children enjoy. A book for libraries and classrooms where there are young children and an excellent volume for family reading aloud." A. T. E.

+ N Y Times p38 N 2 '41 200w

TITZELL, JOSIAH CARLTON. Galanty show. 117p $1.75 Doubleday

811 41-25821

"Not frequently in a first book of poems are the successive steps of progression in a poet's experience so plainly marked. In originality and variety of the various moods offered, 'Galanty Show' might be a diary of the author's days. It mounts from ingenious caprices and light often mordant lyrics to the maturer work which is genuine poetry such as Sonnet of Bitter Discovery and Vision in the Meadow." Books

"Despite its unevenness Mr. Titzell has travelled a long way in 'Galanty Show,' which unmistakably bears the stamp of his particular contribution, especially in the sonnets of Unfinished Sequence, the peak of the book. These sonnets are full of fire and movingly sincere in both feeling and expression." Laura Benet
+ Books p48 N 30 '41 480w

"Mr. Titzell's title, 'Galanty Show' (a kind of pantomime made by throwing shadows of puppets on a wall or screen), is not very helpful. It suggests an irresponsibility on the part of the author that is only half true. The poems are mostly light and occasional verse dedicated to this person and that, and they make rather a display of the author being himself, as an eccentric. . . Mr. Titzell is a perverse sort of versifier." P. M. Jack
N Y Times p5 Ja 4 '42 490w

TODD, ANN, pseud. See Bernstein, A. R.

TOMPKINS, JANE F. (MRS B. M. MCCONNELL). The snowshoe twins; il. by Kurt Wiese. 118p $1.50 Stokes

Rabbits—Legends and stories 41-51903

Describes the wild life in the northern woods and the experiences of two young snowshoe rabbits in outwitting a timber wolf. For grades three to five.

Booklist 38:38 O 1 '41

"This is an excellent book for children eight to ten; it has lively and attractive illustrations by Kurt Wiese which add to its appeal. Recommended." J. E. Stromdahl

+ Library J 66:737 S 1 '41 90w

TOMPKINS, WALKER A. Bushwack bullets. 256p $2 Phoenix

41-20053

Western story.

"Excessive at times." Will Cuppy
Books p32 N 30 '41 40w

Reviewed by G. W. Harris
N Y Times p40 N 9 '41 200w

TONNE, HERBERT ARTHUR. Consumer education in the schools. 365p $2.85 Prentice-Hall

339.4 Consumption (economics). Consumer education. Buying 41-11187

"A professor of education at New York University here attempts to present not a definitive study but 'in a manner as unbiased as possible, all the points of view toward consumer education that are current among the workers in this field.' Questions and a list of selected references follow each chapter." (J Home Econ) Index.

Reviewed by Hazel Kyrk

Ann Am Acad 218:237 N '41 320w

Booklist 38:30 O 1 '41

J Home Econ 33:604 O '41 40w

Social Studies 32:288 O '41 10w

"Here is a 'must' for teachers and students concerned with the problem of aiding American youth in schools and colleges to become more intelligent consumers, both as individuals and as citizens. In this textbook, designed especially for college students in senior colleges, teachers colleges, and universities, the author presents a wide range of valuable information. . . [He] has made a real contribution to the growing literature in a growing field of education." J. E. Mendenhall

+ Survey 77:372 D '41 240w

TORNICH, MARY. Radius of action of aircraft. 168p il maps $3 Weems system of navigation, Annapolis, Md.

629.1325 Navigation (aeronautics) 40-34011

"Two navigation problems submitted to the author for solution in 1939 were the impetus for the writing of this book. They were typical radius of action problems involving an alternate airport as required by the Civil Aeronautics Authority for instrument flight. The solution of these problems brought to mind the fact that unless every phase of dead reckoning navigation is completely understood the pilot is not prepared to solve problems of this type and that until he is prepared he is 'grounded,' so to speak, with respect to advanced ratings. It is the intention to present here dead reckoning navigation in a simple and comprehensive manner in order that the student may master the fundamental essentials and advance to more complicated work with the requisite knowledge and understanding." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 37:294 Mr 1 '41

N Y New Tech Bks 26:3 Ja '41

TORRENCE, FREDERIC RIDGELY. Poems. 121p $1.75 Macmillan

811 41-10134

"The case of Ridgely Torrence is one of the most puzzling in modern poetry. His first volume appeared at the very beginning of the century. . . But twenty-five years passed before his second book, 'Hesperides,' was published. Another sixteen years have brought 'Poems,' which is a reissue of 'Hesperides' with the addition of some new poems." Sat R of Lit

TORRENCE, F. R.—Continued

Reviewed by G. S. Hellman

+ Books p20 Ag 24 '41 220w

"The total worth of the book exceeds the sum of the parts, for it establishes communion with a fine poet and a spirit at once perceptive, humane and reconciled." Rolfe Humphries

+ New Repub 105:564 O 27 '41 650w

"A firm, grave strength, and a fully matured certainty, lighted and warmed by both human compassion and spiritual vision, distinguish the poetry of Ridgely Torrence. . . This book has been worth waiting for. It contains the best of Ridgely Torrence's work, and the fullness of his answers to eternal questions; such thinking and such conclusions are the backbone of poetry. The reader will find no topical allusions here, no wars. It is to ensure the life of such poetry that wars are being fought." John Holmes

+ N Y Times p4 O 19 '41 750w

"Torrence's music is varied; he is a conscious craftsman working at his art, not a religious seer whose utterances are often monotonous and paradoxical. Through this music he communicates a vision of ultimate reconciliation of opposites, of light out of darkness, life out of death. . . To see Torrence's relation, in direct line, to Emerson and Thoreau, I recommend that the reader turn, after the first poem, 'Light,' to 'Adam's Dying,' 'The Apples,' 'Legend,' 'Three O'Clock,' and finally to 'The Son,' one of the most beautiful lyrics ever written. It is difficult to believe that a sensitive reader can experience these poems without tears, and isn't it about time that one had the courage to state that certain poems "contain virtue because they make one weep?"

+ New Yorker 17:75 S 6 '41 500w

Reviewed by Louis Untermeyer

Sat R of Lit 24:6 J1 19 '41 330w

Reviewed by A. M. Jakeman

Spring'd Republican p10 N 13 '41 440w

"The self-critical poet might well have dropped 'Santa Barbara Beach'; and the two concluding jingles are too sentimentally childish even for children to whom they are addressed. But a spirit noble and indignant speaks through 'The Bird and the Tree,' the most eloquent poem ever written about a lynching. It intensifies the lyricism of 'Eye-witness,' in which Christ appears to a group of tramps. It condenses a lifetime drama in the four short verses of 'The Son,' one of the finest and most unforgettable lyrics of our time. Such poems alone would be enough to make any poet's reputation. They will be enough to sustain Mr. Torrence's." Louis Untermeyer

+ Yale R n s 31:377 winter '42 250w

TORRES, HENRY. Pierre Laval [tr. by Norbert Guterman]. 265p $2.50 Oxford

B or 92 Laval, Pierre. France—Politics and government 41-22006

A highly critical biography of the French politician and arch appeaser of Germany, by one who has known him well for more than twenty years. The author is a French attorney who took part in several famous international trials, notably the Reichstag Fire trial. He was also prepared to defend Grynspan, the young Jew who killed a Nazi official in Paris before the war. He was a member of the French parliament and political editor of the Paris newspaper L'Oeuvre. He now lives in America.

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin

Atlantic Ja '42 200w

Booklist 38:112 D 1 '41

"Torres exposes Laval's career, with a bitterness of contempt and hatred which, if not akin to love, fulfills the same function. It enables him to understand his victim. The result is not a mere polemic but a portrait. . . The skinning is merciless, but done with an artistic precision and restraint at times suggesting the skill, almost, of a Lytton Strachey. The sarcasm is sharpened with a ferocity that lightens it into wit." Walter Millis

+ Books p7 N 9 '41 1700w

"[This] is the sort of biography a prosecuting attorney composes when he tells the jury the life story of the defendant. The author has hewn to the line and let the chips fall exactly where one would expect them to—all in the scales against the man whose personal ambitions seemed aided rather than hampered by his country's defeat." C. W. M.

Christian Science Monitor p18 N 17 '41 550w

Reviewed by C. E. Black

Current Hist 1:468 Ja '42 500w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:381 Ja '42 70w

"Much of M. Torres's material is first-hand and valuable; for other episodes he resorts to the device of reconstruction of imaginary conversations, which is less satisfactory. But in the process of mapping out this crook's tour he illuminates many a dark and shady corner of the politics of the Republic in its declining years—and leaves us with an impression that the necessary purging of France's public life has yet to begin. The translation, by Norbert Guterman, is peculiar in places and should have been revised for English readers." W. H. C.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 D 12 '41 230w

Reviewed by Malcolm Cowley

New Repub 105:768 D 8 '41 300w

Reviewed by Sybille Bedford

New Repub 106:28 Ja 5 '42 1200w

"The same defeatism, the same renegade spirit, the same facility for betrayal of everything which ceased to serve his personal interests, are to be found in the entire career of this prime grave-digger of French liberty and independence. It is all authentic, eloquent, well told in this book of Henry Torrès, the great lawyer, as if told before the court by an inflexible magistrate, striking fear in the criminal. What an irreparable loss that it comes up now, ten years too late—and that it is only platonic." Milos Safranek

+ N Y Times p9 N 23 '41 900w

"Torrès does not attempt to conceal his bitter dislike of Laval, but he supports his character study with an impressive array of facts. . . M. Torrès regrettably skims over the all-important last five years in only a few pages. The book is therefore inconclusive on Laval's direct responsibility for the final weakness and military breakdown of France, but nevertheless, it stands out as a useful popular account of his politically formative years." A. R. Elliott

+ Sat R of Lit 24:9 D 27 '41 300w

"In the entire book there is not one complimentary word for Laval. Apparently this much excoriated man never performed a disinterested nor an honest deed in his life, never thought of France in aught but terms of self-aggrandisement—yet—even in the corrupt republic, how in heaven's name did so black a vulture remain so long in power? The time will come when the case of Pierre Laval will be dealt with more dispassionately, with more judicial acumen, when his acts and maneuvers will be more impartially evaluated." L. S. M.

Spring'd Republican p6 O 28 '41 700w

"A straightforward, accurate and detailed narrative of the astonishing career of the butcher's boy of Châteldon would be of great value. The tract of Maître Henry Torrès is, alas! not that narrative. . . This is not to say that this book has not serious merits. Maître Torrès has a good deal to tell; as a lawyer and Deputy he was a witness to the rise of Laval; and the most interesting part of the book is the series of conversations with Laval, reported, one does not doubt, with substantial accuracy, so far as the spirit goes. There are useful materials in this book, but some editorial rigour would have improved it and made it more than the rather incoherent prosecutor's speech that it now is."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p601 D 6 '41 700w

TORREY, MRS ANTOINETTE WALKER (GOULD). Wisdom for widows; for wives as well as widows, in fact—a book for all women. 252p $2.50 Dutton

396 Woman—Social and moral questions. Widows. Conduct of life (W) 41-2882

In this volume of advice to widows—and incidentally to other women too—the author deals with such subjects as investments, choice of a home, raising children, cultural pursuits, ways of earning a living, and even the problem of re-marriage.

Booklist 37:353 Ap 1 '41

"The author's advice to widows is pithy and full of good sense. She has written a further chapter in the 'live alone and like it' philosophy, and, although some of her remarks may be a little disturbing, readers should not forget that Toni Torrey acquired this salty wisdom the hard way for herself." Lorine Pruette

+ Books p16 Mr 9 '41 400w

"Written in crisp, practical textbook manner, with no pretense at literature as such, 'Wisdom for Widows' should find a wide audience from among the hundreds of groping, bewildered women who, from lack of training or other inadequacy, face reality for the first time. . . . Of the emotional and spiritual upheaval attendant on widowhood, with its necessary adjustment and slow resolving, the author says nothing, feeling probably, and wisely so, that this is a personal problem with highly individual needs and solutions." R. W. Fuller

+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 1 '41 320w

J Home Econ 33:264 Ap '41 40w

Wis Lib Bul 37:135 Jl '41

TORREY, WARE (LEE CROSBY, pseud). Too many doors. 288p $2 Dutton

41-5983

Detective story.

"A mystery more notable for its puzzle interest than for classic prose or brilliant conversation. Miss Crosby scatters suspicion where it is most likely to keep you guessing and the solution is announced by Eric Hazard, a psychological sleuth with a clever method of his own manufacture. We may mention, without revealing secrets, that the detective deals with such matters as nerve control, perspective, dramatic imaginations, callousness, dissatisfaction, alertness, undercover power and acting ability. Three killings." Will Cuppy

+ Books p13 My 4 '41 160w

"A satisfactory blend of mystery and horror." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p19 My 11 '41 190w

"The story is well written and is a real thriller in spots. But hardly grade A."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 6 '41 110w

TORSON, GLADYS. How to be a hero to your secretary; a handbook for bosses; il. by Richard Priest. 143p $2 Greenberg

651 Executive ability. Secretaries, Private (W) 41-5137

Presents the other side of the picture of the business man-secretary relationship, giving plain, sensible advice to the former on how to hire and fire, how to dictate, why he mustn't intrude on office supplies, how to treat the sex question, what to do about windows and morning snacks, and many other problems.

Management R 30:274 Jl '41 210w

"'How to Be a Hero to Your Secretary' is not, as the title might possibly suggest, a burlesque on secretaries and their employers. Although written in a light vein, the author seriously endeavors to give a few words of well-meant advice to bosses on how to make the lives of secretaries a little more endurable than they would seem to be from her observation."

+ Springf'd Republican p12 Jl 18 '41 480w

TOSDAL, HARRY RUDOLPH. Introduction to sales management. 2d ed 526p $4 McGraw 658.8 Salesmen and salesmanship. Marketing (W) 41-766

"This book is a revision of Introduction to Sales Management which was first published in 1933. It is a sort of junior case-book containing fewer and much simpler problems than those included in the author's more voluminous Problems in Sales Management. The book is especially adapted for use in short courses in sales management. . . . About half of [the cases] included in the book are new; the remainder were in the first edition. The author titles his book Sales Management. His definition of this term is so broad, however, that the volume could almost be used as a case-book for a general course in marketing. The division headings cover most of the subjects included in the standard case-book on marketing." (Am Econ R) Index. Alphabetical list of problems.

"Professor Tosdal has done his usual excellent job of selecting, editing, and annotating these cases." R. S. Alexander

+ Am Econ R 31:406 Je '41 110w

Booklist 37:327 Mr 15 '41

TOTH, TIHAMER, bp. The Christian family; tr. by V. G. Agotal; ed. by Newton Thompson. 211p $2 Herder

173.1 Marriage, Family 41-10417

"[This] treatise begins with the meaning of marriage before the coming of Christ, then follows the theme down to our time, ending with the climax of Catholic Marriage. Bishop Toth treats . . . Divorce, the Sin of Birth Control, Attempts To Justify Birth Control." America

"One of Europe's outstanding pulpit orators, Bishop Toth's sermons are also readable, as is proved by this seventh volume of his discourses." D. M. O'Connell

+ America 65:527 Ag 16 '41 80w

"The author brings home to a generation inclined to self indulgence and irresponsibility an imperatively needed lesson. A lesson, moreover, which is not without inspiration and encouragement. He is truly eloquent without being rhetorical, and original without affectation. The direct manner of presentation is well suited to a modern audience." C. Bruehl

+ Commonweal 34:282 Jl 11 '41 550w

TOURTELLOT, ARTHUR BERNON. The Charles; il. by Ernest J. Donnelly. (Rivers of America) 356p $2.50 Farrar

917.44 Charles river. Massachusetts—History (W) 41-52052

Descriptive history of that small Massachusetts river, the Charles—the legends connected with it, the institutions and life which flourished along its course, and the men and women who made its history. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 38:157 Ja 1 '42

"All of the American Rivers Series I have read have been grand entertainment and have contained much little known information. This book on the Charles I'd place close to or at the top for its good reporting, excellent organization and sheer all-around delight in reading. It deserves every cheer it will get. Mr. Ernest Donnelly has done fine, delicate work in his pen and ink illustrations. They have the proper 'feel.'" Stewart Holbrook

+ Books p1 N 30 '41 1000w

Reviewed by Horace Reynolds
+ N Y Times p5 N 23 '41 1300w

"All gracefully and sometimes humorously recorded."

+ New Yorker 17:111 N 22 '41 50w

TOUSEY, SANFORD. Indians of the plains; il. by [the author]. [36p] 50c Rand McNally Indians of North America—Juvenile literature 40-13872

Picture book of Indian life—hunting, working, ceremonial dancing, and playing—for ages seven to ten.

"The text is simple, interesting, and instructive. The full-page illustrations in black and white, and black, white and red show clearly the various phases of Indian life." D. L. Wood
+ Library J 65:715 S 1 '40 60w
Wis Lib Bul 37:20 Ja '41

TOUSEY, SANFORD. Ned and the rustlers; pictures by [the author]. 32p $1 Whitman, A.

41-17584

Ned, a Western boy, and his cow pony Cap, had real jobs on Ned's father's ranch. In the course of his work Ned discovered some rustlers, and won a thousand dollar reward.

"The large print, vivid illustrations, and subject matter make books of this kind particularly useful for remedial reading. Recommended for children nine to twelve." Emily Hutson
+ Library J 66:953 N 1 '41 80w
Springf'd Republican p7e N 2 '41 60w

TOUSEY, SANFORD. Stagecoach Sam [il. by the author]. 54p $1 Doubleday

(W) 40-30541

Picture book for grades three to four. It describes a twenty-day stagecoach trip from St Joseph, Missouri, to the Nevada Territory.

"Useful for a time as an adventure story to interest slow reading nine-year-olds and those younger." E. W. Turpin
+ Library J 65:928 N 1 '40 60w
Wis Lib Bul 37:21 Ja '41

TOWNE, CHARLES HANSON. Pretty girls get there; il. by Raffaello Busoni. 202p $2 Appleton-Century

41-4136

Mamie McLaughlin was a white collar working girl living in the Bronx and the main support of a family of five. This novel tells of Mamie's unhappy love affair, her small pleasures and large burdens, and finally of how her beauty won her a place in the movie world.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p15 F 16 '41 200w

Reviewed by Charlotte Dean
N Y Times p21 F 23 '41 230w

TOWNE, STUART, pseud. See Rawson, C.

TRACE, JOHN. Range of golden hoofs. 270p $2 Doubleday

41-2092

Western story.

Booklist 37:325 Mr 15 '41

"Here are vigorous adventure, battle and sudden death, love and what not in satisfying proportions, all proving that a sheepman can be a regular fellow. It's a rousing yarn by an up and coming author in the field." Will Cuppy

+ Books p13 F 2 '41 80w

"This is the third Western novel we have had from John Trace, a newcomer in this field to be reckoned with. While perhaps not quite so good as 'Trigger Vengeance,' recently reviewed here, it yet is a remarkably well-told story, skillful in characterization and straightforward writing." G. W. Harris

+ N Y Times p22 Ja 19 '41 240w

TRAIN, ARTHUR CHENEY. Mr Tutt comes home. 341p $2.50 Scribner

41-7662

Mr Tutt, the lawyer-hero of these stories, goes on his way, as in other books by this author, righting wrongs, helping the innocent and oppressed, and getting away with it because of his knowledge of the law.

Booklist 37:492 Je 15 '41

"The triumphs of Mr. Tutt, now a matter of record in a dozen volumes from the pen of Arthur Train, are a delight to the reader, not only because they are solidly backed by statute and precedent but because the shrewd old lawyer knows the weaknesses of criminals, the vanity of judges, the ambitions of district attorneys, the psychology of jurymen. And since he uses this knowledge of the human factor to promote justice and protect the innocent, these stories leave a good taste in the mouth." Lisle Bell

+ Books p18 Ap 20 '41 120w

"Quite often Mr. Tutt's enemy of the moment leaves himself so wide open to the old lawyer's fire that Mr. Tutt's tactics seem hardly sporting, but stories of this kind call for so much explanation in the telling that subtlety naturally gives place to clarity. For this same reason characters are drawn rather from stock. However, Mr. Tutt is invariably ingenious, and the stories make thoroughly pleasant reading." Robert Van Gelder

+ N Y Times p7 Ap 27 '41 290w

"The benevolent, slightly crotchety, sentimental, old lawyer who always finds a law to fit the necessities of the oppressed innocent has launched a hundred Saturday Evening Posts. The trick is no better and no worse than it has always been; the stories do not lay claim to any serious substance but they make very easy, pleasant reading." Phil Stong

+ Sat R of Lit 23:12 My 3 '41 330w

Springf'd Republican p7e My 11 '41 360w

Wis Lib Bul 37:94 My '41

TRAIN, ARTHUR KISSAM. Story of everyday things; with il. by Chichi Lasley. 428p $3.50 Harper

917.3 U.S.—Civilization. U.S.—Social life and customs (W)

A history of the United States in terms of the "everyday things" of manners and customs and ways of living—houses, clothing, vehicles, furniture, etc. The book is divided into sections chronologically: Indian times; the seventeenth, eighteenth and nineteenth centuries; our days, and the "next hundred years." Index.

"The pages are lightened by a copious quantity of sketches. The research is supported by seventeen closely packed pages of a reading list for the benefit of those who would take any subject on which Mr. Train touches and follow it to its most expandable presentation. Finally, an index, a good working index with everything from acetone and adobe bricks to Ziegfeld and zippers, completes this superb story of every-day American living." Richardson Wright

+ Books p2 D 21 '41 1050w

"All sections are not equally good, but the sketches are based on sound and scholarly texts which avoid the hack misstatements sometimes found in condensed histories. Would be particularly valuable as collateral reading in studying the art, literature, architecture, or costume of a period. The reading lists are excellent and the illustrations good." D. F. Lucas

+ Library J 66:903 O 15 '41 90w

"Mr. Train wastes no time. He writes with an economy which permits an immense amount of detail in small compass. . . Mr. Train is at his best in his accounts of architecture, furniture and costume and he achieves a real triumph in sorting out such terms as Georgian, Queen Anne, Classic Revival, Victorian Gothic, Sheraton, Hepplewhite, Empire Eastlake, pattern, farthingale, ten-gallon hat, and bringing them alive into an evolutionary pattern. He is less at home with the machine and far less sympathetic with it." Roger Burlingame

+ N Y Times p4 D 14 '41 800w

"It is possible, of course, to read 'The Story of Everyday Things' in one long and earnest stretch, but this is not to be recommended. It is a volume for the occasional hour, even the odd minute; then, at long last, to be set aside as a reference book of permanent value."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 21 '41 550w

TRAVELER'S WINDFALL ASSOCIATION, INCORPORATED. Where to eat, sleep and play in the U.S.A.; contributed by the Am. travelers of today for the Am. travelers of tomorrow, de luxe ed 648p maps $1.50 Garden City pub. co.

647.95 Hotels, restaurants, etc. U.S.—Description and travel

Guide to hotels, restaurants, and resorts in the United States. Arrangement is alphabetically by states, and then by towns. Names of restaurants, etc., are given in each town, with the routes on which they are located, prices of meals and lodging, and a sentence of comment from one or more of the book's collaborators. Lists annual happenings in the United States month by month, contains an index of winter sports and one of ranches, and a chapter on wines.

"Seems excellent."

+ Commonweal 34:188 Je 13 '41 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 1 '41 80w

TRAVERS, PAMELA L. I go by sea, I go by land; with drawings by Gertrude Hermes. 233p $2 Harper

(W) 41-51824

Ten-year-old Sabrina describes in diary form how she and her younger brother left their parents and their happy English home and came to America for the duration of the war. The author has also written the popular Mary Poppins stories.

Booklist 37:492 Je 15 '41

Bookmark 2:18 N '41

"It makes, of course, no difference at all whether or not an actual Sabrina had such ideas or put them in a diary. None of the wise and sensitive and funny thoughts that P. L. Travers attributes to her and the small valiant James is out of tune with the insight, 'which, on occasion, a child makes articulate. The author has here acted in the legitimate and creative role of the 'ghost'—has written of the things that a Sabrina and a James would themselves have thought or done had they happened to do so. . . . It is a lovely book, funny and touching and thought-provoking and altogether delightful in its clear child's eye view of England, America and the foibles of adult humanity." Mary Ross

+ Books p2 My 25 '41 950w

Cath World 153:511 Jl '41 280w

"A tale well told and well worth reading."

Margaret Winning

+ Library J 66:463 My 15 '41 60w

Manchester Guardian p3 N 25 '41 50w

Reviewed by Frances Bird

New Statesman & Nation 22:498 D 13 '41 50w

"In the same way that the diary is and is not fiction, so it is and is not a 'children's book'; definitely, it is written for adults—a book about children which holds some implications probably too mature for childish minds; but certainly boys and girls should not be discouraged from reading it! It is above all a human book; amusing and tender and poignant and alive. And its story is as well-built as it is simply and naturally told." K. W.

+ N Y Times p10 Je 1 '41 600w

"Where 'My Sister and I' was tragic in its implication of the upheaval war makes in a child's life and mind, 'I Go By Sea, I Go By Land' treats the same subject in a lighter vein. It is a good, fresh, amusing piece of reporting." Rosemary Carr

+ Sat R of Lit 24:17 My 31 '41 650w

Wis Lib Bul 37:157 O '41

TREADGOLD, MARY. Left till called for; il. by Richard Floethe. 304p $2 Doubleday

(W) 41-19206

A story of two English children who are accidentally left behind when a Channel Island is evacuated. Before the children are finally rescued they are able to take a part in an exciting adventure.

"Caroline and Mick meet their difficult situation with spirit and resourcefulness, obtaining valuable information for the British Secret Service and, of course, being rescued in the end. Told with a knowledge of children, as well as of the islands, and with a sense of humor." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 18:37 Ja '42 110w

"A well-written timely tale with a straightforward plot, carefully avoiding racial hatreds or fervent patriotism. One might question the ability of a young boy to decipher a military code, otherwise the story proceeds logically and plausibly. The author, an English woman, wrote the book in a London bomb shelter. For ages twelve to fifteen." Claire Nolte

+ Library J 66:909 O 15 '41 150w

"An exciting and plausible modern spy story." Jessie Stanton & E. W. Steele

+ New Repub 105:837 D 15 '41 40w

TREAT, IDA (MRS ANDRE BERGERET). The Anchored Heart; a Brittany island during the second world war. 314p $2.50 Harcourt

914.41 Brittany—Social life and customs. World war, 1939—France (W) 41-51962

The writer is an American woman, a student of archeology, who has lived chiefly in France since the first World war. Some twelve or fourteen years ago she bought a house on an island off the coast of Brittany, married a French sea captain, and came more and more into a community of feeling with her Breton neighbors. Her book is an account of how these Bretons looked on the war, and what effect the war had upon their way of life.

"This book . . . can be very warmly recommended to all who love France and believe in her resurrection." Elizabeth Drew

+ Atlantic D '41 200w

Booklist 38:93 N 15 '41

"This combination of human beings, their ideas, their loves and loathings, their sectionalisms, their ignorances, their sturdiness amidst starvation for modern news and ideas—these items and faces and voices in 'The Anchored Heart' make up a real tableau vivant of France. Every strength and weakness of the former French Republic and the permanent French race is on that island, and Miss Treat has put them all under glass, like small civilized objects washed up as wreckage from the sea, and preserved in a little marine museum, where foreign visitors may wander. Flotsam, jetsam, precious polished pieces of wreckage from a great race's character, now water-soaked and temporarily sunken—that is what 'The Anchored Heart' displays. It is a touching, tragic collection." Janet Flanner

+ Books p5 O 26 '41 950w

+ Christian Century 58:1380 N 5 '41 40w

Christian Science Monitor p10 D 27 '41 650w

"Because one gallant French woman, Marie Lebras, moves through the whole book, enlivening its pages with her salty and sensible remarks, the whole volume has much of the flavor of a novel. And a mighty fine one, at that. The title of this book is the name of Miss Treat's island house." E. S. Hertell

TREAT, IDA—Continued

+ Churchman 155:34 N 15 '41 100w

"Miss Treat writes with great charm and fine feeling for landscape and people." Margaret Marshall

+ Nation 153:403 O 25 '41 360w

"A warmly personal and quite satisfactory account of a piece of history that so far has been almost exclusively in the newspaper files."

+ New Repub 105:370 D 22 '41 80w

"A straightforward and valuable book. In the spate of printed matter about the fall of France this unpretentious personal chronicle has something of lasting worth to bring us: not because its scene is unfamiliar, but because it shows us, without sensationalism or sentimentality, a microcosm." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p26 N 9 '41 950w

"A fine book, simple, touching, and skillfully written."

+ New Yorker 17:92 O 25 '41 50w

"The book is not notably successful as a picture of the Breton islanders; it is too subjectively felt perhaps by the author to be vivid and characteristic. But it gives a strong sense of the island and the German army." Currie Cabot

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:6 Ja 10 '42 220w

Spring'd Republican p7e N 9 '41 220w

TREAT, LAWRENCE, D as in dead. 305p $2 Duell

41-24079

Detective story.

"Goofy in spots." Will Cuppy

Books p32 N 30 '41 160w

"For the benefit of those who like their detective stories to be fairly reasonable it is no more than fair to state that this one positively reeks of red herring." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p38 D 7 '41 220w

"Pungent and galloping yarn. Satisfying."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:24 N 22 '41 40w

TREHEY, HAROLD FRANCIS. Foundations of a modern guild system. 204p $2 Catholic univ. of Am.

335.7 Gild socialism

40-34409

"The instability of our economic system prompts a search for security. The author finds this in a guild system based on the Papal Encyclicals. The democratic character of Catholic social teaching in such a guild system is the main theme of the book. Thus the evidences of a guild system in the totalitarian states, including Portugal to a certain degree, are deprecated as being imposed from above and not being established from below in a democratic manner. The author reviews primarily French thought on the guild system." Am Econ R

Reviewed by T. C. Helmreich

Am Econ R 31:196 Mr '41 330w

Cath World 154:250 N '41 270w

"A readable, well-documented study."

+ Commonweal 34:117 My 23 '41 120w

TREND, JOHN BRANDE. Mexico: a new Spain with old friends. 185p il map $2.50 Macmillan [12s 6d Cambridge]

917.2 Mexico—Description and travel

(W) [A41-545]

Mr. Trend, a professor of Spanish at Cambridge University, England, writes his impressions of two visits to Mexico in 1938 and 1939, one of sixteen days, the other of six months. He is interested in archeology, architecture, language, and flowers, very appreciative of Mexico and the Mexican people and sympathetic with the Cardénas régime. Index.

Booklist 37:357 Ap 1 '41

"Mr. Trend was a visitor with unusual interests and qualifications, and although he has no new information to convey, he succeeds in portraying Mexico from a somewhat novel angle."

... In spite of Mr. Trend's avoidance of controversial questions, his book will be of real value in counteracting the reports given by persons hostile to the present Mexican regime."

H. B. Parkes

+ Books p16 Ja 26 '41 480w

Christian Century 58:658 My 14 '41 140w

Cleveland Open Shelf Mr '41

Foreign Affairs 19:689 Ap '41 10w

Manchester Guardian p7 D 31 '40 400w

"His book is entirely personal in its gravitations, wholly liberal in its thought, and pleasing reading in its dry, crisp style."

+ N Y Times p5 F 2 '41 480w

"The book contains a curious mixture of elementary and specialized information; some chapters read like a simple tourist's diary, others are likely to interest only those who already know Mexico or have scholarly interests. Although it has little obvious charm, at least Mr. Trend is not resolved to be always charming; and although his observations are seldom original or penetrating, he is a good enough guide because he is always curious, sensible, honest, sympathetic." H. J. Muller

+ — Sat R of Lit 23:10 Mr 29 '41 270w

"In spite of the unconscious humour of many of the scenes, the book would not be worth attention if it were not symptomatic—symptomatic of the inhumanity of the academic brain, and its unreliability." Graham Greene

— Spec 165:538 N 22 '40 850w

"His knowledge, in particular, of flowers and his thorough understanding of the language make many of his comments of interest and value. While many of the views expressed in this book are not likely to meet with universal approval, it can at least be claimed to be a good, if discursive and short, account of a country whose experience in the last thirty years has been watched with interest in other parts of the world and particularly throughout Latin America."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p568 N 9 '40 550w

TRENT, ROBBIE. Your child and God. 146p $1.50 Willett

268 Religious education

41-11837

Study of religion and the child. The author, who is elementary editor of the Southern Baptist Sunday school board, has used stories of actual children. "Shall I teach my child of God? Emphatically, yes! is Miss Trent's answer. She then goes on to discuss the child's concept of God." (Christian Century)

"This is a rich and stimulating little book. . . The book is practical in spite of its idealization; it is inspiring to parent, teacher and minister. The last named will find in it many poignant sermon illustrations. I, for one, would like to put the book in the hands of the teachers and parents of my church. And I would certainly like to find a few Miss Trents to teach in my church school!" Rollo May

+ Christian Century 58:1376 N 5 '41 500w

"Aside from two unguarded attitudes—toward Jesus and the Bible—Miss Trent has done an exceptional piece of work. The reviewer commends it therefore almost above any similar book of which he knows. It is beautifully written, aptly illustrated from the school and nursery, and is altogether worthy of becoming a handbook for the guidance of Christian mothers of young children." W. R. McNutt

+ — Crozer Q 18:348 O '41 360w

TRESSLER, IRVING DART. Readers digest very little; or, A treasury of the world's greatest litter. 172p $1.49 Howell, Soskin

817

41-20915

Collection of humorous short sketches by the author of How to Lose Friends and Alienate People (Book Review Digest, 1937). The subjects vary from how to build a swimming pool for $3.02, to marriage on a shoestring, and how to bathe your dog.

"Mr. Tressler's wit is not subtle, but it promises a laugh."

N Y Times p3 O 5 '41 300w

"The book is dedicated to 'all those who won't try to read it at one sitting.' The author is quite correct in this: It's much more amusing in small doses."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e O 12 '41 240w

TRINKAUS, CHARLES EDWARD. Adversity's noblemen; the Italian humanists on happiness. 172p $2 Columbia univ. press

144 Humanism, Happiness, Italian literature—History and Criticism 40-33641

"[This volume] investigates the character and cultural significance of the attitude towards happiness of the Italian humanists. The persons here selected as representatives of humanism are Italian writers from the fourteenth to the sixteenth century who have usually been so regarded. . . . Since humanism was by definition professedly more concerned with human interests and problems, especially as these were reflected in non-Christian classical literature, the subject of the individual's happiness, it has been assumed, was its peculiar concern to a far greater extent than in earlier Christian medieval thought and writing. . . . Specifically, the writings of humanism on Happiness, True Nobility, Human Dignity and related themes . . . will be considered." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by W. K. Ferguson

Am Hist R 46:890 J1 '41 550w

"The book is rather wearisome reading because of the multiplicity and the diversity of the views presented. It clearly discloses that there was no single philosophy of life among these humanists of Italy. Reading it tends to make one less dissatisfied with the variety of opinions and conclusions reached by our modern thinkers, especially the liberals among them." G. W. Davis

Crozer Q 18:79 Ja '41 170w

"While I am in general agreement with the conclusions of the author, especially as he puts them cautiously in the last chapter, I must make some reservations with respect to his method of approach. . . . Aside from this criticism, we should like to say that this is an interesting, intelligent, and well-written book, which has the merit of presenting to the modern historian a large amount of valuable material. We hope the author will continue his studies in a field in which much work is still to be done and for which he shows himself to be well-equipped." P. O. Kristeller

+ — J Philos 38:31 Ja 30 '41 1850w

TROY, HUGH. The Chippendale dam [il. by the author]. 45p $1.50 Oxford

(W) 41-17952

A lonely widow living in an old Manhattan house with her two pet beavers and some ancient Chippendale furniture went out one rainy day to beg for food. A flood occurred in her absence and the beavers built a dam with the Chippendale furniture, which turned out to be a marvelous thing from many angles.

"The story's age-appeal is put between six and ten; it will cause a chuckle to older readers." M. L. Becker

+ Books p9 S 28 '41 280w

"The story is as fresh and original as the author's illustrations are amusing." E. V. Wyatt

+ Cath World 154:373 D '41 30w

Reviewed by A. C. Moore

Horn Bk M 17:457 N '41 200w

"Thoroughly New York in its setting and delightful pictures, it is fun for any one who likes good nonsense wherever he may live." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 18:30 Ja '42 40w

"Entertaining and fresh." Amy Loveman

+ Sat R of Lit 24:6 N 8 '41 40w

TROYAT, HENRI. Judith Madrier; tr. by James Whitall. 223p $2 Washburn

41-9279

The scene of this novel is France during the early months of the war. The chief character, Judith Madrier, is the wife of a merchant serving his country in the commissary department. Judith has been unfaithful with a young soldier now at the front but when her husband forgives her, she takes revenge on his goodness by taking another lover. The story ends with the death of the first lover, Judith's flight with the second, and the departure to the front of the husband.

"War is the background of the whole story, but it is a war which is trivialized by the writer's treatment. . . . At another time than the present we might be more tolerant of the technical dexterity and wit of the author. But we grow a little impatient of his preoccupation with clandestine amours when we remember that at the very time of writing Hitler was preparing the blitzkrieg that has temporarily removed Paris from the orbit of Western civilization." Milton Hindus

+ Books p8 Je 1 '41 480w

"As a story which is told with a clear, hard brilliance in a foreign setting and with a foreign idiom of society—a story not lacking in compassion but quite unvarnished and unveiled, and generally of the species which is descended from 'Madame Bovary'—it may or may not interest a sizable public here. But as an investigation of cause and effect in human conduct, as shown in the lives of two ordinary individuals, it is worthy of considerable attention and some disturbing thought." Katherine Woods

N Y Times p7 Je 1 '41 850w

"M. Troyat is no Flaubert, but his book is sharp, clear, very French, and contains some moving episodes."

New Yorker 17:70 My 31 '41 50w

TRUMAN, DAVID BICKNELL. Administrative decentralization. 211p $2.50 Univ. of Chicago press [15s Cambridge]

630.6173 U.S. Agriculture, Department of 41-6494

"A study of the Chicago field offices of the United States Department of Agriculture. It places primary emphasis upon the activities of the field officials, attempting to relate the problems of field activity to regional characteristics. The book does not deal with technical administrative procedures but with the broader problems of a far-flung organization." (Management R) Index.

Reviewed by L. M. Short

Am Pol Sci R 35:558 Je '41 240w

Management R 30:115 Mr '41 80w

"While the subject is important and the available literature on it sparse, the author's treatment is far from satisfying. The work is informative but the original research materials are spread too thin. The problem of criteria needs more profound analysis and the criteria developed need to be applied more incisively." Harvey Pinney

Social Forces 20:128 O '41 360w

TRUMBO, DALTON. The remarkable Andrew; being the chronicle of a literal man. 350p $2.50 Lippincott

(W) 41-51551

A satirical allegory in the manner of Candide. Young Andrew Long, a poor but honest bookkeeper, is assisted in some book balancing difficulties by his favorite hero in American history, old Andrew Jackson. The ghost of General Jackson proceeds to discuss with the young man America's position in the present European war situation. Keen satiric shafts are directed at New Deal economy and philosophy, and the Administration's foreign policy.

Booklist 37:271 F 15 '41

"Such skits do not very often come off. This one does; it is skillful, witty and first-rate storytelling—suspense and all. . . This is pretty keen political debate, leaving the argument just where it stood, but clearing the atmosphere of muddled thinking on both sides. And Mr. Trumbo has left himself wide open for as brilliant and candid a 'rebuttal.'" F. T. Marsh

+ Books p5 F 2 '41 800w

"This is a swell yarn. That statement will have to stand, even though the purists flinch. There is no better way of describing it." W. E. Barrett

+ Boston Transcript p2 F 8 '41 650w

Reviewed by W. M. Callahan
Commonweal 33:426 F 14 '41 240w

Reviewed by Wilfrid Gibson
Manchester Guardian p3 O 24 '41 140w

"Aside from being a rather thinned-out version of 'The Devil and Daniel Webster,' it gets in some easy and not very telling cracks at political corruption and at our present foreign policy. It all adds up to nothing more than an entertaining little scherzo." Nation 152:164 F 8 '41 80w

New Repub 104:382 Mr 17 '41 90w

"The book makes some trenchant points and offers some stimulating comment, but its blending of the didactic and fantastic, the romantic and practical, is more remarkable than felicitous." Beatrice Sherman
N Y Times p6 F 2 '41 650w

"Full of pointed comments on current matters."

+ New Yorker 16:55 F 1 '41 50w

Pratt p11 spring '41

"This is a likable book because it is always clever and usually funny. It is the more readable because it is timely. It is an important book if only because a man dared to write it with the times so out of joint." Holmes Alexander

+ Sat R of Lit 23:10 F 15 '41 380w
Time 37:74 F 3 '41 270w

"Despite the somewhat mechanical extravagance of language, there are entertaining passages. Despite the facility, too, of the supernatural intrusion, the author quotes the great American shades to some effect. But the lengthy couple of chapters in the middle in which General Andrew Jackson roaringly lets himself go in support of the extreme isolationist point of view in the United States to-day leave a nasty taste in the mouth. The misrepresentation that apparently feeds such suicidal tendencies in the matter as exist in America in 1941 is anything but a joke."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p517 O 18 '41 360w

Wis Lib Bul 37:56 Mr '41

TUDOR, TASHA. Snow before Christmas [il. by the author.] [33p] $1 Oxford

Dainty little picture-story book about Seth and Bethany and Muffin, three jolly small children who lived in an old house in the country and waited for Christmas to come.

Booklist 38:38 O 1 '41

"The long ago story of a Christmas in New England will delight all ages."

+ Churchman 155:4 D 15 '41 10w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse
Commonweal 35:111 N 21 '41 10w

Reviewed by Warren Chappell
Horn Bk M 17:455 N '41 10w

"Many delicate pictures in the colors of the New England winter scene show a country Christmas from a little child's viewpoint. It is a genuine old-fashioned Christmas too, with a host of relatives to make the day a jolly one, with fun and feasting and a spirit of love." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:459 N '41 40w

"This small book is too fragile for ordinary wear and tear. (Or is it?). . . But the joy of ownership and of handling on the library picture book table is something that will last life-long." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 66:847 O 1 '41 110w

"The pictures are charming in color and spirit, and Tasha Tudor has succeeded in capturing that feeling of anticipation in which, for the child, lies the joy of the Christmas season." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 D 14 '41 140w

New Yorker 17:148 D 6 '41 30w

"Pleasing and dainty." Amy Loveman

+ Sat R of Lit 24:6 N 8 '41 40w
Wis Lib Bul 37:181 N '41

TUDOR, TASHA. A tale for Easter. [33p] il $1 Oxford

41-5152

A dainty little story, with colored pictures, describing the joys of Easter for the very smallest children.

Booklist 37:412 My 1 '41

"A jewel of prettiness, this little book is light in the hand, tidy in size, gentle in spirit. Its water-color pictures are not imitations of Kate Greenaway, but bring her to mind by making one happy in the same way." M. L. Becker

+ Books p10 My 11 '41 100w

"The Easter tale will please small folk."

+ Churchman 155:4 D 15 '41 10w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk M 17:206 My '41 60w

"As slight and simple a thing as the first narcissus, the book has the same unforgettable air of joy." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Mr 30 '41 190w

TUELL, ANNE KIMBALL. John Sterling; a representative Victorian. (Wellesley college. Publication. Sophie Hart fund) 405p $3.50 Macmillan

B or 92 Sterling, John 41-9027

Biography of an English author and poet of the Victorian age, best known thru his friendship with Carlyle. Sterling was born in Scotland in 1806, and died at Ventnor, Isle of Wight, in 1844. During his short life he managed a West Indian sugar plantation, owned the Athenaeum for a time, was curate at Hurstmonceux, and wrote several books of poetry and prose. Among his friends he numbered Coleridge, Thackeray, Maurice, and Carlyle. The last named published a biography of Sterling in 1851. Index.

"If one wonders whether the research that has gone into this recent Wellesley College publication might not have been more valuable directed toward a more stimulating subject, there still persists admiration for a very thorough work of scholarship. . . But Miss Tuell has succeeded in arousing our interest for a brief while and our sympathy of longer duration for this man whose essays and verse and fiction were, at best, second rate, but who was a first rate English gentleman of the early Victorian period." G. S. Hellman

+ Books p12 Jl 13 '41 320w

"Professor Tuell presents Sterling with insight, sympathy, and a careful documentation which corrects his celebrated biographer at several points, and she makes it possible to see in this sensitive, ardent, and restive soul, this genius manqué, the symbol of an era." J. J. R.

+ Cath World 153:756 S '41 600w

"Miss Tuell paints [Sterling's] portrait in relation to his friends, and in that way produces a very pleasant sketch of an appealing, rather weak, enthusiastic, and lovable young man. . . The errors in this book are incredible. . . On page 110 we have 'self-approach' instead of 'self-reproach,' on 130 'qui' for 'cui' and 324 'cribbed in the margin' should be, presumably, 'scribbled in the margin.'" R. E. Roberts

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:16 My 31 '41 410w

TUNG, LING. China and some phases of international law; with a foreword by Quincy Wright; issued under the auspices of the China inst. of Pacific relations. 210p $2.25 Oxford

327.51 China—Foreign relations. International law and relations A 41-569

"The author brings to his work the results of academic study in this country plus practical experience as Secretary to the Central Political Council of the Chinese National Government. The book purports to cover only certain phases of the law. Included are the topics of jurisdiction, nationality, diplomatic and consular relations, and pacific settlement of international disputes. Each of these is broken down into its component parts, such as jurisdiction over territory, over ships, and over persons. The treatment is further limited in that it embraces only the period since 1842. More especially, it is concerned with legal developments since 1911. Much use is made of treaties, laws, and regulations." Am Pol Sci R

"Dr. Tung has made an excellent start on a large subject. It is to be hoped that he will extend his writings to cover China's interpretation of other phases of international law. In particular, at a time when there is such need of rethinking the theoretical premises of the law, it would be helpful to have the benefit of counsel along such lines from one through whose race flows the wisdom of centuries." N. J. Padelford

Am Pol Sci R 35:178 F '41 380w

Foreign Affairs 19:688 Ap '41 20w

Reviewed by Franz Michael

Pacific Affairs 14:362 S '41 800w

TUNIS, JOHN ROBERTS. Democracy and sport; introd. by Raymond Gram Swing. 52p 75c Barnes, A.S.

796.01 Sports. Democracy 41-6883

An American sports writer sets forth his ideas on the subject of sports as the testing ground for democracy. The totalitarian countries have used sports to train their youth for war; in the democratic countries the youth should be trained for constructive, rather than destructive, pursuits.

Booklist 37:511 Jl 1 '41

Bookmark 2:9 N '41

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '41

Spring'd Republican p7e Jl 20 '41 70w

Reviewed by Leon Whipple

Survey G 30:403 Jl '41 300w

TUNIS, JOHN ROBERTS. This writing game; selections from twenty years of freelancing; introd. by Frederick Lewis Allen. 357p $3 Barnes, A.S.

818 Sports (W) 41-21098

A selection of some of the magazine articles written by the author during twenty years of free-lancing. The subjects are for the most part from the field of sports; the magazines include Harper's, Cosmopolitan, Atlantic, Foreign Affairs, etc.

"Though these articles are, with few exceptions—one of these being '25th Reunion'—in the field of sports, each is prefaced by a brief account of how it came to be written, and as these italicized portions are pointed and practical, the book is useful in other fields, even those of fiction."

+ Books p18 N 23 '41 130w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 D '41

"The book is an example of good reporting and skillful manipulation of material."

+ Spring'd Republican p8 N 5 '41 300w

TUNIS, JOHN ROBERTS. World series; il. by Jay Hyde Barnum. 318p $2 Harcourt

(W) 41-13402

Continues the story begun in The Kid from Tomkinsville (Book Review Digest, 1940). In this book Roy Tucker plays right field with the Brooklyn baseball club in a world series. In the first game he has an accident, but recovers in time to help the team win in the finals.

Booklist 38:18 S '41

"It was a foregone conclusion that 'The Kid From Tomkinsville' should go on to glory in another book; the Connecticut rookie who made good with the Dodgers could not be stopped in mid-career. But as a sequel 'World Series' is in a class by itself; self-contained, not needing the backing of the first book, one realizes in looking back over 'The Kid' that this one takes that book clear off its feet for speed, suspense and sheer skill." M. L. Becker

+ Books p5 Ag 17 '41 240w

"A real story that sticks to the game." E. T. Dobbins

+ Library J 66:737 S 1 '41 60w

"There is less emphasis upon characters here, and a little less upon the qualities of mind and heart which make champions of individual players than in the first book, but there is even more of baseball, of actual runs, hits and inevitable errors described with a tempo and force which will doubtless make this book as popular as its noteworthy predecessor." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 O 19 '41 360w

TUNNEY, GENE. Arms for living. 279p il $2 Funk, W.

B or 92 41-22539

"In this pleasant little book, part lecture and part reminiscence, Lieutenant Commander Gene, director of the Physical Fitness Program for the United States Navy, gives a sort of pep talk to the young men of the United States. The book is dedicated 'to American mothers and their sons.' Although he doesn't mention this matter, it is probable that this book is intended as an answer to the outraged professional physical science experts who set up such a howl at the time of his appointment. . . The major part of this book tells the story of the rise of a skinny Irish boy from the lower East Side of New York, of how he overcame his defects by the exercise of an indomitable will, how he trained his mind by the reading of good books and by association with intelligent persons, and how he at last vanquished the great Dempsey. . . The burden of his message is that 'If I could do it, you can do it too.'" Books

"There are some excellent anecdotes there. Mr. Tunney made himself a good fighter; he has developed into a pretty fair writer. He has naive streaks, and sometimes he sounds as if he thinks rather well of himself—but why shouldn't he?" Stanley Walker

+ Books p22 O 26 '41 360w

Reviewed by E. L. Keyes

Commonweal 35:75 N 7 '41 140w

TUNNEY, GENE—Continued

"A lively yet restrained and sensitive autobiography of a man of mature judgment and fine discrimination."

+ Springfd Republican p7e N 9 '41 850w

TURNBULL, MRS AGNES (SLIGH). Dear me; leaves from [her] diary. 170p $1.75 Macmillan

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 41-15753

This diary was written without any intention that it should be published tho the author is a writer with several novels to her credit. The time covered is from September 1939 to March, 1941, and the events include the acquisition of a new puppy, daughter's first sub-deb dance, a lecture tour or two, important housekeeping tasks, an evening at the opera. The title is taken from a note daughter wrote to herself—beginning "Dear Me," which dealt with the serious concerns of beauty secrets.

Reviewed by Mary Ross
Books p10 S 7 '41 550w

"Completely unimportant and completely entertaining."

+ Christian Century 58:1084 S 3 '41 20w

"Mrs. Turnbull has a sense of humor. No wonder her publishers insisted that she should change her original plan for the anonymous publication of the diary, and permit the use of her name, in consideration of past and future readers of her novels." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 S 27 '41 460w

"In the charm and intimacy of this diary [the author] shares with the reader the joys of [her] small daily savorings, as well as her deeper perceptions." Anita Moffett

+ N Y Times p18 S 21 '41 500w

Wis Lib Bul 37:155 O '41

TURNBULL, BELLE. Goldboat. 77p $2 Houghton

811

40-33494

A narrative in free verse. A young engineer comes to a village in the Rockies to supervise his employer's gold dredging operations. Disillusioned by the chicanery of big business, and by the pettiness of the pretty Alicia, he gives up his former life to live in the village and marry a mountain girl.

"It's a good story; the romance is conventional, but genuine enough; the background characters tough and real. More difficult matters for poetry—details of gold-dredge operation and the machinations of capitalistic enterprise—are handled with clarity and expediency (as in the sections Extracts From Driller's Report and Telegrams) that seldom fall below the demands of good modern verse structure."

+ Books p29 Ap 6 '41 240w

Reviewed by Pearl Strachan

Christian Science Monitor p13 N 15 '41 160w

"The descriptive lines are serious and often beautiful. The plot progresses with correct technical detail to tell how the steam dredges failed and went down under the water, how the remote-control millionaires who owned the mines refused their operators enough money to salvage the dredges and tried to shift the expense to stockholders or even the dredgers themselves, how spoiled Alicia, the owner's daughter, loses her man to Leafy Buffin, when he resigns his job as 'company boss' and decides to enter mountain life through 'the horny gate.' The poetic method seems to serve the theme except in the snatches of conversation between John Dorn and his city sweetheart. These seem burlesqued, perhaps for deliberate contrast with the mountain-talk." J. N. North

+ — Poetry 57:274 Ja '41 700w

"The exigencies of verse form, however free, make for so much condensation and impressionism that the thread of the story is at times rather difficult to follow. It is the reviewer's opinion that the medium of poetry detracts rather than adds to the force of the work. Miss Turnbull's ability as a story teller is so good, and her style so vivid, that as prose this would still have retained a poetic quality. As it is, it falls between two stools, and there is too much the flavor of experiment about it. The author could, I believe, do credit to herself in both fields, whereas a combination of prose and poetry lacks the best qualities of either." S. H. Hay

+ — Sat R of Lit 23:7 F 15 '41 280w

TURNER, ARLIN, ed. See Hawthorne, N. Hawthorne as editor

TURNER, HOWARD HAINES. Case studies of consumers' cooperatives; successful co-operatives started by Finnish groups in the United States, studied in relation to their social and economic environment. 330p $2.50 Columbia univ. press

334.5 Cooperation. Finns in the U.S.
41-13891

"Dr Turner's book is a detailed study of the United Cooperative society in Maynard, Mass., and the cooperative societies served by the Central Cooperative wholesale in the Lake Superior region, including parts of Michigan, Minnesota and Wisconsin. In each case, he has chosen cooperatives which have been founded by a particular group of immigrant workers, the Finnish Americans and in each case he has chosen cooperatives which have been eminently successful." (Springfd Republican) Index.

Reviewed by H. H. Bakken
Am Econ R 31:919 D '41 300w

"The work is an interpretation, sound and scholarly in its breadth, selection, and balance. The most remarkable thing about the book will probably escape the average reader. It is the accuracy with which the social and psychological phases of the problem have been handled." T. V. Kalijarvi

+ Ann Am Acad 218:238 N '41 500w

Commonweal 34:453 Ag 29 '41 90w

Reviewed by L. M. Brooks
Social Forces 20:278 D '41 280w

"Dr Turner, though prejudiced in favor of consumers' cooperation from the beginning, has been honest in presenting the results of his research." M. L. Warren

+ Springfd Republican p7e Jl 20 '41 550w

TURNER, JOHN KENNETH. Challenge to Karl Marx. 455p $3.50 Reynal

335 Marx, Karl. Economics. Communism. Political science (W) 41-10544

"The purposes of Mr. Turner's book are to describe the ideas of Karl Marx and to demonstrate that they have not been corroborated by the economic and political developments of the last three-quarters of a century. After an introductory section attacking those individuals who have tried to 'modernize' Marx and to preserve his reputation by denying that he really meant what he said, Mr. Turner discusses the 'basic prophecies' of Marxism—its belief in the disappearance of the middle class, in the steady decrease of wages and increase of hours of labor, in the revolutionary psychology of the working class and in the imminence of world revolution." (Books) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by H. B. Parkes
Books p17 S 14 '41 700w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:375 Ja '42 50w

"Mr. Turner, we are told, has never been able to swallow Marxism; nor, one is tempted to add, to digest it either. For his volume is neither an intelligent presentation of Marxism nor a stimulating or suggestive critique of its doctrines. Its thesis is the familiar refrain. Marx and Engels were wrong in virtually everything they said." D. W. Petegorsky
— New Repub 105:677 N 17 '41 500w

TURNER, JOSIE, pseud. See Crawford, P.

TURNER, LIDA LARRIMORE (MRS C. E. THOMAS) (LIDA LARRIMORE, pseud). Beyond tomorrow. 311p $2 Macrae Smith co.

41-21547

Story of young married life. Nancy had never learned to economize and Brad had an expensive hobby of remodeling old houses. At first Nancy was out of sympathy with Brad's project, but after a taste of freedom she decided on Brad plus all his schemes.

"You will find this a wise contribution to the general topic of domestic felicity." Lisle Bell
+ Books p36 N 2 '41 130w

"It is the saving grace of a not extraordinary novel that Nancy was gay and gifted with amusing repartee. Some of her quips are quite good. . . Readers who like to toy with the idea of fixing up old houses will have more sympathy with Brad than Nancy had." Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p22 O 26 '41 110w

TURNER, IDA VIRGINIA. Paul Bunyan, the work giant; il. by Norma Madge Lyon and Harold L. Price. [79p] $2 Binfords

(W) 41-6272

Large colored pictures, and short text, explaining the gargantuan exploits of Paul Bunyan and the blue ox, Babe. For all ages from early grades up.

"The text is simple and brief, but adequate. The book should be seen on approval before purchase since opinions on it were almost equally divided."

Booklist 37:516 J1 1 '41

"The story is in short paragraphs, told without dressing and taking in all the leading exploits. I have tried to keep track of Bunyanians, and this book stands up so well in such literature that I trust it will be made part of permanent collections of American folklore: its robustness and high animal spirits stop well this side of vulgarity but keep the racy humor of practical jokes and native tall tales." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 My 25 '41 230w

"It is chiefly as a picture-book that this volume will be welcomed, for the stories are told very briefly, so that they lack the leisurely piling of detail upon detail which is one of the major charms of the tall story, but the paragraphs of text are so skillfully constructed that each astounding fact about the mighty logger has its own shock of surprise and amazement." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p12 Ap 13 '41 250w

TUTHILL, JOHN T. He's in the navy now. 256p il $2.50 McBride

359 Naval education. U.S.—Navy

(W) 41-52056

Companion volume to Baumer's He's in the Army Now. The book tells "exactly what happens to an applicant from the moment he applies to the time he is accepted, and what he experiences when he is assigned to a receiving station, battleship, submarine, PT boat, or when he is assigned to shore duty." (Page 9)

Booklist 38:152 Ja 1 '42

"With seagoing habit Comdr Tuthill clears for action at the word go and steams through his subject with a refreshing disdain for the dramatic trimmings which some writers consider essential to catch the fancy of the land-lubber. The book is profusely illustrated with official navy photographs." G. W. E.

+ Spring'd Republican p7e D 14 '41 420w

TUTTLE, WILBUR C. The tin god of Twisted River. 242p $2 Houghton

41-51906

Western story.

Booklist 38:36 O 1 '41

"Fun for Western fans." Will Cuppy
+ Books p9 J1 20 '41 40w

"The veteran W. C. Tuttle is in top form in this latest chapter of the Hashknife saga. It is both a good Western and a good mystery." G. W. Harris

+ N Y Times p12 Ag 17 '41 260w

TWAIN, MARK, pseud. See Clemens, S. L.

TWENTIETH CENTURY FUND, INC. Housing committee. Housing for defense; a review of the role of housing in relation to America's defense and a program for action: the factual findings, by Miles L. Colean; the program, by the Housing committee. 198p $1.50 The fund

331.833 Housing

40-27856

"A careful, authoritative, yet readable account of the findings from a special study of the housing situation as it has developed in the United States since the national defense program was begun in May 1940, together with suggestions for meeting the emergency without the confusion and waste which resulted from the situation during the World War and without undue lowering of the standards for 'livability' now publicly accepted for low-cost housing." J Home Econ

Reviewed by James McCreary

Am Econ R 31:434 Je '41 170w

Reviewed by E. E. Wood

Ann Am Acad 215:227 My '41 410w

Booklist 37:168 Ja 1 '41

J Home Econ 23:114 F '41 60w

Management R 30:156 Ap '41 80w

Pratt p6 spring '41

"While the book is an important addition to housing literature, it is disappointing in that it does not appear to be either as comprehensive or as impartial as would be desirable. I believe that it could be improved and hope that the authors will from time to time supplement it with other material which will assist the public in keeping up to date with the rapidly expanding program. It is to be hoped, also, that the authors will further analyze the possibilities of developing some of the government housing departments other than those immediately under the jurisdiction of the Federal Loan Agency."

Carl Feiss

+ — Survey G 30:89 F '41 650w

TWENTIETH CENTURY FUND, INC. Labor committee. Labor and national defense; a survey of the special labor problems arising from America's defense activities and a program for action [foreword by Evans Clark]. 130p $1 The fund 331.0973 Labor and laboring classes—U.S.

U.S.—Defenses. World war, 1939—U.S.

41-5363

"The Twentieth Century Fund offers here the findings of an emergency survey of labor needs, labor supply, and labor problems under America's armament program. The factual findings and analysis were prepared by a special research staff headed by Lloyd G. Reynolds.

TWENTIETH CENTURY FUND—Continued.
In accordance with Fund procedure, the findings were reviewed by an impartial committee of distinguished authorities who have made a series of recommendations for public policy. One basic finding of the survey, underlined both by the research facts and the recommendations of the Fund's Labor Committee, is that voluntary mediation, rather than legal compulsion, points the way to industrial peace under America's defense program." Management R

"The problems with which this little book deals are among the most important faced by the United States at the present time. Their solution in a manner satisfactory to employers, labor, and the national interests would surely be facilitated by wide reading of this simple, straightforward, well-balanced discussion." J. P. Wernette

+ Am Econ R 31:665 S '41 1050w

Reviewed by N. J. Ware

Ann Am Acad 217:198 S '41 280w

Booklist 37:459 Je 1 '41

Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 14 '41 900w

Reviewed by J. P. Boland

Commonweal 34:66 My 9 '41 330w

Management R 30:192 My '41 500w

"The Twentieth Century Fund has rendered an invaluable service by its timely publication of a report on labor in its relation to national defense. Its findings and recommendations are as up to the minute as the morning newspaper, without the distortion, confusion, and alarm which characterize so many of the current press accounts of happenings on the labor front." R. M. Stein

+ Nation 152:478 Ap 19 '41 1000w

TYLER, PARKER. Metaphor in the jungle, and other poems. 1st ed 40p $2; pa 75c Press of James A. Decker

811

"Mr. Tyler's publisher says that his technique exploits 'the contemporary trends of neo-symbolism and surrealism.' . . . Mr. Tyler's verse-structure does combine, very Rimbaud-dextrously, features of many comparatively recent styles: Eliot, Joyce, Auden. . . . Most of all, his symbols may be called 'a play upon Freud's.' They raise the question of where 'euphemism' leaves off and 'symbolism' begins." Books

"It may be said of surrealism that if you get what it is about, it has failed. This is not by way of disparagement. One of its avowed intentions is to mystify—to 'evoke sensation'—whether the mystery is to be delightful or terrifying. Even its originator need not always know what it is about. Judged by such a standard, Parker Tyler's poems are not quite surrealist. They are obscure, yes, but it is the conscious obscurity of an argot or of a neo-argot." Lloyd Frankenburg

Books p16 O 19 '41 320w

Reviewed by P. M. Jack

N Y Times p5 D 14 '41 70w

Reviewed by K. J. Shapiro

Poetry 58:343 S '41 220w

U

ULLATHORNE, WILLIAM BERNARD, abp.
From cabin-boy to archbishop; printed from the original draft; with an introd. by Shane Leslie. 310p $5 Benziger [15s Burns]

B or 92

41-19607

"Archbishop William Bernard Ullathorne was born in 1806 and died in 1889. He was the last of the Vicars-Apostolic who ruled Catholic England before the Pope introduced the Hierarchy and created the English Sees in 1850. In 1868 he recalled and wrote out many passages of his eventful life. He had adventured as a cabin-boy to sea. . . . After suffering a revival or conversion in his soul he returned to his home in Yorkshire and seized the first opportunity to join the Benedictines at Downside in Somerset. . . . The distant mission of Australia, then an unknown continent, called him and he literally became a chaplain to Botany Bay. . . . His Australian visits dated from 1833 and 1839. He bade final farewell in November, 1840. . . . He returned to England to serve the Coventry Mission, to become Vicar-General in the West and finally to settle at Birmingham where the illustrious Dr. Newman was a subject in his diocese. He died as Archbishop of Cabasa." (Introd) Index.

"His autobiography contains much material which is of highly specialised interest about the squabbles between the Catholic authorities in England a hundred years ago, before the restoration of the Hierarchy, but the first half of the book can be strongly recommended to the general reader."

+ New Statesman & Nation 21:445 Ap 26 '41 550w

"Mr. Leslie is to be congratulated on his careful editing, but it would seem that p. 286, line 2, should read Latin Letters, not Latin Bishops. In spite of its somewhat specialised appeal, all students of the English religious life of the first half of the nineteenth century will be grateful for this book." David Mathew

+ Spec 166:352 Mr 28 '41 600w

Times [London] Lit Sup p152 Mr 29 '41 490w

ULLMAN, JAMES RAMSEY. High conquest. 334p il maps $3.75 Lippincott

796.52 Mountaineering (W) 41-22275

The story of mountaineering told for the non-climber. The first section of the book describes climbing in the Alps, from the earliest days to the prewar era and the development of competitive nationalism in climbing. The second section takes up climbing in all parts of the world—North and South America, Africa, and Asia. Part three is mainly devoted to climbing in North America. The appendix contains: a note on volcanoes; one hundred famous mountains; a glossary of mountaineering terms; a reading list; and an index.

Booklist 38:110 D 1 '41

"For all the fine descriptions of superb moments in mountains the book is written with reserve. This is not a volume of the 'thrill and romance' of mountaineering but is a direct tale told by an artist." Roderick Peattie

+ Books p7 N 16 '41 750w

"The author writes in a pleasing style, though his over-use of several expressions is a bit redundant. The photographs are excellently chosen and well reproduced. A few more maps would be a welcome addition, and on technicalities one might take issue with some of the definitions on pp. 291-92." Anderson Bakewell

+ Commonweal 35:252 D 26 '41 650w

Reviewed by J. B. Fogg

Library J 66:793 S 15 '41 120w

"The photographs are marvelous and come often; the style is unassuming and just awkward enough in the right places to give the impression that the author climbs mountains better than he manipulates the hazards of language. The information regarding mountains, their heights, histories, characteristics, etc., and about mountaineers, their lives, achievements and idiosyncrasies—all this is comprehensively and unpretentiously dealt with, and the appendices are elaborate. I applaud the whole thing. As I say, I want it, rather than Thurber or Shakespeare or the Encyclopedia Britannica, on my island in the South Pacific." George Barker

+ New Repub 105:515 O 20 '41 600w

"Mr. Ullman's book will attract all the gentry of the itching foot. It should interest even those whose mountaineering is limited to the Timp, Breakneck, Slide, or the easily accessible peaks of the Adirondacks, Green and White Mountains. Few of us may want to go where Mr. Ullman's heroes went. But we can learn something from them that is not in today's dispatches." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p9 O 26 '41 1300w

"High Conquest" does not pretend to the classic qualities of the works of G. W. Young or Sir William Martin Conway, but I should put it down among the finest popular histories (at least in English) of its subject that I am familiar with and as a sound job of narrative in its own right. The photographs are almost as good as the text." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 17:93 O 18 '41 500w

"This book has an excellent report on climbing for amateurs in the United States, a discussion of equipment and method, an appendix of statistics and mountaineering terms, a thorough bibliography, fine maps, and the best photographs of their kind. It should be of interest to all who like stern adventure and clean conquest now." Hassoldt Davis

+ Sat R of Lit 24:7 N 1 '41 400w

"An astonishingly good piece of work—a book full of interest and excitement and the real spirit and feel of climbing. . . The author has thrilling material to handle, and he offers to the non-climber, for whom this story is primarily written, plenty of color and drama, without sacrificing authenticity of tone for the climbing reader. It is regrettable to have to note, however, that here and there various small inaccuracies of fact have crept in, which prevent the book from being the completely reliable work of reference which, with its many beautiful illustrations of the world's chief mountains, and its maps, and index, and appendices, including a comprehensive 'reading list,' it is otherwise so well fitted to be." Elizabeth Knowlton

+ — Spring'd Republican p7e O 19 '41 420w

UMBREIT, KENNETH BERNARD. Founding fathers; men who shaped our tradition. 344p il $3.50 Harper

923.2 Statesmen, American. U.S.—Biography (W) 41-20696

Biographical impressionistic studies of six men who played important parts in the establishment of the American republic. Those included are Thomas Jefferson, John Adams, John Hancock, Samuel Adams, Patrick Henry, George Washington. Bibliographical note. Index.

Booklist 38:112 D 1 '41

"The real value of his book, other than its very high value as entertainment, which persists throughout, is to be found in the studies of Jefferson, John Adams and Washington. . . 'Founding Fathers' may not be a contribution to history, but it is easy to believe that it may be a contribution to national unity; for it studies eminent Americans not with a view to exposing their faults, but rather to establish what it was that made them memorable." G. W. Johnson

+ — Books p16 N 30 '41 850w

"Valuable chiefly because no great biographies exist of any of [these men] thus far, and also because Mr. Umbreit has relied more upon the journals and correspondence of the men than upon the secondary material."

+ New Repub 105:869 D 22 '41 70w

"His evident admiration for Henry and Washington, and his firm resolve to thrust a barrier between Jefferson and what we understand as 'Jeffersonian Democracy,' are, of course, his privilege. But he cannot blame the reader for wondering whether those biases have not so controlled his selection of quotations and facts as to render much of his story questionable. . . Mr Umbreit might have supplemented his provocative sketches with suggestions for further, more solid reading. But the bibliographical note unnecessarily lists the source collections—which he must obviously have used and which most of his audience will never have a chance to examine; and states for the rest that he consulted 'many other' books—which is equally obvious and equally useless." S. L. Jackson

Spring'd Republican p8 D 2 '41 900w

UNITED STATES. PRESIDENT, 1933- (F. D. ROOSEVELT). Public papers and addresses [second administration]; comp. and collated by Samuel I. Rosenman, with special introductions and explanatory notes by President Roosevelt. 4v 659,686,635,741p $30 Macmillan

308.1 U.S.—Politics and government. U.S.—Foreign relations. U.S.—Economic policy (W)

"These volumes begin with the second inauguration day, January 20, 1937 and end with the third inaugural in January, 1941. As in the case of the first five volumes, the editing has been done by Judge Samuel I. Rosenman. There are no evidences of tendentious selection or omission. Only minor or repetitious items have been left out or documents that have appeared in the Federal Register. . . The introductions have many footnote citations. There is a topical table permitting the reader quickly to pursue a subject through the four years. The indices are adequate." Sat R of Lit

Booklist 38:156 Ja 1 '42

"The public papers of nearly every President have been collected and published in book form, but never before have we had exactly this sort of presentation. In the first place, the editor's work has been done with extraordinary competence. What sins of omission Judge Rosenman has committed only time will tell; but his sins of commission are imperceptible, while his virtues are shining." G. W. Johnson

+ — Books p1 D 14 '41 2900w

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison
Christian Century 59:82 Ja 21 '42 1000w

Reviewed by C. C. Munz
Nation 154:40 Ja 10 '42 1700w

"I shall not underline the obvious about how valuable these volumes and their companions will be to the historian, the biographer, the social theorist, the layman. This is a treasure trove from any point of view. What I do want to stress is that in these volumes, and particularly in the current batch on the troubled and perilous second term, one gets all the type problems of a crisis democracy." Max Lerner

+ New Repub 105:397 D 29 '41 1750w

"It is an impressive record—this record of the achievement of the Roosevelt Administration in the last four years. We have been so much in the midst of it all, so concerned with the details as reported, day by day, in the press, so involved in its controversial aspects, that it has been difficult to get either perspective or balance. When we see it as a whole, the cumulative impact is tremendous." H. S. Com-mager

+ N Y Times p1 D 21 '41 2650w

Reviewed by Lindsay Rogers
Sat R of Lit 24:3 D 6 '41 2750w

UNIVERSAL Jewish encyclopedia; an authoritative and popular presentation of Jews and Judaism since the earliest times; ed. by Isaac Landman; Louis Rittenberg, executive and literary editor. 10v v1-3 il maps set $100; mor $200 cl193-41 Universal Jewish encyclopedia, inc, 50 Court st, Brooklyn, N.Y.

296.03 Jews—Dictionaries and encyclopedias (40-5070)

"The first three volumes of this new Jewish encyclopedia have been released; the remaining seven volumes are due to appear at approximately ten-week intervals. Subscriptions are accepted only for the entire set. The work is edited by Rabbi Isaac Landman, who is rabbi of Congregation Beth Elohim in Brooklyn, N.Y.

UNIVERSAL Jewish encyclopedia—Continued
and founder and director of the Academy for adult Jewish education, in collaboration with a board of editors composed of seventeen Jewish scholars. . . . In his preface the editor states that part of the purpose behind the encyclopedia is to supply the information and enlightenment needed to combat anti-Semitic propaganda and prejudice in 'a single printed source dealing with Jewish history and Christian-Jewish relations in comprehensive, scientific and concise form' and to offer a popular presentation of Jewish ideals and Jewish contributions to civilization. The encyclopedia is also intended as 'a means of quickening the Jewish spirit' among the Jewish people." Subscription Bks Bul

Cath World 152:633 F '41 300w (Review of v 1-2)

Reviewed by B. L. Conway

Cath World 154:246 N '41 500w

"The preface declares clearly that the editors 'have sought to produce a work based on facts.' It is the eloquence of the facts and the implication of the history of persecution that contribute to the idea behind the publication. When the Encyclopedia is completed, it ought to be a valuable reference work, as well as an instrument in the struggle against obscurantism." N. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 8 '40 390w (Review of v 1)

"The work suffers from the defects of its merits. Setting out to be popular and up to date, it now and again tends to the journalistic—which, in the sense I mean, is a lack of proportion. This is particularly evident in the choice of illustrations, some of which are splendid in their evocation of the reality that matters, while others are devoid of meaning when compared to the largeness of the theme. . . . On the other hand, there is a wealth of all sorts of quaint texts and quaint woodcuts, sure to delight the mind and the eye. Perhaps one should not cavil at the imperfections of a monumental work whose merit far exceeds its obvious faults." John Cournos

+ — N Y Times p9 S 29 '40 700w (Review of v 1-2)

"The writing shows no evidence of bias. . . . The universal Jewish encyclopedia seems to include most of the essential facts concerning the religion, history, social customs and accomplishments of the Jews. It is noteworthy that there are innumerable articles on non-Jewish subjects particularly where they concern the Jewish people. It is also commendable that adequate attention is being given to recent Jewish history. . . . The articles are consistently well written and the while popular in style, are sufficiently documented. It is natural to draw comparisons between The universal Jewish encyclopedia and The Jewish encyclopedia, published 1901-06, as far as such comparisons are possible. . . . The older work is the more scholarly; The universal Jewish encyclopedia, while apparently accurate in its presentation of facts, is more popular in treatment. . . . It is recommended to public libraries serving a large Jewish population or where there is an interest in the history, achievements and problems of the Jewish people."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 12:28 Ap '41 1300w

UNTERMAYER, LOUIS, ed. Stars to steer by; with pictures by Dorothy Bayley. 352p $2.50; textbook ed $1.20 Harcourt

821.08 English poetry—Collections. American poetry—Collections. Poetry. Poets (W) 41-3447

Collection of short talks on poetry, illustrated with about 150 poems which give point to the talks. "In it the author is trying to set the reader's mind in a receptive state for reading, and to show him what to look for in a poem." (Library J) For grades seven to nine. Indexes of authors and titles.

Booklist 38:18 S '41

"The variety is great and there is something for every kind of taste. . . . Interpretive pictures by Dorothy Bayley and comments by Mr. Untermeyer add further charm to this choice book arranged to satisfy the appetite of some and to create a hunger for poetry in others."

F. B. Sloan
+ Christian Science Monitor p16 D 11 '41 140w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse

Commonweal 35:113 N 21 '41 20w

"Unlike his other anthologies, this fine collection, designed 'for all land-wandering, sea-faring, sky-searching boys and girls,' is interpreted by Louis Untermeyer throughout its length. . . . There is much fresh material here, together with older poems that wake a response in minds made restless by the contradictions of a perplexing world. Nonsense and fun are here, too, as balance wheels." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:358 S '41 120w

"This is a book to be read for pleasure; and the drawings by Dorothy Bayley will increase that pleasure. For young people twelve to sixteen." Josephine Smith

+ Library J 66:679 Ag '41 130w

"This expert anthologist not only makes an interesting collection of verse for young people but writes about the poems in an inspiring way." K. W. S.

+ New Yorker 17:147 D 6 '41 90w

"Parents, teachers and all who wish to share their enjoyment of poetry will be grateful to Mr Untermeyer for making this charming and discriminating selection."

+ Springfield Republican p7e S 28 '41 300w
Wis Lib Bul 37:162 O '41

UPDEGRAFF, ALLAN EUGENE. The hills look down. 318p $2.50 Funk, W.

41-5504

"Michael Goddard's special ambition was to abandon commercial art, in which he had made a skyrocket success, and to devote himself to uncommercial art in a quiet retreat in the hills. His experience has the pioneer, primitive appeal of a Robinson Crusoe yarn, though the year is 1937. His painting and his scheme of living did not work out with idyllic smoothness, but the leisurely account of his discouragements, his successes, his divergences from the straight path he had set makes an entertaining story." N Y Times

"This novel has as a subtitle 'the story of an artist in search of himself.' But long before Michael Goddard found himself, the reader loses all interest in the search. Michael is not exactly a confused person; confusion requires the blocking of intensity and purpose, and Michael doesn't have much of either. In its place he has arty impulses and precious throbings." Milton Lehman

— Books p12 M 30 '41 360w

"A genuinely entertaining tale of the back-to-nature school. Its pleasantly unpretentious and leisurely style adds charm to a story that is bound to strike a sympathetic chord in the bosoms of many who long to get away from it all." B. S.

+ — N Y Times p28 Mr 23 '41 800w

UPDEGRAFF, FLORENCE MAULE. Coat for a soldier; il. by Eva A. Watson 294p $2 Harcourt

(W) 41-15929

In the early months of the American Revolution a call was sent out to the women of the colonies for coats for the soldiers. Each woman who volunteered to make a coat had her name entered on the roll of her town, and when a finished coat was issued to a soldier, his name was written opposite that of his benefactress. This story describes the making of one such coat by a young Massachusetts girl, who gave the cloth of her first spinning, which she had intended for a mantle for herself. The story of the coat begins with the shearing of the lamb, and follows all the steps in the making and dyeing, up to the proud moment when Deborah handed over her gift to Washington's messenger. For older girls.

Booklist 38:59 O 15 '41

"The book is temperate, honest, stirring and needed." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 Ja 4 '42 400w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk M 17:366 S '41 140w

"The story is told with great charm and literary style, the details of the weaving processes are fascinating; but what makes the book a real contribution for the children of today is the picture it gives of men and women, and children too, who are willing to sacrifice that their way of life may endure. This is a good book, and one to be heartily recommended for children thirteen to sixteen."

Gertrude Andrus

+ Library J 66:737 S 1 '41 140w

"Good fiction." Allan Nevins

+ Sat R of Lit 24:8 N 8 '41 40w

"Perhaps the conversational style of 1774 will at first baffle the young miss of '41 but perseverance will be rewarded, and the 10-to-14 year old will soon be interested—and glad she did not live in the late 18th century."

Springf'd Republican p7e S 14 '41 240w

UPDIKE, DANIEL BERKELEY. Some aspects of printing, old and new. 73p $3 W. E. Rudge, box 1893, New Haven, Conn.

655.04 Printing (W) 41-10118

Contents: Gutenberg and his relation to printers today; The essentials of a well-made book; Some tendencies in modern typography; The place of the educated man in the printing industry; American university presses; A last word.

"Like all this printer's utterances on the subject of his craft, these five papers have the character of a distillation, clear liquid obtained drop by drop through the agency of the fires of experience." L. C. Wroth

+ Books p21 S 7 '41 1150w

Reviewed by E. L. Tinker

N Y Times p17 J1 13 '41 1150w

Pratt p20 D '41

"The division into chapters seems to me somewhat unfortunate—in several cases two could happily be united into one, and I should have welcomed rather more explicitness. But the consideration of Gutenberg in relation to modern problems, the design of books and modern tendencies relating thereto, and the place of the educated man in printing, especially with relation to university presses, (the main subjects of the book), are the fruits of Mr. Updike's long and careful study and practice." C. P. Rollins

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:12 J1 12 '41 200w

URMSTON, MARY. Forty faces; il. by Martha Sawyers. 298p $2 Doubleday

(W) 40-32987

Story of Jean Madison's last year in a normal school, and the practice teaching which terrified her when she saw forty children's faces looking up at her, and her first year at teaching a country school. For girls of fourteen to eighteen.

Booklist 37:179 Ja 1 '41

"As good as most of the vocational novels now being produced, with the usual mild romance and slight plot. . . The soft shades and 'off colors' recently used by this publisher are pleasing in appearance, but the books require rebinding for library use." Maude Adams

Library J 65:1045 D 1 '40 140w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell

N Y Times p15 Je 15 '41 40w

URQUHART, LEONARD CHURCH, and O'ROURKE, CHARLES EDWARD. Elementary structural engineering. 348p $3 McGraw

624.1 Structures, Theory of 41-5045

This is a study of the fundamental principles of structural theory and design. "A separate chapter describes the loads for which structures of various types should be designed in order to fulfill adequately the purpose for which each type is intended. Various methods of computing deflections of beams and trusses are outlined in another chapter, together with applications of these methods to typical practical problems. The remaining chapters explain and apply the theories involved in the design of the various structural elements, such as homogeneous beams of timber and steel; plate girders; reinforced-concrete beams; tens and compression members in steel and timber trusses; columns of timber, steel, and reinforced concrete; members subjected to bending and axial stresses; and footings." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 37:460 Je 1 '41

"Professors Urquhart and O'Rourke had definitely in mind the needs of graduate engineers and architects for a compact guide book that would aid them in preparing for professional license examinations. . . The book is also planned as a text for courses in structures given to engineer students other than civil and to architects."

Eng N 126:72 Ap 24 '41 120w

N Y New Tech Bks 26:48 J1 '41

V

VAILLANT, GEORGE CLAPP. Aztecs of Mexico; origin, rise and fall of the Aztec nation. (Am. museum of natural hist. Science ser) 340p il pl $4 Doubleday

972.014 Aztecs. Mexico—History

(W) 41-12191

An account of the life of the Aztecs, their art, religion, government, and social customs, from ancient times to the Spanish conquest. The story, based on archeological researches, is set down in simplified terms suitable for lay reading. The author is "the outstanding authority on early civilizations of Mexico and Central America." (Scientific Bk Club R) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 38:33 O 1 '41

"Dr. Vaillant is more than a specialist and a scholar in his field. He brings to his work, as a first-rate archeologist must, a deep knowledge of history, sociology, social psychology; the wisdom that comes from prolonged meditation on the nature of human activities; an ability to perceive the identities which underlie the life of other ages and our own; a feeling for the drama of human life inherent in the rise and fall of civilizations; a lively and catholic esthetic sensibility, and—rarest gift of all—a writer's sense of style and skill in communicating the knowledge he has acquired. Now that he has turned his hand from the specialist's monograph to a work for the general reader, he has produced a genuine masterpiece of popularization fit to rank with the best in its field." B. D. Wolfe

+ Books p24 N 16 '41 1050w

"Dr. Vaillant is an admirable man for the task of writing the story of a people whose history is still in the process of emerging from the earth and from the field notes of archeologists. He is himself a distinguished student of the subject. He picks his way with fairness and a level head among the various archeological controversies that seam the field. . . This is so good a book archeologically that I hope the author, with his brilliant parts and deep sympathy for the subject, will some day deal as admirably with the historical questions—for the Aztecs are a remarkable and fascinating problem." E. P. Richardson

VAILLANT, G. C.—Continued

+ Commonweal 35:251 D 26 '41 1050w

"Based on extensive study of the surviving remains of Aztec civilization still to be found in the valley of Mexico. Will interest the archaeologist and student of history as well as the tourist desirous of surveying the Aztec domain." M. J. Messler
+ Library J 66:614 J1 '41 100w

"The Aztecs of Mexico' is not merely the best general account of that tremendous sequence of events but so far as I know the first really competent effort to cover the whole ground. The fruits of long research in the field are summed up here and incorporated in a body of knowledge derived from a thorough survey of documentary sources. The book, despite its necessary difficulty, is marvelously good reading for the layman." Ralph Bates
+ Nation 153:260 S 20 '41 450w

"Vaillant's book is a good book, a vivid book, a most readable book; but is more than that. In detail of editorship it is exceptional. Illustrations are multitudinous. Tables aid in making this pre-history clear. Bibliographies are tied to chapters and thus made most usable. Pronunciations of all native names appear not only on each first encounter, but are provided again for ready reference in the index. The best map I have seen of the Valley of Mexico serves as end-paper. . . But, beyond all this 'Aztecs of Mexico' takes first place among books upon the subject, because it builds from Vaillant's years of digging in the valley and study in the libraries a theory of American pre-history which outmodes the neat old Archaic-Toltec-Aztec chronological pattern and brings us abreast of the newest thinking and discovery that have been done in this field." Kenneth MacGowan
+ N Y Times p5 S 14 '41 2050w
+ Scientific Bk Club R 12:4 S '41 460w

VALE, EDMUND. Curiosities of town and countryside. 152p il $3.75 Scribner [10s 6d Batsford]

914.2 England—Historic houses, etc. Curiosities [A41-2025]

Chapters on some unique English monuments or curiosities of one type or another, ranging from freaks in landscape and architecture, to quaint customs and mechanical relics. Index.

"A more entertaining blend of oddities, anti-quarianism and personalities of old times could not be found than Mr. Vale's light-hearted roundup of some of the curiosities he came upon in the course of years of guide-book making in England."

+ Books p6 Je 8 '41 160w

"Mr. Vale's sense of humour is lively and all-pervasive. But it arises naturally from the theme and is of the kind that illuminates rather than obscures. . . His pages are a delightful commentary on our national exuberance and individualism." G. T.
+ Manchester Guardian p7 Ja 7 '41 60w

Spec 166:594 My 30 '41 140w

"One might complain that he has devoted too little attention to the genuinely macabre. True, he explores in detail the morbid; but that, however subtly, is in fact a different category, consisting as it does of such things as gibbet-irons, quartering-block, thumbscrew and pillory. But again, the macabre is a highly controversial subject, and many readers will consider it adequately covered by the atmosphere that lingers around medieval instruments of torture. . . The book is illustrated by an excellent collection of photographs."

Times [London] Lit Sup p154 Mr 29 '41 500w

VALENTIN, VEIT. 1848: chapters of German history; tr. by Ethel Talbot Scheffauer. 480p $3.75 Norton [12s 6d Allen, G]

943.07 Germany—History—Revolution, 1848-1849 [40-14968]

A translation in abbreviated form of a monumental history of the German revolution of 1848, originally published a decade ago. "The first part of Herr Valentin's book is devoted to an interesting account of the conditions in the States, big and little, which formed the German Confederation, concluding with chapters on the March and April revolutions. The second part is devoted to the work of the Frankfurt Parliament and the causes of its failure." (Times [London] Lit Sup) Indexes.

Reviewed by Robert Ergang

Am Hist R 47:192 O '41 210w

Christian Science Monitor p11 N 9 '40 220w

New Repub 105:518 O 20 '41 80w

"Here, in spite of a Teutonic translation and an irritating lack of arrangement, is a fascinating picture of Germany in all its variety and contradictions." R. H. S. Crossman

+ New Statesman & Nation 19:730 Je 8 '40 130w

Reviewed by E. H. Carr

Spec 165:252 S 6 '40 500w

"In general, it may be said that this book will appeal less to the average reader than to those who are already well acquainted with the subject; for the author takes too much knowledge in his readers for granted. . . We regret that we cannot praise the translation. In general it is readable enough, but it is too freely peppered with mistakes."

Times [London] Lit Sup p390 Ag 10 '40 700w

VALTIN, JAN. Out of the night. 841p $3.50 Alliance bk. [15s Heinemann]

B or 92

(W) 41-51514

For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

"For stark realism this is a most remarkable book." W. F. Thompson

+ Churchman 155:17 Mr '41 250w

"Jan Valtin' is certainly one of the finest story tellers I have ever encountered, and I must confess that his book cost me many hours of sleep! I just could not find the will power to switch the lights off long after midnight, although I knew that I should have to give communion at 5:30 that same morning. Hamburg, the center of his activities, is my own home town, and its waterfront was the scene of my activities as a seamen's chaplain. For years I was stationed in Bremerhaven, and often I had to go to the ports of Bremen, Lubeck, Kiel and Stettin. . . Jan Valtin has opened my eyes and like lightning, illuminating the whole firmament, the patched scenery suddenly grows into an organized whole, and the two competing forces become rival armies with shock troops and cannon fodder, secret services and general staffs and a continuous strategy. . . Valtin's book is terrible and cruel. We will never be able to verify every single statement he makes. But I have checked as many of his stories as possible against my own experience and information, and I have found him correct wherever I could check up, and that is not little." R. A. Reinhold
+ Commonweal 33:559 Mr 28 '41 2600w

"There will be considerable discussion, no doubt, as to these confessions of a Communist secret agent. To my mind, the book is completely convincing. Its sincerity is manifested by the utter cynicism with which the author acknowledges his crimes, and by the tone in which he tells, without shame and without pride, of the various frauds, falsifications and even assassinations which were everyday routine in his trade. . . This review of an enormous book is written by a man who, for many years, has been warning against the foreign agents of the GPU and the Gestapo. But, in the main, people were inclined to believe that all these reports of sinister Communist and Nazi activities sounded too much like 'detective fiction.' Now that the world has seen nation after nation collapse from within, people are beginning to understand that the reports were in no way exaggerated. Out of the Night is neither inspiring nor agreeable. It is a useful book. Let us hope that it may serve as a lesson." Pierre Lozareff

+ Current Hist & Forum 52:5 Mr '41 850w

Foreign Affairs 19:674 Ap '41 60w

"There is no better picture of the life of a secret agent floating about the Communist underworld of the twenties, and no more horrible and convincing account of conditions in Nazi prisons and concentration camps. But beyond all the things which make it more readable than any 'thriller' are the profound political morals of the decline into sordid intrigue, corruption, and mechanical obedience of the international Communist movement." A. P. W.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 My 27 '41 500w

Pratt p4 spring '41

"Whoever he is and whatever he is, Jan Valtin can write; his character-sketches of the fat and scented Dimitrov, for example, or of the sinister Finn Kuusinen, are fascinating and completely convincing. . . The author's final failure as a ruthless agent of his party was due to the survival in him of an individual emotion, his love for his wife. That simple fact may be a clue to the sympathy which we feel for the hero of these amazing confessions of terrorism." Herbert Read

+ Spec 166:585 My 30 '41 1100w

"In spite of its great length, this book should be read by everyone who would realize what has really been going on in the world these past fifteen years, who would understand the sad pass to which today's world has come—a dreary knowledge. You will be wiser for the reading, but you will not be happier." B. P. Adams

+ Survey G 30:255 Ap '41 600w

Times [London] Lit Sup p259 My 31 '41 750w

"It is hard to find in the literature of political memoirs a book that in sheer horror can be compared to this one. . . As this book is a true picture of a horrible side of our times, we owe gratitude to the author for having written it. Certainly, any man whose mind is receptive to extreme ideologies should read it. This vicarious experience of communism and fascism gained at the expense of another man can be of great usefulness to the reader, if the reader is capable of realizing what an indictment this book is of a civilization that has made fascism and communism possible. In itself the book is too close to life—and horrible life—to be treated as literature." Max Ascoli

+ Yale R n s 30:628 spring '41 1000w

VAN ARSDALE, MAY BELLE, and CASA EMELLOS, MRS RUTH (PARRISH). Our candy recipes and other confections; with an introd. by Natalie K. Fitch. 188p il $2 Barrows

641.85 Confectionery

41-51963

Two of the staff of Teachers college, Columbia university, provide these candy recipes, which have been tested in classroom and laboratory, and describe the process of making the candies. They include candies which do not require elaborate equipment. There is a final chapter on the teaching of candy making. Index.

Booklist 38:91 N 15 '41

J Home Econ 34:53 Ja '42 60w

VAN COEVERING, JACK. A-hiking we will go. 215p il $2.50 Lippincott

574 Nature. Walking

(W) 41-8609

Stories of nine real hikes, each taken for a definite purpose. Contents: A spring hike; A seashore hike; A bird hike; A hike in the marsh; A hike in the northwoods; A lakeshore hike; A mountain hike; A butterfly hike; A winter hike; Hikes of your own. Illustrated with photographs.

"A book to be put to use immediately and kept ready for use all the year." M. L. Becker

+ Books p5 J1 13 '41 180w

"Real stories of hikes and things observed on them should stimulate the child's own desire to hike and observe and interpret the natural world around him. Camp directors will find the book a 'must'." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 66:467 My 15 '41 50w

VANDENBOSCH, AMRY. The Dutch East Indies; its government, problems, and politics. 2d ed 446p $4 Univ. of Calif.

991 Netherlands Indies—Politics and government. Netherlands—Colonies

(W) 41-51853

A revised and enlarged edition of a work first published in 1933 (Book Review Digest, 1934). "Great changes have taken place in the East Indies during the past seven years and the book could not be brought up to date without considerable revision of certain sections. The material on the relations between the Dutch East Indies and Japan has been expanded into a separate chapter." (Pref. to 2d ed) Bibliography. Index.

"This very valuable account of the Dutch empire is a revised edition of the book which Professor Vandenbosch published about eight years ago. Considerable changes have occurred since then, both in the internal situation and in the international relations of the East Indies, and a detailed account of them has been embodied in the new edition. There is a concise but at the same time accurate and comprehensive account of every phase of the colonial problem. Professor Vandenbosch is exceedingly balanced and impartial; he presents a fair and objective picture of both the successes and the failures of Dutch colonial rules." L. A. Mills

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:1001 O '41 550w

"The author has written a scholarly book. It is not light reading for the general public; it is a well-documented survey and evaluation of the Dutch colonial system. Long personal research in the Indies itself and excellent connections with leading experts, both in the Indies and in the Netherlands, have resulted in a book which has no equal in its field—not even in Dutch literature." Samuel van Valkenburg

+ Ann Am Acad 218:205 N '41 360w

Booklist 37:550 J1 15 '41

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:386 Ja '42 10w

Library J 66:402 My 1 '41 40w

"Altogether a top-ranking book on a timely subject." J. O. M. Broek

+ Pacific Affairs 14:369 S '41 750w

VAN DER SLICE, AUSTIN. International labor, diplomacy, and peace, 1914-1919. 405p $4 Univ. of Pa. press

940.318331 Labor and laboring classes—International aspects. European war, 1914-1918—Economic aspects

41-5826

"Analysis of labor's efforts to formulate peace aims and to force them upon the attention of the Allied governments during the last war and at Versailles, both internationally and specifically in Britain, France and the U.S.A. . . The whole book makes clear the urgent need for Labor, both in the old world and the new (and the new world lagged miserably behind the old in 1914-1919) to face the responsibility that is theirs, to think out the outline of a new and better settlement, and to be ready when the time comes to exert every influence to make sure that this time it shall not fail." (Canadian Forum) Bibliography. Index.

VAN DER SLICE, AUSTIN—Continued

Reviewed by H. W. Davey
Am Pol Sci R 35:592 Je '41 450w

Reviewed by John Lindberg
Ann Am Acad 216:209 JI '41 700w

"Timely and interesting study." G. M. A. Grube
+ Canadian Forum 21:58 My '41 550w

Reviewed by Eleanor Van Allen
Current Hist & Forum 52:64 My '41 150w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:375 Ja '42 30w

"A scholarly and exhaustive study."
+ New Repub 104:770 Je 2 '41 60w
Spring'd Republican p6 S 20 '41 700w

VAN DEUSEN, DELIA. The garden club murders. 320p $2 Bobbs 41-7871
Detective story.

Booklist 37:492 Je 15 '41

"A pleasant scene and a group of lifelike characters make this an agreeable change from mysteries dealing entirely in stuff from Never-Land. What's more, the abundance of honest clues, such as the handkerchief in the encyclopedia and the cigarette butts in the breadbox, provide much material for the arm-chair guesser. Chapters are rather cutely entitled (if you like that sort of thing) 'Death Prunes the Garden Club,' 'Murder in Full Bloom,' 'Weeding and Sorting,' 'Plant-Analysis,' 'Cross-Pollination or Cross-Purpose?'" Will Cuppy

+ Books p13 My 18 '41 170w

"Except for the author's tantalizing habit of hinting at clues without revealing their nature until later on, the story is well organized and thoroughly enjoyable, although there may be those who will find the ending a little far-fetched." Isaac Anderson

+ — N Y Times p18 My 18 '41 210w

"This novel of death and hardy perennials is a pleasant blend of suspense and humor, and is recommended as one of the best of the spring crop of mysteries."

+ New Yorker 17:72 My 31 '41 50w

"Adroitly worked out puzzle with green-eyed monster as basis of well tangled plot. Gets a bit gabby at times, though. Agreeable."

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:20 My 24 '41 30w

VAN DE WATER, FREDERIC FRANKLYN. Reluctant republic, Vermont 1724-1791. 344p il map $3 Day

974.3 Vermont—History (W) 41-8390

Narrative history of the early struggles of a handful of determined farmers and their leaders to found the present state of Vermont. The battles with the parent state of Massachusetts, with the York Staters who tried to steal their lands, with the French, Indians, and British, and the rigors of their own climate could not deter these pioneers. The Allen brothers, Ethan and Ira, as well as the Warners, the Bakers, and other early leaders figure thruout the book. Bibliography. No index.

Booklist 38:9 S '41

"Here is a book, as I understand my native state's history, which I can give to a friend and say: 'Here, mister, is the way it happened.' That should be enough, for explaining Vermont, is no easy task. My only quarrel with the book is that so excellent a job contains no index." S. H. Holbrook
+ Books p3 Je 15 '41 1100w

"The story of this reluctant republic. . . [is] related by Mr. Van de Water with unstinted detail, an acid style, and an agreeable levity which does not disguise his great enthusiasm for his subject." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 28 '41 700w

Reviewed by Mason Wade
Commonweal 34:522 S 19 '41 300w

"A book of history that will be welcomed by two classes of readers—the native Vermonter glorying in a picturesque narrative of Vermont and its stormy days of settlement, and the student of Americana who rejoices to find an authentic story of the most independent of all the original colonies. . . . Written in a fascinating style full of anecdotes and drama." I. M. Turner
+ Library J 66:520 Je 1 '41 100w

"On the whole, the volume is better than a mere story and with revision would become a milestone in Vermont's historical literature. The account is like a modern movie—in the end the hero triumphs, and the New York land jobbers who, moved by self-interest, cast themselves as the villains, pocket their $30,000 balm and sullenly call it a day." G. P. Anderson
+ New Eng Q 14:740 D '41 700w

New Repub 105:318 S 8 '41 40w

"Mr. Van de Water's treatment is lively as well as penetrating. One can quarrel only with his failure to include an index and reliable maps. Tourists had better not rely on the relief map which has been used as an end-paper. If they do they won't get where they want to go." R. L. Duffus

+ — N Y Times p1 Je 15 '41 1250w

"There will be many chuckles in Vermont over this book." Sarah Cleghorn

+ Sat R of Lit 24:17 Ag 2 '41 250w

"Mr Van de Water seemingly has missed nothing in this admirable and loving history. He tells of Ticonderoga's fall before the redoubtable Allen, he cheers lustily at the defeat of the Hessians at Bennington, he tells the truth of the 'massacre' at Westminster, and humorously describes the great 'Cow war.' Altogether he has done a splendid job and has presented a fine birthday present to a state which most of the time now acts its age, but which probably has a secret and satisfying feeling that if things don't set just right it probably could act up a little."

+ Spring'd Republican p7e Je 15 '41 850w

VAN DOREN, CARL CLINTON, ed. Patriotic anthology. See Patriotic anthology

VAN DOREN, CARL CLINTON. Secret history of the American revolution. 534p il $3.75 Viking

973.381 U.S.—History—Revolution. Arnold, Benedict (W) 41-20017

"An account of the conspiracies of Benedict Arnold and numerous others drawn from the Secret service papers of the British headquarters in North America now for the first time examined and made public." (Subtitle) The work is based upon manuscripts in the Clinton papers now in the William L. Clements library at the University of Michigan. Bibliography, chapter references, index.

"As one who has hastily scanned these collections, this reviewer can appreciate the treasure-trove of hitherto unpublished documents which Mr. Van Doren has so capably and wisely presented. For the first time the true story of Arnold's machinations is disclosed, and the obscure network of minor treasons, stratagems, and spoils of that particular time and place clearly and convincingly explored. To understand and evaluate this documentation, a new comprehension of the Revolutionary mentality is necessary, and Mr. Van Doren contrives to interpret his material with that retrospective imagination which is the essential furniture of the genuine historian." R. E. Danielson

+ Atlantic N '41 850w

Booklist 38:78 N 1 '41

"Altogether, this book is a most valuable contribution to the history of the Revolution, and a most interesting narrative, scholarly, thorough and admirably written." Allan Nevins

+ Books p1 O 12 '41 2100w

"Van Doren has again done a fine piece of work." Clifton Macon

+ Churchman 155:19 N 1 '41 300w

"What Mr. Van Doren does here is to tell the whole story for the first time. His work is more than a book: it is an historical document. For he, alone, has had access to the complete Arnold-Andre correspondence which forms part of the Clinton papers. . . It is not, however, an easy book to read. There are times when, it seems, Mr. Van Doren's evidence overwhelms him. He is neither a Maitland nor a Trevelyan. Yet no one will attempt to justify Arnold ever again." Francis Downing

+ Commonweal 35:95 N 14 '41 1000w

Reviewed by Alvin Adey

Current Hist 1:370 D '41 600w

"This scholarly book is also quite readable. At a time when 'fifth column' talk fills the air, it should prove interesting to many general readers." R. D. Minnich

+ Library J 66:841 O 1 '41 140w

"The work is a piece of scholarship, solid and austere. The author allows the facts to speak for themselves; in his case we should have liked, once in a while, to hear his own voice. Scholars abominate romanced biography, and the general public has no use for doctors' dissertations. There is a kind of history that unites the appeal of both, and Carl Van Doren is eminently qualified to write it. He has not chosen to do so." Albert Guerard

+ Nation 153:376 O 18 '41 900w

"The author consistently lays his evidence before the reader by extensive, though not overextended, quotations. This method can be forbidding, but, thanks to Van Doren's skillful handling, his history is no less readable, as well as far more satisfying, than the brilliant but mainly undocumented writings of Trevelyan. The documentation includes a valuable appendix containing the full text of ninety letters written by Arnold, André, General Sir Henry Clinton and others involved in the Arnold episode." Bernhard Knollenberg

+ New Repub 105:548 O 27 '41 550w

"This material, presented with learning and understanding and wit, is 'secret history.' Mr. Van Doren does not pretend that it is 'the' secret history. There is much more, indeed, that was secret—much in the tortuous diplomacy, much in the conflict in England itself, much, too, in the American States that does not emerge in these swift pages. But when the full history of the Revolution comes to be written the evidence which Mr. Van Doren has here presented and the conclusions which he has suggested will contribute to an interesting chapter." H. S. Commager

+ N Y Times p1 O 12 '41 1300w

"The one quality necessary above all others in the writing of this book was judiciousness. This Mr. Van Doren has in fullest measure. It is useless to pretend, however, that his narrative is without prosaic moments. He has enlivened his material as shrewdly as any honest historian could well do, but the complexity and number of the intrigues he describes hardly help to make for a briskly paced story. This is first-hand history, not smart popularization." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 17:97 O 11 '41 1400w

Pratt p14 D '41

"A distinguished historical writer, an important and intriguing subject, free access to the largest and richest unexploited manuscript collection on the American Revolution: the result is a brilliant and basic contribution to the great books on the American struggle for independence. No study of the period has cast such a clear and now light upon the hidden activities, the secret manoeuvres, and the treasonable dickerings of many American worthies during that war." Frank Monaghan

+ Sat R of Lit 24:7 O 18 '41 800w

"This is one of the most significant books on the Revolution which has been written. Mr. Van Doren uses a few cautious 'maybes,' 'perhapses,' and 'ifs.' Yet it is, from beginning to end, a scholarly and skillfully written volume which fills in many blanks in our knowledge of the Revolution. Handsome in format, bulky, well illustrated, 'Secret History of the American Revolution' is historical reading matter at its best." Donald Derby

+ Springfield Republican p7e O 12 '41 950w

Wis Lib Bul 37:200 D '41

VAN DOREN, MARK. The Mayfield deer; decorations by Armin Landeck. 272p $2.50 Holt 811 41-12993

Long narrative poem in blank verse, retelling a legend of the American frontier, about a boy who shot the pet deer of a lonely hunter, and the feud which was the result of that hasty action.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Drew

Atlantic D '41 280w

Booklist 38:128 D 15 '41

"Mark Van Doren has written a novel-length poem with such a sweep of drama and such rich particulars that one must say, this is rightly done, this has the unmatched rightness of a fine conception fully carried out. . . Mr. Van Doren's verse is a pleasure in itself. Unlike the poetry of most long narratives, it never sprawls; it is fairly regular, and is as crisp and vibrant as the November days about which it tells." Howard Baker

+ Books p3 N 16 '41 650w

Christian Science Monitor p12 N 29 '41

"Told in blank verse of great beauty." E. H. Crowell

+ Library J 66:903 O 15 '41 40w

"One finds here at once the delight in the details of the American rural scene and the American folk speech that belongs to Frost and the preoccupation with moral issues, the vague religiosity, and even the involute style of Robinson. The combination results in something peculiarly Mr. Van Doren's own. The fable . . . is sufficiently simple, and dramatic without to satisfy the appetite of Hollywood, and though it offers the poet a number of occasions for discourse far too subtle for the studios, it is too slight for Mr. Van Doren's large purposes. . . What adds to the element of unreality is the fact that the narrator, like Robinson or Henry James, has the habit of making his characters speak rather as he might than as they would. Aside from a few bits of dialogue as extravagant and authentically pungent as anything out of Paul Bunyan, the talk is entirely too poetic in a sophisticated way for the plain pioneers from whose mouths it issues." Babette Deutsch

+ Nation 153:515 N 22 '41 800w

"The story is a simple tale but it supplies the poet with aspects that kindle his rich imagination to its core." Maurice Swan

+ N Y Times p4 D 21 '41 1050w

"The problem is: Can a tragedy at this primitive level, with these vernacular-speaking protagonists, be treated by a writer whose methods stem from learning and metropolitan culture? Van Doren can write down the racy speech of his characters, but the treatment in general, full of the gauziest rhetoric and obliquities reminiscent of both E. A. Robinson and Frost (at their worst), makes everything not only amorphous but actually sentimental and false." Louise Bogan

— New Yorker 17:104 N 29 '41 650w

"So far as power of characterization and description goes, realization of dramatic possibilities, handling of suspense, and re-creation of atmosphere, I have nothing but praise for this poet's mastery. The events of that deadly

VAN DOREN, MARK—Continued
pioneer November are movingly described. . . My two strictures are slight. First, I feel in the style, in spite of the true homespun that is woven, a very slight reminiscence of the manner of the late Edwin Arlington Robinson. Second, the dialogue has a tendency to be rather more 'literary' than I can wholly approve." W. R. Benét

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:8 N 29 '41 750w

Reviewed by A. M. Jakeman
Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 11 '42
270w

Wis Lib Bul 37:199 D '41

VAN DRUTEN, JOHN. Old acquaintance; a comedy in three acts. 181p il $2 Random house
822 (W) 41-4480

Sophisticated social comedy in which the chief protagonists are two American women novelists; one who writes really good novels, and the other who writes popular trash which sells.

Booklist 37:385 Ap 15 '41

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton

Books p14 Je 1 '41 90w

"'Old Acquaintance' is an entertaining comedy, if one without much weight." Lewis Nichols

+ — N Y Times p16 Ap 20 '41 90w

Pratt p16 spring '41

VAN DUSEN, HENRY PITNEY. Reality and religion. (Hazen bks. on religion) 88p 50c Assn. press

200 Religion. Christianity. Church 41-4011

"The latest and final volume of the 'Hazen Books on Religion.' It presents the arguments for religion, for Christianity and for the church. Like that of the other books in the series, its method is direct and forceful." Christian Century

"There is little in this book that is not commonplace, unless it be the quotations which are well chosen from unusual sources. The author, a professor at the Union Theological Seminary, covers well trodden ground without a spark of fresh insight or even a phrase of memorable expression. The unpretentiousness of the volume is perhaps its chief virtue, and if it were better designed and composed it might pass as a usable textbook of obvious truths. But even on its own rather ordinary level it moves haltingly, without clear vision or conviction."

+ — Books p14 Je 15 '41 200w

+ Christian Century 58:60 Ja 8 '41 40w
"It would be hard to find a book which can give all that is found here in three times its 88 pages. It is searching, exact, comprehensive and well written, and above all it is absorbingly interesting." H. J. Simpson

+ Churchman 155:17 F 15 '41 60w

"This book ought to be useful material for teachers of religion and others dealing with young people. The present reviewer is doubtful if it will be the best book to place in the hands of young people for their own reading. There is an air of certainty about the book that may not appeal to a generation which feels extremely uncertain about religion." C. E. Purinton

+ — J Religion 21:227 Ap '41 190w

VAN PAASSEN, PIERRE. That day alone. 548p $3.75 Dial press

B or 92 Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. World war, 1939-. World politics (W) 41-21015

A collection of articles, semi-fictional narratives, musings on politics and the future by the author of Days of Our Years (Book Review Digest, 1939). There are reminiscences of the author's childhood in Holland, tales of a Dutch village invaded by Germans, the martyrdom of men caught by Hitler's torturers, comment on the meaning of Hess' flight to England.

Reviewed by Edward Weiss

Atlantic D '41 140w

Booklist 38:93 N 15 '41

"Mr. Van Paassen does not shirk the responsibility of constructive thinking which is too often sloughed off by the highly inarticulate. There has been a vicious tradition of passive mirroring prevalent for the last twenty years which bears a heavy responsibility for our present circumstances. Writers have been terrified of being caught with a message. Mr. Van Paassen is not. He sees in the future no alternative to a planned economy 'either as a free association of all the peoples of the earth or as the enslavement of the nations by one dominant race.' I think that the supreme direction of the new international organisms must be placed in the hands of the two great English-speaking commonwealths, the British and the American." J. M. Minifie

+ Books p3 O 19 '41 1200w

"Pierre Van Paassen has learned to write in moving prose. He has found the way to evoke sympathy and the feeling of compassion. But he has not yet discovered the gentle art of understatement."

+ — Christian Science Monitor p10 Ja 10 '42
600w

"Should be outstandingly popular." J. B. Fogg

+ Library J 66:903 O 15 '41 120w

"Van Paassen, as usual, writes well and sensitively. If certain sections of the book show signs of hasty composition, others are moving and poignant. . . But the volume lacks a basic unity, for though van Paassen has felt deeply, he has seen less clearly. If there is much in his pages that will move the heart, there is less that will inform the mind." D. W. Petegorsky

+ — Nation 153:408 O 25 '41 550w

New Repub 105:709 N 24 '41 100w

Reviewed by Milos Safranek

N Y Times p3 O 19 '41 1400w

"Often interesting, just as often merely puzzling."

+ — New Yorker 17:98 O 18 '41 70w

"This is a vivid and exciting book. It is loaded with information, also with dynamite. No other book I have read on the troubles of our times crackles with so much explosiveness. For Van Paassen is more than a reporter or sociologist. A descendant of a long line of Dutch preachers, he not only sees the person or the event he depicts, but in the manner of a minister of the Gospel after reciting a passage of Scripture, he sermonizes on the meaning of either or both." Maurice Hindus

+ Sat R of Lit 24:13 O 18 '41 1050w

Time 38:107 O 27 '41 750w

Wis Lib Bul 37:200 D '41

VAN PAASSEN, PIERRE. The time is now! 80p map $1 Dial press

940.5373 World war, 1939-. World war, 1939—U.S. (W) 41-51769

The author of Days of Our Years (Book Review Digest, 1939) discusses Hitler's campaigns, the direct menace to America, and the steps we must take, immediately, to stop him.

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin

Atlantic Ag '41 200w

Booklist 37:436 My 15 '41

"His sincerity is clearer than the style in which it is expressed in this pamphlet. . . He includes a statement of our war aims in his list of those things which urgently require doing. These include setting 'Asia ablaze from one end to the other with the ideal of democracy,' repudiating 'Toryism and Halifaxism,' restoring a homeland to the Jews and freeing the prisoners in Nazi concentration camps. More concrete detail about these aims would have placed this book more securely in the great tradition of pamphleteering." Joseph Barnes

+ — Books p12 My 18 '41 320w

"If Mr. van Paassen's argument seems unduly apprehensive, as many of his critics have charged, and if the course charted for the United States seems a trifle beyond present expediency, both argument and course are at least well-aimed." G. W.

Christian Science Monitor p11 J1 19 '41 600w

Commonweal 34:213 Je 20 '41 120w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:198 O '41 30w

"Mr. Van Paassen has written a brilliant sketch of Hitler's present ambitions, particularly with respect to the United States. Of the many speculations on that subject which have been poured out in recent months no other has seemed to hit the nail so squarely on the head. Despite some wild statements about the alleged influence of the Munich Geopolitical Institute on German foreign policy during the last two generations, he has succeeded to a truly remarkable degree in penetrating to the inner nerve of Hitler's policy, the logic behind his moves, his subterfuges, and his devices." Herbert Rosinski

+ — Nation 152:755 Je 28 '41 1000w

"The gravest crisis ever faced by American democracy is driving many to an expression of their views. The battle of the books is upon us: never have pamphlets poured out in such cornucopian abundance, or in a better cause. . . . The most impassioned and urgent of this half dozen pamphlets is 'The Time is Now!' It is at the same time the most comprehensive." John Cournos

+ N Y Times p5 Ag 17 '41 480w

"Not too well informed, but a challenging analysis."

+ — New Yorker 17:72 My 31 '41 60w

Pratt p24 autumn '41

Reviewed by Samuel Grafton

Sat R of Lit 24:5 Ag 2 '41 280w

Springf'd Republican p8 Je 25 '41 170w

VAN STOCKUM, HILDA. Pegeen; il. by [the author]. 268p $2 Viking

(W) 41-12730

Mischievous little Pegeen, who first appeared in the author's Francie on the Run (Book Review Digest, 1939) goes to stay with Francie's family at Bantry Bay, after the death of her grandmother. As usual Pegeen got into all kinds of troubles, but when word came that she was to go to an uncle in America, the family could not bear to part with her. So Pegeen was to stay at Bantry Bay "forever and ever."

Booklist 38:38 O 1 '41

"Told in the pleasant, gracious speech of Ireland, with many pictures true to its cottage life, the story keeps an eight-year-old interested in the misdeeds of one of his own age, without inciting him to imitate them. At any rate, he cannot in the United States produce a flock of fairies to help him out of a scrape." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 S 21 '41 280w

"A singularly appealing little story." E. V. Wyatt

+ Cath World 154:380 D '41 100w

"Hilda van Stockum has created another lovable child with imagination and a mischievous way, and introduced her to the generous Irish household so well known and loved and to a welcoming public." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:370 S '41 80w

"The story is filled with real people and savors of the Irish countryside. The underlying theme is the contentment which happy human relationships can bring. All these things are told with great artistry and sincerity, and the result is a book the equal of which is seldom found on library shelves." Jane Landers

+ Library J 66:679 Ag '41 150w

"This well-written, sensitive and human story is in the author's best vein and her drawings are in excellent keeping. The two preceding volumes are unnecessary to the understanding of this present one. Girls 10 and over will heartily accept this disturbing and lovable new personality." I. S.

+ N Y Times p33 N 2 '41 280w

"Gay and sentimental." G. G. Bates

Sat R of Lit 24:11 N 8 '41 40w

Wis Lib Bul 37:159 O '41

VAN VROOMAN, MARIA. Jano and Jeni; a story of Switzerland; pictured by Gladys Rourke Blackwood. [28p] $1 Whitman, A. Children in Switzerland 41-11994

Story of a little Swiss boy and his pet goat. On a day when Jano was sent up the mountain for firewood, Jeni, who followed him everywhere went too, and because of her knowledge of how to get home, even in a snowstorm, saved Jano's life.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p5 Je 29 '41 110w

"The story is delightfully childlike, and the illustrations by Gladys Rourke Blackwood are lovely and colorful. Recommended for children six to nine." Emily Hutson

+ Library J 66:620 J1 '41 150w

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 29 '41 70w

VASSOS, JOHN. Dogs are like that; with phot. by Beth Dickinson. 108p $2.50 Dutton

636.7 Dogs—Legends and stories 41-23262

In the foreword to this story of his own dogs the author says "this book is written for people who like dogs—and who own dogs. It is a layman's attempt at an analysis of the characters of two totally dissimilar dogs, their relationship to us, their relationship to each other, their behavior in our world and in their own dog world. I shall try to refrain from being sentimental throughout this book, although more than once I have been accused of being an animalarian." Illustrated with photographs.

"Vassos closes his book with a line from Kipling. 'Don't give your heart for a dog to tear,' he quotes, and adds a few words of his own, 'if you can help it.' Miss Dickinson's many photographs of men and dogs add much to the enjoyment of this volume." Rose Feld

+ Books p8 D 21 '41 480w

"In reading about Dingo and Rex we learn a great deal about expert care and training of a watch dog, and a hunting dog."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 28 '41 370w

VAUGHAN, GEORGE, comp. Temples and towers; a survey of the world's moral outlook. 626p il $2.50 Meador

301 Moral conditions. Faith. Civilization 41-10753

The compiler, "while reading Dr. E. Stanley Jones' 'The Christ of Every Road,' came upon this challenging statement: 'The world-ground, I am persuaded, is being prepared for a spiritual awakening on a very extensive scale.' To test the soundness of the statement, Dr. Vaughan . . . wrote several thousand letters to representative personages covering 16 groups of diversified interests, each occupying an important place in modern society. Nearly 600 of the replies are printed in this volume covering each of the 16 groups, Bench and Bar, Business, Education, Literature, Philosophy, Religion, Science, Sociology, Medicine, etc." (Christian Science Monitor)

VAUGHAN, GEORGE—Continued

"This poll of thoughtful opinion was not intended to prove anything, but it cannot fail to be highly suggestive to the serious-minded reader."

Christian Century 58:935 J1 23 '41 160w

Reviewed by A. F. Gilmore

Christian Science Monitor p10 O 11 '41 850w

VAUGHAN, MALCOLM. Derain [ed. by André Gloeckner]. (Modern masters) 78p il col pl $3.50 Harper; Hyperion

759.4 Derain, André 41-51767

Critical sketch of a contemporary French artist, "of all the painters alive today . . . perhaps the ablest," with many illustrations from his works, including both color and black and white reproductions. Index of reproductions. Bibliography.

"A perhaps too laudatory but generally informative study of the painter's life and work."

+ New Yorker 17:79 Je 14 '41 10w

Sat R of Lit 24:17 Ag 9 '41 20w

VAUGHAN, WARREN TAYLOR. Strange malady; the story of allergy; line drawings by John P. Tillery. (Am. assn. for the advancement of science ser) 268p $3 Doubleday 615.37 Allergia (W) 41-661

A comprehensive treatise on allergic diseases—"those curious ailments that are due to some form of special sensitization and set in motion by unwitting contact with the substance to which the body is sensitive." Dr Vaughan explains in a readable style and with numerous actual case histories, what is known of the origin, nature, diagnosis, and treatment of these mysterious diseases, why they affect some people and not others, and what may be done to avoid them. Index.

Booklist 37:266 F 15 '41

"This is an unusually valuable book in popular science. It makes as clear as possible to the general reader an important aspect of modern medicine, and it is written in a highly agreeable style. The author's name guarantees its scientific accuracy, and furthermore it is the second in the 'American Association for the Advancement of Science Series' of non-technical books addressed to the intelligent public. The reader will do well to look out for later volumes in the series if Dr. Vaughan's book is a fair example of what is coming."

H. M. Parshley

+ Books p7 Ag 17 '41 500w

"The history, origin, nature, treatment, and other aspects of allergic diseases, written in simple, readable style for nontechnical readers by a well-known investigator and writer on this important and as yet much misunderstood subject."

+ J Home Econ 33:409 Je '41 70w

"Dr. Vaughan has, in remarkably able fashion, set forth for his readers a comprehensive treatise on the many aspects of allergy. Few have been the occasions for this reviewer to find in a book written for nontechnical readers such a completely scientific, lucid and charming exposition of the subject. For many, too, this book will also afford the opportunity of understanding the fundamental principles of immunology on which are based so many of the advances of modern medicine."

H. J. R., M.D.

+ Sat R of Lit 23:20 F 1 '41 380w

"A distinguished specialist in the field of allergy, his facts are absolutely reliable from the scientific viewpoint and are presented in the friendliest manner possible. The book is of particular value to the lay reader, as allergy is a disease of the individual rather than of groups, and affects countless persons in the world. . . In addition to photographs of past experts in the field of allergy, the book is illustrated by extremely neat and telling figures, and amusing and zestful pen drawings."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 12:2 F '41 550w

"A lot of people are going to read this book. They will enjoy it as good reading and also, I suspect, because it deals with many of the ills to which flesh is heir. Most people have symptoms of one sort or another at times and they love to talk and read about them. Certainly there can be no objection to this when the information available is authoritative, interesting, and understandable." R. A. Cooke, M.D.

+ Survey 77:196 Je '41 370w

VEDDER, JOHN K. The last doorbell. 294p $2 Holt

41-20889

Detective story.

"There's a good-natured tone about all this, and the somewhat grotesque setting needn't put you off if you want to know who done it." Will Cuppy

+ Books p40 N 2 '41 120w

"John K. Vedder is a new recruit to the cock-eyed school of detective fiction and a promising one." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p18 O 26 '41 240w

"High grades."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:19 N 1 '41 40w

"A well-told yarn, the interest of which is involved in deducing identity of the criminal rather than the originality of the plot. The characters, too, are really people and the blonds are delicious."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e O 26 '41 170w

VEHANEN, KOSTI. Marian Anderson, a portrait. (Whittlesey house publication) 270p il $2.50 McGraw

B or 92 Anderson, Marian (W) 41-8301

"A personalized picture of Marian Anderson by her accompanist, who relates in considerable detail Miss Anderson's experiences as a young artist in Europe, her meteoric rise to fame, and the racial prejudice she encountered in this country." Library J

Booklist 37:514 J1 1 '41

"This book, written by Miss Anderson's accompanist, presents a tender picture of an unusual relationship. But it is primarily Kosti Vehanen's memory of ten years and only a distant view of Marian Anderson. It is a pleasant, simple recounting of what they saw and what they did from the time of their earliest engagements in his native Finland until the historic concert on the steps of the Lincoln Memorial, and it does not quite manage to capture the qualities that uniquely distinguish Miss Anderson as a singer or even as a person."

Commonweal 34:213 Je 20 '41 120w

"A highly subjective book which gives the reader a feeling that the author worships his subject with blind adoration. Not particularly well written. Will be popular and useful to libraries, however. Recommended." H. A. Carpenter

+ Library J 66:356 Ap 15 '41 60w

New Repub 104:898 Je 30 '41 50w

"The book is not very skillfully written, but its facts are naturally interesting."

+ N Y Times p6 Je 15 '41 360w

Sat R of Lit 24:21 Je 21 '41 80w

Reviewed by Milton Berliner

Springf'd Republican p6e Je 22 '41 350w

VEILLER, BAYARD. Bait for a tiger. 273p $2 Reynal

41-24080

Detective story.

"Mr. Veiller scatters chills, pathos, love and scenes from humble life with a lavish hand, and somehow the whole thing reminded us of the late Edgar Wallace." Will Cuppy

Books p32 N 30 '41 160w

"This dramatic tale has echoes, which the author acknowledges, of a famous short story, and those who remember that story will have little difficulty in identifying the murderer. Even so, there is enough that is new in 'Bait for a Tiger' to make it distinctly worthwhile." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p38 D 7 '41 200w

"Bloodthirsty affair, peopled with stock characters who act and talk in tank-melo manner. Pay-off rather cleverly handled."

— + Sat R of Lit 24:20 D 13 '41 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 7 '41 140w

VEILLER, BAYARD. Fun I've had. 373p $3
Reynal

B or 92 Dramatists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (W) 41-7720

The author of The Trial of Mary Dugan, Within the Law, and other theatrical successes and failures, describes his life in the newspaper, theater, and motion picture worlds—in Chicago, New York, Boston, Hollywood, in London. Index.

Booklist 37:490 Je 15 '41

"[The author] writes the story of his life without bothering to verify his dates or arrange his material or do many of the hard, painful, craftsman-like things he would certainly drive himself to do were he writing a melodrama. Frankly, his book is on this account a bit annoying. He even makes a virtue of not verifying his references. Such historical value as the book might have because of the people and events mentioned is largely lost. What he would insist on even in a movie script, 'continuity,' he throws to the winds and leaps from one irrelevant paragraph to another. Perhaps that is the way he had his fun and the way he enjoys recalling it. But it makes his book sloppy and casual, and before the end you are not having quite so much fun as he had." W. P. Eaton

Books p12 Ap 27 '41 650w

"It is very easy reading. But it sounds as if [the author] dictated it rapidly, happily, pouring out memories helter-skelter as they came while he paced the floor of his old house in Connecticut and the morning sunshine streamed in the windows. The memories go back a long way and are fascinating, particularly to any one who has lived in New York, London, Chicago or San Francisco. . . His book is wonderfully objective, yet it reveals much of the author's sunny nature. Like all theatre people, no matter how traveled, no matter how many smash hits they have had in London and New York, no matter how many movies they have cobbled to success, he is provincial. Broadway is his field and he knows it and loves it these more than fifty years." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p4 Ap 27 '41 1200w

Reviewed by Phil Stong

Sat R of Lit 24:11 My 31 '41 500w

Reviewed by Frederick Morton

Theatre Arts 25:611 Ag '41 410w

VERMEER, JOHANNES, known as JAN VERMEER VAN DELFT. Paintings. (Phaidon press art book) $3.50 Oxford [12s 6d Allen, G]

759.9 Paintings

"Fifty-one plates of which sixteen are in colour besides five monochrome and five coloured illustrations in the text, for which Mr. Ludwig Goldscheider is responsible, an introductory essay by Professor Thomas Bodkin, eight examples of Vermeer's signature, a catalogue of his known works and an index of museums and collections in which they are to be found." Times [London] Lit Sup

Booklist 37:493 Je 15 '41

Reviewed by Royal Cortissoz

Books p5 Je 22 '41 950w

Reviewed by David Burnham

Commonweal 34:162 Je 6 '41 330w

"Why is a book such as this disfigured with coloured plates? These 'chromos' would be in place only on the cover of a Christmas Number or on one of those calendars with which small tradesmen seek to propitiate their customers about the turn of the year. It is not only that they are unlike the pictures they purport to represent; they are not like pictures at all. . . Worst of all, very often the entire work is reproduced, or purports to be reproduced, only in colour, a mere detail being given in black and white, so that the student is allowed no complete idea of the picture." Clive Bell

— New Statesman & Nation 21:488 My 10

'41 900w

New Yorker 17:79 Je 14 '41 10w

Sat R of Lit 24:17 Jl 19 '41 270w

"The black-and-white plates are very well printed; of the colour-plates some are acceptable, others deplorably misleading. The illustrations of details, sometimes enlarged to original size, are a most revealing addition." Nikolaus Pevsner

+ — Spec 166:532 My 16 '41 700w

Springf'd Republican p7e S 14 '41 300w

"[The book] is wonderful at the price. . . Very little is known about Vermeer, and Professor Bodkin gives it concisely."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p176 Ap 12 '41 550w

VERNADSKII, GEORGI VLADIMIROVICH.

Bohdan, hetman of Ukraine. 150p il $2.50
Yale univ. press

947.7 Khmelnitsky, Zinovi Bohdan. Ukraine
—History 41-23658

Following a brief summary of early Ukrainian history, the author relates in detail the story of the career of a Ukrainian hero, a contemporary of Cromwell, and like Cromwell, leader of a revolutionary army fighting against royal and ecclesiastical tyranny. Selected bibliography. Index.

Christian Century 58:1340 O 29 '41 50w

"Both as a sketch of a strong and colorful personality and as a clear study of the complicated power politics of the time, when sides were often changed with bewildering rapidity, this little book is of first-rate interest and importance."

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 D 27 '41 650w

Reviewed by R. L. Binsse

Commonweal 35:202 D 12 '41 20w

"Professor Vernadsky's biography of Khmelnitsky deals with one of the most important and picturesque figures of Ukrainian history. Obviously, it has been written with the general reader in view, and in places it even reads like fictionalized biography. But it is a work of a careful and competent scholar, and it is based on a thorough knowledge of the period and the life story of its principal hero. . . But some of the author's conclusions, it seems to me, err on the side of exaggeration. . . The comparison of Khmelnitsky with Cromwell and Richelieu seems to me somewhat far-fetched, and not only because of the difference in the scope of activities or in cultural background. It also makes Khmelnitsky appear more conscious of a national mission than he probably was in reality." Michael Karpovich

+ — Yale R n s 31:426 winter '42 380w

VESTAL, STANLEY, pseud. See Campbell, W. S.

VIERECK, PETER ROBERT EDWIN. Metapolitics, from the Romantics to Hitler. 359p $3 Knopf

943 Germany—History. Germany—Nazi movement. Germany—Civilization 41-21429

"Mr. Viereck's theme is the intellectual history of the German National Socialist movement. . . . He begins his detailed study with that outbreak of a feeling of inferiority to the 'West' which we call the Romantic Movement. . . . From the romantics he proceeds through Father John 'the First Storm Trooper' to the 'Metapolitics of Richard Wagner'—the heart of the book, its most original and thoroughly documented portion—to such scattered and varied late nineteenth-century racialists and Realpolitiker as H. S. Chamberlain, Lagarde, Langbehn, Treitschke, and finally to the 'Prophet-Laureate of Metapolitics,' Rosenberg." (Sat R of Lit) Bibliography. Index.

"This is a curious book, but a good one. Written by the son of a professional Nazi propagandist in the United States, it is a corrosive analysis of some of the ideas of National Socialism. Described by its author as 'a psychoanalysis of Nazism,' it is more a series of essays on some of the movement's precursors and practitioners. It rambles in places, like its subject, and some of its words, like Hitler's, are unconsciously long, but it does as much as any book since the war began to define the specifically Germanic elements in what Mr. Viereck calls 'the theology of nightmare.'" Joseph Barnes

+ Books p4 O 5 '41 1050w

"This is an extremely important book, notable because it makes it possible for a normal western mind to understand at least partially the disease which has warped the thinking of the German people. This is no easy task because no German has ever been able to explain it intelligently. In fact the very inexplicableness of it is considered an essential of German racialism. But Mr. Viereck does let us get a glimpse of how and why the German nation has turned for a time from western civilization for an orgy in primitive emotionalism and international lawlessness." J. C. H.

+ Christian Science Monitor p20 N 7 '41 900w

Reviewed by J. N. Vaughan
Commonweal 35:101 N 14 '41 240w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:382 Ja '42 40w

"In a few minor points one may disagree with Viereck, as in his judgment of Frederick's foreign policy, or the comfort he derives from the fact that the National Socialists point to Eastern Europe as their field of conquest. . . . On the whole, however, he presents a brilliant analysis with great insight, and has proposed and proved an important thesis by a well-documented and illuminating argument. His book will render a distinct service by making for a deeper understanding of Germany and of our own problems." Hans Kohn

+ Nation 153:351 O 11 '41 1050w

Reviewed by Paul Rosenfeld
New Repub 105:513 O 20 '41 1250w

"A fresh approach, penetrating and well documented, though inclined to pin horns and a tail on the romantics in general."

+ New Yorker 17:78 S 27 '41 50w

"All in all, this is the best account of the intellectual origins of Nazism available to the general reader. It is a controversial book, packed with points worth disputing. Its numerous asides and admonitions will annoy convinced isolationists. . . . Its master-thesis, the superiority of Mediterranean 'classicism' over Germanic 'romanticism,' has had critics and scholars at odds since long before the days of the late Irving Babbitt, of whom Mr. Viereck must be the youngest disciple now in print. But it is not an ill-tempered book, not a book that tries to brow-beat the reader into submission and agreement. In its own rather odd way, it is a reasonable book—not sweetly reasonable, but reasonable." Crane Brinton

+ Sat R of Lit 24:6 O 4 '41 850w

Reviewed by Leon Whipple
Survey G 30:641 N '41 350w

VILES, NELSON ERIC. The custodian at work. 391p $2 Univ. pub.

371.62 Janitors. Schoolhouses 41-5133

Information on methods of school building maintenance, cleaning, heating, etc. Useful to janitors and general custodians. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:511 Jl 1 '41

School & Society 53:760 Je 14 '41 10w

VILLARD, HENRY. Lincoln on the eve of '61; a journalist's story; ed. by Harold G. and Oswald Garrison Villard. 105p $1.25 Knopf

B or 92 Lincoln, Abraham 41-2782

This first-hand account of four months of Lincoln's daily life between his election in 1860 and his inauguration in 1861 is made up of the day-to-day dispatches of a young foreign-born reporter who was sent to Springfield, Illinois, by the New York Herald, a paper bitterly opposed to the President-elect. During this time Villard's opinion of Lincoln changed from doubt of his ability to rise to the grave emergency to confidence that the country had found the great leader the crisis called for.

Booklist 37:386 Ap 15 '41

"It is a small book, and unpretentious, but those who are curious to know how Abraham Lincoln appeared to a shrewd, articulate observer before the nimbus of idolatry enveloped him will rarely find a more satisfying answer than in its 105 pages." P. M. Angle

+ Books p1 F 9 '41 1200w

Christian Century 58:427 Mr 26 '41 190w

Christian Science Monitor p18 F 11 '41 600w

Library J 66:34 Ja 1 '41 30w

"This little book is interesting and valuable."

+ Nation 153:58 Jl 19 '41 80w

"Just passable journalism made important by a great subject."

New Repub 104:510 Ap 14 '41 50w

"The book makes a pertinent footnote to history."

+ N Y Times p9 F 9 '41 650w

New Yorker 17:83 F 15 '41 60w

